GENERAL ADVANCES MADE ON 8TH ARMY FRONT

U. S. BOMBERS CONTINUE ATTACKS ON GERMANY

Sangro Ridge Captured After Fierce Fighting

Americans Move Forward 3 Miles Thru Barbed Wire And Mine Fields

HEAVY AIR SUPPORT

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Algiers, Dec. 1 —(AP)— The British 8th Army slashed forward beyond captured Sangro ridge with the heaviest air support of the Italian campaign, Allied Headquarters announced today, and marked up advances all along the line of one to three miles in fierce hand-to-hand fighting.

(Vastel Fremtamo and Vasoli, the latter at the southwestern end of Sangro ridge, also were captured, the Algiers station said in a broadcast heard by Reuters News Agency.)

In the central sector American troops of the 5th Army moved forward three miles west of Montaquila through dense mine fields and masses of barbed wire. It was the first time in the Mediterranean warfare that barbed wire had been used so extensively by the Germans in the manner of the First Great War.

"It is apparent that the Germans are not overlooking any trick, old or new," a military commentator said.

Fiume Bombed.

Four-engined American bombers flew to the northern tip of the Adriatic to hit Fiume its first aerial blow of the war. The strategic port, captured by the Germans from Yugoslav Partisans soon after the Italian armistice, has been transformed by Marshal Erwin Rommel into one of his most important bases for Balkan operations.

The advance by Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's warriors was made with the support of the British destroyers Quillian and Loyal which shelled Nazi positions from the sea as well as by waves of planes which made the otherwise solid German positions shake with detonations of explosives.

Nine waves of Allied bombers swept over the 8th Army front, mixed with formations of determined Nazi fighters, and left Nazi strongpoints shattered heaps of rubble.

"The Germans are offering very fierce resistance for every inch of ground," a military commentator said, and as a result are suffering huge casualties. But they were expected to make violent efforts to recapture Sangro ridge, their best defensive position for miles.

Allied Planes Drive Japanese From Changteh

By SPENCER MOOSA
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Chungking, Dec. 1 —(AP)— American and Chinese planes, providing "brilliant air cover," helped Chinese troops drive the Japanese from Changteh, the gateway to Changsha and the vital rice area Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's headquarters announced tonight. Japanese forces had entered the city Monday.

The Chinese also claimed the recapture of Tehshan on the highway between Changteh and Changsha in Hunan Province and said they had wiped out most of the Japanese troops in two nearby villages.

Two Chinese columns, by-passing Changteh with the intention of surrounding the invading forces, converged on the highway town of Linli, 20 miles north of Changteh. A major portion of the Japanese troops there was withdrawn.

Gen. Yu Cheng-Wan, latest Chinese hero, directed the bloody fighting which cleared Changteh's streets of the enemy.

Earlier, the Chinese High Command disclosed that the city was "still firmly in Chinese hands," indicating a general improvement in the fighting in northern Hunan Province.

HONG KONG RAIDED

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) — The Tokyo radio, in a broadcast recorded by U.S. government monitors, asserted more than 10 Allied bombers and fighter planes raided Hong Kong today. "Only negligible damage" was caused, the broadcast claimed.

Suspense Runs High in Air Station While Crews Are Out on a 'Sweep'

What is it like when the fighters go whipping out to action on a sweep? What is it like to be there and watch them go? The Canadian Press thought people would like to know and PO. Stan Helleur here does the job.

(Written For The Canadian Press By Pilot Officer Stan Helleur, Royal Canadian Air Force.)

At An R.C.A.F. Fighter Station in Britain, Dec. 1.—(CP)—The Perimeter track ringing a Canadian fighter airfield was dotted with pilots, ground trade officers and men, all watching the Spitfires taxiing into position for the take-off. The roar of engines shook the ground and you could feel the vibration beating through your body.

At a signal, the two lead Spits eased forward, gained momentum and soon were airborne. Pair after pair followed at regular intervals. Wing Cmdr. Hugh C. Godefroy, D.F.C. and Bar of Toronto, was leading his fighter wing on another sweep over France.

But, for the pilots left behind, and others too, the show was not over. It could be followed by radio and so you straggled to a hut where the wireless had been switched on.

You looked around the smoke-filled room and thought Hollywood couldn't have done better job. Pilots lounged in various types of furniture or leaned against something, battered hats pushed back and flying boots zipped open to combat the heat produced by ground temperature and thick linings. Included, too, in the assemblage were intelligence, medical and administration officers. Everyone looked serious.

Notable were the serious expressions on the faces of two newcomers to the wing, Flt.-Lt. Frank Clark of Montreal and Flying Officer J. T. Brown of Prescott, Ontario. They sat side by side in leather armchairs and you wondered if they were mentally swapping places with a couple of men on the "do", mentally making their first sweeps.

Your gaze shifted and halted again on a large blackboard leading against a wall. Although hampered by a glare, you managed to pick out a few names of fliers on the operation. Names like Fleming (Flt.-Lt. Allan E., of Smith Falls, Ont.); Chevers, (Sgt. Norman, of Niagara Falls, Ont.); Quint, (Flt.-Lt. Walter S. of Guelph, Ont.). Automatically, you wished them luck.

Close by the radio sat Group Capt. W. R. (Iron Bill) MacBrien of Ottawa, the Station Commander.

Attention was diverted from time to time, to another large blackboard where a map of the area being swept was chalked. Before it, headphones and mouthpiece adjusted, stood an R.A.F. Aircraftwoman who took positions of friend and foe and chalked them up accordingly.

The Wing Leader and the "voice" kept in constant touch but interest sparked more noticeably when the leader was in contact with one of his mates, or, sometimes, all of them.

Later, when all the kites had settled back on home turf, you returned to the pilots' room, just to see who was around. It was deserted except for a lone figure sitting in one of the leather chesterfields. It was Wing Comd. Godefroy, wing leader, his head resting on an arm of the sofa, eyes closed relaxing.

You didn't enter but closed the door softly and thought that even when you can't find Jerry, quarterbacking a Spitfire team must be pretty tiring work.

U.S. FORCES MAKE NEW LANDING AT CAPE TOROKINA

Troops Go Ashore In Six Landing Barges Covered by Cruisers And Destroyers

NO CONFIRMATION

London, Dec. 1 —(CP)— The Tokyo radio announced today that United States forces had made a new landing at Cape Torokina on the west coast of Bougainville Island, some distance north of Empress Augusta Bay where the original bridgehead was established. The broadcast, recorded by Reuters News Agency, said the troops came ashore in six large landing barges under cover of a bombardment by cruisers and destroyers.

The Japanese claimed their defences had "annihilated two companies" of the landing forces. There was no immediate confirmation of the reported landing from Allied sources.

Another Tokyo broadcast recorded by the Associated Press in New York quoted an Imperial Headquarters communique as saying that Japanese naval aircraft had sunk two Allied aircraft carriers and another unidentified warship east of the Gilbert Islands on the night of Nov. 29. A large cruiser also was set afire, said the communique, which was wholly unconfirmed by any Allied reports on shipping losses. The Japanese acknowledged the loss of six planes.

Franz Von Papen May Succeed Von Ribbentrop

Cairo, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Reports were current in Istanbul today that Franz Von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, has been selected by Hitler to succeed Joachim Von Ribbentrop as his Foreign Minister.

(The newspaper La Suisse, in Berne, said Tuesday there were rumors in Budapest that Von Ribbentrop had already resigned upon the demand of army generals. La Suisse said the report was not confirmed and was published with reserve.)

Von Papen now is believed to be enroute back to his post in Ankara after a visit to Berlin.

Istanbul dispatches said it was believed Von Ribbentrop has fallen out of favor because he has been unable to keep satellite countries in line in the face of Russian military victories.

'Work Holiday' Will Be Protest Against Closing

Trenton, N.S., Dec. 1 (CP)—The greatest single work stoppage in Nova Scotia's history—a one-day "holiday" by almost 25,000 men—was in prospect today as a protest against the closing of two departments at the steel plant here.

A conference of delegates from several labor unions in the province, fixing Dec. 8 as a "work holiday," decided here last night the decision would be cancelled only by resumption of operations at the nut and bolt department and rolling mills of the Trenton plant.

Closing of the department has been in progress for the last few weeks, with about 1,000 men to be displaced. The Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, parent concern of the operating Trenton Steel Works, Ltd., has stated the partial closure is necessary for financial reasons.

AIRMAN SON RETURNS ON MOTHER'S BIRTHDAY

Calgary, Dec. 1 (CP)—Mrs. W. D. MacKay of Calgary celebrated her birthday yesterday and received about the nicest present she could wish for—the return of her son from overseas.

Flt. Lt. William Minto MacKay returned home after an absence of more than two years, most of that time having been spent in German prison camps and hospitals.

217 Canadians Repatriated From Japan Express Joy As They Arrive at New York

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Jersey City, Dec. 1 (CP)—An enthusiastic group of 217 Canadians repatriated from Japanese internment arrived in New York harbor today on the liner Gripsholm, expressing joy at their return to this continent and determination to "hasten in every possible way" the liberation of those still interned in the Orient.

The Canadians were to have been the first to leave the exchange ship after it made its way through the fog-dimmed harbor to its berth on the Hudson River. But several hours after the ship docked the Canadians were at lunch aboard and it was learned they would be taken on trains this afternoon for the trip to Montreal. Canadian-army public relations officers had first announced the Canadians had left the ship.

No friends or relatives were on hand to greet the Canadians who, under a joint Canadian-United States government agreement, will not be permitted to talk, except to government representatives, while here.

1,223 Americans Aboard

Also aboard the Gripsholm were 1,223 Americans and some Latin Americans.

One of the youngest passengers aboard was two-year-old Michael Sullivan, whose parents come from Winnipeg. Michael was born in Shanghai and has spent 22 of his 24 months in an internment camp.

His father, Frederick Sullivan, and his mother were also passengers.

Newspapermen were not allowed aboard the Gripsholm to speak to the Canadians. They did not expect to see the Canadians descend the gangplant.

However, indirect contact was established through Canadian army public relations officers who boarded the liner and spoke with some of the repatriates.

Frederick Sullivan, who was president of the Canadian Club of Shanghai, said in a statement issued through the public relations officers: "What a wonderful feeling it is to be among our own people again. We are free—nobody is looking over our shoulder. You can actually feel the strain dropping off. We can behave naturally now.

"Now the one thought that is continually in our minds is the situation of those who are left behind. All we want to do is hasten in every possible way the liberation of those who are still back there".

Among the returning Canadians were two Canadian Army Nursing Sisters, who were taken prisoner at Hong Kong when that British colony fell in December, 1941.

They were Lieut. Kathleen Christie of Toronto and Lieut. Margaret Waters of Winnipeg.

Welcomed by Consul General.

Though the Canadians had no friends or relatives to greet them, they were welcomed by Hugh Scully, Canadian Consul-General in New York, who read to them a message from Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The Prime Minister's message follows:

"On behalf of the people of Canada, I wish to send to you all upon your arrival on the shore of our own continent, the warmest of welcomes home. You have passed through a great trial but we know that in all the time you were in enemy hands your courage did not fail; that you did all that it was possible for you to do to help one another.

"Now that you are home again, we shall do all we can to try to help you rapidly to regain your health and peace of mind. We are glad to have your co-operation as we continue to put forth what efforts lie within our power to help those who have had to remain behind and to speed the day of their return.

"Once more the warmest of welcomes home".

Most of the repatriates have gained weight during their trip aboard the Gripsholm which brought them from Mormugao, Portuguese East Africa.

They said the morale of the Canadians in the internment camps had always been high and that those left behind are confident they will soon be released.

Reach Montreal Thursday Morning

The Canadians will reach Montreal tomorrow morning.

The American repatriates shouted with joy, cheered and sang "God Bless America" as the Gripsholm docked. When the ship came within view of the Statue of Liberty, many of them cheered wildly.

MIGHTY BLOWS AGAINST ENEMY MAY BE SEQUEL

Unofficial Dispatch by Reuters Says Allied Conferences in Progress

MUCH SPECULATION

Washington, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Mighty new blows against the enemy — mental as well as physical blows — are confidently expected from the epochal conversations now reported in progress among the highest Allied leaders.

That the meetings are under way was reported in a Reuters news agency dispatch yesterday which said Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Chiang Kai-Shek already had concluded a long session in Cairo preliminary to a meeting with Stalin in Iran.

A communique on the results of the Cairo conference will be issued later in the week, Reuters said.

The Reuters dispatch was broadcast to European countries in several languages last night by the United States Office of War Information, which said it had acted with the authority of the Office of Censorship.

Text of Dispatch

Elmer Davis, O.W.I. Chief, declared later in Washington that the O.W.I. had broadcast the Reuters dispatch because it "already was all over Europe."

The dispatch, as broadcast by O.W.I., was as follows:—

COUNT ON BOARD

New York, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Anthony Campaigna, apartment house builder upon whom King Victor Emmanuel of Italy conferred the title of count in 1931, will be sworn in today as Bronx representative on the New York City Board of Education. Campaigna was appointed by Mayor F. H. La Guardia. A native of Italy, Campaigna, 58, came to the United States in 1908.

H. HENDERSON CHEESEMAKERS' NEW PRESIDENT

Trophies and Prizes at British Empire Dairy Show Presented to the Winners

CHEESE SAMPLED

Calvin V. Smith's prize-winning cheese at the British Empire Dairy Show which scored 98.3 points was sampled in rather generous quantities by ranking dairy officials, district cheese makers and others at the Hotel Quinte, Tuesday evening, when trophies won at the exhibition were handed out at a special evening session of the cheese makers' convention.

Donors of prizes and trophies, or ranking dairy industry officials awarded the silver trophies to the prize-winning makers; while the evening also saw the election of officers for the Association. Harold Henderson of Bloomfield, was appointed president replacing Horace Palmer of Plainfield, who was retained on the executive as one of the Association directors.

Officers elected included H. Henderson, Bloomfield as president; William Moore of Campbellford, R.R. 3, as vice president with the directors being Morris Rose of Stirling; J. Finnigan of Marmora; Horace Palmer of Plainfield and Bruce Mitchell of Odessa.

President Horace Palmer presided over the meeting at which prominent dairy officials gave brief addresses, while the inimitable Duncan Cowan in his characteristic role as entertainer deluxe delighted with his popular songs and skits, to the accompaniment of Jimmy Corradi of Belleville, on the piano.

DIVORCE RECORD HIGH

Reno, Nev., Dec. 1—(AP)—Reno's 1943 wartime divorce business already has topped by 558 any previous full year's record, says County Clerk Elwood Beemer. The 11-month total: 5,297. The previous peak was in 1931.

Round-the-Clock Raids Are Made By Allied Planes

Germans Unable To Break Up Day Bombing With Their New Rocket Guns

CONVOY ATTACKED

By GLADWIN HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 1. (AP)—American heavy bombers, in their third assault in three days, bombed western Germany again today while medium bombers made the operation an American doubleheader by battering airfields in northern France.

The daylight attacks made it the fourth day of uninterrupted round-the-clock bombing of Germany itself. Monday it was Bremen, yesterday it was Solingen in the Ruhr. The daylight raids came in conjunction with both day and night attacks by R.A.F. Mosquitos on Germany.

The heavy bombers were supported by R.A.F. and United States fighters and the mediums were escorted by R.A.F., Dominion and Allied fighters.

Special targets were not announced immediately. The new peak of intensity in the aerial warfare across the channel reflected the Germans' inability to break up daylight bombing with their new rocket guns or any other means.

It was the second raid by the mediums in three days.

Today's attacks topped off the Allies' best air offensive month with 21 major R.A.F. and U.S.A.A.F. raids from Britain pouring down a record month's bomb weight, including 13,000 tons by the R.A.F. on Germany alone.

Allied Losses.

Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair told the House of Commons today that since the beginning of the year the U.S.A.A.F., has lost 829 bombers over Europe compared with the R.A.F.'s loss of 2,083 at night and 106 by day.

The morning foray followed close on the heels of another night attack on western Germany by the R.A.F.'s Fleet Mosquito bombers. Beaufighters of the Royal Canadian Air Force also attacked an enemy convoy off the Norwegian coast last night, damaging two merchant vessels, and mines were laid in enemy waters, an Air Ministry communique said.

Other Canadian airmen, escorting U. S. heavy bombers returning from a raid on the Ruhr city of Solingen, downed two of six German planes knocked out of the skies by Allied fighters yesterday.

The successful pilots were FO. Clifford Abbott of Edmonton and FO. John F. Williams of Toronto.

The overnight forays were carried out without the loss of a single plane, the announcement declared.

Nov. Best Month

Yesterday the U. S. Air Force wound up its best operational month of the war with a smashing attack on the industrial centre of Solingen in the German Ruhr.

The raid was carried out at the cost of two heavy bombers and five fighters, while seven enemy aircraft were shot down, six by fighters and one by a bomber. Canadian fighters in the raid accounted for two of the enemy aircraft, one being shot down by FO. Clifford R. Abbott of Edmonton and one by FO. John F. Williams of Toronto.

The raid on Solingen was the first attack on that target. The city lies 14 miles southeast of Duesseldorf and is the site of the largest non-ferrous metal casting foundry in Europe. Its products are used in building German fighter planes.

As the Bombers struck at Solingen from the west, the Budapest radio asserted that two waves of U. S. bombers flew over Western Hungary in the direction of Vienna, suggesting that Allied planes from southern bases might again be hitting at Wiener Neustadt, south of Vienna.

That the Allies were able to carry out a joint total of 21 heavy raids last month — only one came under the peak month of August — showed how effectively they were meeting the weather problem and boded little respite for Germany through the winter months.

Jap Airmen Pour Cannon Shells Into Moored Flying Boats at Broome

Written for The Canadian Press
By ARTHUR L. FORD

Broome, West Australia, Dec. 1—(CP Cable) — Soaring into this frontier settlement en route by plane from Perth to the northern combat area of Australia, I saw on a palm-fringed beach two skeletons that are grim reminders of one of the most tragic blows of the Pacific war.

The crumbling skeletons are all that remain of Netherlands flying boats filled with refugee woman and children from the Netherlands East Indies which fell victim to Japanese raiders on March 3, 1942, a few minutes before they were scheduled to take off for a final hop to safety in Perth.

The total number of women and children killed in the 18 minutes that Japanese airmen poured cannon shells into the moored flying boats probably never will be known exactly but it is believed more than 100 met death.

Here is what I believe to be the first eye-witness story of the raid, as told me by the only white man to devote his full attention to the tactics of the raiders. He is Bertram E. Hardwell.

"Refugees from the East Indies had been pouring through Broome for a number of days," he said.

"On the night of March 2 flying boats arrived filled with exhausted women and children. They remained all night and normally would have been away at dawn. They were on the flying boats, waiting anxiously for their pilots, when the raiders appeared.

"There were seven or eight Zeros. They came in in tight formation and started executing figure eights between the bay and airdrome, striking at each.

"With cannon blazing, they soon blasted all the helpless flying boats which turned into blazing torches. The nearest help was on the bay jetty, crowded with townspeople who were present to witness the takeoffs. These escaped injury and soon were busy with rescue work but most passengers were trapped in flaming aircraft.

"Two pearling luggers in the harbor also rushed to the rescue, successfully defying the raiders.

"The raiders did not escape unscathed. An American and a Netherlands officer at the airport both stood in the open at the airport and blazed at the Zeros. They scored one kill for sure.

"Twenty-four hours after the raid Broome was almost deserted. Some townspeople went into the bush. The rest were flown out to Perth."

Today there are only 40 civilians including two women left in what was once one of the most cosmopolitan centres of the South Pacific.

BOY DISAPPEARS, PARENTS ANXIOUS

The parents of 15-year-old Johnnie Spurgeon are anxious for the whereabouts of their son, police learned today. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Spurgeon, 390½ Front Street, young Johnnie may have left to try and join the army. Described as five foot six inches in height and weighing about 139 pounds, the boy left home for school on Tuesday and has not been heard of since. His parents told police the lad has been talking of running away and going to Kingston to join the army. Kingston police and army authorities were notified of his disappearance.

LIGHT STANDARD IS BROKEN OFF

While backing into a parking position in front of the City Hall, a truck driven by George Dale of Brighton, hit a street electric light standard breaking it off at the base shortly before noon today. Police investigated and later notified employees of the Utilities Commission to have the damaged standard removed. No pedestrians were passing as the large iron pole toppled over after being hit.

Business Office And Law Office Are Broken Into

Some person or persons broke and entered two local places of business some time during Tuesday night. The entrances were discovered as employees returned to work Wednesday morning.

At the Belle Cleaners' plant on Coleman Street robbers forced entrance by means of loosening a rear window and crawling into the premises. From the plant office $15.00 was taken from an office desk. Nothing else of value was reported missing.

At the upstair offices of Cameron, Sprague and Follwell, Front Street, entrance was gained by cutting a hole in the thin panel of the door, reaching inside and releasing the lock. Strangely enough nothing of value was reported missing during this break-in, police learned upon investigation. A search was made, apparently for money, however.

Japs Lost 1,096 Dead By Actual Count At Bougainville

By FRED HAMPSON

Associated Press War Correspondent

With United States Forces on Bougainville, Nov. 28—(delayed)—(AP)—By actual count of bodies, the Japanese lost 1,096 dead in their unsuccessful battle to prevent United States forces from capuring Piva Ridge in Bougainville.

Enemy casualties in what has become known as the battle of Civik ridge, raised the total Japanese dead for the entire Bougainville campaign through Nov. 26 to 2,014. American marines invaded the northern Solomons Island Nov. 1.

Fighting through Nov. 26 cost the United States 281 killed and 145 missing. No offical count of wounded is available.

The Piva ridge battle was renamed for Steve Civik, marine platoon leader who led four attacks up the machine-gun studded slope and survived.

NEED CHARACTER IN MEN, WOMEN FOR NEW WORLD

Rev. W. W. Patterson of Queensboro, Speaks at Holloway Street Union

WORLD PROBLEMS

Initial preparations for building a new world era in the post-war period must begin with a new Canada through individuals patching up their racial, religious and economic differences, members of the Holloway Street Church Young People's Union were told on Tuesday evening at their regular weekly meeting.

Speaking to a combined audience of young people and to members of the church congregation, Rev. W. W. Patterson, B.A., B.D., of Queensboro, chose as the topic for his address "Shall a New Canada be a Part of the New World," indicating that the problem of establishing a new world order was a moral problem, not an intellectual one."

"It is not a question of being smart enough, but a question of being good enough," stated Mr. Patterson. "We need men and women of character to build the new world. Good sound substantial citizens are the type with which can be built a new Canada."

"It is simply ridiculous to even think of sending representatives to solve world problems, if the problems of our own land go unsolved. Our responsibility to the new world is to solve first the problems of Canada."

European History.

Briefly sketching the racial and religious differences of the many states in Central Europe by reason of which periodical wars have swept the continent during past centuries, Mr. Patterson admitted that their problems must be solved if the world in the future is to escape war. He held, however that unless there was first a new Canada, the chances of unifying European states would be problematical.

Solution of Religious Differences

Religious differences of a nation's people could only be solved through an effort on the part of each religious sect to bring a greater following of Jesus Christ, instead of pointing out the other's apparent faults.

In reference to economic difference in Canada, Mr. Patterson admitted that while the present system may foster selfishness, if that selfishness exists, it would still be with the people of Canada regardless of any new system adopted. He held that recent labor strikes were not motivated through a desire of the principals for national benefit, but rather through selfish reasons.

"I admit that there may have been grievances, yes," he said, "but there is reason in all things."

A Big Task

"It's a big task, this forming of a new Canada," Mr. Patterson concluded. "It is a problem of character. Character only counts in making a success of any social unit. We must build up good strong characters within self and foster greater belief in the teachings of Christ."

Members of Holloway Street United Church were special guests at the meeting with those in charge conducting regular activities to better acquaint their guests with their activities. President Miss Marjorie Hitchon presided over the opening with Citizenship Convener Ray Gunsolus conducting the activities of his group.

Entertainment during the evening was provided by Miss Margaret Houston who favored with several much appreciated solos, while Miss Barbara Diment and her troupe of young artists delighted with vocal and instrumental numbers. Mr. Bruce Sills gave an accordion rendition of "Over the Waves." Light lunch was served to conclude the evening's program.

Agriculture Minister Urges Gov't Purchase of Surplus Farm Output to Maintain Price Levels

Hon. T. L. Kennedy Addresses Delegates to Cheese Convention

ADVOCATES FAIR PRICE

Government purchase of surplus farm produce as a means of maintaining future price levels of produce grown by the farmer was advocated here Tuesday afternoon by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture.

Speaking at the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Convention Mr. Kennedy indicated that the future prosperity of Canada depended upon the prosperity of the farmer and stated that a fair price for his product was the right of every tiller of the soil.

"Something must be done for the plight of the milk producer," he said, "who by reason of his producing a perishable product is at the mercy of an equal balance between supply and demand to maintain the price he is to receive." One percent over-production of perishable goods could well upset the price equilibrium and he maintained that this one percent could not in the future be permitted to set the price for the other 99 percent.

Purchasing Plan Proposed

Some kind of a government purchasing plan to take up surplus farm products, together with a government program to find additional markets and a supervised control of certain production, was indicated as the answer to the farmer's problem, he stated.

Mr. Kennedy quoted the instance of the farmers in many localities who supply fluid milk to city milk distributors. Here a basic price had been set for their milk and the price never permitted to drop below that level. "Can't we do this with anything else?" he asked.

The Progressive Conservative government would adopt a policy of permitting farmers themselves to say what was wrong with their industry and then would give them power to act, he said. "The government will provide assistance to solve your own problems, but it is up to you to make the rules of the game."

A Basic Industry

Referring to the British Empire Dairy Show in the city, Mr. Kennedy stressed that the manufacture of cheese was a basic industry in Canada, and one for which the product would always find a ready market in the Old Country, where the price of milk is based on the cost of cheese from this country.

Tribute was paid to the cheesemakers through whose efforts the reputation of Canada as a cheese producing country had been established. Mr. Kennedy declared that cheese makers had put the name of Canada on the map.

"And I want to pay tribute to you cheese makers for carrying on during trying times," he said, referring to the labor shortage. "But you will continue to carry on, because you have Anglo-Saxon blood in your veins. It is your "carrying on" which makes great nations, and is your contribution to the war effort."

Prosperity Prophesied

An era of prosperity for Canada and for Ontario was prophesied by the speaker in the period following the war. Great and many industries would be located here while the future population of the province was estimated to be over seven millions.

The new era of prosperity with its attendant increase in population would mean a new future for the cheese industry, according to the speaker. At the present time not over ten percent of the population knows what good cheese is and these, with future millions to follow, must be taught to appreciate the finest of foods.

"I can see no collapse following the war," Mr. Kennedy concluded, "and I have no use for those people who shout blue ruin. I can only see a future of prosperity." The speaker was introduced to the convention by Roscoe Robson, M.P.P. for East Hastings.

Advocates Higher Price

Delivering a paper on the "Value of Cheese and its importance in wartime rationing", Dr. A. L. Gibson, Superintendent, Eastern Ontario Dairy School at Kemptville, indicated that the time was now opportune for farmers of Canada to demand a fair price for their product. Cheese should be recognized for its value and the price arranged accordingly, he indicated.

Prefacing his advocation of a higher price for cheese with an account of Britain's wartime rationing program, the speaker declared the nutritional value of cheese had been recognized and its transportation from Canada given the necessary priority rating. Scientific study in deciding the rationing program had been given with the result that milk was considered the most important item of diet.

In a note of comparison the speaker stated that it took two and one half pounds of eggs to equal the nutritional value of one pound of cheese.

Uniform Milk Price

Although asserting that Canadian farmers had good reason for claiming a higher price for their cheese, Mr. Gibson maintained it would never sell at a figure comparative to its nutritional value.

"The only fair way to set the price of cheese is to set a standard price for milk and to this add the manufacturing costs for producing the cheese, he said. "One thing is certain, there should be a uniform price for milk, regardless of its disposition. Then there could be control of production with no switching of patrons from cheese to butter to gain greater profits."

As an example Mr. Gibson stated that if the price of 3.4 milk was set at $2.50 per hundred pounds and to this added manufacturing costs, cheese should sell at 29 and one half cents per pound.

Tribute Paid J. L. Irwin

Tribute to J. L. Irwin and to officials of the cheesemakers association for their efforts in sponsoring the British Empire Dairy Show in Belleville was paid by Dr. James Semple during a brief Invocation at the outset of the afternoon session. He declared the rest of the nation owed a great debt of gratitude to the farming communities for their great part in the war effort and indicated the age of the industry by quoting passages from the Bible in which cheese was mentioned. By this he maintained the cheese industry existed eleven hundred years before Christ.

Mayor Harry Rollins extended the welcome of the city to officials of the dairy show and the association, indicating he was proud that Belleville had been chosen as the site for the show. He expressed the city's appreciation to the farmer behind the cheese industry and called for a better reception for the exhibition from the city.

Dr. S. S. Lumb, Warden of Hastings, also extended congratulations for the splendid cheese show, indicating that no county in Ontario could compare with Hastings in variety of products. He recounted the county's industrial and military accomplishments, declaring the farming industry, coupled with the cheese industry, to be the backbone of the county. He urged for higher basic prices for farm produce stating there must be floor prices which will guarantee decent returns for labor expended.

Dudgeon Responds

In response to Mayor Rollins and to Dr. Lumb, Mr. J. H. Dudgeon, Thomasburg, indicated he was proud to be associated with an industry, which had taken such a vital part in the war effort. "We did our duty in the last war and have continued to do it so far in this war," he said, "and God willing we'll go on doing it to the end."

E. G Hodgson, representative of the Montreal Provision Trades Association extended greetings and paid tribute to district cheesemakers for their efforts in sponsoring the cheese show in Belleville.

One of the high notes of the afternoon's proceedings was the presence of ever-welcomed Duncan Cowan, traditional with Central Ontario Cheesemakers' conventions, who delighted his audience with several much appreciated solos. Jimmy Corradi of Belleville acted as accompanist on the piano.

Child Is Drowned In Bay of Quinte At Rednersville

Donald Lawrence MacKay, four-year-old son of Sgt. and Mrs. Earl MacKay, Rednersville, was drowned in the Bay of Quinte, at Rednersville, Tuesday afternoon shortly after four o'clock, when he and his brother, Harry Earl MacKay, aged seven, were playing on the thin ice. Harry was rescued but the younger boy succumbed after firemen from this city worked over him for more than an hour and a half with a pulmotor and artificial respiration. The efficiency of the firemen, Chief Lynch, Deputy Chief Gerald Vance and firemen Ted Poste and Robert Fair was commented upon by several citizens who witnessed the efforts of these men. "Belleville has an efficient fire department," commented one citizen.

The children were playing on the ice and when it broke through Harry, the older boy, grabbed a piece of stick and managed to stay afloat although he went under a couple of times. The child, however, sank, but fortunately four men, working on the coal dock nearby, witnessed the occurrence and rushed to the aid of the drowning children. George Flower attempted to walk over the ice but broke through and the other three men secured a boat and pushing it across the ice to the water hole, were able to rescue both children, for in the meantime, the drowned child had come to the surface. Harry MacKay was rushed to a nearby residence and after warmth was applied soon was all right but efforts to resuscitate the younger child proved unavailing.

Dr. G. S. Cronk was at the scene along with Dr. R. A. Thompson of Wellington and after pronouncing the boy dead, the body was released for burial and Dr. Thompson, Coroner for the district, deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Much sympathy is entertained in the community for the parents in the loss of their youngest son, who was born in Toronto and came with his parents to Rednersville seven months ago. The family attend the United Church.

Besides the parents there are surviving three brothers, William Russell, age 13 years; James Robert, age 11 years and Harry Earl, age 7 years.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until this Wednesday evening, then at the home of Mr. A. E. Phillips, Rednersville; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

Obituary

MRS. ALBERT W. SCRIVEN

Mrs. Albert W. Scriven, 138 Dundas Street west, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday. She was in failing health for the past year and her last illness was of six days' duration.

KEITH CHARLES HAGERMAN

(Stirling)

Keith Carles Hagerman, age 6 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hagerman passed away on Sunday, Nov. 28th, 1943, at Belleville hospital, where he was rushed after taking suddenly ill, and died shortly after admission. The funeral was held at 2.30 p.m. Nov. 30th at the home of his parents with Rev. D. Gray conducting the service. Sympathy was shown by the large gathering of friends and neighbors. Interment was in Stirling cemetery.

Seed Growers Decide To Cancel Seed Fair

As the result of the poor grain crops in the Bay of Quinte district during the past season, there will be no seed fair sponsored by the Quinte District Seed Growers' Association next spring, it has been decided by the organization at their annual meeting and election of officers.

The meeting was held at Shire Hall, Belleville, with representatives from as far west as Ontario county being present. H. Brodie Ness of Kingston was re-elected president of the Association, with his entire slate of officers also being re-appointed.

Guest speaker for the meeting was Mr. McNaught of the Crops and Seeds Branch, he discussing quite thoroughly the seed situation for next spring. He indicated the government's intentions regarding assistance to be given toward supplying next season seed requirements. A motion passed at the meeting asked the government to pay the freight on seed grain shipped from the west, in some such manner as was done with feed grain. The resolution will be sent on to the Department.

One of the actions of the Association at the meeting was the decision for the organization to purchase a carload of registered oats and barley for seed purposes in the district next spring. The grain will be purchased in Western Canada.

SANK TWO A DAY

Toronto, Dec. 1 —(CP)— Admiral Sir Percy Noble, British representative on the combined chiefs of staff in Washington, said here last night that late in 1940 German planes were sinking an average of two ships a day off the western coasts of Britain.

Arming the merchantmen nullified this threat, he said, and the undersea raider is no longer a menace to Britain's supply lines.

TRIED TO BURN 'IN-LAWS' OUT

Hollywood, Dec. 1 — (CP)—Basil W. Mark arrived home Thanksgiving Day to find his wife's relatives had moved in. Then three fires occurred — and authorities charged Mark with arson. At the jail Deputy District Attorney Howard Hinshaw said Mark told him: "If there had been [illegible] matches handy there would have been more fires—I did it just to get the in-laws out of the place."

Kiwanis Club Urges All Electors To Exercise Municipal Franchise

At the Kiwanis Club luncheon on Tuesday a strong plea was made by Jack McVeigh, chairman of the Public Affairs Committee, for all citizens to exercise their franchise on election day, which is next Monday. "This is not an appeal for citizens to support those members of the Kiwanis Club, who are seeking public office," said Mr. McVeigh, "but the Kiwanis Club believes that in rendering public service it is their duty to request all citizens to go out and vote and by this means the most representative body of men will be selected to guide the destinies of the city in the coming year."

President Bruce Lattimer added his word to the appeal made, believing it in the best interest for all to vote. "If you do not go out and vote and something is done by any corporate body during the year to which you disapprove there is not much you can do about it because by your failure to vote you automatically lose "your right to criticize," said Mr. Lattimer. "There is a fine representative body of men seeking office at the forthcoming election on Monday, and if all exercise their franchise a good slate of public officials will be made.

Skill of Cheesemaker Plays Big Part In Quality of Cheese Kiwanis Told

Four new members were initiated, members of the club seeking public office on Monday were introduced, and in conjunction with the Empire Dairy Show being held in this city, William C. Cameron, Acting Chief of Dairy Products, Grading and Inspection Services, Department of Agriculture in Ottawa gave a most interesting talk on the qualities, that must be possessed by a cheesemaker to produce a fine cheese, at the Kiwanis luncheon held at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. Bruce Lattimer presided with Harold Carruthers as song leader and Aubrey Coe as sergeant-at-arms. Alec Gordon presided at the piano. The speaker was introduced by Ray Grant and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Eddie Shapiro.

Jack McIntosh, chairman of the Membership Committee, was heartily complimented by the members through Eddie Logan, chairman of Education committee, for the fine members, that have been brought into the club under the guidance of his committee. Kiwanis International requested this club increase its membership by 15 during the year and today the 16th new member for the year was introduced. Clarence Jewell introduced Leonard Reid of Reid's Dairy, Lawrence Kells introduced Norman Smith, Vocational Director at the Belleville Vocational School, Norman Edwards introduced Taylor Franklin, Registrar at Albert College and Dr. Sam Cronk introduced Dr. R. S. Gibson. Past District Lieutenant Governor Cliff Baragar initiated the new members and they will be introduced personally to the members of the club at a future meeting.

To Entertain Pupils

It has been decided to entertain the pupils of the rural schools, who took part in the poultry project, on December 10th. They will be brought to the city and will attend a performance at the Belle Theatre after which they will be taken to the Kiwanis Centre on Dundas Street, where they will be given a luncheon and the prizes for the year distributed. This meeting will be slightly interfered with but the members promised to attend and help entertain the youngsters of the rural districts. In the evening of the same day, the inter-club meeting with the Rotary club will be held at which Mr. Trestrail will be the speaker. This gentleman spoke to the workers of the last victory loan campaign.

"Belleville," said the speaker, "Is fortunate in having one of the most important cheddar cheese shows in the world from the standpoint of quality in the Empire Dairy Show now going on in this city. Buyers on the most important import market of the world recognize Canadian cheese as the best cheddar cheese imported into Great Britain and this includes all the major dairy countries of the world. The reputation for quality enjoyed by Canadian cheese is the result of concerted effort on the part of all engaged in the industry." He stated that promoting the manufacture of high quality cheese is by exhibitions such as is being held at which cheesemaker may gather and learn what constitutes high quality cheese and how to produce it.

Cheesemaker Responsible

The men responsible for the high quality of cheese are the cheesemakers and this statement is made with the full realization of the important part played by other branches of the industry. "Even with a high quality of milk" said Mr. Cameron, "a successfull maker must have a thorough technical training in dairy chemistry and bacteriology but he must also have years of practical experience under competent supervision. From the time milk is received in the factory until it is shipped out as cheese the maker is called upon to make many decisions. The manufacture of cheese consists of converting some constituents of fluid milk into a solid known as cheese, which retains slightly more than half the solids in milk." The speaker stated that a maker must have good sense of sight, smell and touch.

Making Cannot Be Timed

Mr. Cameron further stated that cheesemaking cannot be timed by a clock. It is the knowledge and skill of the maker, which enables him to know, when the various steps in the manufacturing process shall be undertaken. Cheese is the most important dairy product from the standpoint of exports both in peace time and during this war. The speaker concluded by stating that Canadian dairying is now one of Canada's great national industries having an annual gross value of three to four hundred million dollars in 1942. Approximately seventeen per cent of the population of Canada is engaged in dairying and subsidiary industries and Canadians are the largest per capita consumers of milk in the world.

The attendance prizes were won by Ernie Pinkle, Norman Edwards and Lawrence Kells.

Partisans Fight German Forces To Standstill

London, Dec. 1—(CP)—Yugoslav Partisans have fought German forces to a standstill in central and southern Bosnia, and have recaptured the important industrial centre of Vares, 25 miles north of Sarajevo, after bitter fighting, a communique from the Yugoslav "Army of Liberation" said today.

The war bulletin acknowledged that the Nazis had captured the island of Uljan, a few miles off the northern Dalmation coast near the port of Zara.

Bloody fighting was reported on all fronts, but was fiercest around Sarajevo, the communique said. The struggle for Vares see-sawed with both sides in possession during the day. The Partisans said they launched an assault which drove the Germans from the town in disorderly retreat.

East of Sarajevo, the Yugoslav bulletin reported a series of battles, with units of the 17th Partisan division battling superior German forces to a standstill.

MIGHTY BLOWS

"Lisbon, Nov. 30 — (Reuters) — Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt have already completed a long conference in Cairo and are now en route to somewhere in Persia to meet Premier Stalin, it is known here definitely.

"Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek took part in the conference and will also meet Stalin.

"A communique agreed on after the Cairo conference will be published later this week. The three statesmen met on one occasion in a tent in the shadow of the pyramids.

"During the conference Cairo was cut off from communications with the rest of the world. Roosevelt and Chiang Kai-Shek, who was accompanied by Madame Chiang, travelled to Cairo by air while Churchill travelled by sea."

Speculation is Rife

Washington, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Speculation that mighty new thrusts against the Axis are in the making was stirred today by unofficial reports that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt were speeding to a conference with Premier Stalin in Iran after meeting with General Chiang Kai-Shek in Cairo.

Above and beyond this lie the intangible benefits which political observers here believe are to be gained from close personal relationships among the Allied government chiefs and their ranking staff officers.

Strategy Co-ordination

The first three-way discussions among the British, Soviet and United States leaders are expected to lead to closest co-ordination of strategy in the final drives to smash Germany as well as for the solution of post-war international problems untouched by the recent Moscow conference of foreign ministers.

Similar results, it is believed here, may be expected from any discussions in which Chiang Kai-Shek and his staff men participate. It appears, however, that much more remains to be done in unifying direction of the war against Japan than in co-ordinating the European offensives.

The most optimistic experts here do not consider the struggle in the Pacific more than half over.

Coming to Focus in Pacific

Thus many military and political problems which have had to be solved by joint action of the Allies in Europe are only now coming into focus in the Pacific. In his connection it is significant that conferences between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in the past have resulted ultimately in considerable action.

One point on which all the Allies involved in the Pacific war seem agreed is that when Japan finally is defeated she must be reduced to a minor island power. This was made clear in President Roosevelt's Sept. 17 speech to congress in which he declared that the United Nations will deprive her of authority over the mandated islands of the Pacific "and the same thing holds good in the case of the vast territories which Japan has stolen from China, starting long before this war began."

BOVRIL EXECUTIVE CHANGES

W. J. King

Capt. Percy Lawson-Johnston

The retirement of W. J. King, for many years Vice-President and Managing Director of Bovril (Canada) Limited, has just been announced from that Company's headquarters in Montreal. Mr. King, who is 65 years of age, is retiring after 46 years of service with Bovril companies. Mr. King has taken care of Bovril interest in Canada since 1924, and was also a Director of Bovril of America Inc.

Capt. Percy Lawson-Johnston has been appointed as at Dec. 1, Vice-President and Managing Director of Bovril (Canada) Limited, succeeding Mr. King. He is the youngest brother of the late Lord Luke of Pavenham, former Chairman of the world-wide Bovril organization in Canada, England, United States, Australia and South America. Capt. Lawson-Johnston is the thirteenth child — and seventh son — of John Lawson-Johnston, who came to Canada in 1874 and founded the Bovril enterprises, in Sherbrooke, Que., and Montreal, and subsequently in London.

Dynamite Explosion Near Peterboro Recalled by District Old-Timers

Two Tweed Men Were Victims in the Terrific Blast

HEARD FOR MILES

(Peterboro Examiner)

Memories of the spectacular dynamite explosion on the Sixth Line near Lakefield on Friday, September 4, 1884, appear to be etched deeply in the minds of district people who were living at that time, judging from the number of references, letters and telephone calls received at the Examiner office since a story was published a few days ago.

Briefly the story is this: Two men, George Morton and James Simmons were taking one ton of dynamite by team and wagon from Tweed to Burleigh Falls, to be used for blasting out rock when the Lovestick Lock was being built. At 9.45 in the morning, as the wagon was passing over a piece of rough corduroy road, the dynamite blew up, and little was left of the wagon, horses or men.

Calls to the Examiner have brought to light several interesting angles to this half century old tragedy. Grandfather of Major Claire Stewart of this city, who passed away several years ago, found a piece of the steel wheel rim on his farm two miles from the accident. Major Stuart's father had a piece of the wagon nut found near the scene, which he may still have but could not locate it when he looked for it this week. Tate Cavanagh, a well known hotel keeper of that era, offered Mr. Stuart a dollar for the souvenir, wishing to put it on display at his hotel, which was located across from the Examiner on the property now occupied by The Bank of Commerce. When one recalls that wages at that time were 50 cents a day, it was a good price, but Mr. Stuart refused to sell.

Chimney Toppled.

A piece of the wagon pole was on display for several years in Roddy's Hotel on Simcoe Street, now the King George.

The chimney at the home of John Murray in Hastings was blown down by the force of the blast, and Dr. Dick Coughlin of Hastings, who was noted as quite a joker in his day, used to tell the people of Hastings that on the afternoon of the blast he was driving up from Brighton, when a wagon wheel dropped out of the sky, and came spinning down the road toward him, forcing his horse into the ditch, and the wheel zoomed past.

Crowd Gathered.

It is recalled too, that on the Sunday after the incident, more than a thousand people drove out to the scene. It was impossible to rent a horse and rig in Peterborough, Hastings, Norwood, Lakefield, or in any of the communities as all had been hired.

The two men were paid $100 a trip for carting the dynamite and it took them two to three days to make the trip. They had made several before without a mishap. On this one, however, Mrs. Guerin at Indian River where the men had a meal, asked when they would return, and one of the two remarked, "We'll be back—if we aren't blown to Kingdom Come" indicating he was dissatisfied with some arrangement, or else just had a premonition of disaster.

They stayed overnight at Havelock too, but the hotel man didn't know they had a load of dynamite, and the next night they stayed over night at Indian River at Guerin's.

Old-timers recall that the explosion took place in a swamp section of the district, at the foot of a hill, and because of this, the damage was reduced. If it had taken place at the top of the rocky hill, many believed great damage would have followed.

A newspaper clipping, yellow with age, but still easily read, was brought to The Examiner in a scrap book by Mrs. Thomas Rose, R.R. 11. It was taken from the Peterborough Daily Evening Review, and reads in part... Lakefield, Sept. 4—About 9.45 a terrible explosion took place close to the residence of Mr. Nolan, about a mile and a half from the village. There was a pit dug in the road about 60 feet wide and eight feet deep. For 50 or 75 yards around, the trees were level with the ground. There were two men on the wagon and nothing can be found of them but a finger and small bits of skull. Half the trunk of a horse is on each side of the road. The harness was blown off, and the shoes were blown from the hoofs. Fragments of flesh and clothing were hanging to the trees for scores of yards around. As the explosion took place in a swamp there is little chance of recovering the remains. This village was much shaken, windows were broken and things were thrown from the walls.

Believed Earthquake.

(Notice in the above story, that the reporter has not told what the explosion was, apparently assuming that everyone knew what had happened).

Another despatch from Campbellford reads as follows:

"An earthquake was felt in this section at 9.40 this morning. The shock was plainly felt at Hastings, Madoc, Blairton, Marmora and Frankford. In Campbellford a plate glass window was broken and buildings were shaken. Women working in the houses heard dishes in the buttery rattle. In Frankford, a pile of freight was upset at the station."

Marmora and District

Marmora (Special)—The number of individual donors from this district went beyond the 200 mark on Sunday with five new donors, bringing the total up to 203. Eighteen made the trip, the number of donations being placed after their names: W. Hamilton 1, Gerald Fluke 1, Everett Tandy 1, G. R. Hartley 1, Mrs. G. R. Hartley 1, J. Brown 2, McKinley Knox 2, H. 6 British Airmen Adrift 11 Days In Rubber Dinghy

Crew Forced to "Ditch" in Bay of Biscay After Sinking U-Boat

By ALLAN NICKLESON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 30 —(CP)— Six British airmen, adrift in a waterlogged rubber dinghy for 11 days, tried to catch fish on hooks made from safety pins and baited with chewing gum as they endured cold, hunger and thirst. Their saga, told in the diary of the senior officer, gained front-page play throughout Britain.

Forced to "ditch" in flames in the Bay of Biscay after their Halifax bomber sank a German submarine with depth charges, the crew, suffering from burns and exposure, was rescued by a British destroyer.

Their day-by-day experiences were revealed with release by the Air Ministry of a log kept by Group Capt. Roger Mead, commanding officer of a Coastal Command station, who was flying the Halifax as second pilot. Of the crew, two were lost when cannon fire from the submarine set the bomber ablaze.

"These nights were hell," said the diary in part, after telling of the swim to the dinghy. All survivors were shocked badly and decided to eat and drink nothing for the first two days. From then on they nibbled small quantities of water-spoiled chocolate, milk tablets and barley-sugar. They supplemented the regular water ration with rainwater caught in their hands.

Young People's Society was not held on Thursday evening as usual due to the illness of Mrs. J. M. Spence who was taken to the Belleville General Hospital for a blood transfusion. Friends hope that she will be well again soon.

Mrs. Leonard Young opened her home on Thursday for a quilting for the Women's Association.

An auction sale on Saturday afternoon at the Antique Shop owned by Mr. T. Wrightmeyer was quite well attended. As a result many a near-by home as well as distant homes are stocked with some quaint pieces. The walnut Victorian chairs, walnut whatnot and other articles brought some lively bidding.

Mr. and Mrs. Wrightmeyer and daughter Bobby have left to reside in Belleville.

The Sunbeam Mission Band of Quinte View School met at the school on Thursday afternoon. White gifts for Christmas were brought by the children to be sent under WMS supervision to Western Canada.

RED ARMY'S OBJECTIVES HAVE BEEN LISTED

Moscow, Nov. 30. (AP)—The official Communist newspaper Pravda has listed the objectives of the Red Army's offensive as Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Moldavia and Karelia, as well as White Russia, the Ukraine and the Crimea. It named these objectives Sunday as two other leading Soviet publications, Red Star and Izvestia, warned against complacency and called for intensification of the struggle.

ROYAL BANK APPOINTMENTS

T. H. Atkinson, whose appointment as Assistant General Manager is announced by the Royal Bank of Canada. Mr. Atkinson was formerly Supervisor of Branches for Quebec, New Brunswick and Eastern Ontario.

Frank S. Moffitt, newly appointed Assistant General Manager of the Royal Bank of Canada. Mr. Moffitt has been Supervisor of Investments since 1940.

Beurling to Wed Pembroke Girl, Now Living in London

London, Nov. 30. (CP Cable)—Kathleen Marie Clough-Ormiston, 22, a native of Pembroke, Ont., said today she and Flt. Lt. George Beurling air ace from Verdun, Que., will be married shortly.

The Marylebone registrar's office confirmed they have applied for a licence.

Miss Clough-Ormiston, a student at London University, has been in Britain for seven years and her parents also live here. She said "we have been engaged secretly to avoid fuss".

They met at a London party three and one half years ago.

Beurling's appointment as a flight lieutenant in the Wolf Squadron R.C.A.F., was announced last Nov. first.

He shot down his 30th enemy plane, a Focke-Wulf 190, last September 25 to mark his return to aerial fighting after a long visit to Canada and a subsequent term as gunnery instructor in England.

The greater proportion of his victories were scored in Malta where during the long aerial siege of the Mediterranean Island he was the greatest R.A.F. ace. He bagged 27 aircraft there.

LET'S ALL DO MORE TO WIN THE WAR

BEFORE THE WAR: Bill Allen was an expert guide. Sportsmen paid him as much as $10.00 a day.

TODAY: Grim Sergeant Allen is overseas, guiding his men into battle against the Nazis. He is paid $2.20 a day.

THE MORE WE'RE IN IT THE QUICKER WE'LL WIN IT!

Bill Allen—and thousands of others—gave up their jobs to go out and meet the Nazi challenge. They're fighting to make sure that this world—YOUR world—will continue to be a place where men can work and live in peace. Here, at home, we are still earning good pay. Bill needs a big share of it . . . not in cash . . . but in tanks, guns, ships and planes! Give it to him willingly. Buy more War Bonds, more War Savings Certificates, and Stamps. Sacrifice luxuries, every unnecessary expense to do it.

Travel After War

War Services Minister the Hon. L. R. LaFleche, in an address at Quebec at a conference on the tourist industry's future pictured an era after the war in which there would be a great amount of travel with the consequent better health of the nation and an answer to the problem of mutual confidence, mutual understanding.

The tourist industry has a great task in wartime to help in the work of smashing the enemy and of bringing a peace that will endure and also of building up in the post-war days the national health, physical, mental, and moral. Travel he sees as benefiting health and he declared that the war situation showed the value of recreation in the lives of the people. Strength lost through the stress on the human frame and brain can be recovered by adequate vacations and healthful recreations.

Touring Canada more in the post-war days means that people may know Canada more and come to love it better. He points out that some health figures had been made possible through mobilization and gave several reasons, the depression years in the "thirties" and the fact that young Canada had not been taught in other years to understand well enough the benefits from outdoor exercises, hikes, sports and in short, travel. Health is to be found outdoors in the wind and sunshine, he said.

General LaFleche's address was comprehensive and did not omit to make reference to beautification of routes and to the removal of those things that tend to destroy charm. He spoke of "the natural charm and beauty of our unique and delightful varying countryside" and asked, "Can it be that unthinking men may continue to spoil the beauty of Canada which comes from God's hand?" He decried "garish road signs shrieking with discordant colors" and said "goods and services can be sold without 'offending the eye." He urged road beautification from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the American border as far north as civilization goes.

The tourist industry will have the opportunity in the post-war industry of providing employment in the varied services which are necessary for comfort of travel.

Touring reached a high position in the pre-war years and was a great factor in creating a deeper knowledge and wider sympathy of the people of one part of Canada for those in other parts and for our American neighbors and the industry will be able after the war to go on to higher achievements in which the mental, moral and physical health of the people will show benefits.

A Deed of Horror

If any criminals in history should tremble at the thought of the consequences of their crimes it is the Nazi gang and the militarists of Germany which have deepened mankind's experience of the horrors and terrible deeds to which crime will descend. No experience except the horrors which the Germans have created could make mankind understand the depth to which the Nazi mind plunges in the pursuit of its terrible and brutal passion of conquest.

At this moment while bombs are pounding the industrial cities of Germany, including Berlin, the seat of the Nazi regime, while flames never cease somewhere in the bombed industrial cities of the Reich and when the Allies are battering at south and east with their armies and from the skies against Hitler's "fortress," there has come to light undoubtedly the most horrible crime ever enacted in all time. The barbaric conquerors of old never did such deeds as have been done by Hitler's Nazified Germany as in the slaughter of from sixty to eighty thousand Jews, men, women and children, at Kiev in September 1941.

Murder will out. Hitler's crimes are before the world. The Nazis brought these Russian Jews to a ravine at Kiev, stripped them of their clothing and systematically mowed them down with machine guns, then buried them. But crime is never satisfied for it is not sure that it has hidden its traces. So Nazis recently set to work to have these bodies exhumed and burned in great crematory buildings. To add to the horrors they made Russian prisoners of war exhume the dead and burn their bodies, some of the Russians going insane from the ordeal of digging up and burning their dead Russian compatriots. The place of burial was covered with sand but murder leaves traces, so here fingers, bits of flesh and bone, burned spectacles and other evidence were found.

Then Russian prisoners who were forced to labor at the burning saw a new pyre being built and they planned a mass escape as they saw that this was to be their fate also.

Russians and others have the evidence of these and other monstrous crimes which were part and parcel of the German "order," steps in the rise of this most selfish and fiendish organization to the absolute power which they planned but could not attain.

Now the skies of Germany are black with the smoke of destruction by day and glow with mounting flames by night:—so like the day of judgment coming upon these perpetrators of crime.

The list of Nazi criminals is kept by the Allies. Barbaric Nazis who may have thought they had covered their tracks will find that the slaughtered will not be without a pleader. They must face judgment.

Factory Chaplains

(Manchester Guardian)

The idea of chaplains in the factories is growing. Coventry was a pioneer in this, and now the Church of Scotland has a group of younger ministers as factory chaplains.

One of them is in a paper mill, where he spent six months as an ordinary laborer. He and his wife now live in a three-roomed house near the mill, and he does a week in the mill and has three services a Sunday for the workers.

Another is in a Clydebank factory and does his chaplain's work mainly amongst the fire-watchers. It takes him 18 weeks to get round the factory with discussions, lectures and talks. In one Clydebank shipyard a chapel is to be built as the result of a chaplain's work.

One chaplain reports that this method of direct contact is helping to break down the barrier between religion and the workers.

Hard Spell for Fish

(London Times)

This does not refer to fish in the wintering seas but to fish as they enter the written "tall" story.

Dr. Daniel Jones, a professor of phonetics, recently dropped a verbal bomb on an audience at University College, London. Speaking on "Reform of English Spelling," he suggested quite seriously that "fish" could be spelled "ghoti." For this reason. According to our present standards "gh" was the sound of "f" in "rough;" the letter "o" in "women" sounded like "i;" and "ti" in "nation" was like the last two letters in "fish." Nothing could be cleared so long as few fishermen pursue the parallels till they meet in "ghoti."

Mr. Harold Stannard, writing to the Times from the Athenaeum Club, betrays some discontent with so lame a conclusion as Dr. Jones'. He relates that a foreigner, after complaining to two English phoneticians of the capracious values of the English alphabet asked them what "ghot" spelt. One, like Professor Jones, said that it spelt "fish." But the other said that as "ghot" was not a word, all the letters were silent — the "gh" as in "though," the "o" as in "journey," and the "t" as in "castle."

The moment a man can really do his work, he becomes speechless about it; all words are idle to him; all theories. Does a bird need to theorize about building its nest or boasts of it when built? All good work is essentially done that way; without hesitation; without difficulty; without boasting. — Ruskin.

THE WACs

When Rome is safe and peace is here,
When Japs at us no longer sneer,
And men are done with guns and packs,
We'll share the glory with the WACs.

With pride we shall remember then
The women who replaced the men
And served the Flag, its peril through,
At every task which they could do.

When freedom, faced by tyrant might,
Needed all able men to fight,
There rose for posts on every shore
The valiant Women's Army Corps.

They gave up all a woman asks,
From life and love, for army tasks,
And till the clouds of war had cleared,
To fill the ranks they volunteered.

When Rome is safe, and land and sea
And sky are cleansed of tyranny,
When savag'ry no more attacks,
We'll share the triumphs with the WACs.

The new market building was illuminated last Saturday night for the first time. It presented a fine appearance, except that a few more lights are necessary and we understand that it has been decided to install the extra light fixtures. The gas fixtures are very neat and attractive. In the town hall a platform or stage has been erected and many seats of substantial construction have been placed in the hall. Desks of a neat pattern for the councillors and reporters are ready to be put in place. Apparently the building will soon be ready for occupancy.

The harbor revenue for 1873 was less by fully one half than that for 1872. The chief cause for this drop was that a great many saw logs were not floated to the boom here; depression in the lumber market, owing to which many manufacturers of lumber would not ship and the deficiency in the crops.

The War Today—
Smashing Defeat on Homeland Best Treatment for Prussians

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

If the Allies could force unconditional surrender on Germany forthwith, would that represent the best solution of the epochal world problem with which we are faced?

The question is of special interest at this time because of the flow of peace speculation (most of it without the semblance of foundation), and the rumors in London that Messrs. Churchill, Roosevelt and Stalin may give the Hitlerlites an utimatum which will include a demand for capitulation.

Of course, an immediate termination of the war would in many ways be a glorious thing. But would it actually save lives and suffering in the long run?

I think we must stop here to consider whether peace, before the German Reich has been ground exceeding fine in the mill of war woul dnot merely result in another world conflagration even more destructive than this one.

Many people feel that the Allies held their hand too soon in the last war. One of the chief reasons why we are saddled with this war is because Germany suffered no physical hurt in the last one. She lost many of the best of her youth, and she underwent great privations. But the people as a whole never even heard a pistol fired in anger.

Air Rads Not Sufficient

have to change the mentality of the Prussian race.

The job is going to be doubly

In this war the Reich is getting a taste of the battle-field, thanks to the Allied Air Forces. Still, while there has been heavy loss of civilian life in the bombings, and the devastation has been great, Germany hasn't yet received the punishment necessary to her reform. This is one of the extreme cases where corporal punishment is the only thing that will work.

We mustn't forget that when we have performed the task of crushing Hitlerism and Prussian militarism, we have only started on the reform of Germany — the trouble-maker of Europe. We still difficult because for 10 years Hitler has had the youth of Germany in his hands, and has moulded it to suit his evil purposes. He has created a generation of militaristic fanatics.

Some say human nature can't be changed. I believe that it can, and that Hitler has gone far towards demonstrating this in the manner in which he, has manipulated the thought not only of his own great country but of some others. What Hitler has done in Germany can be done again, this time with honest hands.

Gen. Vandergrift Named Commandant Of U. S. Marines

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Gen. Alexander A. Vandergrift, 56, today was appointed commandant of the Marine Corps, effective Jan. 1, in succession to Lt.-Gen. Thomas Holcomb, 64, retiring because of age. Announcement of the appointment was made by Navy Secretary Frank Knox at a marine corps headquarters press conference.

Vandegrift, a veteran of 34 years of service in the marines, led the marines ashore at Guadalcanal a year ago last summer.

Yearly Holidays For All As 'Right Of Citizenship'

Quebec, Dec. 1 (CP)—A suggestion that yearly holidays for all be considered "one of the rights of Canadian citizenship" was outlined by R. J. C. Stead, superintendent of publicity and information at the National Parks Bureau, at the third session of the first government-sponsored convention of the tourist industry here today.

He also suggested that the Federal government develop Canada's natural resources for the tourist industry and that recreation travels be encouraged.

COLLISHAW RETIRED

London, Dec. 1. (CP Cable)—Air Commodore Raymond Collishaw, famous Canadian flier of the last war and commander of R.A.F. units in the western desert offensive in this war, has retired with the rank of Air Vice Marshal, the London Gazette announced today.

Collishaw, 48-year-old native of Nanaimo, B.C., shot down 60 enemy planes in the First Great War. Among Canadian pilots only Air Marshal W. A. (Billy) Bishop, V.C., and the late Capt. W. G. Barker outranked him in this respect. He was among the first six most successful pilots of that war.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

The pioneers, too, knew all about "blood, sweat and tears." In laying the foundations of the civilization which it is our privilege to enjoy they suffered unbelievable privations and proved themselves real heroes.

Food-Rationing was as necessary in the long ago as it is now. But it was put into force — oh so sternly! — by the head of each family, not by the government. As winter snows deepened and transportation difficulties increased, the pioneers found it almost impossible to obtain new supplies for their larders. So Mr. and Mrs. Settler took stock of their shrinking hoard of potatoes, pork and ground grain, figured out the number of weeks before they could hope to replenish it, and decided how much of each food could be put on the table each day. The plan worked unless the unforeseen happened; there was enough to eat until Outside could be reached.

When food was scarce in the summer-time, the family began to hunt for wild roots. If it was the first year of settling, the problem was to know which were the edible roots and which the poisonous ones. It became the practice to drive the cattle into the woods and watch them browse. Dumb instinct made the cows eat only the tops of non-poisonous plants. The roots of such plants went into the stew pans of the homesteaders.

"Doing up" jams was an occupation well liked by 19th century housewives. What if there was no paraffin available with which to seal the stone jam-jars. There was plenty of paper — carefully oiled and quickly covered with white of egg — to keep the conserves fresh until used.

To be fresh out of bread and Johnny cake usually meant that someone had to get busy on the hominy block. There were no power mills for grinding grain for years after settlement began in Canada, and even then the mills were so far apart that it often took the homesteaders a week to go and return. So traffic was heavy around the hominy block in the log cabins. It was made of a large block of wood about three feet long—or the stump of a tree with a hollow burned or dug in one end. By means of a pestle sometimes attached to a sweep which fitted into the hole, the corn was laboriously ground into meal. Wheat was also ground into a flour, which, though not as fine and clean as our modern varieties, was wholesome and palatable.

AUSTRALIA WHEAT ACREAGE

Sydney, Dec. 1 (CP Cable)—Australia has set her wheat acreage goal for 1944 at 8,500,000 acres, an increase of 500,000 acres above the figure sown this year, it was announced today.

VIRGINIA DARE

According to a Norse legend, a white child named Snorro was born in Vinland in the year 1007.

Vinland is supposed to have been somewhere on the North American mainland, perhaps New England, Nova Scotia or Labrador.

After the death of Leif Ericsson his widow Gudrid, married his brother, Thorfinn Karlsenfin. About 1003 A.D. Thorfinn and his wife organized an expedition and went to Vinland, where they established a Norse colony, supposedly in what is now Rhode Island or southern Massachusetts. There, about 1006 or 1007 Gudrid gave birth to a son, who was the first white child born on the North American continent and who was given the name Snorro. Thorfinn and his wife returned to Norway with little Snorro several years later and there he grew up to be a person of some importance.

But this story, told in one of the North sagas, belongs to the realms of tradition rather than authentic history.

Virginia Dare was the first child of English parentage born on territory now comprising the United States. She was the granddaughter of John White, governor of Raleigh's Roanoke colony in North Carolina, and was born August 18, 1587.

In the same year Governor White returned to England for supplies and was unable to visit America again for four years. When he reached Roanoke he found no trace of his colony except the word "Croatan" carved on a tree. The riddle of the lost colony of Roanoke has never been solved to this day. Whether the English settlers, including little Virginia Dare, were massacred by hostile natives, perished from famine and disease, or went away with friendly Indians, nobody probably will ever know.

It is believed that the first white child born in North America north of Virginia was John Vinje, a Norwegian, who was born on Manhattan Island in 1614. This was 32 years after the birth of Virginia Dare in North Carolina.

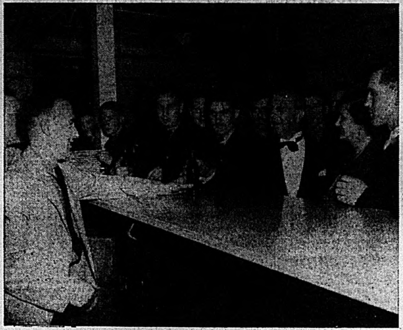
Official Opening of New "Lean-To" at No. 5 I. T. S. on Nov. 26

Group Captain G. N. Irwig, Officer in Charge of Administration, No. 1 Training Command, is shown above officially opening the new "Lean-To" at No. 5 Initial Training School, Belleville. Also shown in the picture are Squadron Leader S. Factor, Squadron Leader T. H. Barton, both of No. 1 Training Command, and Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, Commanding Officer of No. 5 I.T.S. The new "Lean-To" is attached to the big drill hall and is one of the best in Canada, with the furnishings alone costing more than $5,000. It includes a canteen, lounge, library, and offices for auxiliary officers. Following the opening, a dance was held at which hundreds of Belleville citizens attended.



Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Morch of Belleville, are shown here surrounded by airmen of No. 5 I.T.S., as they purchase soft drinks when the new canteen bar was opened.

In the new canteen, the airmen of No. 5 I.T.S., Belleville, together with a number of Belleville girls, try out the new Wurlitzer machine.

Berlin Surface Traffic Still Demoralized

Stockholm, Dec. 1 — (CP) — Berlin's railway and street traffic is still demoralized as the result of R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. bombing raids last week, according to Tuesday editions of Berlin in newspapers reaching here today.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung declared that the residents of bombed Berlin are "in the most serious situation which has ever befallen any population."

Many railway trains leaving and arriving in Berlin are forced to use suburban stations because those in Berlin proper have been destroyed, the newspaper said, while only a handful of bus and street car lines are operating. Most of the city's subway network was reported functioning.

Ship's Bell Given By Rescued Party To George Publow

Picton, Dec. 1.—"Presented to George Publow by Karl D. Van Hoesen in appreciation of the rescue of his party from a capsized dinghy on Picton Bay".

This inscription is found on a handsome, bronze ship's bell, which was presented to Mr. Publow at a gathering at Prince Edward Yacht Club, Tuesday night, and will be installed on Mr. Publow's Yacht "Moon River".

The rescue was brought to the attention of the Yacht Club by the proprietor of Bartlett's Camp, who suggested that some recognition was due. A party from Rochester, including Mr. and Mrs. Karl D. Van Hoesen, and son, David, were on Picton Bay in a sailing craft, when it was capsized by heavy seas. They were thrown into the water but managed to cling to the overturned craft. It was dusk and chances of rescue seemed slight. Mr. Publow became aware of their plight, set out in his yacht and by good judgment and seamanship, managed to affect a rescue.

Token of Appreciation.

The rescued were grateful for this timely aid and presented the ship's bell as a token of this appreciation.

Mayor N. McKibbon in presenting the gift said Picton Bay, while one of the best racing courses on the continent, had its treacherous moments. Mr. Publow was a modest hero and did not think he had done anything out of the ordinary, but those who were rescued valued their lives, and now a tangible recognition evidenced that fact. In these days when slaughter is prevalent and life cheap, it is like a refreshing breeze to hear of the saving of life.

Made Light of Incident.

Acknowledging the presentation, Mr. Publow made light of the occurrence. He and his wife had been returning from a sail down the Bay and had passed the small craft, looking back, they had noted the plight of the Rochester party.

James deC. Hepburn, Commodore Ralph Warren and others paid tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Publow. Clifford Cooper, a local boating enthusiast, suggested that there be a standard plan for a 16-foot boat, which could be built by Ontario clubs and used in races. Such a plan would make for lower cost and more interest in races, Mr. Cooper felt. Winning of a race would depend more upon the seamanship and ability as racing drivers, rather than upon the size of the pocketbooks of the person concerned. Jockeying for position at the start of the race would be one of the important things, rather than some extra refinement to hull design or extra power gadget, he felt.

A social time was spent and there is every prospect of power boat races here being revived after the war.

Rector Inducted

At an impressive service in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene last night, Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne was inducted as Rector of the Parish of Picton. Rt. Rev. John Lyons, M.A., D.D., Bishop of Ontario, officiated at the induction. The sermon was delivered by the Very Rev. R. S. K. Seeley, D.D., Dean of Ontario and Rector of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston. Among the clergy present were Ven. Archdeacon Dumbrille, M.A., Napanee, Archdeacon of Frontenac, Rev. Rural Dean A. B. Payne, rector of Belleville, and Rev. Canon Smart, Bishop's Chaplain. The church was filled with parishioners and friends.

Instead of refreshments, the Catholic Women's League decided to award several prizes at their euchre party, and this proved a popular plan. The sum of $30 was realized, part being for Red Cross work. Mrs. E. McNally and Mrs. A. McKenna were conveners. Prize winners were: Mrs. W. McKenna, Mrs. C. Rozamiak, Mrs. G. Seeley, Mrs. J. McAlpine, Mrs. E. Keough, Miss S. McMeneny, Miss Grace Goodwin, Harry Bowers, James McAlpine, S. Martelle, Mrs. P. Knight of Parkhill.

Bazaar and Tea

The bazaar and tea sponsored by the Evening Auxiliary of the United Church attracted more than 250 ladies. Chrysanthemums centred each tea table. Mrs. A. H. Walton, president, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. P. E. Walden and Mrs. W. A. Wright. Presiding at the long tea table was Mrs. J. Laird, Mrs. L. A. Vanskiver, Mrs. J. F. Reycraft, Mrs. S. Davis. Home cooking, apron, white elephant, fancy work, booths were well patronized. Many ladies took advantage of the occasion to entertain friends at tea.

Merchants have arranged a Santa Claus parade in Picton for Saturday.

Rescued From Sea

Three Prince Edward County young men, two in the air force and one in the navy, have recently experienced exciting adventures.

Pilot Officer Corey Spencer R.C.A.F., overseas, was the navigator on a Lancaster bomber which was forced down in the North Sea. All members of the crew were rescued. Returning from a raid over Germany, the aircraft ran out of gasoline as it neared the English coast. There being no suitable place to land, the pilot brought the machine down in the North Sea. In 15 seconds the eight men were swimming in the sea toward the dinghy on which they drifted for two hours. Danger from land mines prevented their landing, but a coast guard cutter picked them up. The whole town turned out to give them aid and welcome, and after a short stay in hospital they were given leave. Today they fly a new Lancaster but there's a fondness among them all for the big machine they left in the North Sea.

PO. Spencer is the son of Mrs. Charles Spencer, Picton, a graduate of the local collegiate and starred in athletics.

Makes Crash Landing

Flying Officer Homer E. Walters, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Walters, is flying Mustangs. One he was piloting over the English channel developed engine trouble as the engine backed up for lack of fuel, his radio was out of action and his compass was unserviceable. He had been on a dusk train-busting sortie over France, accompanied by another plane. His compass went wrong but he attacked and damaged two locomotives, then discovered he had lost his companion plane and couldn't find him as the radio was out of order. He took the bearing from a French town and headed in the direction of England. When almost ready to bail out he saw land and managed to set his plane down on a Cornish hillside, suffering no damage but a cut over one eye, a few scratches and a banged-up Mustang.

AB. Ted Goodwin, son of Mrs. Andrew Goodwin, is a member of the Canadian tribal destroyer Iroquois which picked up survivors from a bombed merchant ship, "one of the outstanding rescues of the war, both from a standpoint of its success and heroism displayed," the R. C. Navy stated. Two enemy planes attacked the merchantman despite a barrage from the destroyer. The merchantman was set ablaze and had to be abandoned. The crew of the destroyer did magnificent rescue work. So large was her complement that by the time she reached port, food lockers were empty and every article that could be used was converted into some article of wear.

George Hepburn has received an Italian stop watch, sent by his father, Capt. George Hepburn, now in Italy.

Bomber Destroyed by Fire

An Anson bomber was destroyed by fire at the R.A.F. station and two members of the crew injured as a result of an explosion of bombs. Five other members of the crew escaped injury. The machine was still on the ground ready to take to the air, when in some manner the bomb release switch was thrown. There were nine bombs in the load, and all exploded, the sound being heard down town. The machine caught fire and was quickly a mass of wreckage. One of the men injured is said to be in a serious condition. R.A.F. officials did not issue a statement on the occurrence.

Seaward Anchor Of Main Jap Line Taken by Aussies

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Dec. 1 — (AP) — The fall of Bonga, seaward anchor of the main Japanese supply line on Huon Peninsula, New Guinea, to Australian troops was announced today by Allied headquarters.

The Australians, moving up the northeastern coast of the peninsula from Finschhafen, occupied Bonga Nov. 29 without opposition and also took the village of Gusika and established positions at the mouth of Kalueng River on the south bank.

They were obliged, however, to wipe out enemy opposition before reaching the river.

The coastal advance developed into one prong of a pincer movement, with the captors of Bonga moving westward along the south bank of the Kalueng River toward Wareo, which is the objective of another Allied force pushing northward from Sattelberg in the interior.

Allied naval and air units helped the ground forces in the Bonga occupation, planes bombing Japanese aviation facilities at Cape Gloucester, westernmost point of New Britain Island which is east of Huon Peninsula, and light warships bombarding the Sio enemy plane and barge area to the north of Bonga.

Point Traverse

Fishing Season Nearing Close, Boats Hauled In

Herring Catches Good but Not as Heavy as Compared to Previous Years

AVERAGE LIFT

Point Traverse, Dec. 1—The fishing season for 1943 is nearing a close at the Point Traverse fishing colony. Boats are being hauled from harbor waters and made ready for the winter.

Herring catches from the eastern end of Lake Ontario have been good, but not as heavy as compared to previous years. Lifts averaging a half ton of herring per boat were taken during the height of the harvest.

Catches of herring taken during the falls of 1930-1935 were the largest in years, according to the fishermen. Production was heavier than the markets could absorb. Lifts of over a ton of herring per boat was not uncommon at this colony. Prices during the latter part of the season went so low that fishermen discontinued operations and laid up their gear for the winter.

Catches of whitefish taken from shoal waters off here this fall, have been exceedingly light, although prices remained high.

Heavy lifts of whitefish were taken by Prince Edward county fishermen during the fall of 1932. Catches of from 500 to 1,500 pounds of whitefish per boat were taken by fishermen operating from here. One fisherman netted over 2,000 pounds of whitefish during one lift.

Prices for herring during November 1932, jumped from 3c lb. to 6 1-2 lb; whitefish from 4c to 8 1-2c lb, and trout up to 10c. These prices were stated to be unusual as they usually dropped at the close of the season.

Prices paid to commercial fishermen this fall were very high as compared to the above stated prices of eleven seasons ago. Whitefish prices reached an all time high last summer, when fishermen received as much as 40 cents per pound for them.

Ideal weather favored the fishermen at their hazardous work this fall, and very little net was lost or damaged by high winds.

The Canadian lighthouse tender Grenville, called at Duck Island here last Friday. The Point Traverse light which was temporarily out of order, was placed in operation, and will continue to operate until the close of navigation, which terminated about December 15th.

Section Closed.

Activities at the R.A.F. Marine Section here, have ended for the season. Members of the station, attached here during the summer have been posted elsewhere for the winter months.

Bombing Discontinued.

Practice bombing on No. 2 water range has been temporarily discontinued. The bombing target has been removed from bay waters. No. 1 and No. 3 ranges will be in operation during the winter.

Lest We Forget.

Twenty-five years ago, Dec. 2nd, 1918, eleven men, comprising the bow section of the freighter Minola, perished, when that section of the boat foundered off the Main Duck island.

Visits Island.

Mr. John Foster Dulles, eminent New York lawyer and important church layman, and owner of the Main Duck island, who with Mrs. Dulles has been spending a few days at their new home on the island have returned to New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Dulles anticipate returning to the Ducks in February to spend a brief holiday there. They cross over to the island via plane. A miniature runway has been constructed on the island to facilitate safe landings and take offs for Mr. Dulles' plane.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mrs. John Stratton Wardner, 125 Victoria Ave., wishes to announce the engagement of her only daughter, Muriel Valera, to L.A.C. Frederick Lewis Andrews, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold V. Andrews, 41 Lincoln Ave., Toronto, the marriage to take place quietly at the end of the month.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mullins, of Windsor, and Mr. James Mullins, of Cleveland, Ohio, were in town to attend the funeral of their brother, the late Michael Mullins, which took place this morning from St. Michael's Church.

Mr. A. E. Facer, Foster Ave., has retired on pension from the services of the Canadian National Railways.

Friends of Mrs. Hoy Joslin, Foxboro Road, will be glad to learn that she has returned home from the Kingston General Hospital, where she has been a patient for several weeks.

Warrant Officer R. E. M. Carter, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Carter, of Point Anne, has returned from overseas to spend a leave with his parents, having completed an operational tour as wireless air gunner and an instructional course.

Mrs. Murray, Cannifton Road, has received a message from her husband, Sapper H. F. Murray, saying that he expects to return home shortly. Sapper Murray has been overseas for some time.

On Wednesday, Nov. 17, Mrs. M. J. McGuinness, Lonsdale, opened her home for a tea and sale, held under the auspices of "The Victory Group of War Workers". The tea table was particularly inviting, spread with a lace cloth and centred with a silver basket of yellow 'mums. Mrs. Patrick Roache and Mrs. Frank McDermott poured. Miss Margaret Nash and Miss Mildred Brennen assisted in serving about forty tea guests. Mrs. John J. Farrell and Mrs. Joseph Doyle were in charge of the sale tables, while Mrs. Dan McHenry assisted the hostess in receiving the guests. A pleasant afternoon netted the sum of $42 for war work.

WEDDINGS

HYLAND—McGINNESS

Christ Church was the scene of a very pretty, but quiet wedding of Helen Roberta McGinness, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McGinness, Belleville, and Thomas Edward Hyland, son of Mrs. T. E. Hyland and the late Capt. T. E. Hyland, on Saturday, November 27th., at 1.15 p.m., Rev. G. G. Wright officiating. Mr. Alec Gordon presided at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a rose crepe street length ensemble with black hat and accessories and corsage of delicate pink roses.

Mrs. Everett Smith, as matron of honor, wore a cocoa brown dress, with a brown hat and accessories to match and corsage of bronze baby 'mums.

The groom was attended by Mr. Everett Smith.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Hyland left for Toronto, for a few days.

On their return from their wedding trip, the couple will reside at the groom's home in the city.

CLARK—BOYER

Gowned in heavy satin, simply fashioned with a square neckline, the full skirt extending into a long train, Patricia Florian Boyer became the bride of Flight-Lieut. Jackson Clark at a pretty autumn ceremony, Saturday, November 27, in Bishop Strachan chapel, Toronto. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George F. Boyer, Inglewood Drive, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Clark, Lessard Ave., Toronto. Standards of white chrysanthemums formed the setting for the bridal party. Canon H. F. D. Woodcock officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her long veil was caught with gardenias and she carried a bouquet of the same flowers.

Miss Joan Boyer attended her sister as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Misses Alice Ross, Adele Cooper, Nancy Foster and Kathleen Hastie. They were frocked alike in bittersweet red crepe, with pleated frills edging the round necklines. Matching hats, misted with fine brown veiling completed their costumes and they carried bouquets of bittersweet berries, with a background of pine.

Flying Officer Kenneth Carty, R.C.A.F., was groomsman, and the ushers were Squadron Leader Jimmy Conway, R.A.F., Flight Lieut. Colin Lazier, R.C.A.F., of Hamilton, John Boyer, brother of the bride, and Robert Aiken.

At the reception, held at the Granite Club, Mrs. Boyer received in a draped frock of chartreuse crepe with a matching hat and shoulder bouquet of wine flowers. The bridegroom's mother, assisting, was in a gray crepe ensemble with a purple hat and corsage of pansies. The couple left for a wedding trip to Chicago. For travelling, the bride chose a raspberry wool suit, with accents of black Persian lamb, a matching hat and a corsage of yellow orchids.

Flt. Lieut. Clark is a grandson of Mrs. Lewis Clark of Wellington, and he spent a great deal of his boyhood there.

HOW CAN I BE MORE BEAUTIFUL?

PEPSODENT WITH IRIUM CAN ADD BEAUTY TO YOUR SMILE!

You will have more poise...more charm...even more pleasing personality, if you can smile confidently...buoyantly. And you can, if your teeth are given their natural brilliance. Make sure that your teeth are bright and lustrous. Film on teeth collects stains, makes teeth look dull and dingy. Pepsodent with Irium removes that film...uncovers the natural brightness of your smile.

How IRIUM in Pepsodent uncovers brighter teeth

This film-coated mirror illustrates how smiles look when commonplace methods don't clean film away.

But look what Irium does to that film! It loosens and floats it away, leaves the surface clean and bright.

That's how Pepsodent with Irium uncovers the natural, cheery brightness of your smile...safely, gently.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He's Always Sentimental Over the Girl He Didn't Marry.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am married and have been for two years. My husband is in the service. He is 27; I am 26. We were married four months before he enlisted, and now I find that he has been seeing a lot of a girl he went with before we met. Her reputation is none too good.

He wrote and told me he couldn't get this other girl off his mind, was sorry he'd married me, and that he should have married his first love. And when he came home on furlough, he told me he loved me and didn't mean the things he wrote. And yet, while on furlough he went to see this girl three times. I know it, because he told me so.

Miss Fairfax, shall I trust him and go on this way, or shall I try to forget him? I know when he comes home for good we never will be happy, because he said he'd always want to see her. Can you help?

A. S. W.

You tell me you won't be happy with your husband when he is discharged from the service and comes home. And taking into account his emotional stability, it would seem you're right. Why not employ this time in acquiring some skill or business that will enable you to make a comfortable living for yourself? An independent woman has much to be thankful for. She can have her own home, her own pay envelope to do with exactly as she pleases. And if she does not allow her emotions to run away with her good common sense, her life can be highly satisfactory.

A woman is never really happy with a man who is always sighing after the girl he didn't marry. If you divorce him and he marries her, he'll probably then spend his time sighing over you.

Afraid His Girl Won't Wait Until the War's End.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 18 and expect to be called to the service any day. Don't think me yellow; I'm glad to serve my country, but what gets me down is I'm afraid some slacker who's got out of going will get my girl while I'm away.

You'll probably think it's because I'm crazy about her that I think she's beautiful, but she really is. And she has such a sweet disposition. Knows how to cook and keep house, too. She's the only one for me, but she's very domestic and I'm afraid some other fellow will persuade her to marry him and go housekeeping. If this should happen I never want to come home, but want to die and have my bones lie in foreign soil.

M. C.

While I hope sincerely this fate may not overtake you, still let me whisper that we all feel pretty much that way about our first love affairs. If the girl marries, she's just not the girl for you. And in all likelihood you may meet someone equally charming either here in your own country, or overseas. Anyway, you'll probably always look back on this first love as one of the most enchanting episodes in your life.

But . . . here's hoping the girl will be waiting for you when you come home.

She Was Married Without Benefit of Clergy.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a soldier and we got our marriage licence and had blood tests taken. But we weren't married by a Justice of the Peace, a minister or a priest. I want to know whether our marriage is legal. I think I am pregnant, and that is why I would appreciate a reply. Please tell me what to do in case this marriage isn't legal.

Anxious.

Taking out a marriage licence and having a blood test made does not constitute a legal marriage. I suggest that you go to the Red Cross in your home city and have them give you an examination. If the soldier has not been sent overseas you may be able, through his commanding officer or the chaplain or the Legal Assistance Office, to have him go through a legal ceremony. I hope you know something definite about him, his serial number, his real name, and his correct mailing address.

If you write again, send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

This is the Heyday for Jobs—Lose No Time in Getting One.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 26 years old and about the lonesomest girl in the world. I'm the youngest of a large family. My mother always decided our lives for us. We had few friends, if any, as she always thought we were company enough for one another.

I was never popular with men, and there was only one who showed interest but my mother soon discouraged that affair. The few friends I have are now happily married, and I just sort of feel alone. My brothers and sisters all married late in life, but I don't believe in late marriages. They lack something.

Although she always disapproved of children marrying, they all did, secretly, and told her only when the first baby was to be born, which shocked her horribly. And now all these nieces and nephews come over and their screaming almost drives me mad. I want to get away. Do you think there can be any happiness for a girl like me?

A. G. B.

When I get a letter like yours I wonder why a girl grieves away her youth without doing anything about it. Never in the history of the country was it as easy to get well-paying jobs as at the present time.

You can't walk a block in a city without seeing in windows "Girls Wanted" as waitresses, sales persons, file clerks, and other jobs too numerous to mention. Get one of these jobs. Now's the time; you haven't a moment to lose. Don't sit 'round grieving over home conditions. Make something of yourself.

Woman Doormat is Never Loved or Respected.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

You say to these women whose husbands beat them that they must turn to the law. Well some of them may be in the same position I am. Right now my face is black from being knocked down a week ago, and I'm scared to even look out of the window. That's why I was knocked down.

Could I get a policeman or anyone to believe me. No, indeed, everyone would think my husband is wonderful and even the police think he's the grandest man. I have no one to turn to, and I know now, I'm just like a whipped dog. I just cry all the time.

I'm not so old, but I'm wishing for the day when the Lord will take me. Forgive pencil, I'm too upset to use pen.

D. S.

In the city from which you write me I have every reason to believe that the Legal Aid Society functions, as well as in other communities. In fact it should give a better account of itself, because I had a letter from one of their attorneys, asking me not to send clients from the suburbs or outside the city limits, as the service is paid for by the taxpayers.

Similar societies offering aid are not so exact as to mileage, but give advice to those outside the city limits. The police in your city must have low standards, if they admire a man who beats his wife black and blue. Why don't you scream for help the next time he beats you? I have very little patience with women who permit themselves to be treated in this manner.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Gift-Giving Should Never Cause Embarrassment to Others

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My dearest girl-friend is having a birthday party soon, and I am going to give her a birthday present. Do you think I should give it to her at the party, or perhaps when I see her at school that day? I don't know if the other girls will bring her gifts to the party, but I'm quite sure that the boys who are going aren't planning to bring her gifts. I don't want to do anything that might possibly embarrass those who don't bring her a gift.

2. What is the best way for me to invite a boy to go with me to the party? The boy I have in mind to invite knows my girl friend slightly, and I'm almost positive he would like to go with me.

3. This girl lives quite a distance from my home and his. Do I pay the bus fare for us both, or should I allow him to do this?

T.P.

1. There is always the possibility of embarrassing the other guests at a birthday party when one takes a gift and the others, or even most of them, don't. So I suggest you give your gift to the girl at school. Since she's your best friend, the others will probably take it for granted that you've already given your gift to her, and in any event you won't be the cause of any embarrassment.

2. If there is time before the party, write him. If not, telephone him.

3. Let him pay the bus fare.

Correct Letter-Paper for Young Girl

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Do you think a girl of fourteen is old enough to have her letter-paper imprinted with her name and address? If so, should her name be given in full, or just the initial of her middle name? And is it correct to have "Miss" before her name?

I would like your advice too about the paper I am considering ordering. It is a double sheet, 6 3-4 by 5 1-2 inches, in either a pale blue or ivory, with the lettering in a deep blue.

N.H.

Letter-paper with the name and address printed or engraved on it is, in my judgment, not appropriate for a fourteen-year-old girl. Also this kind of imprinting is more suitable for business and professional letters than it is for the social letters the young lady would write.

If, however, she has her heart set on this kind, either use her name in full (no abbreviations), or, if she isn't particularly fond of her middle name, omit it. And no "Miss" before her name.

In perfect taste, and the most popular form now for letter paper for a young girl, is to have only her first name engraved on the paper. This first name may be engraved in the top center, or smarter, diagonally across the upper left corner. This could be engraved in block letters (or in the facsimile of her signature, if her handwriting is good-looking), in a rich dark blue on ivory paper. I approve of the double-sheeted paper, and of the excellent size you have chosen.

PERSONALITY TIP

You're good to look at? How about your voice? Is that good to listen to? Your voice reveals your personality far more than your looks do.

The Marry-Go-Round

PHILOSOPHY, IN OLD CLOTHES.

Love-making, like playing the violin, requires a lot of technique, long practice and real inspiration. And even then a man must have had an early start in order to be an expert.

After the war a girl may feel that it's almost a shame to take a man who can fly a plane, handle a machine-gun, stake a tent or climb the rigging of a mast and pin him down to pushing a lawnmower, stoking a furnace and walking the baby.

It is easy enough to quicken a man's pulse or awaken his imagination these exciting days; but now, as always, you have to raise love from the lower plane to a high altitude before his HEART is affected.

Many a man's romantic enthusiasm for a clever girl has been punctured by the stab of her pointed wit.

It is every man's divine right to think himself dangerous to women, no matter what his mirror, his wife or his sergeant may tell him. As a matter of fact, almost every man is dangerous to some woman, if only his wife.

Now that we're all wearing our dear old shoes until they drop off, I find it consoling to recall the days when I wrote the following:

When you've been all morning trotting
On a pair of high French heels,
And have sat, with aching tootsies,
Through a movie's seven reels;
When your toes are numb and weary
And your heel has got a bruise,
Tell me, what is so inviting
As a PAIR OF GOOD OLD SHOES?

When you've danced in silver slippers
'Til they feel like casts of lead,
And you're tired from your tiptoes
All the way up to your head,
Then, if anyone should ask you
What, in all the woirld, you'd choose,
'Twould be just to slip your feet into a pair of GOOD OLD SHOES!

Next to knowing when to stop talking, the average husband believes that his surest way of preserving the domestic peace is to know when to stop listening—especially when his wife talks politics.

Plastic surgery has enabled many a woman of forty to look like twenty—and to make a fool of herself all over again.

A man's favorite animal is the dog; and the things which he loves best and demands in a woman are the dog's fine qualities—devotion, faithfulness, trust—everything, in short, except the habit of running after him.

A girl should be extremely careful about setting her heart and mind on the kind of man she wants to marry, because, according to the psychologists, what she really wants she will get.

A woman has such a passion for novelty, change and the latest fad, that she simply can't understand that the only thing a man wants for Christmas is something exactly like something he already has.

These war brides have a break! They may miss the wedding trip; but I have always contended that if it weren't for the show wedding and the honeymoon trip, lots of young bridal couples could begin to be happy right away. The best time for a honeymoon trip is a year or so after the wedding, when you know and understand each other, and will really be able to see the scenery when you look at it.

When a husband and wife are perfectly agreed on what is a good joke and what is bad taste, they can hurdle all the other matrimonial fences with the greatest of ease and good nature.

You can never be absolutely sure that two people are in love until you've listened to one of their long silences.

MRS. V. M. CAMKEN TO HEAD AUXILIARY

The Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion met in the Emmanuel Church Sunday school rooms on Monday evening and elected their officers for the ensuing year, Mrs. V. M. Camken being named president. Mrs. D. Cook is 1st vice president and Mrs. M. Kent is 2nd vice president. Mrs. Charles Jeffs will act as secretary and Mrs. J. Haley will be treasurer. The executive committee consists of Mrs. Meeks and Mrs. Carr, while the auditors are Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Mifflin. A church parade will be held to Emmanuel Church on Sunday and the auxiliary will turn their attention to provide comforts for the Veterans' Guard, 372 members being stationed in this district.

PERHAPS the nicest way to achieve the pet formula of white on black is through the use of a little ermine. Tiny neckbands of snowy ermine finished with ermine bows, tiny ermine muffs and calot sets, ermine bands on black suede gloves, have all been noted recently.

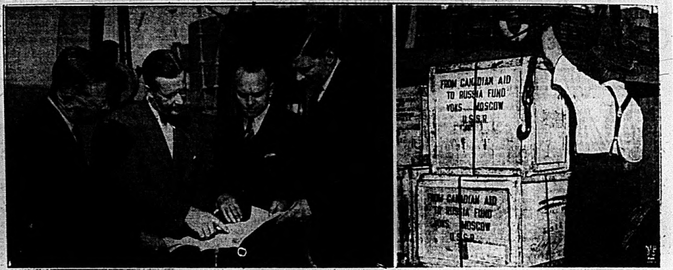
Canada Mutual Aid Plan Speeds Soviet Supplies

The sturdy Soviet ship, Wellan, is loaded to the plimsol line with a cargo of Canadian goods destined for the Russian people. These are accumulated through the operation of the Mutual Aid Act as well as activities of the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund. Picture at right shows Capt. Malahoff, youthful skipper of the Wellan. Malahoff is one of the youngest captains in the Soviet Navy and holds Order of Lenin.



A significant event in history of Canadian-Soviet relations took place when Karl Fraser, Director of Administration for Canada's Mutual Aid Board turned over ship manifest to V. A. Wily Japanese Fooled First Canadian Importer of Soybeans

(By H. M. M. in Windsor Star.)

Soybeans have come to be looked on as one of our major crops. Their possibilities as suppliers both of food and a long list of industrial products are almost limitless, and they are justifiably expected to play a major part in our future economy.

Few, perhaps, realize that this crop is a comparatively recent entrant into Canada. Nor is it generally known that we are indebted to a nation which is now an enemy for the useful little bean. It came to Canada from Japan.

Windsor has something more than a passing interest in the introduction of the soybean into this country. It was a former prominent resident of this city who was responsible for bringing it to Canada, and the story of his activity in this regard highlights the cunning which has always marked the Jap in his business dealings.

F. Maclure Sclanders, for many years industrial commissioner of the Border Chamber of Commerce, was the man in whose mind first dawned the idea of making soybeans a Canadian crop. It was some 30 years ago, while he was secretary of the Saskatchewan Board of Trade before coming to Windsor, that he became interested in the project.

Knew of Use.

Mr. Sclanders knew of soybeans, and how widely they were used in Japan. He had made a thorough study of them, and the thought entered his mind that they could be grown in Western Canada. Careful comparison revealed that the soil and climatic conditions in Saskatchewan were much similar to those of the parts of Japan where soybeans flourished, so there was no reason why they could not be successfully cultivated here.

He decided to do something about it. He ordered two bags of the beans from Japan, and he rather ruefully recalls, when telling the story, that they cost him a fantastic price, the shipping cost being tremendously high. Knowing the distorted business acumen of the Japanese, he said nothing in his correspondence about the order of the purpose for which he wanted the beans. He let it be supposed that they were for his own private use.

In due course the two bags arrived, and Mr. Sclanders, saying nothing to anyone about his idea, set to work. He planted a quantity of the beans in specially prepared beds. He labored long and hard over them, maintaining ideal conditions for their growth, and he tended them assiduously.

Wouldn't Grow.

He was confident that he would get splendid results, but he did not. In fact, he got no results whatever. Weeks and weeks went by, and not a single shoot appeared above ground. The beans simply refused to grow. It was all very mystifying. Even if he had calculated wrongly and been a little too positive about the similarity of conditions in Saskatchewan and Japan, he should at least have got some sort of stunted growth. But absolutely nothing happened.

Finally Mr. Sclanders bethought himself of the business cunning of the Japanese. A suspicion formed in his mind. He took the beans which he had not planted to an expert for examination. Very soon he had his report. The soybeans had been carefully kiln-dried before shipment from Japan. Every bit of germination had thus been killed. Those beans would never grow.

Mr. Sclanders was left to ruminate sadly over the fact that he had been out-manoeuvred by the cunning Japs. They had guessed when they received the order, what his purpose was, and they had no intention of letting so valuable a crop go to another competing country, so they had arranged it so that anyone trying to grow them would be discouraged and abandon the attempt.

Fortunately, Mr. Sclanders was not the type to give up so easily. He got more soybeans. He is rather secretive about how he obtained them, but he managed to bring them in without the Japs knowing what he was about. His second set of experiments confirmed his original opinion, and the great soybean industry of Canada was launched.

COLUMN OF THREE'S

Kingston — Even the thrills of life on the Alaskan Highway were not enough for Steven Moran and it is not at all surprising, for Steven is a veteran of three years in the Imperial Army — 17 months of which he spent battling with the natives of torrid East Africa in Tanganyika.

So Steven, a handsome dark-skinned English chap with a Clark Gable moustache—was at Fort Osborne's Reception Centre one recent early morning trying to get into the Canadian Army.

He didn't make it. He has already been discharged from the Imperial Army for medical reasons. If determination was all that the medical officers required from a man, then Steven Moran would be in the Army. As a matter of fact, he would have been in the Air Force at Montreal right after he first arrived back from England some time ago.

The adventurous Englishman was in Ottawa when the war first broke out. So away he went back to his old home town, London, England, where his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. Moran used to reside before Tottenham district was bombed out.

Mr. Moran declared that the climate in East Africa is "hot." But he liked his East African sojourn in spite of sultry days and danger-filled nights. The Alaskan highway was dull for this young Imperial Veteran though.

It's an old rule, but probably not generally known to troops, especially newer members of the active army—namely, they can't take their mascots with them overseas.

Possible contributing reasons — restricted transportation facilities, lack of dog food, canine noise, general nuisance.

"Dogs, Domestic Pets or Animal Mascots cannot be accepted for shipment in transport."

Reserve Army members whose term of service expires during this war will be required to serve an additional year before they are discharged, National Defence Headquarters said today. Men who enlisted in the Reserve Army prior to January 2, 1943, were attested "for the term of 3 years or until legally discharged."

In peacetime such men would be entitled to be discharged on completion of three years' service. But when the three-year term is completed in a time of emergency, an additional twelve-months must be served. Such personnel may, of course, re-enlist for the duration of the war if they desire.

A list of the articles worth their weight in gold to the servicemen overseas has been provided by the Army Auxiliary Service organizations' supervisors with the troops abroad.

Cigarettes, tobacco and cigarette papers head the list, followed by razor blades and sharpeners, combs, small scissors, chewing gum, hard candy, soap, shaving cream, tooth brushes, can opener, records and needles, writing paper and envelopes, shoe laces, novelties, games and reading material.

A money order payable in pounds sterling, is tops, too, with all servicemen overseas.

Fashion Flashes

BIG SURPRISE of a recent fashion show was a simply-detailed but beautifully cut coat of black woollen that opened to disclose a street length dress entirely of gold sequins.

THERE'S A LIFT when color appears on a drab day or scene. A grand ensemble consists of a swing back coat in checked woollen in purple, acqua, wine and greige, worn over a purple wool dress.

BEST BUY for a woman who goes in for smart but casual clothes and woollens is the alligator pump. Also a smart shoe any day is a brown alligator pump made with a broad strap, placed high, and a medium heel.

IT'S DIFFICULT to resist the lure of twinkling jet and sequin accessories, especially if one goes in for simple, basic black. A purse of jet and sequins, a belt of suede with jet in a scroll design and a tiny calot of black sequins with sequined discs at each side form a nice, useful trio.

HANDS UP in favor of the drawstring bag, the bag that seems to be the favourite these times, first in fabric, then in leather and now in fur. Drawstring bags of pieced Persian or nutria are available in the sensible price brackets. In the luxury class are mink and broadtail.

A BREATH OF SPRING is the best description of the lovely flower prints soon to appear on the winter scene. Big red carnations and white poppies nicely spaced on a gray crepe frock offer beauty and color. The set-in belt is finished with self fabric spaghetti cord ties. Similar detail at the base of the collarless V neckline.

Fanciest Fireworks in Minor League Baseball Due to Blow Up at Meeting in New York

Voting May Give Landis Greater Power or Rob Him of All Supervision

CLUBS DIVIDED

By SID FEDER

New York, Dec. 1 — (AP) — The fanciest fireworks in 40 years of minor league baseball blow up in one loud "bang" today, and when the shooting is over Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and William G. Bramham will either be waving a bigger stick than ever — or won't have any stick at all.

Opening the third day of the "revolution" of the winter baseball meetings, the minors go from separate sessions into the general leagues, headed for the bitterest brawl over control and power ever faced by Landis in 22 years as high commissioner of baseball or by Bramham in his three terms and 12 years as minor league "czar."

With the nine operating minor loops reported split four-and-four, and one "on the fence," all signs pointed to a photo finish over (1) whether Landis will lose control of the minors through the "death" of the major-minor league agreement (2), whether Bramham will be voted out of office as National Association president, to be succeeded by Frank J. Shaughnessy, the International League head, and (3) whether 16 leagues which had their voting privileges taken away will win their battle to get the ballots back to vote in the scramble.

16 Clubs Disfranchised

These 16 were "disfranchised" because they didn't operate in 1943, although continuing to pay National Association dues. And what finally happens to them in their fight for return of voting privileges was the real dressing on the salad, for if they are allowed to ballot, the chances are the "rebellion" stirred up by a powerful group among the nine loops which did function in '43 will be squelched. The group of rebels was said to include the International League, American Association, Pacific Coast League and Piedmont League.

Most of the 16 loops figure to be regular party liners who will vote for Bramham's re-election to his $25,000-a-year job and for renewal of the major-minor pact, by which Landis wields his power over the minors.

And so hot was the slugging in the clinches over the voting question, that these 16 circuits, headed by the reviving Texas League, were ready to dump the row into Landis' lap, giving him jurisdiction on the ground that when the nine operating leagues took the vote away it constituted "conduct detrimental to baseball."

BOMBER CRASHES IN MOUNTAINS

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 1 — (CP) — The world's best flyweight boxer—as recognized by the United States and Britain—fought as Sergeant Paterson at London's Royal Albert Hall for a "purse" of $8, and hammered out a convincing victory.

Glasgow's Jackie Paterson wasn't defending his title. He was representing the Royal Air Force against the Army in a match for services charity and received a bronze plaque as his purse. Jackie took leave from his air force physical training duties for the bout and trip cost him nearly $100.

Although the champion won, he was on the losing side. The army captured the tournament, featuring six well-known professionals and 16 outstanding amateurs, by eight bouts to three.

Jackie was in a "killer" mood against L. Bdr. Jim Hayes, Leeds professional featherweight, through out the three rounds and twice slipped to the floor through sheer exuberance of attack. A flurry of hammer blows in the first round sent Hayes to the canvas with a bloody nose but the Leeds lad recovered to last out the fight, although no match for the fast-stopping titlist.

Most promising boxer to appear before the crowded house was AC. Ronnie Bissell, 19-year-old kid who took a technical knockout in the third round from L. Cpl. Joe Thomas, tough-looking warrior who holds the Army bantam title, Bissell, a peacetime bricklayer, dropped Thomas twice in the third round.

Bdr. Alf Brown travelled 600 miles from a lonely gun-site to pound out a verdict over Sgt. Tom Reddington of the R. A. F. Brown, former amateur Boxing Association champion, was making his professional debut.

Although professionals were not matched against amateurs, it was the first time in many years that they mixed together on the same card.

Cmdr. G. V. (Rocky) Knight of the Royal Navy set a new style in referees. He sat in a chair outside the ring and used a small megaphone to address the boxers. All contestants fought under amateur rules.

Over on the other side of town, Sgt. Harry Hurst of Montreal scored a technical kayo over Laurie Buxton of Watford when a referee stopped a scheduled eight-round welterweight bout in the fourth at the Queensberry Club.

Giving his best display since arriving in Britain with the Royal Canadian Air Force several months ago, Hurst showed skill and powerful punching. He had floored Buxton with a right hook to the chin and was belaboring him after he rose when the official stepped between them.

A few nights previously, at Liverpool, Hurst lost a 10-round decision to Liverpudlian Jimmy Molloy.

BOSTON BRUINS EARN 6-5 WIN AGAINST HAWKS

Chicago Established as the Outstanding "Homer" Team of Loop

GUIDOLIN STARS

By The Canadian Press

Little research was needed today to establish Chicago Black Hawks as the outstanding "homers" of the National Hockey League.

The homer label — hung on teams which win at home but have little success on foreign ice — became Chicago property last night when they dropped a 6-5 decision to Boston Bruins before a 10,000 crowd at Boston Garden. The clinically-minded could stress that it was Chicago's third loss in five starts on enemy territory against five straight victories before the home fans.

Chicago has not been beaten on home ice since it dropped a 5-3 verdict to Montreal Canadiens Nov. 4.

In defeat, Hawks staged a grandstand rally which saw manager Paul Thompson hoist Hec Highton and send six forwards in quest of the tying goal after Hawks had netted two goals in the last six minutes. The rally was choked off one goal short as Bruins gave young Maurice Courteau in the Boston nets ample protection.

Bep Guidolin played a key role in a victory which lifted Bruins into a three-way tie for third place with Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings, scoring the first two goals of the game. Other Boston scorers were Herb Cain, Flash Hollett, Dit Clapper and a newcomer, Al Palazzari.

Cully Dahlstrom counted two of the Chicago goals. The others were provided by Doug Bentley, Clint Smith and Bill Mosienko. The loss left Hawks seven points behind Canadiens and two ahead of the joint third placers.

New Masked Horror, "The Czar", Will Wrestle Dunlop

Wrestling's newest hooded threat, "The Czar", a mammoth hulk of Russian humanity has been added to Promoter Frank Tunney's gala Thursday night's wrestling show at the Hume Arena that features team wrestling, with all four grapplers in the ring at the same time.

"The Czar" moved into Canadian wrestling circles only recently and, although a bemasked giant, is considered a threat for the world's championship already. He needs that ring villain Al Dunlop in the opener Thursday night. In the semi-final 'Hard-boiled' Hannigan tangles with Joe "Killer" Christie to round out two perfect preliminaries before the team grapplers take over.

"We've practically been assured of two referees for the bout between the teams of Watson and DeGlane versus Bishop and Reeder. This time all rules have been dispensed with and there's to be no time limit. With all four grapplers in the ring, along with a pair of referees, one just can't imagine what may happen. At any rate here's the greatest show we've ever attempted in Belleville, eight wrestlers in all and four in the ring battling at once. They're all top-notchers too", stated Promoter Tunney today as he announced the signing of "The Czar".

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Chicago's Billie Mosienko collected three points last night to place himself atop the National Hockey League scoring list. Bill Cowley, Bruins' centre, got only one assist which forced him to give up the leadership and step down to share second place with Doug Bentley, Chicago, who scored one goal and two assists, when his team was defeated 6-5 by Boston in the only N.H.L. contest.

Committee Room Fight Starts Over East Hockey Playdowns

(By The Canadian Press)

Long before the contenders are named, the committee room fight has started over the eastern senior hockey playdowns.

It started when Norman Dawe, President of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, said he would demand from the C.A.H.A. that the Maritime-Quebec Allan Cup series scheduled for the Maritimes this winter be staged in Quebec league's area.

Judge Elliott Hudson of Halifax, the M.A.H.A. boss, said last night that his circuit will fight vigorously any attempt to shift this series from the Maritimes. Judge Hudson pointed out that the Maritimes have far less recreational facilities for men of the armed forces than Quebec has, with N.H.L. games in Quebec along with the Q.S.H.L., which Judge Hudson said is probably "the world's leading amateur circuit."

The last word—so far—is with an official of the Ottawa and District A.H.A. who said last night that his league's winners "will not be jockeyed into playing in the Maritimes this season." The Ottawa official added: 'Our champions were forced to play in the Maritimes in last year's eastern senior semi-finals because the Quebec crowd squawked about meeting the M.A.H.A. winners, but we have no intention of being shoved around again." The Ottawa district winners are slated to meet the O.H.A. winners in the first round.

In connection with entertainment for the forces, five big league ball players are going overseas to entertain American troops. They are Frankie Frisch, Pirates' manager, Stan Musial and Danny Litwhiler of the Cards, Hank Borowy of the Yanks and Dixie Walker of Brooklyn. Presumably they'll split up with army teams.

King Carl Hubbell, finishing 16 years as a top-flight baseball pitcher, has signed for a long term as head of the New York Giants' farm system. Announcement from the winter ball meetings at New York last night said Hubbell will be in charge, but there are only two active teams left in the chain now—Jersey City of the International and Bristol, Va., in the Appalachian.

Two rinks from Hamilton, two from Kitchener and one each from Guelph, Galt, Ayr and Sarnia are still in the running for the senior's trophy at the seniors' bonspiel program at Hamilton. One of the surprises yesterday was defeat of Dr. A. E. Walkey of Hamilton Victorias by George Hanson of Kingston, 15-6, in the second round.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 1 — (CP) — Hand the palm for stupid rules to the National Hockey League which has just incorporated into its rulebook the following: "Any player who gives to the press for publication any statement reflecting in any way on the conduct or performance of any official, any club official or any player shall be subject to a penalty of not less than $200 and not more than $1,000."...For years players have been orally berating officials and the printable quotations have made fine reading for the fans. Feuds between players have been played up by the press, liberally spiced with quotations and counter quotations. All this has swelled attendance by thousands. Maybe the N.H.L. doesn't want the publicity — can't stand the big profits. Maybe the excess profits tax gets them down. They slap a threatened $1,000 fine in the faces of players who ordinarily talk freely and fluently about "the lousy officials" and the poor guys will be stricken dumb. They'll have absolutely no topics for conversation.

Witticisms such as flew from the tongue of Babe Pratt will cost him as high as 100 kopeks a word. His tongue (and hands) tied, the man's play will suffer.

Seriously the rule is dictatorial. Men like Lester Patrick and Art Ross have long been dictatorial in their attitude to the press. Patrick has always been prompt to seize opportunities for favorable publicity—hires high-priced men to promote it. But he refuses to accept unfavorable criticism of his hockey interests, no matter how true or how well justified. This new attempt by N.H.L. governors to curb criticism is unutterably silly. It will raise a just complaint from sports writers across the country.

Incidentally:

The big sports events mean much to servicemen returned from overseas and many of those just back in this country were at Saturday's football final. One medical officer who lost 60 pounds in a bout with tropical fever overseas, wired on arrival in Halifax for four tickets. Reached Toronto Saturday morning and was at the game in the afternoon ... Let's hope Halifax Navy's failure to arrange an exhibition with Hamilton will not discourage promotion of Canadian rugby in the Nova Scotia city. They deserve a place in the Grey Cup play-offs and interest created by the good Navy team should carry over to 1944.

COWLEY STARTS MOVING TO TOP OF SCORING RACE

Scores Seven Points in Last Week and Now in Second Place

Montreal, Dec. 1 (CP)—Around abuot this time each National Hockey —League season, play-making Bill Cowley of Boston Bruins can be expected to start moving to the top of the league's scoring race, and official figures released today show that this year is no exception.

The official figures, which do not include last night's Chicago-Boston game, show Cowley with 21 points, compiled on four goals and 17 assists, a gain of seven for the week and a rise from fifth place to first.

Doug Bentley, in fourth spot a week ago, picked up four points during the week and slipped into a second-place tie with his Chicago team-mate, Bill Mosienko, a point behind Cowley and the same distance ahead of Mud Bruneteau of Detroit and Lorne Carr of Toronto.

Buddy O'Connor of Canadiens, who shared the leadership with Mosienko a week ago, remained pointless through the week and slipped back into a seventh-place tie with team-mate Elmer Lach, a point behind Boston's Herbie Cain.

Cowley's 17 assists put him well in the lead in that department, while Bruneteau still led the goal-getters with 15. Herbie Cain was the only other player cracking double figures in goal, with 12, while Cowley's closest opposition in assists came from Elmer Lach, with 14.

Pat Egan of Detroit continued to lead the penalty parade with 24 minutes in majors and minors, closely followed by Canadien's Mike McMahon with 22. From a team standpoint, the league-leading Canadiens were the bad-men of the circuit with a total of 118 minutes in majors and minors, followed by Detroit with 103.

What's Doing in Sport

New York—(AP)—A total of 63 new track and swimming standards will be up for recognition at Columbus, O. Gunder Haegg's three records set on his American tour last summer feature the new list. They are 4:05.3 for the mile, 3:47.8 for the 1,500 metres and 8:51.3 for two miles.

Chicago—(AP)—The Illinois racing Board yesterday allotted dates for the 1944 season, giving a total of 163 days of racing starting April 29 and closing Nov. 4. Arlington Park will have five days of racing to raise funds for Chicago charities in the middle of its 40-day season.

Akron, O.—(AP)— Matchmaker Tom Stanley announced last night the signing of Angelo Callura, of Hamilton, Canadian Lightweight champion, and Joey Pirrone of Cleveland for a 10-round bout at the armory Dec. 15. Pirrone recently received an honorable discharge from the United States Army.

Applicant—You wouldn't think so if you had read them.

Great football games are packed with sixty minutes of tense and thrilling action, and yet out of those sixty minutes two seem to stand out as the most dramatic—the first and the last. The two standard super-thrills of any football game are the run-back of the opening kick-off for a touchdown when two strong well-matched teams meet, and the last-minute winning touchdown on a long run or pass, at least that's the way Clark Shaughnessy sees it in his publication—"Football in war and peace."

Out of the many famous kickoff returns that American football has produced down through the years, the greatest of all was Red Grange's runback of the opening kickoff in the 1924 Illinois-Michigan game. As oldtimers will remember this game was played on Oct. 18th, 1924 and had been ballyhooed for a whole year, Michigan and Illinois sharing the Big Ten conference title in 1923.

There was another angle that built up this great moment of football. The day had been selected for the official dedication of the Illinois Memorial Stadium—built by the alumni in memory of the Illini dead in the Great War.

It was a bright sunny October day and Illinois appeared sans the conventional stockings. All eyes turned to Grange as Illini warmed up, but he looked too relaxed and even bordering sluggish on that day.

Actually Grange was leaning on the Ilinois goal post when the teams lined up for the kick off and seemed little concerned about the whole thing as the cocky Michigan team threatened to kick off to him.

And exactly that they did. A low liner punt went to Grange on Illinois' five yard line. It looked like an ordinary runback that would take him 35 or possiby 40 yards but suddenly Grange moved out and in the greatest runback in American football history he weaved and turned, swept tacklers from his hips like a scythe and was gone in a breeze. From that day on it was "The Galloping Ghost," as Grange ran 95 yards for an opening touchdown.

Another kick off found the ball deep in Illinois territory. Again it was Grange who weaved and ploughed through Michigan for 67 yards and a second touchdown. Actually Grange had scored two touchdowns and only handled the pigskin twice. Truly unbelievable.

But wait! Another kick off and the ball's on Illinois' 44-yard line. It's the same play. Another touchdown for Grange as he ghosted through Michigan for 56 yards and before the quarter was over he had raced another 44 yards to score four touchdowns in 12 minutes of play. The greatest feat in the annals of American football. Actually that day when the Michigan team saw Illinois sans stockings they suspected trickery and went into the game so "trick conscious" that Grange ran wild from formation. It was truly football's greatest achievement.

P.S.—(For J. L.—"Notre Dame's famed "Four Horsemen" were Don Miller, Harry Stuldreher, Jim Crowley and Elmer Layden".)

(What, another mask?)

Yes sir, Promoter Frank Tunney has added "The Czar", wrestling newest hooded horror to Thursday night's program. This masked Russian meets Al Dunlop in the opener and no doubt Al will make matters as rough for the Volga Boatman as is his usual practice. The Czar, plus the team wrestling with four grapplers toiling at once and toss in a couple of referees and a semi-final bout featuring "Hard-boiled" Hannigan and the fans shouldn't have time to feel the cold weather at the local palace de sport. (Credit 'Daffy.')

Frankie Frisch, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is one of the game's best story tellers, and his tales about the famous St. Louis Gas House Gang of 1934 will never die. One of his favorite stories is about Dizzy Dean.

"I'll never forget that day in '34," Frisch chuckled. "We were in the Cardinal office, Rickey and Breadon and Dizzy and Paul and myself, and Dizzy was trying to talk his way out of a fine and a suspension for not showing up at an exhibition game.

"Well, Dizzy talked a blue streak, and he really could. Paul just lounged around the window, pickin' his teeth. But the fine stood, and even though the boys threatened to tear up their uniforms and leave the Cardinal club in a lurch, Breadon remained firm and so did I.

"But the payoff came when Paul, who hadn't said a word, finally jumped up, and indicating me with his thumb, said: 'Why don't you just pop this guy on the chin, Diz?'"

LESSON NO. 241

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Akoolap Oxhead has butterfly notions. He flitters from one thought to another with every deal. Consequently, his bids give no exact information to his partner.

Suppose you start with an opening bid of one in a suit. Your butterfly partner might respond with one no-trump. When you learn his hand has little or nothing, he claims he was showing weakness.

The next time you start with one in a suit, he responds with one no-trump when he has a powerhouse. If you pass that response of his, he burns up. He says he was showing you strength.

At another time, he responds with an assist in your suit. You carry on to a game and find he has a very weak hand. He claims his assist showed extreme weakness.

The next time he assists, you pass. That is just when he has sound help and you could have made game if you had carried on. And he bawls you out for letting the contract die too soon.

He is likely to throw a no-trump or assist response at you even when he has a biddable suit of his own. It is usually just when you needed information about that suit.

There is a new crop of butterflies. They have absorbed the notion that an opening bid of one no-trump is forcing. Therefore, even with a bust hand they will not pass your one no-trump bid.

Suppose you start with an opening bid of one no-trump when your butterfly partner has this hand:

♥ 10 6 3
♦ 9 6
♣ J 7 6 4 2

A sane partner would pass that hand. But the muddled moth bids two clubs. Naturally, it makes you believe he has some strength.

Comes the next time when you make an opening one no-trump bid. The miller responds with two clubs and you pass. That's just when you find him with a sound club suit.

Some of us nuts go nuts trying to play with such nuts.

AT THE BELLE

"Behind the Rising Sun"

The real reason for Japan's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor and its place in the Island Kingdom's dreams of world conquest, are the basis of the absorbing human story of "Behind the Rising Sun", first feature film to reveal Nip war aims, now showing at the Belle Theatre.

The sensational picture weaves a dramatic romance and many authentic glimpses of Japanese life into its development, which centres around the growth of mad militarism in the Mikado's kingdom and its results on the lives of six persons, three Americans and three Japs.

One of the Japs knows what is coming, doesn't like the idea, but realizes he is helpless, and that to oppose the growing tide would be fatal. He persuades his son, a likeable young Cornell graduate, to go in the Jap army and become a part of the New Order. The tragic results of this move motivate much of the breathless action of the plot and lead to its stirring climax when to atone for his mistake, the father endeavors to rescue his American friends from torture and death.

J. Carrol Naish and Tom Neal play the Jap father and son, and Margo enacts the latter's sweetheart. Robert Ryan, Don Douglas and Gloria Holden are cast as the trio of Americans. Edward Dmytryk directed the film for RKO Radio from Emmet Lavery's screenplay, based on James R. Young's book of the same name.

The Fox Movietone News, described by Lowell Thomas, a funny Walt Disney colorfun cartoon, and "Army Chaplain" a timely and thoroughly entertaining multiple-reel film, precede the feature attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Footlight Serenade"

Betty Grable, John Payne and Victor Mature are starred in 20th Century-Fox's new musical, "Footlight Serenade", coming to the McCarthy Theatre next, which is hailed as the "perfect tonic for the times". Featuring love, laughs and lyrics, it is indeed a merry musical treat.

With a story that spells entertainment all the way, "Footlight Serenade" tells of a fighter who turns actor, Victor Mature realistically portrays the boxer, as John Payne can testify—while both boys are "nuts" about curvaceous Betty Grable, as who isn't!

Rated by previewers as a worthy successor to "My Gal Sal", the picture is studded with topflight talent, such as Jane Wyman, James Gleason, Phil Silvers and Cobina Wright, Jr. Produced with all the embellishments that mark a topflight musical, "Footlight Serenade" has been hailed as one of the best.

Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger have provided the sparkling music. Among the hits you will be hearing with increasing frequency in the coming weeks are "I Heard the Birdies Sing", "I'm Still Crazy For You", "Are You Kidding Me?" and "I'll be Marching to a Long Song".

Dazzling new dances have been created by Hermes Pan, who teams with Miss Grable in some of the routines, Gregory Ratoff directed the picture from a script by Robert Ellis, Helen Logan and Lynn Starling, based on a story by Fidel Labarba and Kenneth Earl. The film was produced by William LeBaron.

The second big feature at the McCarthy is "Man Power" starring Edward G. Robinson, George Raft and Marlene Dietrich. You can imagine the action and excitement that sweeps through the film when those three get together.

Robinson and Raft play the roles of a couple of robust linemen whose dangerous job it is to repair broken high tension wires. They are great pals, sharing each other's happiness and trouble until a delucious blonde, played by alluring Marlene Dietrich, comes along. Hard, cold calculating, she suspects Robinson of having ulterior motives when he showers her with gifts and shows his affection in many ways. But Robinson is sincere. He has never known the love of a woman and Dietrich becomes his ideal.

Concluding this excellent program is the British Associated News, all Belleville is talking about this news event which really gives us history in the making.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Black Hills Express"

As the title implies, Republic's "Black Hills Express," which will open next at the Capitol Theatre with Don "Red" Barry in the starring lead, has to do with the robust, hazardous pioneer days in South Dakota.

Barry plays the role of Lon Walker, an outlaw with a price on his head, who is the only one in the vicinity courageous enough to stop the holdups which are ruining the Wells Fargo company's business. Against the protests of the local U. S. Marshal Dorman and the local banker Phelps, Lon is induced by Wells Fargo Manager Harper to take the job.

"Appointment In Berlin"

See what happens when enemies tangle . . . in a maze of sabotage and espionage . . . and forbidden love! An ex-R. A. F. Commander "goes over" to the enemy . . . and falls for a Beautiful Nazi! It's the sensational story of the greatest conspiracy in modern history! And it's revealed for the first time . . . with all its breathtaking thrills . . . in Columbia's "Appointment in Berlin", coming next to the Capitol Theatre.

This exciting new screen drama stars George Sanders and Marguerite Chapman, who are splendidly supported by such popular players as Gale Sondergaard, Onslow Stevens and Alec Craig. It was produced by Samuel Bischoff under the direction of Alfred E. Green.

A funny cartoon and "G-Men VS. The Black Dragon" complete the big double action bill.

Soldiers at Camp Edwards, Mass., vouch for this yarn—so naturally we wouldn't argue with them. . . Seems that two of the boys were walking along the beach near that Cape Cod camp when they noticed a large school of rock bass in pursuit of a swarm of minnows. . . . Running into the breakers, the soldiers waited until the fish came close and then put their football training to good use by kicking the fish out of the water onto the beach. . . .They claim they booted out 80 pounds of bass, ranging in size from three to seven pounds.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Bep Guidolin, Boston, who registered the first two goals and collected another assist last night when his team defeated Chicago Black Hawks 6-5, in the lone N.H.L. game.

Bob Calladine, Boston, who collected three assists.

Billie. Mosienko, Chicago, who scored one goal and helped get two others.

Clint Smith, Chicago, who also collected one counter and two assists.

JIMMY BIVINS MEETS CLOUTER

Cleveland, Dec. 1—(AP)—Jimmy Bivins swaps punches tonight with a clouter who has won 25 of his 28 pro fights by knockouts, but James isn't making any special preparations for the 10-rounder at the arena.

"I don't guess that Mr. Bivins ever has met a puncher like me," declares confident Lee Q. Murray, challenger of the Cleveland Negro's National Boxing Association rating as top man among the active heavyweights.

Trainer Ray Arcel elaborates on that remark with the declaration his dusky warrior is the only fighter with a chance of beating Joe Louis.

Acel reports the former St. Louis Golden Glover was fired as a Louis sparring partner because he staggered the champ instead of serving as a punching bag.

Bivins assumes this typically unconcerned attitude:

"I'll find out what kind of a fighter he is when we fight. . . "

FREED OF CONVICTIONS

Winnipeg, Dec. 1 (CP)—Thomas H. Vant, a former army officer, today had his name freed from court convictions in Brandon, Man., in 1941.

The Manitoba Court of Appeal quashed the convictions and refused to make an order protecting the magistrates—S. H. Forrest and R. M. Matheson—or the police from civil actions.

In a case of mistaken identity, Vant was convicted twice on charges of obtaining money and goods by false pretenses from Brandon merchants. He was serving a six-months' jail term when a prisoner in an Ontario jail confessed he had committed the crimes.

Vant was released by order of the Minister of Justice.

He had served half of the jail sentence before his release Oct. 16, 1941.

LONDON LETTER

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 1 — (CP) — The ignominous bending by German bombs of the sword wielded by Richard Coeur De Lion astride his great charger near the Houses of Parliament has aroused one of the more entertaining of current discussions.

The question is whether or not they should straighten the sword which originally pointed skyward but which now looks like a sign indicating a sharp turn in the highway.

During those blitz days the people liked the bent-but-unbroken spirit symbolized by Richard who, despite all the damage surrounding him, remained seated on his powerful stallion, still appearing ready to lead on to battle.

But now, say some, has come the time to restore the king to his rightful pose. They contend that a man of Richard's reputation for lion-heartedness cannot be truly portrayed with a bent sword in hand.

When discussed in the House of Commons the campaign for restoration made little progress, the matter, in effect, being left for further consideration after plans for more urgent work are taken care of.

Meanwhile, the argument continues, leading "Peterborough" to recall in his Daily Telegraph column, the words of Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, who in December urged:—

So let it stand, a people's sign and token,
Figured in bronze, for all free men to see—
The sword of Lionheart, though bent, not broken,
In this new warfare of God's chivalry.

Mr. Massey appears to have been founder of the bent-sword school, chief of the would-be straighteners is Maj. Maurice Patherick, who brought the matter to the attention of the House. When reminded of Mr. Massey's epigram, he sent back to "Peterborough" the following:—

Would not King Richard, casting in scorn away
A crooked weapon, blunted in a fight,
Fiercely have shouted, "Back into the fray,
Bring me a sword worthy of England's might."

That seems to bring the matter up to date, except to note that no one has made any suggestion regarding the visible indignities suffered by the king's horse.

Another thing bothering some people is the employment of women police. Many towns won't have anything to do with the idea. They just don't like it.

On the other hand, London and other big cities are pleading for more recruits. And here disagreement breaks into smaller factions, mainly between supporters of the permanent policewomen and those of the wartime auxiliary.

For instance, members of the auxiliary force, who sign up for the duration, can be an inch shorter than the full-time female cop. She can be married, too, but the regulars automatically lose their jobs if they get maritally handcuffed.

Some claim this is unfair, that many regulars would get married if so allowed.

There's nothing on record to indicate whether the temporary constables agree that the permanent ones should be allowed to marry. But so far, there has been no suggestion by the permanents that the "specials" should automatically lose their husbands once they become policewomen.

10,000 AN HOUR HURLED

New York, Dec. 1 —(CP)— Shells were hurled at German positions on the Sangro river in Italy "at the rate of nearly 10,000 an hour" during the barrage that preceded the British 8th Army's capture of the German-held ridge along the river, the BBC said last night in a broadcast recorded by CBS.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie was around for supper and stayed all night, and pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair and me and Artie were on the floor playing my game of Hopping the Atlantic, and Artie span the spinner and claimed it came to 4 moves bringing him to Neutral Island, skip 6, and I claimed it came to Unfriendly Planes, go back 8, starting a fierce argument, and I said, Aw, you're just dum.

I am, heh? Artie said. Well speaking of dum, you're so dum if you were a chicken you wouldn't have anything on you but necks, he said, and I said, Okay, then I'd be smart, because the family wouldn't have any excuse to fight about which part of me they were going to get. But you're so dum if you were a cow you'd think you couldn't give milk unless the farmer gave you some to drink first, I said.

Good, I'm glad to hear it, because it would save me all the work of manufacturing it for myself, pretty smart, heh? Artie said, and pop said, For Peet sake cease firing, there wouldn't be any war going on right now if it wasn't for people trying to prove they're smarter than other people. By gollies I dont believe civilization is going to advance an inch until people learn the value of an honest apology, he said.

Okay, pop, I'll apologize, I said. If Artie was a chicken he'd only be half necks and the other half would be wishbones, I said, and Artie said I'll apolgize too, Uncle Will, if Benny was a cow he'd have sense enough to give milk if they actually stuck milk bottles right under him to prove what they expected.

Civilization advances with slow and faltering steps, but it advances, pop said. Now cut out the squabbeling or else go to bed, he said.

The result being we cut out the squabbeling.

Over 18,000 Aussie Airmen Are Serving Outside S.W. Pacific

Sydney, Dec. 1 (CP Cable)—Air Minister Arthur Drakeford revealed today that more than 18,000 members of the Royal Australian air force are in Britain, the Middle East, India and other theatres of war other than the southern Pacific.

All these men are on operations and a large majority of them are air crews.

Drakeford said the R.A.A.F. squadrons were the outcome of the Empire Air Training Plan.

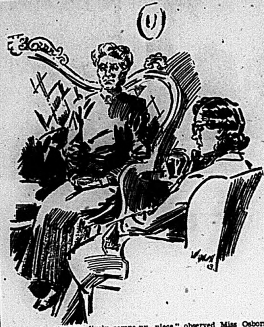
"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD



"You are hardly very lively compa ny, niece," observed Miss Osborne.

CHAPTER SEVEN

"If you know them as I do! My blood boils when I think of that dyspeptic old crow sitting at their table, eatin' their food, and tellin' them what she's going to do with money that's as much theirs as hers, if there was any justice in this world. But you'll be all right when she dies—if you can hold on that long. I'd never have believed it of her, but she's actually spared you a thought. Take a deep breath, dear, you're in for a surprise. When she makes this new will she's going to leave you five thousand dollars a year for life!"

Miss Mimms turned very white. The fork with which she had been picking at an omelette dropped with a clatter.

"Five thousand dollars —a—a year—"

"For every year of your life! You'll be rich, my dear!"

"For life", repeated Miss Mimms, as though she hardly comprehended. "For life. . . ."

She swayed and would have fallen had not Hannah caught her.

"Poor dear, you're exhausted. Hannah's going to take you upstairs and tuck you into bed".

"M—Miss Osborne may want me".

"If she does", said Hannah grimly, "it's Hannah Gale who'll give her her answer!"

"There's no need to apologize", said Miss Osborne stiffly. "If my brother's own family cannot treat me with respect, is it likely that his servant will?"

"Respect!" cried Ann suddenly. "You insult and humiliate my father at his own table and sit there talking about respect!"

"I won't have that, Ann," said Stephen sternly. "You will apologize to your aunt immediately".

"Please don't interfere, Stephen", retorted his shocked sister. "Go on, Miss. Let us understand each other. It will be interesting to learn, once and for all, exactly what my niece thinks of me".

Stephen rose unsteadily and stumbled from the room. His sister hardly noticed his going; she was facing her niece with a mirthless smile.

"I'll tell you gladly", said Ann, trembling with anger. "You are a purseproud, mean, megalomaniac. You talk about your money as though you had it by some divine right. You imagine the Lord gave it to you because you are so superior to the ordinary run of people; and that those who have no money have none because they don't deserve it. The Lord didn't give it to you. Grandfather left it in your charge because he was misguided enough to think that your brother's future would be safe in your hands".

"So. So. Your father told you that, did he?"

"Daddy didn't tell me. I heard the whole story from Uncle Simon. And I know as well as you do that you have absolutely no moral right to give away money that is as much Dad's as yours".

"Simon! That sodden scapegrace! I might have known it!"

"Yes, he's a drunkard. He does not pay his bills. He doesn't take much care of himself. But I'd rather model myself on him than you. At least, Uncle Simon has a heart and a sense of humor. He has no inflated ideas of himself. But you—you are all conceit! And why? What have you done with your life? You call Daddy a failure, but he's brought five healthy children into the world and made us happy. He's never spent a penny selfishly or uttered an unkind word as long as I've known him. A failure! If Dad's a failure, what on earth is success? What have you done with your life that can begin to compare with the achievements of his?

"There isn't a charwoman scrubbing floors on her knees who isn't of more use in the world than you. There isn't a mother in a slum who hasn't justified her existence a thousand times more than you ever will. You've done none of the work of the world, you've brought no life into it, you've contributed nothing to its happiness. You eat, sleep, dress, undress, quarrel with your acquaintances, nag your maid; that's your whole life. And when it's all added up, it amounts to less than zero. Seventy years of life—seventy years of ugly futility!

"And yet, you think you're wonderful! And why? Why? Why? Simply because you've got money. And what gave you the money? Your intrinsic worth? Hardly! An accident of birth, that's what gave it to you. If I'd been born fifty years earlier and you fifty years later, I'd be the aunt and you'd be the niece—and I'd have the money".

"You ought to run for office as a radical", said Miss Osborne dryly. "You have all the tricks of rhetoric and it would be a pity to waste so much energetic venom. But I'm not a fool, you know. I've known all along that I was merely tolerated in this house for the sake of my money".

"Do you think anyone in the world would put up with you if it weren't for your money?" demanded Dorothy suddenly. "You make no effort to be pleasant. You delight in picking holes in everyone. Why, you wouldn't dare behave the way you do if you weren't rich. There isn't a hotel or boarding-house in the country where you'd be welcome for a single day if you couldn't pay well enough to make it worth while to put up with your vile temper. Uncle Simon has no money but we all love him. There's nothing mercenary about our love. When he comes to visit us he comes empty-handed but we're all glad to see him. We'd be glad to see you if you'd only be half-human, but you won't be, because money has poisoned you until you think you can afford to look down on everyone."

"You express yourself less vehemently than your sister," purred Miss Osborne; "but I see you hold the same view. And you, Master Michael, have you no desire to give your aged and despised aunt what—I believe—domestic servants and people of that class call 'a piece of your mind'?"

"Oh, what's the use?" muttered Michael. "Ann's said it all—well, all but this: If you'd earned the money you'd have a perfect right to do what you liked with it, and we couldn't grumble. But you didn't earn it. You inherited it from a member of the family and you've no right to do anything with it when you die except pass it on to another member of the family. If Grandfather had wanted it left to charity he'd have left it to charity himself. Don't think I care what you do with it. I don't want it. We'll probably be happier without it; I can't see that it's made you happy. If you'd spent it all and had a good time, I'd say good luck to you. If you gave it away during your lifetime and made the lives of some poor folks more bearable, I'd say, 'Swell!' But to hoard it like a miser all your life and then toss it to charities simply to spite Dad—well, that's not my idea of fair play."

Hannah stamped into the room, whispered in her mistress's ear, glared at Miss Osborne, and stamped out. Little Peter was squirming in his chair as though he had something on his mind. The outraged Octavia turned a caustic glance on him.

"You, too. Well, what is it? I may as well hear what the twelve-year-old thinks of me."

Peter looked at his mother.

"Please," he said, "may I go out to play?"

Edith's gaze, stricken and sorrowful, travelled round the table, resting in turn on the faces of each of her children.

"You may all leave the room," she said at last.

* * *

"It is out of the question for me to remain under your roof after this insulting scene," said Miss Osborne with tremendous dignity. "If you will instruct Mimms to repack my bags and procure a vehicle to convey them to the station, I shall leave at once."

"I don't think Miss Mimms has unpacked," replied Edith with all the calmness she could muster. "She felt faint at lunch and Hannah made her lie down. I understand she's alseep. There is no train until four o'clock, so perhaps until then—"

"I can wait at the station."

"On the platform? The waiting-room's always locked in the middle of the day, you know. Let us be reasonable, Octavia. The scene at lunch was ghastly. I shall never forgive myself for failing to stop it as soon as it started. I am not apologizing for my children; you practically forced them to express themselves the way they did; but I do blame myself. Your train does not go for two hours. Surely we can submerge our differences for that short period?"

"Very well. I shall wait in the living room."

Like a stark and awful spectre Octavia Osborne stalked out of the room. In silence Edith watched her go, then she reeled and clutched at a chair for support. The room seemed to revolve dizzily around. I mustn't faint . . . she thought, clinging desperately to the chair . . . I mustn't faint.

"Mother!" It was Ann's voice, tense and anxious.

Edith managed to raise her head and force a smile.

"I'm all right, child. For a moment I felt giddy but I'm better now. Don't look so worried, dear, it's nothing."

"You'd better come and lie down. I'm sorry about that horrid scene, Mother, but I couldn't help it. She was so cruel to Daddy. Oh, I'd like to kill her!"

"So would I!"—the words shuddered out of Edith's lips—"Heaven forgive me, so would I! To sit there and watch poor Stephen's face while she ranted on and on—What am I saying? Ann! We mustn't talk like this."

"You're upset, Mother. Do come and lie down."

"No, my dear, I'm perfectly all right. Besides, I must find your father."

On her way out to the garden through the French windows, Edith paused and looked back anxiously at her grim, scowling daughter.

"Ann . . . your aunt's in the living room. We can't let her sit there alone. After all, she's going at four and we shall probably never see her again."

"She can sit there alone till she rots for all I care."

"Ann, dear, we've got to be polite."

"Polite? Bah!"

"For me, Ann."

"Oh, all right."

Ann went into the living room and dropped into a chair facing her aunt. Miss Osborne was sitting very straight, her back arched, her head held high her hands folded on her lap. Her face was sharp and hard, her blue eyes as icy and pointed as ever. The heightened color of her thin cheeks was the only sign of emotion she displayed.

"I presume your mother sent you to keep me company. How very thoughtful of her!"

You are my own flesh-and-blood, thought Ann; yet how I abhor you! I despire you so much that my eyes are burning in my head. I often wondered what it was like to "see red." Now I know. Every bit ot me is tense with hatred of you.

In a silence so heavy that it seemed to close in on them like an encircling wall, they glared at each other . . . Acid blue eyes, Smouldering dark eyes. Bitter age. Contemptuous youth . . . The room was like a sky black with clouds, thunderous, stifling, that at any moment might be ripped jaggedly by flashes of lightning.

"You are hardly very lively company, niece," said Miss Osborne dryly.

Ann stifled the desire to laugh. If she once started she would go on laughing wildly, hysterically, until the end of time.

"I have no doubt you would rathed be reading a book."

"Much rather," retorted Ann.

"I am not surprised. Pray read, if you are so inclined."

"Very well, I shall."

"Do."

Ann took a book from the shelf at her elbow without glancing at the title and opened it at random. The printed lines were a meaningless blur before her eyes, but she stared at them and tried to concentrate.

"You would probably manage better," murmured her aunt, "if you turned it up the right way. Or is it your custom to read a book upside down?"

Without raising her eyes, Ann adjusted the book. But it might have been written in Chinese for all she understood of the lines her eyes raced along. Rancor, like a ghastly shroud, pressed murderously upon her mind.

"Sword is an oath and oaths must have their course . . ."

Ann read the line four times before she made sense of it. Her eyes were at last breaking up the lines into words—and Ann loved words—but her brain was not yet taking the words and understanding them . . . "Sword in an oath" . . . "oaths must have their course" . . . What on earth had she got hold of? King Henry the Fifth. That was Shakespeare. Well, any port in a storm. Let's see if Shakespeare can make me forget that awful Gorgon who's sitting there goggling at me.

She read on. Reading was second nature to her and books more important than food. Under the spell of Shakespeare's glowing verse she fell into a trance in which Bardolph, Nym and Pistol, King Henry, Lord Scroop, and Isabel, Queen of France, were real and very much alive . . . and the world about her was as far forgotten as though it had no existence. "When Ann has a book," her father sometimes said, "you could shoot off a cannon at her ear and she'd never hear it." That was almost true.

Time ticked away unheeded. Her eyes devouring the pages ravenously, she saw nothing, heard nothing, knew nothing except the pageantry of Shakespeare's characters and the drawing-on of their destinies. She was not even conscious of the irritable tap-tap-tap of her aunt's foot; nor was she aware when the tapping ceased . . .

A sudden piercing scream brought Ann back to earth with a jerk. It tore the air, like a cloth ripped up the middle.

Ann dropped the book and started up. In the doorway stood Miss Mimms, her meagre, black-clad frame wavering as though she were drunk. Her eyes were starting out of her wrinkled yellow face; her mouth hung foolishly open, making a round O. One bony finger, palsied, trembling, was pointing—pointing—

Pointing at the chair opposite that from which Ann had risen. Aunt Octavia still sat in it. She had collapsed . . . completely, silently. . . . Her eyes were staring, her cheeks were livid. About her neck was tightly knotted a gaudy silk scarf.

"She's dead!" screamed Miss Mimms. "Dead!"

"Yes, she's dead," said Ann mechancially. "For heaven's sake, shut up!"

British Post-War Purchases Of Bacon Will Be Influenced By Exchange Says Official

Washington, Dec. 1—(CP)— Dr. J. A. Scott Watson, agricultural adviser to the British Embassy in Washington, today said he feared Britain would lack Canadian exchange for the purchase of bacon in the Dominion after the war although "sentiment in Britain is all in favor of buying Canadian bacon."

"The whole question is Britain's ability to pay, not a question of what she wants," Dr. Watson said in a 150-word statement amplifying his recent remarks about Britain's post-war bacon purchases at the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan wheat pool in Regina.

Follows Gardiner's Statement

The statement followed a statement by Dominion Agriculture Minister Gardiner in Regina yesterday that "with the advice representatives of the British Ministry of Agriculture have given farm organizations we would not be justified in asking farmers to produce (hogs) to the level of last year, until the end of the war."

The Minister said that Dr. Watson told the wheat pool that Britain would practically be forced to choose her postwar customers from among countries that would accept her goods and that Danish bacon would come into direct competition with Canadian bacon.

Question of Ability to Pay

Dr. Watson's statement:-

"The thought I meant to convey at Regina was that Great Britain will want Canadian wheat and also a great deal of Canadian cheese after the war. Cheese is a good poor man's food.

"What I fear, is after we have bought Canadian wheat and cheese we will be hard up for Canadian exchange to buy bacon. The whole question is Britain's ability to pay, not a question of what she wants. Britain will be a poor nation after the war.

"This raises the question of whether she will be able to import any bacon. In exchange for Danish bacon, Britain could exchange coal, bicycles and the like. It is my fear that there will be nothing similar that would be acceptable exchange for Canadian bacon. We would sooner buy from Canada and we are grateful for all that Canada has done in boosting her bacon production. Sentiment in Britain is all in favor of buying Canadian bacon."

Ottawa, Dec. 1 —(CP)— Two Ontario Progressive Conservative members of parliament said before the House of Commons Reconstruction Committee today that a statement of Agriculture Minister Gardiner at Regina last night would have the effect of "disrupting" rural communities now engaged on hog production.

Mr. Gardiner said that with the advice given by the British Ministry of Agriculture representatives "we would not be justified in asking farmers to continue to produce (hogs) to the level of last year, until the end of the war."

Canada was justified in looking after Canadian agriculture first and foremost, just as the British government must look after the future of the British producer.

"This statement will have a very serious effect on the entire agricultural community," said Joseph Harris (Prog. Con. Toronto Danforth) who said he had experience in hog production and had made the transfer from "pigs to politics" when he entered the House.

The industry was sensitive to such statements about export markets.

"Those charged with responsibility should be slow to make known a definite change in policy which reduces our export of bacon to the United Kingdom from 675,000,000 pounds to 450,000,000 pounds a year," Mr. Harris continued.

"The entire agricultural community will be startled. Statements of this kind during these times are not necessary. We don't need any blast in the press driving people out of this line of production into some other. Our own people need pork products in addition to those of the United Kingdom."

G. J. Tustin —(Prog. Con. Prince Edward-Lennox) said a statement like Mr. Gardiner's would disrupt the hog market and agricultural production to a major extent.

"This committee should make representations to the Agriculture Department to see if the statement reported in the press is true, and, if it is not, see it is repudiated immediately," said Mr. Tustin.

SGT. SLAPPED DOWN

Denver, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Sgt. Robert E. Payne approached a nice looking young woman on a street corner, tipped his hat at the correct angle and began: "Pardon me, Miss..." He got no farther — the woman walloped him. Sgt. Payne retreated, too abashed to tell her that he is a member of the W.A.C. recruiting team.

President of C.O.C.A. Outlines Efforts to Get Better Cheese Price

Efforts of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association to obtain a better price for Canadian farmers when they contract with the British Food Ministry for next season's cheese were recounted by its president, Mr. W. H. Montgomery, Prince Edward County, as he addressed the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association convention on Wednesday morning.

Mr. Montgomery outlined in detail the efforts of his organization to acquire a better price, intimating his feeling that the Producers' Association had close enough contact with the cheese producers to ascertain the price needed to bolster production. The higher price for cheese had not been realized, he stated.

"As matters stand I feel the responsibility of the Producers' Association to the Food Ministry for greater production ceased with our failure to obtain the greater price asked," stated Mr. Montgomery.

Wants Cleaner Milk.

Expressing appreciation to the members of the cheesemakers' association and to officials of the British Empire Dairy Show for the success of the exhibition, the speaker urged for greater co-operation on the part of district milk producers in supplying cleaner milk to the factories. He felt possibly the class of milk shipped to district factories was in some measure responsible for the failure of cheesemakers in this part of the province to produce cheese of sufficiently high score to carry off the higher prizes at the Belleville exhibition.

Other speakers at the morning session included C. E. Lackner, Director of Dairying for the Province of Ontario; Mr. Sproule of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, and Mr. J. M. Bain, Chief Dairy Instructor for Western and Central Ontario districts. All confined their reports to the mechanics of cheesemaking and offered suggestions for the improvement of grades.

Proud of Record.

Mr. Sproule made one diversion from his talk to express his feeling of pride at the success of cheesemakers from his section of the province in carrying off many of the higher prizes at the Belleville cheese show.

"It makes me indeed proud," he stated, "to see names like Les Adair, L. E. Shenck, Calvin Smith and Donald Howes topping the prize lists as heavy winners. Not too many years ago these young men were students at the Guelph college."

President Horace Palmer of Plainfield presided over the morning session.

Bicycle Rider Is Injured

When the wheels of his bicycle became wedged in the railway tracks on Pinnacle St. during the noon hour, 19-year-old Leslie Little, 127 North Front St. was hurled to the pavement when hit by a motor car driven by Harvey Reid of Holloway. Little was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in a semi- conscious condition and with noticeable lacerations on the forehead. Little was riding his bicycle north on Pinnacle St. between the suburban railway tracks as Reid was driving south. As they approached in proximity Little attempted to swerve to the right when the front wheel of his bike caught in the track. The front fender of the motor car caught the handle bars of the bicycle and Little was thrown to the pavement. Reid told police he was passing parked vehicles on the west side of Pinnacle St. and was unable to move further to his right to avoid the collision.

Accomplishments Limited This Year

Gananoque, Dec. 1 —(CP)— S. L. Joss of Belleville, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, said last night the accomplishments of his association had been limited this year due to governmental control of the industry and because cheese had been under contract to the government. He was addressing the annual meeting of the North Leeds Cheese Producers' Association at Delta, 20 miles north of here.

German Junta Said Plotting

Reports Indicate They Want to Salvage Part of German Militarism

By ROBERT BUNNELLE
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—A Junta of old-line professional German soldiers, supported by many Junker industrialists, Agrarians and diplomats, is understood to be awaiting the opportune moment to overthrow Hitler's government in hopes of wangling peace terms which would leave enough of German militarism to form the core of a new world conquest.

This group, according to reports from inside Germany, already has made informal Armistice overtures, which were not regarded by the Allies as tenders at all and which were dismissed without discussion because they did not originate formally with the German government and because they fell far short of the United Nations' unconditional surrender formula.

Warnings against Germany's peace balloons have been given by Minister of Information Brendan and others and it is highly questionable that the anti-Hitler faction could make good on any peace promises at this stage of the water. The Nazis themselves, moreover, would not hesitate to promote such promises in order to create disunity and complacency among the Allies.

The reports, which come through channels considered reliable although they cannot be identified, say the Anti-Hitler group is headed by Field Marshal Kral Von Rundstedt, Field Marshal Walther Von Brauchitsch, Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder. They and their supporters are said to be convinced there is no hope for a German military victory, but are determined to fight on in the hope of obtaining "reasonable" Armistice terms.

BERLIN HEAVILY ATTACKED, GREAT FIRES SET
ROLLING BARRAGE PRECEDES ADVANCES IN ITALY

Air Battle Rages Over Target Area For Over an Hour

30 Four-Ton Blockbusters Dropped on Stricken City

By GLADWIN HILL, ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER

London, Dec. 3 —(AP)— Britain's blockbusting armadas flew against Berlin last night for the fifth time in two weeks and fought their greatest battle yet in the relentless campaign to erase the Nazi capital. Squadrons of the R.C.A.F. bomber group took part in the raid.

Shooting toward a city already one-third demolished, where fires still flared from the previous attacks, the squadrons of four-engined bombers drove through flare paths lighting the approaches to the city from as far away as 50 miles, pierced exploding walls of heavy anti-aircraft fire and fought with scores of night fighters massed over the area.

The attack hit the city while it still was in a great state of disruption from the previous blows. Latest reports from Sweden yesterday said fires still were burning and only a few transportation lines were running among the debris-filled streets, with people getting their supplies from improvised stores in cellars, automobiles and street tables.

The bombers apparently arrived early in mid-evening, and the telephone lines to Sweden soon went out. They were restored about 10 p.m.

Smoke Three Miles High

The Air Ministry announced the loss of 41 aircraft in this and other operations, but at the end they left great geysers of flame shooting up from the stricken city, the world's fourth largest, and billows of smoke and flame which climbed to heights of three miles. One of the missing planes was Canadian.

The fierce attack lasted half an hour and was over by 8 p. m. During this time at least 30 four-ton blockbusters — which can obliterate everything for hundreds of yards around — hurtled down. The telephone lines to Sweden were knocked out almost at once, but they were shortly restored.

The bombers dropped nearly 2,000 tons of explosives and incendiaries. This brought to about 15,000 the total dumped this year on the world's most-bombed city.

Attack Blankets City

The Germans in their broadcasts acknowledged that the attack blanketed the whole Berlin area, already in a state of disruption with only a few transportation lines restored to service from previous attacks, with the streets still filled with debris and the people living from hand to mouth from temporary stores established in cellars and street stands.

Simultaneously with the Berlin attack, Mosquito raiders hit targets in Western Germany.

Indications were that the R. A. F. had achieved a destruction in Berlin to the extent that it was now spreading out its attacks to avoid bombing what had been hit before.

This was reflected in the German reports that the raid extended over the whole metropolitan area, and corroborated by Swedish correspondents' dispatches which said new fires were blazing all through the north, central and southern sections.

One of the greatest night air battles of history was fought in relatively clear weather in which the capital was only half covered by clouds and lit up by hundreds of searchlight batteries.

3 Correspondents Lost on Air Raid Over Berlin Area

London, Dec. 3 (CP)—Three war correspondents failed to return from Thursday night's great R.A.F. raid over Berlin—Lowell Bennett of International News Service, Norman Stockholm of the Sydney, Australia, Sun, and another whose name was withheld temporarily.

Stockton, who reported the war in New Guinea and once served as deputy editor of the South China Morning Post, flew in the raid on the German capital with an Australian squadron of Lancasters.

Bennett was officially reported missing by the Air Ministry when the bomber in which he was a passenger failed to return.

Bennett made the flight as a representative of the "American pool," and was to have written an eye-witness account of the bombing of Berlin for the three American news services—The Associated Press, the United Press and International News Service.

In announcing that Bennett was missing, the Air Ministry was able to furnish no details but said the Royal Air Force bomber command was making every effort to obtain further information.

In making one place available for an American correspondent to go on the raid, the Air Ministry invited the three American News Services to draw lots. International News Service, Associated Press and United Press ballotted, and the lot fell to INS.

Bennett and William W. Wade, also of INS, both expressed a desire to make the trip and tossed a coin to decide the assignment.

Loss of Bennett, Stockton and the other newspaperman brought to 115 the casualties suffered by the Anglo-American-Canadian Press contingent in this war. Of this total 27 have been killed, 33 wounded, 10 are missing and 45 are prisoners of war or interned.

Edward Murrow, London correspondent of the Columbia Broadcasting system and Alfred King, London editor of the Sydney, Australia, Morning Herald, went on last night's raid and returned safely.

New Nazi Glider Bomb Punches Hole In Tribal Destroyer, Athabaskan

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 3—(AP)— One of the new Nazi glider bombs punched a hole through the Canadian tribal destroyer Athabaskan last August, killing five men and injuring 10 others, but the vessel is back in service again, Naval Headquarters announced today. The dead were buried at sea.

In the first detailed account of what happened to the new destroyer, the Navy lifted the veil of semi-secrecy which has prevailed about the operation and the effect of the new German aerial bombs—now called "chase me Charlie" by naval ratings who have watched them fly and follow their target.

Cmdr. G. R. Miles of Rothesay, N. B., piloted his second damaged ship into safe harbor in this war when he took the Athabaskan to a British port from the Bay of Biscay after the bombing. With one boiler flooded, the ship proceeded first at 12 knots and then got up to 15 knots, taking three days to reach port after fighting off swarms of enemy planes during the attack.

More than two years ago he brought the old destroyer Saguenay home with a piece shorn off by a torpdeo. That time a German submarine got a decoration for "sinking" the Saguenay. Following the Athabaskan incident the German radio, referring to it, claimed a British cruiser and a destroyer were sunk.

RUMORS CLAIM PARLEY IN IRAN NEAR CONCLUSION

Unofficial Reports Say Ultimatum to Germany Is Now Being Prepared

BOMBING WAR

By E. D. BALL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Dec. 3 (AP)—The London Star said today a Churchill-Roosevelt-Stalin conference in the Middle East has drawn up a final "give-in-or-die" ultimatum to Germany.

"Stalin is at war parley; meeting with Churchill and Roosevelt; give in or die to Germany," was the way the afternoon newspaper headlined the article.

(Earlier, Chairman Tom Connally of the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee had declared in Fort Worth, Texas, that "another great conference is taking place in the Middle East" among the three United Nation leaders, and described the meeting as "of paramount significance.")

"The Churchill, Roosevelt, Stalin meeting, about which there has been so much speculation, has taken place," the London Star said.

Guess at Meeting Place

"The three statesmen now are conferring somewhere in the Middle East. Some reports, Axis and neutral, say the meeting place is Teheran; others say it is Tabriz, in the Russian military zone of northern Persia.

"The first definite news of this conference was given to the world by Connally in a radio address from Fort Worth."

Official London and Washington maintained silence, while continental radios told the world that Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Joseph Stalin were in Iran drawing up an ultimatum calling upon Germany to surrender under pain of being bombed to destruction.

The German-controlled Paris radio asserted that the conference was being held at Tabriz in northwest Iran, across the border from Russia.

Similar reports emanated from Berne, Vichy and Turkey. All agreed that the conferees were meeting somewhere in Iran, but some expressed belief the conference was being held in the capital at Teheran.

Unconfirmed press dispatches from Turkey asserted that a demand to Germany to surrender or be bombed to destruction was being prepared and that the ultimatum would provide for stripping Germany of all her war gains.

Make Surrender Appeal to Huns?

"It is certain the Allies will make an unconditional surrender appeal to the Germans," said the Turkish newspaper Cumhuriet.

In London it was thought a "Big Three" declaration might assure the German people that they would not be enslaved, regardless of how heavily Germany must pay for the war.

Significantly, perhaps, Stalin's 1941 assertion that "we have not and cannot have such war aims as forcing our will and our regime on Slavonic or any other enslaved European peoples who are expecting our assistance, was republished yesterday in the Soviet war news weekly.

A Swedish dispatch quoted a German spokesman as saying, meanwhile, that a German capitulation was impossible because, while Germany has been fighting on the defensive since 1942, her armies still are battling outside the borders of the Patherland. The German aim, he was quoted as saying "is to exhaust the enemy to the point where he will be willing to acknowledge the position of the defender and make peace with him."

China is Assured Burma Road Will be Reopened

Cairo, Dec. 3—(AP)—Britain and the United States assured President Chiang Kai-Shek that the Burma Road would be reopened in order to handle sufficient supplies to capture a Chinese coastal port for the main assault against Japan, it was learned Thursday.

Reds Take 80 Towns in White Russia, Huns Repulsed at Cherkasy With Big Losses

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Dec. 3 — (AP) — While German infantry and tank divisions, heavily reinforced by mechanized troops rushed from Western Europe, battered in vain against the Russians' Cherkasy bridgehead on the Dnieper River, Red Army troops carved out new gains yesterday northwest of Gomel, where they captured more than 80 towns, a Soviet communique announced today.

Fighting continued with unabated ferocity all along the front, despite the prevalence of rain, slush and snow, field dispatches said.

Russian Gains

The Russian communique reported gains along the Lower Pripet River, southeast of Zhlobin, and in the direction of Znamekna, a rail centre southwest of Kremenchug and key to lateral communications between the Kiev bulge and the Dnieper Bend.

The war bulletin said the Germans were throwing troops against the Russian lines without consideration for large losses," especially in the Cherkasy sector.

Both the Russian and German communiques were silent concerning the bloody fighting in the Kiev Bulge east of Zhitomir and Korosten, where tank battles of unparalleled intensity were said to be raging.

Germans Report Fresh Red Offensive

German broadcasts, however, reported a fresh Soviet offensive surging southwest along the Smolensk road toward Orsha and Minsk, capital of White Russia, at the intersection of the Moscow-Warsaw and Libu-Kharkov railways. Berlin said the Red Army drive had pierced the German lines in two places.

Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's drive for Zhlobin further decimated the enemy's strength, the war bulletin said.

Red Army vanguards pushing southwest of Kremenchug captured the towns of Dmitrovka and Fedorki, respectively six and 15 miles north of Znamekna, the communique said. Znamekna itself was reported within Red Army artillery range.

10,000-TON JAP TRANSPORT SHIP SUNK BY ALLIES

Two Destroyers Damaged and Large Tanker Sunk Also 21 Planes Downed

SUCCESS ON GROUND

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Dec. 3. (AP)—Allied bombers prowling the Pacific skies from the Marshalls to New Guinea, have sunk a troop-laden 1,000-ton Japanese transport and a large tanker, damaged two destroyers, blasted enemy bases with more than 200 tons of bombs, and downed 21 Japanese planes in battles at both ends of the 2,400-mile arc.

The latest reports covered actions from Monday through Wednesday.

New successes also were scored on the ground. In the inland jungles of New Guinea's Huon Peninsula, Australians are converging on Wareo, a Japanese strongpoint more than ten miles northwest of Finschhafen.

On the west-central coast of Bougainville in the Northern Solomons, where American forces since Nov. 1 have been widening a beachhead and establishing an air strip, more than 600 marines made a two-day raid on enemy lines.

Reconnaissance bombers, attacking convoys in the vicinity of Kavieng, New Ireland the night of Nov. 30 and the morning of Dec. 1, set off explosions in the transport which was abandoned before it went down; they left the large tanker a mass of flames; they hit one destroyer amidships and another astern with 500-pound bombs.

BEATEN AND TIED UP

Montreal, Dec. 3—(CP)— Beaten over the head and tied up by two men who invaded her home on the pretext of delivering a Christmas tree yesterday, Mrs. Alex Lahaise, was taken to hospital for treatment after the marauders had ransacked her home and stolen $35 from her purse.

Bulgarian Soldiers With Rommel Revolt

London, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Bulgarian soldiers brigaded with Marshal Erwin Rommel's Nazi troops on the Bosnia-Serbian border have revolted and have been disarmed, Headquarters of the Yugoslav Army of Liberation reported in a broadcast today.

The revolt climaxed a fortnight's heavy fighting in which Rommel's drive into Serbia was stopped by Yugoslav Partisans with heavy losses, the Yugoslav communique said.

At the same time the war bulletin reported new victories over the Germans and Chetniks on various sectors of the spreading Yugoslav front. The Axis forces were said to be retreating before fierce Partisan attacks in Bosnia and Croatia while roving bands of Yugoslav Patriots wrecked large segments of the enemy's communication and supply lines.

Fighting was especially bitter during the last two weeks of November southeast of Sarajevo. The Partisans fought the attacking Germans to a standstill, the communique reported, and then went over to the offensive, driving a column of Chetniks back across the Uvac river.

Further north in central Bosnia, guerilla bands cut a strategic railway line at several points, the communique said. While German forces in the province of Gorski Kotar, in northwestern Crotia, were driven back toward the town of Ogulin.

SERG. STRINGER OF O.P.P. WILL JOIN CANADA'S NAVY

Kitchener, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Sgt. J. A. Stringer of the Ontario Provincial Police will join the Royal Canadian Navy later this month with rank of petty officer, it was announced here. Sgt. Stringer is a qualified engineer.

Sgt. Stringer was decorated last March with the King's Medal for his part in tracking down and killing a man who had shot and killed Provincial Constable Harold Dent, a fellow officer.

GAIN INITIATIVE FROM THE ENEMY IN SOUTH PACIFIC

Curtin Says Rabaul Has Become Precarious Base for Japanese

MacARTHUR THANKED

Canberra, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia announced today he had just completed an important conference with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in which they had discussed the results of the Anglo-American-Chinese conference at Cairo.

Rabaul, New Britain, has become a precarious naval and air base which the enemy uses at great hazard, Curtin declared on his return to Canberra from several days conference with the Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific.

(Rabaul, its harbor and air bases, have been heavily attacked by Allied aircraft in recent months. It is the main Japanese base for the Southwest Pacific theatre.)

Curtin, referring to his talk with MacArthur regarding the Anglo-American-Chinese conference at Cairo, commented:

"The Cairo declaration tells the Australian people quite clearly there is no short cut to victory in the Pacific."

"My discussions with General MacArthur had particular reference to 'prolonged operations' and were conditioned by joint realization that final victory in the Pacific must largely wait on events in Europe," Curtin declared.

The Australian war effort now is entering a new phase, he said.

"The defensive stage has passed. The initiative has been gained from the enemy."

"I have again expressed to him (MacArthur) the gratitude of the people and the government for the great service he is rendering."

5th Army Makes Its Biggest Effort Since Salerno

300 Air Sorties Cause the Germans To Desert Their Anti-Aircraft Guns

8TH ARMY ADVANCES

By WES GALLAGHER
(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Algiers, Dec. 3. (AP)—The British left flank of Lt.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's 5th Army, after a long stalemate on the western Italian front, has cracked forward through machine-gun-raked fields and barbed wire in the Calabritto area in the wakeof a rolling barrage of artillery shells and aerial bombs, Allied headquarters announced today.

Front-line dispatches said the 5th Army's stab was its biggest offensive since the landing at Salerno in September, but the Germans were fighting fiercely on every section of the front, and numerous minefields and heavy demolitions were being encountered.

Gen. Clark came under fire for som time yesterday during a tour of the battle front, half a dozen shells falling near where he was standing.

Fighters and dive-bombers flew some 300 sorties along a 20-mile section of the front and dropped more than 100 tons of high explosives as well as hundreds of fragmentation bombs on the German positions before the lurch forward of the 5th Army.

The results were so devastating that the last of the returning pilots said they encountered almost no anti-aircraft fire, apparently because the Germans were deserting their guns.

The British 8th Army also continued to smash the Germans back beyond the Sangro Ridge, and captured Castel Frentano, on a lateral road west of the important German defence town of Lanciano, and pushed in toward San Vito on the Adriatic coast, six miles beyond Wednesday's line. But Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's drive showed signs of slowing down.

17 Planes Destroyed

Both the 5th and 8th Armies took prisoners in their advance.

The Air Force reported heavy attacks around San Giorgio, Rocca and Cervano on the 5th Army front where the Germans were said to have "mounted guns on every strategic height around the road to Rome."

Allied air attacks were the heaviest in many days and 17 German planes were destroyed for a loss of eight Allied planes.

The Germans made a particularly determined effort to halt the 8th Army in the Lanciano area where they held a 900-foot ridge which dominates the surrounding country. The Nazis were reported yesterday rushing reserves from Northern Italy in an attempt to stem the drive.

Frontline advices said the Germans were trying to use crowds of refugees to block and hamper the Allied advance. They were reported to be taking the populations of small towns and driving them out toward the advancing 5th and 8th Armies, then blowing up bridges behind them in an attempt to create conditions similar to those in France during the Nazi blitz.

Calabritto, which is five miles southwest of Mignano at the strongest part of the German line defending the main road to Rome, was the scene of the heaviest 5th Army fighting and reports were extremely reserved on how far Clark's Army had progressed.

A force of United States heavy bombers, escorted by fighters, pounded Bolzano, on the Brenner Pass line in Northern Italy, while the British destroyers Queensborough and Raider bombarded Nazi installations in the Albanian port of Durazzo at night.

The aircraft were engaged by strong formations of Messerschmitt 109s and Focke-Wulf 190s and shot down four for a loss of three.

Pilots flying over the 5th Army battle area reported "fierce fighting" and great clouds of dust rising over large areas enveloped by battle.

Ferry Mail to Canadian Forces In Mediterranean Area Announced

Ottawa, Dec. 3—(CP)—Inauguration next week of a new R.C.A.F. transport service to ferry mail to Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen in the Mediterranean area, was announced today by Air Minister power.

The job will be carried out by a new mail squadron under Wing Cmdr. Bruce Middleton, young Winnipeg airman with long trans-ocean flying experience earlier in the war with British Overseas Airways.

At the same time Maj. Power disclosed at a press conference that all transport operations of the R. C. A. F. have been grouped into a new transport command, headed by Wing Cmdr. Z. L. Leigh.

Wing Cmdr. Middleton until recently was officer commanding a transport squadron ferrying supplies from Moncton, N. B., to Goose airport in Labrador.

The new mail service, which will have headquarters in Ottawa, will operate its planes out of Ottawa for the duration of the war. The mail will be flown to the United Kingdom and then to the Mediterranean.

Decision to inaugurate the service was made after complaints had been received that mail deliveries to troops in the Mediterranean area were unsatisfactory.

"That was not due to the fault of anyone," Maj. Power said. "We didn't have the machines to carry mail and I don't think the R. A. F. had.

"But we now have obtained from the United States a number of Flying Fortresses, and we will use them on the mail service."

The planes will not carry any mail to civilians overseas, but eventually they will carry both parcels and letters, bearing only ordinary and not airmail postage, to Canadian troops in Italy and the Middle East. Now, letters and parcels bearing ordinary postage are carried on surface vessels.

The first job of the command will be to see the Christmas mail for the troops in Mediterranean area reaches them on time. Maj. Power said all Christmas letters to the troops will likely reach them on time, but some parcels may not reach them until shortly after Christmas.

He said he believes most of the Canadian Christmas mail now has reached the United Kingdom. The command will have to move it from there to the Mediterranean.

The command expects to make about two round-trip flights a week, Maj. Power said.

The R. C. A. also was trying to work out a scheme to improve the mail service to Canadians in India and Burma.

The new command would not be a "common carrier," said Maj. Power in explaining that the planes would not carry passengers if there was enough mail to take up all available space. The command might however, on return trips carry some Canadian wounded out of the Mediterranean area, if their removal were urgent, some mail from the troops mail also be carried on the return flights.

CHRISTMAS TREES MAY BE TRUCKED BY FARM-GROWERS

There is no regulation of the Prices Board forbidding farmers making use of their trucks to transport Christmas trees of their own production to market. The Board will not, however, issue permits for the use of commercial vehicles for that purpose beyond the 35-mile limit. In communities lying adjacent to areas in which Christmas trees are cut this should, therefore, assure a reasonable supply of such trees, provided producers make them available for sale.

OVERHEATED PIPES CAUSE $100 DAMAGE

Damage of approximately $100 resulted around 7:30 Thursday evening when an overheated stovepipe set fire to the workshop of Mr. Fred Terry, 78 Gordon Street, requiring assistance of the fire department to extinguish the flames. The blaze was confined to the workshop with the exception of one spot where it broke through the wall before the fire department arrived on the scene. The shop contained electric motors, saws and other equipment, but no insurance was carried on either the building or contents.

Battered Body Of Halifax Girl Found in Water

Halifax, Dec. 3 (CP)—The battered body of nine-year-old Nadia Johnson, a deep wound in her head, was recovered today from the waters of the northwest arm by navy divers who pressed their search for the blonde child's father, Cmdr. F. M. Johnson of the Royal Navy, who had been missing with her since Wednesday morning in what police believe is a murder-suicide.

The child's body, clad in a grey ski suit, was found about 100 yards offshore and about 200 yards down the arm from the Johnson's Marlboro woods home. Her head was gashed by a deep wound that police said had apparently been inflicted by a sharp instrument.

Murder-Suicide Theory

Supporting the murder-suicide theory is a letter found in the Johnson home after father and daughter first were reported missing.

Contents of the note, addressed to Cmdr. Johnson's second-in-command Lieut. S. Kibble, were not revealed, but city chief detective James Baker said it started out, "this is finis for me and mine." Detective Baker said the letter then went on to the effect the commander had put his affairs in order.

Early this afternoon no trace had been found of the body of the senior British naval officer here, but divers were scouring the area where the grim discovery of the child's corpse was made, and where a man resembling the commander was seen in a canoe Wednesday.

Harry Garbutt Struck by Car

While returning from work along the C. N. R. spur line, Harry Garbutt, 27 Isabel St., was struck by a motor car at the Church St. hill crossing shortly after six o'clock Thursday evening. Mr. Garbutt sustained bruises about the arms and legs as the result of being knocked down.

Thos. A. Hagley, 61 Albion St. was driving his motor car north on Church St., when he says he saw a man running along the C. N. R. tracks immediately south of Foundry St. Hagley assured police he swerved his car sharply in an effort to avoid striking the man but his efforts were useless, as the pedestrian ran into the side of the vehicle and was knocked down. Constable Thomson reported. The officer also drove the injured man to the surgery of Dr. G. S. Cronk, where it was disclosed only bruises had been sustained.

Remand Pair For Car Thefts

Ray Sullivan, 17, and Gerald Henning, 18, both of Toronto, pleaded guilty to two charges of car thefts when the pair were arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court here today. The pair were later remanded in custody until Tuesday next for sentence.

Henning and Sullivan elected summary trial and pleaded guilty to stealing a motor car in Belleville last Saturday. They were subsequently apprehended by Provincial Constable O'Brien on Highway No. 2, near Trenton. The car taken here belonged to Everett Grey of Trenton. "It was finding its way home", commented Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., when Deputy Chief Harman made it known the men had been captured near Trenton.

On a second charge, preferred by Brockville police, Sullivan and Henning pleaded guilty to a theft of a Chevrolet sedan from that town last Saturday also.

"I understand they stole a car in Brockville, drove it to Belleville, abandoned it and then stole Mr. Grey's car in which they were apprehended", revealed Mr. Donnan, who requested an enlargement for sentence in order that the lads' list of previous convictions, if any, might be procured from Ottawa.

Convicted Under Militia Act

George Miller, Belleville, was convicted under the Militia Act of wearing the Kings' uniform without the permission of his commanding officer. Miller was a member of the Midland Regiment (Reserve) and was wearing his soldier's uniform for the express purpose of obtaining rides by hitch-hiking, he told the court when first arraigned on Tuesday. His Worship imposed a fine of $20 and costs and in default one month, after Captain K. R. Holmes, adjutant of the Argyll Light Infantry, who was present as observing officer, had introduced the Militia Act under which Miller was charged.

Alleged Bandits Given Remand

Roy Weaver, 23, of Belleville and Lloyd Bilow, 21, who were released from Collins Bay Penitentiary two months ago, appeared in police court before Magistrate Garvin in Kingston yesterday charged with the theft of a motor car and were remanded until Dec. 12th.

Weaver and Bilow are also wanted in Belleville in connection with the wounding of Constable M. A. McNairn, of the R.C.M.P. and the theft of a motor car belonging to Wm. Dennis. However, Kingston police are holding the pair on the car theft, and today a charge of breaking, entering and theft from a general store at Verona will be preferred by Provincial Police at Kingston. It is alleged that this pair entered the Walker and Genge store at Verona on the night of Nov. 12th last. O.P.P. authorities here stated the Belleville charges would have to stand in abeyance until the courts had disposed of the Kingston charges.

Later today it was disclosed that a charge of shooting with intent had been preferred here.

Every Voter Should Vote In Monday's Civic Election

On Monday Belleville voters will have the privilege and the responsibility of casting their ballots in the annual municipal elections. There are four contests; for the mayoralty, the fourteen seats of the city council, the Public Utilities Commissionership and four trustees for the Board of Education.

Elections are always important, though often electors do not vote in such large numbers as to indicate that they have a keen interest in the contests naming representatives for the various civic offices. This is unfortunate but it is something which can this year and henceforth be remedied by every voter making the decision to let nothing interfere with the casting of his or her vote on Monday.

The free franchise which has come to men and women of today has had a long and honored history and has been the growth of centuries. To free peoples the ballot is the finest flowering of the democratic way of life and one of the most priceless possessions. Yet often those privileged to vote seem indifferent. Such a state of apathy is not commendable.

A good many candidates have offered themselves and it is only fair to them that the vote of the electors be representative of the people, that is, that every voter possible should exercise the franchise.

Every voter has an interest in the municipality. But only those who vote decide who will fill the civic offices. Those who do not vote decline or neglect the privilege and duty and hence have no say in public affairs.

As custodians of the ballot the electors should live up to their privilege and help in the choice of the candidates.

The candidates are willing to serve. But they need votes to be elected. So let every elector turn out and vote for the persons of his or her choice for the various offices.

A large and nearly total vote is commended to the electors as the best evidence they can give of their interest in municipal affairs in the city in which they make their home. When every voter goes to the polls there is a civic enthusiasm which will be a great source of inspiration and strength to those citizens who are elected.

Roof Caves-in Shortly After Chinese Leaders and Mountbatten Leave Room

A U.S.-Chinese Base in Eastern India, Nov. 30. (Delayed)—(AP)—Seven hours after General and Mrs. Chiang Kai-Shek had lunched with Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten and a score of high ranking military men in the officers' club here, the heavy tile roof of the dining room collapsed, burying in a mass of debris, the table at which they had sat. No one was injured.

An immediate investigation was ordered although there was no evidence sabotage caused the cave-in.

Lord Louis and the Chiang Kai-Sheks had paused here en route to New Dehli and Chungking respectively after attending the Cairo conference.

Earlier in the day the party had inspected for the first time this great 30,000-acre base where thousands of Chinese are being trained and equipped for combat duty.

Later Gen. Chiang, delighted with the training program, told the station personnel: "It's your good fortune that you have been placed under the joint command of Lord Mountbatten and Gen. Stilwell. Destroy the enemy and a bright era of true equality will dawn upon you in the world to come. The price to be paid for victory is the price to be paid for the glory of our country".

Lord Louis told the trainees: "I promise that you will go into battle when the times comes. I know you will fight, I know you will advance, and I know you will kill Japs". Our motto will be, 'advance and kill Japs, advance and kill Japs'.""

Chiang declined to discuss the Cairo conference. It was obvious, however, he was satisfied with what had been accomplished at Cairo.

Finland Decides To Continue Fight With Axis Powers

By EDWIN SHANKE
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Stockholm, Dec. 3 (AP)—Finland has quietly dropped the propaganda line that she is fighting a private was disassociated from the world conflict and apparently has decided to continue the fight against Russia as a full-fledged partner of Germany.

This decision, following a period in which some Finnish leaders showed a tendency toward trying to get out of the war, was taken as the only practical alternative to plans formulated at the Moscow conference, which the Finns interpreted to mean they would have to surrender unconditionally, a reliable informant said.

In line with the new policy, which also reflected growing Nazi pressure, a directive was said to have been sent to the controlled Finish press, instructing it that thereafter there should be no mention of a separate war.

Minister Calls Tune

According to information reaching Stockholm, Premier Edwin Linkomies and Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay called the tune in a debate on future policy following the meeting of the representatives of Great Britain, the United States and Russia at Moscow.

They decided they could never accept unconditional surrender, preferring rather to fight on alone even after the Axis capitulated, it was reported.

Called to Helsinki for consultation following the Moscow conference, Toivo Kivimaeki, Minister to Berlin, was quoted as telling a secret session of the parliamentary Foreign Affairs Committee that "we must please the Germans. There has been too much pro-ally tendency and too much anti-German demonstration."

So Germany appears to have received what she wanted. She has agreed to furnish Finland tens of thousands of tons of grain and sugar by Jan. 1, and official Nazi newspapers are printing laudatory articles about "Finland's example" in which they emphasize that Finland is a "comrade in arms."

GOOD HUNTING

Collingwood, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Hunting paid cash dividends for Ross Davidson of Feversham, 15 miles southwest of here, when he shot two foxes and four racoons in a single morning recently. A local fur dealer paid him $50 for the pelts.

Pomeranian Finds Way Home After 500-Mile Journey

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 3. (AP)—Pete the Pomeranian, was back home today—happy but too tired to bark at an alley cat.

And on his return the little brown dog that had followed his 13-year-old mistress from Norfolk to Patchogue, N.Y., a distance of nearly 500 miles, received the prodigal's welcome.

Pete started his trip on Oct. 29 when Mrs. Alfred H. Staud and her daughter, Barbara Ann, had returned after an absence of two years to visit friends in Patchogue where they had lived before coming to Norfolk.

Left behind with Mr. Staud was Pete, who had been with the with the Stauds and then was Pomeranian got lonesome and two days later he disappeared from the Staud home.

Several days ago a tired and slightly bedraggled Pete showed up in Patchogue. But Barbara Ann and Mrs. Staud had returned to their home here.

Pete was recognized by friends of the family who got in touch family for four year. But the returned by express to Norfolk.

FEARS ASSAIL JAPS

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 3 (CP Cable)—A Tokyo denial that a Japanese submarine sank the Australian hospital ship Centaur May 5, 1943 was "subtle propaganda decided upon when Japan realized that world public opinion condemned her cowardly sinking of an Allied hospital ship," Francis Forde, Australia's army minister, said yesterday. His statment followed the denial, made Wednesday in a Tokyo broadcast by Sadao Iguchi, spokesman for the Japanese Board of Information, who said the Tokyo tralian protest over the incident.

SAGUENAY NOW TRAINING SHIP

Ottawa, Dec. 3 —(CP)— The Canadian Navy, reporting today how the destroyer Athabaskan was damaged by one of the new Nazi glider bombs, revealed for the first time that Saguenay, one of Canada's oldest destroyers, has been withdrawn from the fighting line and is being used as a training ship.

A Navy statement said the Saguenay, damaged by a torpedo in December, 1940, was turned into a training ship after she collided with a freighter late in 1941. This also was the first public mention of the collision. No details were given.

The statement did not indicate whether any casualties resulted from the collision.

ALFRED STAPLEY
(Formerly of Belleville)

Alfred Stapley died at his home in Pinkham, Sask., on Saturday, November 27th. He was in failing health for some time. He was in his 63rd year and was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stapley, Belleville. The early years of his life were passed here and old friends will regret to learn of his death. He was a veteran of the First Great War.

Surviving him are his wife, two sons, three brothers and five sisters.

EDWARD ARTHUR NORMAN
(Contributed.)

There passed away on November 17th., a highly respected resident of Millbridge in the person of Edward Arthur Norman.

Although he was in failing health for the past few years his death came unexpectedly and was a shock to his many friends and acquaintances as he was confined to his room for only two days.

The late Mr. Norman was the youngest and last surviving son of Capt. R. M. Norman. He was born in Millbridge on July 26th., 1867, being 76 years of age. When 24 years of age he went to Western Canada on the first Harvesters' Excursion to the Canadian West in 1891 and while there he located a homestead adjacent to what is now the town of Oxbow, Sask., where he farmed until 1910. On the death of his father, he disposed of his property in Saskatchewan and returned to Millbridge to take over the general store and farm business of his father. Since then he successfully conducted the business; a period of over 32 years.

The late Mr. Norman took an active interest in the welfare of his community being eight years in the municipal council of Tudor and Cashel and a number of years on the school boards both here and in Saskatchewan. He was also an ardent musician all his life and was for a number of years a member of the Oxbow and Winnipeg Brass Bands.

The late Mr. Norman was identified with three fraternal societies: The I.O.O.F., (179), Madoc, which he joined February 4, 1889; L.O.L. 1070, Millbridge, which he joined August 3, 1889, and he held at the time of his death the rank of Past District Master in the Orange Society; he was admitted into Madoc Lodge, No. 48 A.F. & A.M., the 28th., March 1891.

The funeral was held from his late residence on November 19, under the auspices of I.O.O.F., 179, Madoc, to Fox's United Church, Eldorado, where a large concourse of people assembled to pay their respects to one whom they respected in life and honoured in death. Interment was in Fox's Cemetery.

He leaves to mourn his passing his widow, formerly Mary O'Rourke, two sons, John at home, and Cpl. William E., with C.F.C., in Scotland, also two grandchildren and a number of nephews and nieces.

There were many beautiful floral tributes both from friends and neighbors.

The bearers were three I.O.O.F. brothers—Alf. Parnell, John Smith and Wm. Blair, and three neighbors, Henry Ray, John Landon and Roy Armstrong.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to all who mourn his passing.

SENTENCED TO HANG

Leeds, England, Dec. 3 (CP Cable)—Mervin Clare McEwen, 35-year-old soldier from Forest, Ont., was found guilty today and sentenced to death for the murder of Mark Turner, 82-year-old retired postman of Halifax, England.

Turner was killed last Feb. 2. The defence argued that McEwen's mind was so confused by drink at the time of the attack that he was incapable of forming an intention to kill.

Counsel said that craving for liquor led him to break into the old man's house where he had a bottle of whisky on an empty stomach. Turner was killed by a hammer blow.

VALLEE ON DESERT HONEYMOON

Hollywood, Dec. 3 (AP)—Rudy Vallee, who forsook crooning for the life of a U.S. coast guard lieutenant, and his bride, Bettejane Greer, one of screendom's newer glamor-girls, have chosen the desert for their week's honeymoon. It was Vallee's third marriage.

Vallee, 42, and the 19-year-old actress from Washington, D.C., were married last night in Westwood Community Church by Capt. J. E. Johnson, Navy Chaplain. Some 200 friends attended the ceremony.

U.S. Editors Protest Premature News Report

Washington, Dec. 3—(AP)—United States editors have protested to the White House and to the United States Office of War Information over the broadcasting by Reuters News Agency of news of the Churchill - Roosevelt - Chiang Kai-Shek conference more than 24 hours ahead of the release time in the United States.

A protest also was made by War Information Director Elmer Davis to Brendan Bracken, Britain's Minister of Information.

Roy A. Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star and President of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, in protests yesterday to the White House and the O. W. I., said:-

"The whole episode hurts the war effort. Our war correspondents have too fine a record of devotion and sacrifice in this war in keeping the public at home informed to be brushed off as they were. The breaking of faith, if not the release, by Reuters, destroyed much of the effect of what should have been one of the epochal highspots of the war."

Neither the White House nor the O. W. I. had any immediate comment on Roberts' message.

Davis complained to Bracken over what he called loopholes in British censorship. He also deplored the "premature" Reuters release as a "flagrant and possibly dangerous breach of the basic rules of security."

Bracken was urged by Davis to do something to "make sure that British censorship from now on keep Reuters in line."

Reuters has contended its report of the tri-power conference, circulated from Libson, was simply journalistic enterprise.

Monthly Meeting Women's Auxiliary

Stirling — St. John's Anglican Church Woman's Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Tom Tanner, Mill Street, for its November meeting. The Past President, Mrs. L. Harding, was in the chair. There was a memorial service, in memory of the late Miss A. Fleming. Minutes of the October meeting and the report of the Annual Conference of Hastings County were read. Expressions of sympathy were read. Mrs. McConnell read the Chapter in the Study Book, on the work of Bishop Anderson, in the Hudson Bay district. Rev. C. C. Brazill spoke to the members on missionary work, especially on work in the Western part of Canada where much of the population is foreign. A presentation was made to Mrs. E. Dainard, who is moving to Belleville in the near future. Arrangements were made in connection with the S. S. Deanery Convention and the meeting closed with benediction. All enjoyed the lunch and were grateful to Mrs. Tanner for opening her home for this occasion.

Presentation

Friends and neighbors of Mr. Tom McGee, Ridge Road, gathered at his home on Tuesday evening of last week prior to his moving to Stirling, where he and his sister, Mrs. D. Jackman, are taking up residence on Church Street. The gathering was brought to order by Rev. W. H. V. Walker of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Everyone joined in community singing led by Mrs. Walker at the piano. Mrs. J. McInroy gave a reading; Mrs. A. Gordanier and Mrs. N. Heath gave a dialogue "Reuben and Rachel". Mr. Frank Wood gave a reading "Taxation". Mr. F. Wood read the address accompanying the presentation of magazine table and smoker combined, mirror and lamp to Mr. McGee who made a suitable reply. Everyone sang "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem. A lunch was served by the ladies.

Personals

Petty Officer "Mickey" Armstrong of the Royal Canadian Navy, east coast, is spending fourteen days' leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Moynes moved to Belleville, Saturday Nov. 27th, where they are both employed at the Reliance Aircraft.

Mr. G. G. Rowe, of Toronto, spent last weekend with his niece, Mrs. A. Ellis. Mrs. Ellis and daughter Joan returned to Toronto with their uncle, Mr. Rowe, where Joan will enter the Sick Children's Hospital for medical attention.

Rev. A. J. Tirrell, of Port Colborne, spent Sunday last in town. Rev. Tirrell, a former pastor of St. Paul's United Church, spoke to the congregation in connection with the Temperance Federation.

Mrs. J. R. West has taken up residence in part of Mrs. J. Fitzpatrick's house on Front Street.

Stirling High School Commencement promises to be a very interesting event this week, with a splendid program lined up.

The Hon. J. R. Cooke Chapter of the I. O. D. E. held their monthly business meeting on Thursday, Nov. 25th, in the Agriculture rooms, with a good attendance. The Regent, Miss Rosa Spry was in the chair and Mrs. B. Bell, secretary, assisting. "Our Country's Flag" was brought forward by the standard bearer, Mrs. R. Burgess. The meeting opened with Members' Prayer. Motions were made to send the box of Christmas treats to the adopted school at Miners' Bay. Following the business, the meeting was closed with the National Anthem. Everyone enjoyed the lunch at the close.

Rev. W. Bradbury, Eastern Field Secretary of the General Board of Religious Education of the Anglican Church, was in Stirling on Thursday and Friday of this week to conduct a Teachers' Training Course which proved to be of great benefit to all Teachers of this Deanery.

The town was deeply shocked at the sudden passing of Miss A. Fleming, local business woman for several years. The large attendance at the funeral, also many floral tributes, show the high esteem in which the late Miss Fleming was held. The pallbearers were nephews of the deceased—Delbert Fleming, Lloyd Fleming, Gerald Blakely, Percy Blakely, Harry Rollins and C. B. Rollins.

R. Luery of the R.C.N.V.R. and Mrs. Luery of Napanee, spent a few days last week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Luery.

Mrs. Don. Hogg of Belleville, is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Luery.

R.C.A.F. SUB-HUNTERS ENJOY PORK AND BEANS ALOFT

The roomy interior of a Sunderland flying boat provides plenty of space for airmen to cook, eat and even sleep in off-watch hours during long anti-submarine and convoy patrols over the Atlantic. There are even gay curtains over the portholes as the two Canadians at left pitch into a meal of pork and beans, toast, catsup, and tea. They are Flight Sgt. Joe Kilgour of Cornwall, Ont., air gunner, and Flying Officer Jack Ritchie of 909 Bruce Ave., Windsor, Ont., navigator. In the picture at right is Flying Officer J. "Mac" McGregor of 764 Mulvey Ave., Winnipeg, wireless air gunner with a Coastal Command squadron in Iceland. He is standing beneath the tail guns of the giant Liberator bomber in which he flies on long-range patrols over the North Atlantic. — (R.C.A.F. Photos.)

3rd of Sidney

Stresses Value Of Christmas Home

3rd Sidney — Rev. Mr. Weldon, chaplain at the Stoney Mountain penitentiary, and personal friend of Rev. L. W. Scott, occupied the pulpit at Aikin's United Church on Sunday morning.

Rev. Weldon was a weekend guest at the Sidney parsonage while on holidays, has been serving as chaplain at this institution for the past seven years. It is situated 22 miles northeast of Winnipeg. His duties he stated, are to guide and direct the spiritual life and thought of all Protestants, and the social activities of all inmates of the institution.

When asked why these men are there, his answer was, because there is something radically wrong with the so-called Christian homes, homes that are Christian in name but not in practice. Seventy-five per cent of the "boys" as he termed the inmates had come from such homes.

Addressing the parents, a strong plea was made for closer co-operation between child and parent, in work and in play. He stressed the importance of obedience and the need for the trip to the "woodshed" when punishment was necessary.

Speaking to the church members, he urged that they go out into the community and help the youth. "Do not be so filled with your own goodness," he said, "that you are ready to criticize those who fall. Christianity must follow in the footsteps of the Master, and go about doing good."

Deathknell of Japan's Empire

Another step in the progress towards victory of the United Nations over aggression has been taken with the Conference just concluded in North Africa with Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Generalissimo and President Chiang Kai-Shek in which the war in the Pacific was the chief subject of action.

The shape of events to come is forecast in the declaration of the Conference that Japan is to be stripped of her empire, her ill-gotten gains in a half century. China, which has suffered so long from the greed and savagery of the Japanese, will recover all her possessions from the time of the loss of Formosa to the present and Korea is to become free ultimately.

Japanese aggression has been deep-seated and now retribution has caught up with Japan's expansionist program and she is to be reduced to the original Japanese islands. Japan has systematically worked for more than half a century to expand at the expense of China and other powers.

The United Nations claim nothing for themselves in territory, the three powers renouncing all territorial gains for themselves. This has always been one of the cardinal principles of the Allies and it is made a part of the agreement and decision reached last week in North Africa.

As great decisions have stemmed from this conference of the two English-speaking peoples and the Chinese Republic, so there is in their communique the assurance of other conferences. It is reported that Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt are meeting Premier Stalin of Russia in the East at this time. Such a gathering associated with the momentous decisions and declarations of the meeting of last week holds the promise of decisions which will not only affect the Continent of Europe but also that of Asia since Russia is at the same time a great Asiatic power. These two meetings coming together at this time prove that the strategy and program being decided cover the entire expanse of the Second World War.

A few weeks ago Moscow Conference's decisions showed the shaping of world events leading to victory in the fact that the United Nations see eye to eye and realize that they have one great common task, to eliminate the aggressor and that all the efforts of the enemy to try to cause cleavage in the ranks of the Allies is utterly futile. Now comes so shortly after another momentous meeting, which assures China of her right to the lands which Japan has stolen from her and of the security which will give China her opportunity to develop in the ways of democracy without being harassed by a warlike and bloodthirsty power like Japan. Japan's loot is to be taken from her and Japan is to become a power that will be impotent to cause war at any future time.

Japan has been struck very heavy blows on sea and in the air in the past year and now she can grasp something of the full measure of the judgment of the Allied Nations upon her by rendering her incapable of future aggression.

China and her leader, General Chiang Kai-Shek, know that the United Nations will back the decisions of the conference to the utmost by relentless pursuit of the Japanese aggressors. China has long borne a great burden which is to reap its reward of sacrifice and at the same time bring about that meeting and association of the West and East which will make for a settled world after the law-breaking Germans and Japs are so beaten that they cannot hereafter exert their tyranny as they will upon a peace-loving neighbor like China. The conference statement gives a terrific blow at Japanese attempts to pose as representative of an Asiatic order.

All decisions are planned to move irresistibly towards the crushing into the dust of Nipponese militarism and Japan's overlording and robbing of nations in the East. The parleys set a pattern for the blows to come to Japan. China has earned a great place in the world of the future but she acts not in the spirit of aggression but rather of service to Asia and the rest of the world. This oldest of nations is walking in the goodly company of modern democracy and under guidance such as that of Generalissimo and President Chiang Kai-Shek, her great democratic leader.

This conference with its vast scope of agreement will go far towards the successful termination of the war, on the two continents of Europe and Asia.

A Mild Season

The autumn of 1943 will be remembered for its mildness. There are reasons that the people should remember, one of them being the fuel situation, which the moderate temperatures of the past weeks have helped out greatly. How much fuel has been saved it is difficult to estimate but everyone knows that fuel consumption falls off when the days and nights are mild. November and now December have been unusually temperate.

It has also been an autumn which has helped the farmer and the lack of snow has facilitated travel, traffic, and communications when severe weather could easily lay an increased burden upon the railway and other transportation services carrying on under the task of war.

The Unchanging Hun

(News From Belgium)

You may rest assured that an "inquiring reporter" would be able to find at some street corner of an American city a couple of people who would say: "The Germans don't destroy libraries! That's bunk! Just a tall tale!"

The fact is that it is difficult to believe that anybody could be as repetitious as the Germans. They burned down the Louvain Library in 1914, they did so again in 1940, and in 1943 they burned down Naples University. Europeans are familiar with the German mentality of systematic thoroughness.

They are not astonished at anything the Germans do, for they all know that little quatrain which a Dutch poet of the 17th century, Jacob Cats, wrote after careful observation and at a time when his country had never been at war with Germany:

> "When the Hun is poor and down,
> He's the humblest man in town.
> But once he climbs and holds the rod
> He smites his fellow men and God."

Axis Losses in Africa

(Montreal Herald)

The huge extent to which the Allied victories in North Africa helped towards wiping out the German war machine is shown by compilations just completed.

According to the British Ministry of Information, an Axis army of nearly 1,000,000 men was destroyed in Africa, made up as follows: Germans, 248,000; Italians, 457,400; native troops and troops unaccounted for, 269,000.

It may be noted, in passing, that the estimated number of German troops in Italy now is 250,000.

Scientific House

In discussing "Science and the House" over the British broadcasting system, Julian Huxley mentioned the possibilities of an unidentified waterproof plastic adhesive, which can be made of any color, applied to polished paper and then stuck on boarding made from odd pieces of wood. Tests have shown, he says, that in an average British house the outer brick wall is about twice as thick as it need be for the support it has to give. So he would reduce the thickness by using the synthetic boarding referred to and the new plastic adhesive.

NEW ACCOMPLISHMENT

Though to boasting the family pride I am loath,
I sing the remarkable marvels of growth;
Their swiftness of coming; their sureness of change!
Those natural wonders we think of as strange.
And here is another to hail with delight:
Ellen Elizabeth's started to write!

Just over three, as we count by the years,
Scarcely the age when full reason appears;
Scarcely the time you'd expect her to think,
Yet here she is begging for paper and ink!
Telling of letters she wants to indite!
Ellen Elizabeth's started to write!

Maybe a stranger would sneer at her scrawl,
Saying of it he made nothing at all.
Maybe a stranger would turn up his nose,
With: "I can't make sense out of scratches like those!"
But I say they're proof of mentality bright,
Ellen Elizabeth's started to write!

I know "dear grandpa" is up at the top.
"I love you" is down where all letters should stop.
I know what grandfathers never would miss,
Each bracket's a hug and each cross is a kiss.
So I watch for the postman to come into sight.
Ellen Elizabeth's started to write.

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Dec. 3 — (CP) — A back-to-the-land opportunity for American veterans of the war is expected to be ready when the boys come home, probably something along the lines of the Canadian Veterans' Land Settlement Legislation, but observers here fear it will be handicapped by the swiftly-soaring values of farm property.

This has prompted James Patton of the National Farmers Union to suggest that the government appropriate $5,000,000 with which to take options on suitable farm lands for a future tenant-purchase scheme to benefit the service people.

The Washington Post quotes agriculture department statistics to show the average acre value of farm lands and improvements last July 1 was 23 per cent above the 1935-39 base. It is estimated to have risen another four per cent since July.

Lucky fellow: under the heading "Those poor Canucks," Bascom N. Timmons, veteran Washington correspondent in the Philadelphia Record, discovers that American money costs Canadians a premium of 10 per cent, and is hard to get. He tells of a "prominent Canada business man" who could get only $250 for a week's stay in Washington and was "practically stranded here." If he got $250 for one week in the United States he was lucky. Even at Washington's inflated prices, he would live pretty well on better than $25 a day.

..Oceanside notes: there was a great influx of UNRRA delegates and associates from Atlantic City Wednesday and they brought back some stories and reminiscences ... Dean Acheson, United States Assistant Secretary of State told of the hotel elevator operator's triumphant exclamation when his car stopped at the floor Acheson requested: — "Jees, I made it the first time."

CANADIAN ARMY CASUALTIES GET GRAND WELCOME

CANADIAN LEGION WAR SERVICES

Back from bondage in German prison camps, wearing scars of Dieppe, along with casualties of the Sicilian campaign, hundreds of veterans received a stirring welcome when they arrived in Montreal aboard the Canadian Army hospital train, en route to their homes across Canada. At top left, Miss Rita Charron, of Montreal, makes the arrival a happy one for Ptes. L. A. Lalonde of Kapuskasing, Ont.; M. Eunyshyn, of Winnipeg, and Bob Hall of Toronto. A "casualty" with the Canadian Women's Army Corps, (top right) Captain Gloria Queen-Hughes, daughter of John Queen-Hughes, ex-Mayor of Winnipeg, arrived on the same train, invalided home with stomach ailments. Her husband, Capt. R. W. Queen-Hughes of the Winnipeg Grenadiers, was taken prisoner at Hong Kong. At lower left, are shown a couple of Dieppe veterans and prisoners of war being greeted by Miss Nora Albutt of Montreal. They are Ptes. John Clark of Winnipeg, and Howard Bradley of Toronto. Wounded eight times during the Sicilian campaign while with the Seaforth Highlanders, Pte. Frank Wood, of Vancouver, (lower right) gets a "lift" from pretty Miss Muriel Brown. — (Canadian Army Photos.)

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Tired of travelling by "shank's mare", the public in the 1820s turned gratefully to the "Dandy" and "Hobby Horse", progenitors of the modern bicycle. But, what with their crude construction and the rough roads, a ride was enough to shake one to pieces! Some of the first contraptions were made entirely of wood. . . So it was not until late in the century that cycling began to be really enjoyed. This happy state of things was brought about by many improvements in the machines, including the use of pneumatic rubber tires, adjustable handles, and chain gearing.

In medicine, great strides forward were taken by discoveries and inventions in physics, chemistry and biology. Before the introduction of anaesthetics, many people suffered years of nightmare pain—and died—rather than undergo operation. An anaesthetic was first utilized in a surgical operation performed in 1846.

Flint lock muskets went "out of the picture" when guns using percussion caps became popular. Conjured up in 1814 by an Englishman, the new invention was far superior to the well-known flint-locks which however, lingered on until around 1850. The percussion cap gave powder protection from moisture, and meant a saving in time and power, with the advantage of sure and immediate fire.

The great Macaulay, who died in 1859, praised Invention thus: "It has lengthened life; it has mitigated pain; has extinguished diseases; given new security to the mariner; furnished new arms to the warrior; spanned great rivers and estuaries with bridges of form unknown to our fathers; it has guided the thunderbolt innocuously from heaven to earth; it has lighted up the night with splendour of the day; it has extended the range of human vision; it has multiplied the power of the human muscles; it has accelerated motion; it has accelerated distance, it has facilitated intercourse, correspondence, all friendly offices, all despatches of business; it has enabled man to descend to the depth of the sea, to soar into the air, to penetrate securely into the noxious recesses of the earth; to traverse the land in carts which whirl along without horses; to cross the ocean in ships which run many knots an hour against the wind. These are but a part of its fruits, and of its first fruits, for it is a philosophy which never rests, which is never perfect. Its law is progress. A point which yesterday was invisible is its goal today, and will be its starting point tomorrow".

The Case of the Ailing Turkeys

From the Minneapolis Star Journal.

MINNESOTA, which now outranks California and yields only to Texas as a turkey-producing state will have special interest in a notable case just concluded in Federal court in Kansas City. It was the longest trial there in 20 years, taking six weeks for testimony, and Judge Merrill E. Otis' witty and profound finding may well take its place among gems as Senator Vest's tribute to the dog.

General Mills, Inc., of Minneapolis, brought suit against Clark Bros., of McBaine, Mo., for an unpaid feed bill. The Clarks countered with a claim for $400,000, charging that loss of their turkey flock was caused by malnutrition. There seems to be no question that the turkeys succumbed. Judge Otis wrote:

"Turkeys on the defendants' farm died like Nazis under the wheels of Stalin's juggernaut. A season which began with 25,000 eggs ended with 80 birds fitted for the feast ....There has been nothing like it maong humankind except the plague in Athens described so graphically by Thucydides and the Black Death in London pictured so vividly by Defoe. Yet both of these calamities were instances of abounding public health compared with what happened in the Clark Brothers' turkey world in 1940. Noah's flood was a little more devastating. (It was survived by only seven pairs of turkeys.)"

That parenthetical observation started a hubbub in Missouri. The Kansas City Star and others caught up the judge. Didn't Noah take two of each kind into the ark?

The jurist calmly referred his critics to Genesis, wherein the Lord instructed Noah—

"...to take of every clean beast by sevens, the male and his female, and of beasts that are not clean by two, the male and his female. Of fowls also of the air by sevens, the male and his female."

The critics had been relying not on the Bible but on the line of the old song:

"The animals went in two by two,
The elephant and the kangaroo ..."

General Mills protested that disease had decimated the flock and in this it was upheld by the judge. He wrote in his opinion:

"The witness who for us stands out among those called by the plaintiff was a little girl, 13 years of age, bright, alert, refreshing, charming. We have forgotten what is her last name, her first name is Barbara. She raised a little flock of turkeys on plaintiff's feed and on the witness stand related her experience. Barbara and her flock (even as David and his 'smooth stones out of the brook') may prove a match for giants."

The case largely hinged on vitamins. Wrote Judge Otis:

"Despite the words of the Son of David, vitamins are something new under the sun. At least, the word is new. Neither Shakespeare nor Milton used it; neither Samuel Johnson nor Noah Webster incorporated it in his dictionary. The word is new and knowledge of the thing is new; the thing has been always. Vitamins are essential to growth and life in men and in turkeys."

Decision and judgment for the plaintiff, General Mills. Thus passes into history the most famous case in turkey lore.

YOUNGEST VICE PRESIDENT

John Cabell Breckinridge of Kentucky, who was born January 21, 1821, and who qualified as vice president March 4, 1857, at the age of 36, has been the youngest man ever to become vice president of the United States.

Vice President Breckinridge was nominated for the presidency in 1860 by the pro-slavery seceders from the Democratic convention and received 72 electoral votes in the ensuing election.

As vice president he presided over the joint meeting of the Senate and the House of Representatives which counted the votes and it fell to his lot to announce the election of his successful rival, Abraham Lincoln.

He entered the federal legislature as a senator from Kentucky March 4, 1861, but a resolution "expelling" him was formally adopted December 5 of that year because he had withdrawn from the senate and entered the Confederate army.

In the Confederate service, which he entered as a brigadier general, he rose to the rank of major general and distinguished himself in many campaigns and engagements. During the last months of the Civil War Breckinridge became secretary of war in Jefferson Davis's cabinet.

When the Confederacy fell he escaped to Europe by way of Cuba, but in 1868 he returned to America and practiced law in Kentucky, where he died in 1875.

Theodore Roosevelt of New York, who was born October 27, 1858, was 42 years, four months and six days old when he took the oath of office as vice president March 4, 1901, and he ranks second among the vice presidents in point of youth.

Charles Curtis of Kansas was the oldest man ever elected to the vice presidency. He was born January 25, 1860, and was more than 69 when he qualified March 4, 1929, and more than 73 when he retired March 4, 1933. His nearest rival in point of age was Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts, who was born July 17, 1744, and therefore was 68 years, seven months and 18 days old when he qualified for the vice presidency March 4, 1813.

Under the constitution the vice president must have exactly the same qualifications in respect to age and citizenship as the president.

WEDDINGS

LONGWORTH—KERR

A quiet wedding took place at the United Church parsonage at Pembroke, Saturday, November 27, when Rev. M. Servage, united in marriage, Miss Jean Kerr, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. A. E. Kerr, to Pilot Officer Roy Longworth of Liverpool, England. The bride wore a floor length dress of ivory brocaded satin with shoulder length veil and a corsage of Sweetheart roses. She was attended by Mrs. Ruth Wilson of Pembroke. Sgt. Dennis Mills of Evesham, England, was best man.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at a Pembroke tea room. The table was centred by a lovely wedding cake and looked very attractive.

The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Picton.

The bride wore a suit dress of turquoise blue, tweed coat, white fur and black accessories.

Pilot Officer Longworth received his wings and commission Friday, November 26, at Uplands, having obtained the highest marks in his class. He was posted for Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, December 11th., where they will reside. Out of town guests were the bride's grandfather, Mr. Fred Baker and her uncle, Bert Baker, Miss D. Hudson of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Ocar Kerr, Picton, grandparents.

Springbrook Women's Institute Entertained

Allan Mills.— The Springbrook W.I. members and visitors were entertained at the home of Mrs. J. S. McKeown on Wednesday afternoon with 25 ladies present.

Mrs. Geo. Eastwood opened the meeting.

A report of Miss Malcolm's address was given. It was moved that the executive be the committee to arrange the Christmas program. It was decided that $10 be donated to the Central Fund.

Mrs. J. Gauley the district president, who was present, addressed the meeting and gave several items of benefit. She also spoke on the work of W.I. members in the West where she visited just recently and said they were noted for their handicraft work done by members and thought more work in that line could be done in Ontario. She also spoke on attending their convention in the West.

Mrs. Thos. H. McKeown, convener for Canadian Industries, took charge of the program.

The topic: "New Canadian Industries", was given in an exceptionally good paper by Mrs. F. Cosby, who spoke on war plants and minerals that were being used now as never before, also peat marshes that were relieving the fuel shortage.

Mrs. T. McKeown gave the report of the Belleville Area Convention.

Mrs. A. Burkitt gave a humorous reading. Mrs. McKeown put on a contest.

Mrs. W. Heath gave current events.

Lunch was served by the hostess and a social half hour enjoyed.

Victory Recipes Tested, Approved By Dominion Experimental Kitchen

Chief, Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture

Good cooking is both a science and an art. Some types of cooking are almost pure science and directions must be meticulously followed to ensure success.

Canning, bread making and cake making belong to the scientific type of cooking. Here, success depends upon obtaining certain physical and chemical reactions by blending ingredients in definite proportions and handling and cooking according to fixed methods and exact temperatures.

Soup making, salad making and the concoction of attractive and delicious dishes from a rather depressing looking collection of leftovers call for a certain amount of science but a greater amount of art. Here, imagination counts for much and the woman—or man—with a real flair for cooking experiments, adding a little of this and a dash of that, turns out a dish 'fit for a king.'

A good stock is the basis of many tasty and wholesome soups and with the return of waste-consciousness, the stock pot is coming into its own again. Into the stock pot go bones from meat or fowl—cooked or raw, trimmings of meat, outside leaves of cabbage and lettuce, water from cooked vegetables, celery tops, etc., and out of its comes flavoursome, economical soups, stocks that add distinction to sauces and gravies, and bones still of value to the salvage department.

Here are some meat soups that the family will enjoy during the cold days ahead. They are tested recipes from Canada's kitchen in the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

BROWN STOCK

2 lbs. beef (soup bones, shank, neck or ribs).
1 tablespoon fat
2 quarts cold water
1 large onion
1 carrot.
1 thin slice turnip
2 stalks celery or celery leaves
1 tablespoon salt
3 whole cloves
1 bay leaf
1-4 teaspoon thyme, savory or sweet marjoram.

Brown meat lightly in fat. Add cold water, cover and simmer for 1 1-2 hours. Add vegetables and seasonings and cook 1 hour longer. Strain through cheesecloth, cool and remove fat before using. To clear stock for consomme:—after fat has been removed crush 4 egg shells in two tablespoons water and add to stock. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly and boil 5 minutes. Remove from heat, let stand 20 minutes and strain through cheesecloth. Stock will keep for some time in the refrigerator if vegetables are strained out.

ITALIAN GUMBO

2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons fat
1-3 cup flour
1 quart brown stock
1 pint tomato juice
Salt, pepper, cayenne
2 tablespoons grated horseradish
1 teaspoon vinegar
1-2 cup macaroni rings

Cook onion in fat 5 minutes. Add flour, stock and tomato juice and simmer 15 minutes. Season highly with salt, pepper and cayenne. Just before serving add horseradish, vinegar and macaroni, previously cooked and cut in rings. Makes about 1 1-2 quarts.

VEGETABLE SOUP

2 small slices salt pork or
2 tablespoons fat
1 small onion
2 tablespoons browned floor
2 cups finely shredded cabbage
1 cup finely diced potato
1-4 cup finely diced turnip
1 cup tomato juice or canned tomatoes
1 cup finely diced carrot
1-4 cup pot barley
2 quarts hot water
Salt and pepper to taste

Cut salt pork in cubes and cook slowly to extract the fat. Add finely chopped onion and brown lightly. Sprinkle with the browned flour. Add prepared vegetables, barley, water and seasonings. Cover and cook slowly for 1 to 1 1-2 hours. Makes about 2 1-2 quarts. Meat or vegetable stock may be used instead of water.

ONION SOUP

6 medium onions
2 tablespoons mild-flavoured fat
2 tablespoons flour
2-3 cups milk
1 quart bouillon or stock
6 slices toast
1-2 cup grated cheese

Cook sliced onions in water to cover for 1-2 hour. Rub through a sieve. Melt fat, blend in flour and gradually add milk. Stir until mixture thickens. Add sieved onions and bouillon, blending well, simmer 20 minutes. Place 1 slice of toast in each soup plate, pour soup over the top and sprinkle with grated cheese. Makes about 1 quart.

SERVING CAKE.

When serving cake, cut the amount required from the middle of the cake, then push the two cut ends together. This will prolong the freshness of the cake.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Good Taste Dictates Small Gifts Between Unengaged Couple

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am under the impression that the young man gives the young lady the first jewelry gift. Is this correct? The reason I ask is this: For over a year I have been "going steady" with an ensign. We are not engaged, but we are very close friends. During the time we have known each other, he and I have exchanged small gifts, but for Christmas I would like to give him a wrist watch. Of course I have no idea what he will give me. Do you think I should go ahead and purchase the watch?

Katherine.

I think . . .not. Since you and he have heretofore exchanged only "small gifts", it is doubtful taste for you suddenly to branch out into giving him such a consequential gift. You say you "have no idea what he will give" you. Well, suppose he follows the line of the good taste he has shown heretofore. How will you feel then? Pretty awkward and self-conscious, don't you think? And not very proud of the "important" gift you chose to give. And since heretofore he's shown his good taste in making small gifts, your important present will, or certainly may, embarrass him.

If you were engaged to this young man, the wrist watch would be an appropriate gift. My friendly advice is that you abide by the "impression" you state in your first sentence (that it is "the young man who gives the young lady the first jewelry gift") but only if they are engaged.

When Widow Uses Cards.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am carrying on my late husband's business, and have occasion to send Christmas cards to many men customers. Should I sign these cards "Mrs. Arthur Brown", or "Mrs. Laura Brown"?

Widow

I suggest that you buy cards that have no message printed on them. There is a variety of distinguished cards with simply "Greetings" artistically imprinted on the front cover, and blank pages inside. Write your message in a form that would be particularly appropriate for the use you mention. For example:

Mrs. Arthur Brown
sends you
Christmas greetings
and best wishes for the New Year

Since you are carrying on your late husband's business, this form, besides being dignified and appropriate, has the added advantage of correctly using your husband's name.

However, if you especially wish to buy cards with the Christmas message printed on them, you must, to be correct, sign your name under the message "Laura Brown" or "Laura Smith Brown". (The form "Mrs. Laura Brown" is not correct for your signature on these social messages, even if you use this form of name in business.) If you think that further identification is necessary, write "Mrs. Arthur Brown" in parentheses under and to the left of your direct signature. Like this:

Laura Brown
(Mrs. Arthur Brown)

Eldorado and Union W.M. Societies Meet

Eldorado — The Eldorado and Union W.M.S. held their Christmas meeting at the home of Mrs. E. A. Strebe on December 1, with a good crowd in attendance. The president, Mrs. Albert Empey, opened the meeting.

Business was discussed, and it was decided to have a play entitled "Lena Rivers," staged by the Young People of Queensboro on December 13th. Mrs. Clayton Blackburn took charge of the worship service. Mrs. F. A. Comerford closed the worship service with prayer.

Mrs. Albert Empey then took charge of the program, it being based on a Christmas program and candle lighting. There was a reading from the Missionary Monthly. Mrs. G. Blackburn gave the study book, after which lunch was enjoyed by all. A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess and her assistants.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shaw spent Monday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Blackburn.

Mrs. Robert Blakley spent Tuesday with Mrs. Russel Whyte.

Mrs. Jas. Bailey spent Saturday in Madoc, the guest of Mrs. D. Derry.

Mrs. Cecil Blackburn and children have returned home after spending the past week in Prince Edward.

The Eldorado Circle of War Workers held its weekly quilting at the home of Mrs. Jas. Fox on Thursday.

The funeral of the late Mr. Chidley was held on Saturday from the home of his son, Mr. Wm. Chidley, of Eldorado, to Maynooth for service and burial.

Mrs. Frank Blakley is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

A very successful wood bee was held on Wednesday for the purpose of getting the year's wood for the Eldorado United Church.

Mrs. F. A. Comerford had the misfortune to have her hand badly cut while cleaning a lamp chimney. The cut required a number of stitches.

Mrs. Geo. Robinson is spending some time in Peterborough, the guest of her daughter.

The Happy War Workers held their regular quilting and pot luck dinner at the home of Mrs. G. Blackburn on Thursday.

Pre-Christmas Bazaar At Tabernacle

The Women's Auxiliary of Tabernacle United Church sponsored a very delightfully arranged pre-Christmas bazaar at the Church on Thursday afternoon. A profusion of evergreen, decorating the church for the occasion, created a gay and Christmas-like atmosphere. The ladies were further reminded of the spirit of Yuletide by the picture which the tea table presented—a white lace cloth, a crystal bowl of red carnations and red tapers in crystal candelabra. Heartfelt appreciation is extended to Mrs. M. C. Burgess, president of the Women's Auxiliary, to Mrs. J. S. Wardner, convener of the tea, and to everyone who, through their unstinted time and effort, were responsible for the success of the function.

Pouring tea were Mrs. A. J. W. Myers, Mrs. Nicholson of Napanee, Mrs. G. S. Sharpe and Mrs. A. D. Archibald.

An artistically designed booth, with its sale of an innumerable number of wares, was a clever reproduction of the typical country store. In charge of it was Mrs. W. H. Judge and her assistants.

Convening the Homecooking table were Mrs. A. Palmer; Towels, Mrs. R. Johnson, and Touch and Take Booth, Mrs. H. Froats.

A great deal of interest and laughter were derived by the tea cup readings of Miss Ella Bleecker.

At six-thirty o'clock, a cafeteria supper was served.

Treasurers for the event were Mrs. G. Miller and Mrs. A. Phillips.

Mt. View Couple Observe Anniversary

Carrying out their general farm tasks around their homestead at Mountain View, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip B. Hamilton of Prince Edward Country are today quietly celebrating the 41st anniversary of their marriage. They have lived in the county since their marriage coming to their present farm home 18 years ago after residing at Massassaga.

Natives of Hastings County, Mr. Hamilton was born in Thurlow township, while Mrs. Hamilton, formerly Miss Alice Tufts, was born at Madoc Junction. They were married in Eggleton United Church and now attend the United Church at Mountain View.

Six children were born to the happy union. They are William Hamilton of Napanee; Mrs. (Mary) Drader of Manitoba; Private Frank Hamilton of the R.C.A.M.C., stationed in Alberta; Miss Pearl Hamilton, Reg.N., of Belleville; and Walter and Seymour Hamilton, both at home.

Boys in Italy Appreciate 'Fags' Sent by Kinsmen

Especially in the battle-scarred fields of Italy are Canadian cigarettes more thoroughly enjoyed by our troops and this fact was more recently proven, when a number of Belleville boys serving in that theatre of war made replies to Kin Matt Currie of the Kinsmen Fag Fund expressing thanks for "good old Canadian smokes".

In assurance to those numerous Belleville boys serving overseas, cigarettes continue to flow to them each month through the Kinsmen Fag Fund. This week another shipment of 300 individual packets of Canadian smokes was sent to the following Belleville boys by the Kinsmen. Those sent shipments this week were:-

Norman Adams, Lloyd Allison, C. A. Anderson, W. J. Anderson, Gerald Archer, Harry Artis, Roy Ashmore, Jack Barrett, E. F. Bassett, M. C. Bassett, D. D. Beaumont, J. T. Beckwith, William Carson, W. A. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ketcheson, Mr. and Mrs. James Vanderwater, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Welsh and Carol, Miss Patsy Calbury, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Horton, Corbyville, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. John Farrell on Sunday.

Private Steve Armstrong, who has been home on farm leave, returned to Camp Borden last week.

Mr. Frank Emerson was removed to Belleville Hospital, on Sunday for treatment of ulcers. Everyone is hoping for his speedy recovery.

Messrs. Frank Spencer, St. Clair Post, Don McInroy, Elven Maxwell, and Wm. Wannamaker, who have returned from hunting, report fair success.

Mr. Arthur Death, who accompanied Mr. Elven Maxwell to the north woods, has returned to Weston.

The War Today— Bad News for Hitler in Allied Plans to Strip Japs of Empire

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

The grim Allied edict of Cairo that the Japanese Empire is to be dismembered is, by indirection, the worst possible news for Herr Hitler because it means that his own day of doom is hastened—a warning which the Nazi Fuehrer had driven home again last night in the roar of the great bombs with which the Royal Air Force deluged stricken Berlin.

When we stop to analyze the implications of the Allied decision regarding Japan, we immediately encounter an all-important fact. This is that the operations in the various theatres of our global war are broadly speaking interdependent.

We can't just say that we are going to render Nippon impotent, and then willy-nilly fling all our resources into that alluring adventure. We have to remember that we've reached the critical stage in our drive to destroy Hitler's great and still dangerous fighting machine, and that if we relax our efforts by an infinitesimal fraction, we shall do our global cause great harm.

The corollary is that we must finish off the Nazi Fuehrer before we can stage an all-out offensive in the Orient. This doesn't mean that we can't pursue major operations against the Japanese while still pressing for the kill in Germany. Such attacks are boiling up and will be intensified.

One thing remains to be done along with the air offensive in order to crush the life out of Hitler, and that's the establishment of the second front in France, so as to get the Nazi gangster's army—his strongest remaining weapon—between two powerful Allied forces. That's the essential for early victory—barring a collapse of German morale, which we have no right to bank on, although it's legitimate to hope that it may happen.

Massassaga

Massassaga — The Red Cross held a social evening and bazaar at the school on Friday evening with a large attendance. The sum of $14.58 was realized for the evening and $20 was realized by the Junior Red Cross from their bazaar.

Sorry to report that Mrs. Albert Wallbridge and Mrs. Wm. Thompson are patients at the Belleville Hospital. Their friends all wish them a speedy recovery and hope they will soon be sufficiently recovered to return to their home in the near future.

Mr. Will Gray and son Jack spent Sunday evening at Deseronto with Mr. Gray's sister, Mrs. Thrasher, who is seriously ill.

Miss Claire Adams spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Giles at Centre.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wallbridge spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Adamson at the parsonage, Roblins Mills.

Mrs. Asa Broad returned home on Sunday from the Belleville General Hospital where she had been a patient for the past two weeks.

Lieutenant R. O. Dulmage, Mrs. Dulmage and little son Ronald of Kingston spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. George Flower and Beverley.

The Red Cross met at Mrs. Clarence Thompson's on Thursday afternoon of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Campbell and baby Barbara of Ottawa, also Mr. and Mrs. Harry Alder and little son Keith of Bethel spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wallbridge and Mr. Douglas Wallbridge. Lieutenant R. O. Dulmage, Mrs. Dulmage and Ronald, also Mrs. George Flower and little daughter Beverley called at the same home in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley Davidson spent Sunday of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Horace Casey.

Cpl. H. W. Adams, Mrs. Adams and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jose.

Progressive Conservative Appointments

EARL DESMOND, M.P.

BERT MARSON

Appointment of an outstanding agriculturist and a nationally known labor union leader as assistants to Harry W. Willis, Ontario Chairman of the Federal Progressive Conservative Party has been announced by Honorable John Bracken, national leader of the Progresive Conservative party. The new assistants are Earl Desmond, M.P., for Kent County, and Bert Marson, Trade Union and Labor officials of Ontario.

A valiant fighter for the cause of labor for 32 years, Mr. Marson has held practically every important office in trade union organization in Canada and has taken a prominent part in fights for social and labor legislation.

Among the positions held by Mr. Marsen has been vice-president of the Trades and Union Congress of Canada; and president of the Toronto and District Trades and Labor Council. He was president of the Toronto Street Railwaymen's Union and the Toronto Municipal Employees' Union, as well as labor advisor to the International Labor Office Conference at Geneva and Labor representative of the Dominion Health Council at Ottawa.

Actively concerned with the establishment of social services, he has served as secretary on the Toronto Old Age Pension Board for 14 years, and was a member of the Toronto Mothers' Allowance Board.

Mr. Desmond is a member of a pioneer Canadian family that has farmed in Kent County since 1789 and since his entry into public life 17 years ago has battled constantly for a better deal for the farmers. He was instrumental in forming the Ontario Burley Tobacco Marketing Association with better prices and greater markets being obtained.

Keenly interested in improving rural conditions in Canada, Mr. Desmond has served on municipal and county councils, being elected as Conservative member to the Dominion House of Commons in 1940.

Stalin and War Changing Russia to Orthodox Nation

New Book "The Russian Enigma" Says Lenin Would be Shocked by the Trend in Russia — Country Grows in Capitalistic Practices and Living

The new book "The Russian Enigma" by William Henry Chamberlain gives the new trend of things in Russia. It is reviewed by O. M. W. in the Kansas City Star as follows:

The suggestion that Russia is moving toward the right while England and the United States drift toward the left, so that eventually the three Allies will meet approximately on a common economic and social ground, has been repeated in so many quarters in recent years that it has assumed some of the characteristics of a cliche. One man who has attempted to go behind the generalities of this cliche and to describe in specific terms the Russian tendency toward the right is William Henry Chamberlin, who spent twelve years in Russia (from 1922 until 1934) in newspaper work and historical study, the results of which included such highly regarded books as "The Russian Revolution, 1917-1921" and "Russia's Iron Age".

In his newest book, "The Russian Enigma", Chamberlin suggests that "it would be no exaggeration to say that by 1941 Russia under Stalin was as different from Russia under Lenin as France under the directory or under Napoleon was different from France at the high tide of Jacobine rule", Chamberlin takes eight subjects and attempts to show how on each of them Stalin has veered toward a more moderate, sometimes toward a definitely more conservative standpoint, "by the standards of the original challenge of the revolution".

1. Property — Lenin, suggests Chamberlin, would be gratified if he could return to life and see the great industrial progress made in Russia under a system of state ownership of factories, mines, railways and means of produtcion. But he might be shocked to see the inequality that has gone hand in hand with this development. He once said that "all society will be one office and one factory, with equality of labor and equality of pay". In 1934 Stalin told the Seventeen Congress of the Communist party that to conclude that socialism demands equality and leveling of members of society is "to talk rubbish and slander Marxism". Since that time Chamberlin points out, there have been increasing differentials in pay and standards of living.

2. Religion —The attitude of the Soviet government toward religion remains negative but the degree of pressure against religion has varied and has been considerably relaxed since the beginning of the war.

Although complete religious toleration certainly does not exist there have been several indications of a more favorable attitude toward religion. Priests have acquired citizenship rights and a few of them who have served with guerrillas or remained loyal to Russia behind the German lines have been praised and even decorated. Restrictions on the sale of Christmas trees and Easter cakes have been removed. Sunday has been restored to its place as the weekly day of rest. Since the beginning of the war the leading anti-religious periodicals have closed down, ostensibly because of a shortage of paper.

3. The Family—During the early period of the revolution divorces could be obtained by simple postcard notification and no reason was required. There were no limitations on marriage and no provisions for alimony. There was much looseness in sexual relations. Now divorce is a much slower process and has been made progressively more expensive; the fee goes up each time an individual gets a divorce. Parents of six or more children receive bonuses and pictures of happy families are often published in the newspapers. Severe penalties have imposed on the practice of abortion.

4. Patriotism—The Communist of 1920, or even of 1930, would have been insulted if you have called him a patriot, Chamberlin recalls. Today to be called a Soviet patriot is the highest badge of honor. Today words like fatherland and motherland, once outlawed, are in honored use. The beginning of the war with Germany of course speeded up the resurgence of nationalism, but such a movement actually antedates the war by several years and was the logical outgrowth of Stalin's theory that socialism could be built up in a single country.

5. Methods of Education—In the early days of the Soviet regime racial experiments were made in educational practices. Teachers were stripped of disciplinary authority and pupils ran the classrooms. Marks and examinations were abolished. Since the 1930's strict discipline has been the rule from the elementary schools to the universities. Means of testing a pupil's precise knowledge have been re introduced and marks and examinations are given.

6. Privileges for Industrial Workers—For many years after the revolution the manual worker was placed on a pedestal and shown favoritism of every sort. He received special educational privileges and university quotas compelled the admittance of a certain number of workers or their children. The heroes of all novels and motion pictures were invariably workers. Today the manual worker still has many more opportunities than he did under the old regime, but he no longer has a privileged status.

7. Attitude Toward the Past — The original Communist viewpoint was that all progress began with the Bolshevik revolution and that no one in previous Russian history, except a few advanced revolutionaries, deserved a good word. Today there is praise for men like Peter the Great and Ivan the Terrible. When three new orders were created in 1942 to honor deeds of valor in the war two were named after czarist generals and one after a medieval prince.

8. Rank and Subordination — The levelling tendency of the revolution swept away temporarily the many orders of rank and distinction in both the army and the governmental bureaus that were characteristic of the regimes of the czars. Titles of officers were abolished, as were salutes and visible means of distinction. Orders and decorations were reduced to a minimum. Today there are 19 main types of military decorations and salutes and signs of distinction between officers and enlisted men have come back in force.

So that we may see in proper perspective the transformation of Russia which has gradually taken place in the last ten years Chamberlin reminds us of two laws which he contends are unalterable. No great revolution is perpetual and no great revolution returns to the pre-revolutionary status quo.

Raeburn's Fame Is Secure

This Scottish Painter Stands High in the Ranks of the Best-Known Portraitists

(By AUGUSTUS MUIR.)

London.— (By Mail.) — While Scotland has never produced an artist of the brilliant genius of a Leonardo da Vinci or the magnificence of a Rembrandt, she has a portrait painter in Sir Henry Raeburn whose solid merits will gain him a lasting place in the history of European art. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in Scotland, a good many portrait painters were busily at work; and indeed the earliest of them, George Jamesone—who was called "The Scottish Van Dyck"—was flourishing at a time when England had no native portrait painter of equal skill. In the long list of Scottish portraits produced since his day there is much interest to be found; and although criticis may differ in assessing their artistic value, they agree that Sir Henry Raeburn stands high above all his predecessors and, indeed, has never been excelled to this day by any portraitist North of the Tweed.

The study of the portrait painting of any country yields a double pleasure. One traces the development of technique and artistic taste; and one may also view the portraits as a kind of social pageant of people who played widely differing parts in the history of the country. There is much to be learned about Scotland from an impartial scrutiny of those long rows of typically Scottish faces to be seen in the art galleries of such towns as Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dundee and Aberdeen. Sir Henry Raeburn himself has left to posterity a very considerable number which can not be ignored in any study of the late eighteenth century and the beginnings of the nineteenth.

Perhaps vigour and vitality might be among the first words that spring to one's mind as descriptive of his work. Fidelity is another word that might offer itself, but this adjective would need amplification. For Raeburn's artistic purpose went beyond the production of a mere likeness. His method was to convey to the canvas some typical expression which he had noted upon the face of his subject. It might almost be said that he strove to surprise his sitter into revealing some vivid and characteristic attitude of mind. In some portraits, the look of gravity is beginning to melt, and you can almost detect a twinkle in the eye. In others, you imagine that the lips have just moved, and are about to move again, for Raeburn showed almost uncanny skill in his flexible painting of the mouth. In his famous portrait of Doctor Adam, in the National Portrait Gallery of Scotland, those kindly features are mobile; you feel that the great old Rector of the Royal High School has paused to listen to what you have to say, and will reply to you in a moment. There leaps from his portraits the salient fact that Sir Henry Raeburn was a penetrating student of character. Undoubtedly, a great deal of shrewd intelligence and knowledge of human nature went to supplement his notable gifts as a craftsman.

His early tuition in technique was scanty. Both parents had died by the time he was seven, and he was educated in Heriot's Hospital—the magnificent building with corner-turrets and quadrangle which may be seen to advantage from Edinburgh Castle. The boy was apprenticed to a goldsmith and jeweller, and in his leisure hours he painted portraits in miniature. His master encouraged him; soon there was little doubt that he possessed extraordinary talent. His early marriage to a well-to-do widow removed the thread of financial embarrassment which has haunted the early years of so many artists, and he settled down in Edinburgh as a professional portraitist. But he knew that he was utterly lacking in experience of the great world of European art, so he packed up and went to London, where he met the famous English portrait painter, Joshua Reynolds. From there he travelled to Italy for a course of intensive study.

On his return to Edinburgh, two years later, he was accepted at once as an outstanding portraitist. He enjoyed life to the full; he enjoyed the prosperity and fame that came of him; but most of all he enjoyed his work. He was a tall, handsome man; his ardent high spirits and racy talk made him popular where ever he went, and his friends were numberless. But such tremendous physical and mental energy demanded outlets other than that of painting. He was interested in architecture and town-planning, and a good deal of his leisure was occupied in building projects. He practised archery with enthusiasm; and one of the greatest full-length portraits ever painted by a British artist is that of his fellow-acher, Dr. Nathaniel Spens, which hangs in the Archers' Hall, in Edinburgh. But people of all types flocked to his studio. Army officers and judges of the Court and Session; reticent Scots lairds and famous authors; elegant young wives in the springtide of their beauty and old Scots ladies with the strong facial characteristics of their race: These are but a few of the subjects he painted. To select one or two examples from this rich heritage, there are portraits of Lord Newton in his judge's robes of Mrs. Scott Moncrieff; of Colonel Alistair Macdonell, of Glengarry, in kilt and tartan hose; and of Neil Gow, the fiddler—all of them to be seen in the Scottish National Gallery.

But perhaps the most famous (although not the best) of Raeburn's portraits is that of the Laird of Macnab, which depicts a proud old Highland chief, flambouyantly garbed, against a background of stormy mountains. Sir Henry Raeburn lived at a time when the old Scotland of the eighteenth century was passing away; and in this he was fortunate, from a pictorial point of view. His method of painting direct in colour, without a preliminary sketch in black and white, has given all his work a vigorous and vivid quality; and his reputation probably stands higher now than it did in his lifetime.

During his long life of enthusiastic toil, he is said to have painted over one thousand portraits. However variously their merits may be assessed, all of them display the masculine vigour of a skilled craftsman whose zest for both life and art was unflagging to the end of his career.

Polish Underground "Blitzkrieg"

The Polish Underground often attacks German prisons to free Polish political prisoners. The tremendous courage and ingenuity required by these extremely dangerous undertakings are fully illustrated by the story below, told by a Polish underground paper five months after the attack described had taken place. Because of the need for strict conspiracy, actual names, places, and dates are deleted from the story.

A January evening. The full moon moves slowly over snow-covered roofs glistening with frost. It is twenty-four degrees below zero.

Hope Against Hope.

A night for despair? Not to three Polish prisoners in solitary confinement! They knew already that rescue is coming. They do not know how or when, but they are certain that, before long, they will be free.

Can one believe it? A German garrison is stationed in the village: 4,000 soldiers and militia are prowling in the streets, 200 motorized Nazi policemen guard the tracks and highways. The prison is surrounded by two walls, one ten, the other sixteen feet high, and guarded by many sentinels, posted at well-lit observation towers. The barracks are about a hundred yards away from the solitary cells, and the police post is at about 450 yards. Dare one believe in liberation? Everything is against the hope of freedom. And yet. . .

Rescue is Coming.

A group of daring men has come to the town of X from a distant district. They have obtained a car and found a man who knows much about the prison and is willing to tell what he knows for fear of his life.

Five p.m. approaches, dusk falls. Several persons gather in an inconspicuous corner of a quiet side-street.

They wait a few seconds, then begin to scale the walls. The snow deadens all sound as they jump into the prison yard, where only the windows of the office building are gleaming.

At the same time, a small car drives up to the main entrance of the prison. An "SS officer" steps out and knocks at the door. A sentinel looks through the peep-hole, then opens it quietly. The car drives into the yard.

The heavy gate has barely closed before someone else begins to pound it. The German guard turns again to look, but he does not see the two men who have jumped out of the car and are pressing their revolvers against his head.

Two more men slip through the opened gate.

"Take us to the interior gate", the guard is ordered, "and keep quiet if you want to live. . ."

The guard looks desperately toward the observation tower where another sentinel is posted. But the latter suspects nothing and quietly looks out of the window, as he smokes a cigarette. In the street a regiment of soldiers sings as it marches. Their song covers the sound of revolver shot. The guard before the second gate is killed as he tries to resist. Two quick shots are heard from the prison office, felling the director and his assistant who also attempted resistance.

Take Nazis by Surprise.

The man in the S.S. officer's uniform and one of his comrades slide along the walls until they reach the gate. Several figures slip from the prison office and climb to the observation tower overlooking the yard. This is the group from the side street. Now they are on the balcony, but no one is there. At this tower the guard is posted only at six p.m. They drop a long, knotted rope into the inner yard. One after another, in complete silence, all slide down. At this gate, too, the sentinel has to be knocked out.

The gate opens and several armed men break in: "Hands up!" Before they have time to recover from their first surprise, the Nazi guards are cringing on the floor.

German Prison Doors Open.

Once more the "SS officer" orders a door opened. This is the last door, leading to the prison itself. The third guard obeys silently and hands him the keys to the cells. There is no sound but the grating of keys in the locks.

"There you are friends! Quickly, to your feet!"

The prisoners, half-naked, emerge from their cells. Their hope of freedom has been fulfilled. The one with the broken leg is carried out. The other two, weak from tortures, are helped to the car.

Seven guards lie on the ground near the car. Six are alive. The seventh was killed for resisting the rescue.

Twenty-Five Minutes Enough.

In the protecting shadow of the wall another group emerges from the small gate. The car drives into a narrow street. As soon as it makes the turn, a truck comes up. The group points to it. Several dozen people suddenly pour from the prison yard— the other prisoners freed from their cells. Poles, Russians, Ukrainians, White Russians. . . . They all escape into the dark night. A long road lies ahead of them, leading to the woods and to safety.

Two cars are speeding along the snowy road. Who can overtake them? For the time being the village has lost contact with the outside world. At 5 p.m. a blast destroyed the telegraph and telephone centrals. The wires leading out of the village have also been torn down.

Thus, on a cold January evening in 1943, between the hours of 5 and 5:25 p.m., a number of lives were saved from the fate prepared for them by the Nazis in the German prison in the town of X, somewhere in occupied Poland.

TOP-GRADE SOLDIERS MAKE UP CANADIAN PARACHUTE BATTALIONS

The "cream of the crop" is what officers of the Canadian Army Parachute School at Shilo, Man., consider they get as material from which to produce trained jumpers. It takes courage, intelligence, initiative and superb physical condition to keep up with the stiff training and 'chutists are justly proud of their branch of the Army. Volunteers for the Parachute Battalion are now being sought in Army Training centres from among soldiers who can attain the high mental and physical standards required. These three pictures were taken at the parachute training centre at Shilo, Man. At left (top) A/Maj. H. A. Fauquier of Ottawa, jump master at the school, checks over a flight map before going aloft for a class jump. Below one of the parachutists candidates who is about to make a "free" jump from the 250-foot steel tower, is hauled to the top of the structure. At the right, Lieut. A. A. J. Liddiard of Ottawa examines a 'chute in the drying room where 'chutes hang for 24 hours after being used. — (Canadian Army Photos.)

Refers to Diary To Refresh Memory Of Many Thrills

Somewhere in Sicily, Nov. 17 — (Delayed) — (CP) — Don Nicolson, 22-year-old Warrant Officer from Winnipeg, has had so many thrills and spills since he joined the R.C.A.F. in December, 1940, that he has to refer to his diary to refresh his memory. And it's a diary any Canadian flier would be proud to possess.

Nicolson, a Kittyhawk fighter-bomber pilot, bailed out once from a flaming aircraft, crash-landed three times, made two emergency landings, and turned over on his back once. He almost forgot to mention the time the engine of his flak-riddled Kitty stopped just after he had put the wheels down. A half-dozen other times he brought back his aircraft with flak holes in it.

Not once has a bullet touched him, although he has weaved his way through some of the heaviest ack-ack the enemy can throw up. He suffered a fractured ankle when he bailed out and he found a bump on his head after his Kitty turned upside down.

All of his operational flying has been with an Australian squadron in the Middle East, Sicily and Italy.

LAKE ERIE SHIPPING TO CONTINUE

Fort Erie, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP)—Although the navigation season has officially closed, lakesmen here predict shipping of war materials on Lake Erie will continue through most of December because of the late arrival of winter weather. Extension of the season is expected to offset the slow start last spring.

Watson and DeGlane Secure Ample Revenge for Two Losses By Tossing Reeder, Bishop

Popular Boys Take Just 17 Minutes to End Reign of Villains

HANNIGAN TOUGH

Maybe it was a case of: "When thieves fall out honest men come into their own".

At any rate it was a wild and woolly scene when four wrestlers entered the ring to give over 2,200 wrestling fans their greatest thrill at the Hume Arena last night.

Who won?

Why the popular team of "Whipper Billie" Watson and Pierre DeGlane.

How did they win — the first paragraph took care of that. The villainous duo of "Texas Dick" Bishop and "Jack the Ripper" Reeder got their signals crossed and when the climax came Referee Bert Maxwell didn't have much trouble in declaring a winner, because Reeder had his partner, Bishop, pinned and DeGlane and Watson merely took full advantage of the situation and piled aboard and that was that in something like 17 minutes of the most hectic tangling ever witnessed in any man's wrestling ring.

From the outset it was one of the cases of who's fighting who and why. Quick, like a rabbit, Reeder seemed to want no part of the four-man business and repeatedly deserted his partner, Bishop, despite the fact several impromptu conferences were held between these two villains of the mat. Their strategy failed to function last night, as it had in two previous meetings of "tag team" wrestling.

A Battle Royal

For the who's who picture it was a battle royal and perhaps the most comical and exciting show ever staged by Promoter Tunney. For instance, when Reeder was rendered hors-de-combat at one stage, Bishop cuddled and nursed his partner back to the stage of combat, but "Jack the Ripper" wasn't so sure he wanted any further dealings with the lithe DeGlane-Watson combination.

Full well he knew things were in a bad way, when Watson and DeGlane trussed Bishop into the ropes in a neutral corner and then used Reeder as a battering ram at the helpless Texan. That was the beginning of the downfall of the villains as Reeder leaped aboard Bishop and down they went with DeGlane on top. The shrewd Watson stood aside for a moment and then leaped high into the air landing bottom down on the piled-up trio and all Referee Maxwell had to do was toll the three count and the reign of the villains ended, but it wasn't before the patrons had seen more action than was ever before jammed into 17 minutes of the grunt and groan business, here, there, or in Timbuctoo. Exit the self-styled team of villains—Reeder and Bishop, as the latter still contends Reeder gave him the well-known run around. "He was about as much use to me as a fifth leg on a chair," lamented Bishop as he sat alone and unbrefriended in his dressing room.

New Ring Villain in Hannigan

Now in the semi-final Promoter Tunney introduced a new ring villain, who put the efforts of Reeder and Bishop to shame. He calls himself "Hard-boiled" Hannigan and 'tis rumoured he doesn't even like his poor old grandmother. At any rate the physical beating he administered to Joe Christie shouldn't happen to a Jap or a Nazi. On second thought it would have been better if Hannigan had had the same opportunity against one of Hitler's gang. Maybe he was just practising up for just that, but at any rate after gouging and booting Christie all over the local palace-de-sport, Hannigan finally used Joe's head for a ramrod against the ring post and then picked him up bodily for a slam and press after Referee Cliff Fox had become weary warning the new ring villain. One decision to Hannigan, but if Promoter Tunney is serious in his efforts of pleasing local wrestling fans all he has to do is match Hannigan with either Jerry Monahan or John Katan and everybody will be happy.

The opener saw Al "Bunny" Dunlop and a new hooded horror, "The Czar" wrestle 20 minutes to a draw. The pleasing points came when The Czar tangled Arbiter Fox into the mess and then Dunlop got the blame, as usual. When "Bunny" tried to unmask the Russian, that too, pleased the patrons, who would still like to get a peek underneath that hood. And who wouldn't? Next week it's wrestling at the Hume Arena on Thursday again.

JOHNNY CONICK HIGH SCORER

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Johnny Conick of the league-leading Hamilton Majors this week took over top spot in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" scoring parade, records issued by Secretary W. A. Hefitt showed today.

The Hamilton forward has seven goals and eight assists for 15 points, one better than Red Hamill of Kingston Frontenac Army, last week's leader. Two other Hamilton players Doug Runions and Dillon Brady, took third and fourth places on the list with 13 and 12 points, respectively.

Blink Bellinger, St. Catharines forward, is fifth with 11 points and Norm Tustin of the tailend Toronto R.C.A.F. Flyers rounds out the first six with 10.

Scoring leaders are:—

	G.	A.	Pts.	P.
Conick, Hamilton	7	8	15	4
Hamill, Kingston	7	7	14	19
Runions, Hamilton	7	6	13	2
Brady, Hamilton	8	4	12	6

Tustin, Toronto R.C.A.F.	3	7	10	6

UBRIACO LEADS JUNIOR SCORERS

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)— Johnny Ubriaco's 16-point total leads all scorers in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior "A" circuit, records compiled by O. H. A. Secretary W. A. Hewitt showed today. Ken Smith of Oshawa trails the Galt forward by one point.

Bill Ezinicki of Oshawa and Johnny Curick of Galt are tied for third and fourth places with 13 points, with a four-man deadlock for fifth place and Podolsky of Galt and Tindall and Sullivan of Stratford, all with 11 points.

Toronto Leafs Register Four Goals in Last Period to Beat Detroit Red Wings on Home Ice

Canadiens Also Score Four Markers to Down Chicago Hawks 6 to 2

STILL UNDEFEATED

By The Canadian Press

Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings could hardly be blamed today if they levelled charges of collusion against Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs.

Not only did Canadiens crush Chicago 6-2 at Montreal last night while Leafs edged Detroit 6-5 before 9,484 home fans, but in each case the Canadian clubs achieved victory on a four-goal rally in the third period.

Results of the night's play left Canadiens undefeated in 13 games (10 victories, three ties), moved Toronto into a second-place tie with Chicago, two points ahead of Detroit and Boston Bruins and nine behind Canadiens, and stretched to 12 the number of consecutive games which home teams have played without defeat. The last triumph by a road club was recorded Nov. 21 when Toronto trimmed New York Rangers 5-2.

Canadiens crammed their four-goal bag into a five-minute stretch compared with the 11 minutes Leafs required, but Leafs waged a more dramatic battle. They trailed 2-0 at the end of the first period, lagged behind 4-2 at the end of the second and appeared beaten when Joe Carveth made it 5-2 at 4:01 of the third period.

Then Leafs started their uprising, George Boothman caging Reg Hamilton's pass. Lorne Carr scored two six minutes apart and Mel Hill sank the winning tally at 14:23.

Early Toronto scores were supplied by Ted Kennedy and Elwin Morris while Syd Howe, Carveth and Adam Brown with two rounded out Detroit scoring.

Don Grosso, Detroit, centre, suffered a wrenched knee in the first period and is expected to miss the next Detroit game.

For two periods, Montreal and Chicago waged a tense battle before 12,000 fans. Goals by Fern Majeau and Buddy O'Connor of Montreal against tallies by George Allen and Mush March of Chicago sent the teams out for the third period tied 2-2.

Mike McMahon set off the Montreal explosion at 14:49 of the last period. In quick succession, Maurice Richard, Leo Lamoureux and O'Connor stormed upon Hec Highton for goals.

Bagby Withdrawn From the Market

New York, Dec. 3—(AP)—There wasn't a man biting a dog anywhere in sight as the winter baseball meetings went into their final sessions today. The only thing left was today's joint Major League session, which figured to be practically a love feast except for a request of St. Louis Browns and Cardinals for a green light to play more night baseball in 1944 than the maximum 14 game a-piece the law allows.

In fact, so far as anything popping was concerned, there was no wind left in the week-long hot-air derby. And the most "windless" thing around was the chance of a player trade, now that the United States Army has its eye on Lefty Al Smith, the bellcow of the Cleveland Indians' staff.

Word that Lefty Al's St. Louis draft board has put him in 1-A caused the Tribe to pull the tastiest trading bait of the entire sessions, Jim Bagby, right out of the showcase, because he's one of the few competent curvers still handy.

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—Death of John Leslie in Edmonton on Monday lessened chances of revival of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada. As Secretary for 15 years, Leslie was one of the few men who retained interest in the amateur union which practically died when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association withdrew its support in a dispute over the definition of an amateur. Flt. Lt. Syd Halter of Winnipeg is A. A. U. President. Chances are we shall hear little more of the A. A. U. unless and until the Olympic games are revived after the war.

Aftermath:

Jimmy Simpson, captain of Hamilton's football champions, the Wildcats, believed he was the only man to play with four Canadian championship grid teams—Hamilton Tigers in 1928-29-32 and Wildcats this year. This thought was publicized and information from fans showed Pep Leadley topped that record with five title teams—Queen's in 1922-23-24 and Hamilton in 1928-29. Red Batstone made the grade four times, first with Toronto Argos in 1921, then with Queen's the following three years . . . Tommy Moore of the Hamilton spectator says Wildcats may take the old name of Tigers in 1944, with the 1943 executive remaining.

Incidentally

As expected, Lachine's showing in the Eastern football final was a fillip to interest in Montreal. Already the Quebec Rugby Football Union has formed a boosters committee to get the leading grid figures in the province behind the game. Myer Insky heads the committee which hopes to raise fields, for equipment and playing fields, and to foster the game in Quebec City, Sherbrooke, Three Rivers and other centres. The Union plans to form a coaches association and to operate a referees' school.

Round and About:

Billy Lannon, who played with the Dawson City Hockey team which challenged for the Stanley Cup 40 years ago, now is icemaker at the Drumheller, Alta., Curling Club . . . Elmer Ferguson of the Montreal Herald doesn't believe opening of the King's Plate to horses bred anywhere in Canada will have an immediate effect on Quebec racing, principally because Quebec is without a highclass stallion for breeding purposes . . . George Boothman, Toronto Leafs forward, is the top crooner in the N. H. L.

PEOPLE FLOCKING TO VIEW GAMES

Bigger Crowds and More Money Rule in N.H.L. This Season

By HAROLD FREEMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Montreal, Dec. 3 (CP)—More people have paid more money to watch National Hockey League games so far this season than in any comparable period in the long history of the league.

Official figures tell the story—a story not only of bigger crowds at games but also of crowds buying more high-priced seats than in other years. If the trend continues—and league officials believe it will grow rather than decline—the 1943-44 season of the N.H.L. will go down as the best in its history.

Which would be really something considering the tough fight the league had to get started this season, paying customers totalled 324,017 compared with 298,612 in the same period last year—and last year the league set a new attendance record of 1,446,827 exclusive of playoffs.

Gate receipts are up $47,350 so far, at $423,561 compared with $376,203. And tax receipts on figures like that aren't doing the Dominion treasury one speck of harm.

Take Montreal Canadiens for example. In seven home games they've dropped down to 8,500 only once—their second game of the season—and the average attendance is around the 12,000-mark. Which is just about tops considering that the seating capacity of the Forum is only 11,700.

Sports Roundup

New York, Dec. 3 — (AP)—Judge W. G. Bramham emerged as the dominating figure of the four-day gouging and slugging match known as the minor league baseball meetings. Nearly everybody admits Bramham has done a swell job as head of the minors.

Lobby Patrol:

Although Luke Appling is in the Army, the White Sox feel that he will be out again by next season. His right ankle, where it was broken a few years ago, is held together by wire...For the same reason, Cardinal officials aren't worried about Marty Marion's 1-A classification. He fell off a cliff when he was a kid and his right leg is wired up like a radio set.

Cleaning the Cuff:

Joe Reardon turned down an offer to take Herb Pennock's place as red Sox farm boss and the current report is that he'll follow Pennock to the Phillies...When yesterday's American League meeting ended, President Will Harridge asked if there were any further suggestions. Jack Zeller of the Tigers spoke up: "Yes, let's all sit here until some one makes a deal." ... If any one had agreed they probably still would be sitting.

SCHMIDT, BAUER PACE THEIR TEAM TO 9-0 VICTORY

Members of Famous Kraut Line Performing in League Overseas

DUMART ALSO PLAYS

By ALAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Dec. 3 — (CP) — The Krauts swept through as victory pathfinders — although they didn't play as a unit — when the Canadian bomber group made its seasonal hockey debut with a doubleheader on an ice surface that featured unnatural hazards.

Milt Schmidt, now a pilot officer, and LAC. Bobby Bauer, two-thirds of the crack Boston Bruin forward line, paced a team of blues from the station of Group Capt. A. D. Ross of Winnipeg to a 9-0 triumph over the reds, representatives of a station commanded by Group Capt. H. Carscallen of Hamilton, Ont.

LAC. W. G. Hainsworth, son of George Hainsworth of National League fame, starred in the Red nets despite the score. Like the Krauts, his home is in Kitchener, Ont.

In the second game, Cpl. Porky Dumart, the third member of the erstwhile Bruin combination, led his Whites to a 3-1 win over the Maroons, from another Canadian station.

Earlier reports had been that the Krauts would be stationed with three different squadrons by the time the season rolled around, but the luck of posting kept Schmidt and Bauer together. Last of the trio to arrive overseas Bauer was making his ice debut in England. Schmidt and Dumart opposed each other last season.

Schmidt and Bauer scored six of their team's goals while Schmidt assisted on another. Two of Schmidt's tallies came on solo efforts. Other scorers included LAC. Fred Vickers of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Dumart, playing defence, made scores of rushes throughout the second game and set up the opening goal just 30 seconds after the face-off when he placed a perfect pass on the stick of LAC. G. A. Duhaime of Geraldton, Ont., his defence mate. Dumart scored the final goal. LAC. J. Sumner of Niagara Falls, Ont., scored one for the losers.

Facing off the puck to start the season was Air Vice-Marshal G. E. Brookes, Officer Commanding the bomber group. He thanked the Y.M.C.A. war services which made the league possible.

Under the present arrangement, each team will play each other once before Christmas in a round-robin tournament. Further plans will be made before the new year.

Lorne Carr, Toronto goal-getter, who collected two tallies.

Elwin Morris, Toronto, who registered one goal and two assists.

Points Average Per Game Exceeded Only in Year of '22

(By The Canadian Press)

Free-scoring games in U. S. college football during the scheduled season resulted in a points average per game which was exceeded only in the record year of 1922, according to an analysis by the Associated Press on the accomplishments of 87 teams in 1943. These major squads ran up a grand total of 11,263 points in 666 games for an average of 16.91 per match, compared with the record of 19 points in the peak season 21 years ago. The 1942 figure was 15.04, which was the best since 1930, but that mark was far below the scoring rampage of navy-packed college crews last fall.

Scout for the Boston Red Sox for the past two years, George Toporcer, one-time second baseman of St. Louis Cardinals, yesterday was announced as manager of the Red Sox farm system, succeeding Herb Pennock who has become general manager of the Philadelphia Phillies under youthful President Bob Carpenter.

Promoters Lucien Gregoire and Mathias Larose of Montreal yesterday were ordered by the Superior Court in Montreal to pay $3,500 damages and costs to Mark Maritzer who is alleged to have suffered a fractured skull when a pro wrestler fell on him.

Robert Carpenter, new president of the Philadelphia Nationals, told the baseball executives at New York yesterday he had seen his team play only two games and he did not know the players. He added he would continue to operate the Wilmington, Del., Bombers in the eastern pro basketball league but would drop the promotion of prize fights.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Help!

"A burglar broke into a millionaire's mansion in the early morning and found himself in the music room. Hearing footsteps, he took refuge behind a screen, where he was forced to remain for a considerable time.

From eight to nine o'clock the eldest daughter had a singing lesson. From nine to ten o'clock the second daughter took her piano lesson. From ten to eleven o'clock the eldest son had a violin lesson. From eleven to twelve another son received a lesson on the flute. At a quarter past twelve all the brothers and sisters assembled together and studied an ear-splitting piece for voice, piano, violin and flute.

The burglar staggered from behind the screen at a quarter to one and, falling at their feet, cried. "For Heaven's sake send for the police!"

Efforts are being put forward to organize a city industrial hockey league in Belleville. Mentors feel that with the absence of an intermediate O.H.A. team in our midst there should be room for a strong city or industrial loop.

In years past, especially at the old Turnbull Street arena, city league hockey in Belleville proved successful from the standpoint of competition as well as financial. Local industrial plants sponsored softball teams for the recreation of their employees last summer and provided the players with uniforms. If and when city hockey is played it is hoped the teams will be dressed in the same manner, that is to say with jerseys so that the patrons can distinguish the contesting clubs. Shepens-Adamson, Alemite, Corbin Lock and one other local plant are mentioned as keenly interested in a city hockey league for the coming winter. With no intermediate hockey in our midst something along these lines should help keep the game alive in the Quinte City.

(Take heed.)

Recently Peterborough Scribe Fred Craig brought to the attention of his readers what he termed "A Hockey Tragedy" now existing in the Liftlock City. The situation could well be in Belleville, only slightly different. Out in Peterborough the problem is a rink, but in Belleville the post war period may find us lacking hockey material that is unless something is done immediately towards the sponsoring of minor league hockey in this city. After all it's the responsibility of the "stay-at-homes" to see that hockey is provided our soldier lads when they return from the present world conflict. The challenge is here are we meeting it?

Regarding the Peterborough picture Scribe Craig writes: "Peterborough has made a lot of hockey history over the years but this season this community is going to make history of a new kind. For the first time in almost 50 years Peterborough will not be represented in the Ontario Hockey Association. For the first time since 1895 when a Peterborough team won the Ontario junior championship in the era when there was no age limit in that division there will be no team from this burg entered with the Ontario body. In the light of the fine record Peterborough teams have achieved and of the wealth of hockey tradition that has been set up by their exploits this development is almost a tragedy. We are paying the penalty, of course, for sitting around for years and doing nothing about a problem that has long been staring us in the face, the problem of providing a modern artificial ice arena. We made the old building erected 40 years ago do until even that inadequate substitute for an up-to-date hockey cushion failed us. And now we are facing a season without hockey. There have been lean years in the past, years when the player pool was exhausted and victorious were few and far between but until this year of 1943-44 we were always in there punching with some kind of an outfit, keeping Peterborough on the hockey map. The end of the trail has arrived and it is a sad day for those who love the game and are proud of this city's fine reputation in Canada's national national game."

(Wild and Woolly.)

Promoter Frank Tunney's team wrestling, with four men in the ring at one time, was productive of more thrills and action yet seen in the local palace de sport. Naturally the fans were overjoyed and gleeful when the popular pair—Watson and DeGlane—won, but in the meantime it was action personified. The pay-off came when the Reeder-Bishop combination strategy failed to function and now Bishop says he was given "the business" and left high and dry by his partner. Who cares, weren't Bishop and Reeder pushed out of business? Actually it made little difference that the Commission ruled against two referees, as Bert Maxwell didn't have much to handle once things got under way in the quartette grappling.

Where Marse Tunney picked up his new ring villain—"Hard-boiled" Hannigan, no person seems to know, but this hombre put the efforts of Reeder and Bishop far into the discard, that is when it came to downright roughness. Perhaps a match with Katan, Jerry Monahan or Karl Davis would cool off Mister Hanigan next week.

It was revealed last week that the new 1944 baseball, which is made of synthetic rubber and cork and reported to be livelier than the '43 balata sphere, had been smuggled into the World's Series, last October, with the permission of Commissioner Landis.

"I knew about the ball, but did not know it had been used in the two games in St. Louis," the surprised Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, said.

"I was asked to use it in the three games in New York, but after consultation with Ed Barrow, refused. Maybe it was one of those new things Bill Dickey hit over the roof in Sportsman's Park. In any event, the change in the ball was not so great as to make an impression on me. We'll see about it this coming season."

(Remember when—)

Henry Armstrong was awarded the Edward J. Neil Memorial Trophy three years ago today for his contribution to boxing in losing as well as winning. Armstrong was the only ringman in fistic history to hold three world titles simultaneously.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 243

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Contract bridge can be distressing when you keep a partner guessing. Let him know what you are holding by your bidding, not your scolding.

In a game I was kibitzing, south started with an opening bid of one spade when north held this hand:

♠A 7 4
♥K 6
♣Q J 7 5

North responded with one no-trump and south passed. They had a game and missed getting there. North threw a fit, exclaiming: "You should have kept the bidding open and I would have gone to game."

South started to say he had no additional values. But north raved on: "I didn't have a jump in no-trump. I don't support with three trumps. I don't go to the two-level with a four card minor."

North was entirely in the wrong. If he knew that much, he should have known that south had a right to pass on one no-trump. Also, that his first response should not have been in no-trump.

Bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N. That is, takeout, first; assist, second; no-trump, only as a last resort. With a takeout to clubs and an assist in spades, there was no excuse for bidding no-trump first.

The first response from north should have been a takeout to two clubs. A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Then, south would have been forced to bid again.

Furthermore, the opening bid by south showed five tricks. North has five tricks and knows there are ten tricks in their pair. Why fear the level of two, which needs only eight tricks.

Ten tricks are enough for a game in spades. Knowing that, north should not have made a bid that permitted south to pass.

A stubborn player usually puts all the blame on his partner.

"Behind the Rising Sun"

The voice of James R. Young is heard on two occasions in "Behind the Rising Sun", RKO Radio's sensational story of inside Japan which is based on Young's book of that title, featuring Margo, J. Carrol Naish, Tom Neal, Robert Ryan and Gloria Holden, and now closing at the Belle theatre.

Young, who was a foreign correspondent in Tokyo for 13 years and who aroused international interest in 1940 when he was arrested and imprisoned for 61 days because of articles he wrote about the Japanese military machine, speaks Japanese fluently.

In one scene his voice is heard as a Japanese radio newscaster reporting the Marco Polo Bridge incident which the Japs used as an excuse for invading China. In another scene he is heard as a Jap addressing a crowd at a baseball game.

An entertaining sportsfilm "Champion Maker," a Walt Disney colorfun cartoon, "Old Army Game" and a timely and entertaining multiple-reel film "Army Chaplain" complete the program.

"Claudia," Unusual Entertainment

Laughable, lovable, Claudia, the young wife whose domestic ups and downs delighted Broadway audiences for two years, is brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox under the original title of "Claudia," in the person of Dorothy McGuire, who portrayed the heroine on the stage. The film which also features Robert Young as David, Claudia's husband and Ina Claire as Mrs. Brown, Claudia's mother, will begin its run this weekend at the Belle theatre.

Claudia is the young wife who lives with her husband in a rambling Connecticut farm house. Her sense of budget is sublime—and the general ease with which she meets domestic difficulties by simply ignoring them has become as classic as a June bride. Claudia is the American girl—the girl who saunters about her home in low-heeled shoes, girlish dresses and collegiate cardigans.

The Canadian Paramount News, a new edition of the March of Time subject "America's Food Crisis" will also be exhibited. On Saturday matinee a new chapter of the popular "Bat Man" serial will also be exhibited.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Appointment In Berlin"

A super-spy picture, crammed with exciting sequences that lead to a highly dramatic smash climax, is "Appointment in Berlin", the new Columbia production which opened at the Capitol Theatre yesterday. Based on fact, it is a colorful story of adventure and intrigue in the mysterious world of international espionage, with the popular English star, George Sanders, in the role of a British secret agent and lovely Marguerite Chapman as a high-born German who renounces the Nazi cause for love.

The romantic angle in this production has an unusual and interesting twist, though it is easy to imagine that it took courage on the part of producer Samuel Bischoff to present it to the public. It is the first time on the screen that a German girl, member of the Nazi party, has been seen in a sympathetic handled cleverly, and stunning Marguerite Chapman has no trouble in winning the applause of an audience, especially when she renounces the Nazi party and loses her life to save the life of her British secret agent lover.

The picture is a series of highly dramatic episodes after Wilson succeeds in becoming a feature on a Berlin radio network, broadcasting violent anti-British outbursts which are, in reality, coded messages that can be deciphered by the British Intelligence Officer. When he is discovered by the Germans, the fact that he and lovely Ilse von Preissing, (Marguerite Chapman) a member of the Nazi party, have fallen madly in love, leads to a smash climax that is one of the most sensational we have seen on the screen in many moons.

"Black Hills Express"

"Juke Box Jenny"

Hollywood's "queen of the juke box girls" known to thousands of music box hep-cats in the film capital under the pseudonym of "Miss Penny," served the Universal studios as technical advisor for "Juke Box Jenny" coming to the McCarthy theatre this weekend.

The musical romance stars Ken Murray, Harriett Killiard, Charles Barnet and his band, Wingy Manone and his orchestra, and the Milt Herth trio.

Iris Adrian, Don Douglas and Marjorie Gateson are featured.

Harold Young was the director and Joseph G. Sanford presided as associate producer.

"The Falcon in Danger"

An air-tight alibi is smashed to bits to unmask a respectable business executive as a killer and a thief in RKO Radio's "The Falcon in Danger" featuring Tom Conway in the title role.

When three men and $100,000 disappear from an airliner leaving no trace, the Falcon undertakes to solve the mystery, and almost loses his life before the criminal is brought to justice.

Action takes place aboard the airplane, in a defence plant, in smart night clubs and in open country, and the supporting cast includes Jean Brooks, Elaine Shepard, Amelita Ward, Clarence Kolb and many others.

Also on the same program is the British Associated News, a "must see" on your list of entertainment.

NEW NAZI GLIDER

When enemy planes were sighted the Athabaskan was steaming with the ships of the Royal Navy.

"There were some 20 planes," the Navy quoted Miles as saying. "Our guns set up a terrific barrage. Then the enemy formation split up and five aircraft came down our port side and we concentrated on them.

"The three leading planes of this group dropped their bombs simultaneously, the Athabaskan being the target. Two of them dropped into the sea but the third came straight at us. We didn't have a chance to dodge.

"The bomb struck the port side, passed under the plot room, through the petty officers' mess and came out on the starboard side, exploding in the water 20 to 30 feet clear of the ship. All the officers and men in the plot room were casualties."

Reported November 5th.

This was the hit which was reported in general terms Nov. 5, when the Navy said an un-named Canadian destroyer had been damaged by a bomb. For security reasons, neither the name of the ship nor the details were disclosed until now.

Describing the action of "Chase Me Charlie," Cmdr. Miles said:

"It proceeded ahead in the direction of flight of the aircraft for a second, then backed gracefully and came straight for the Athabaskan in a glide at an alarming rate of speed. It looked at first as if it would pass overhead but in the last split second it dipped and struck us. It seemed to be under power up to the moment of striking."

As the Athabaskan emerged from the pall of smoke caused by the bomb explosion, another plane dropped a bomb but it failed to take up the chase of the target and dropped in the sea.

Able Seaman Thomas B. Smith of New Westminster, B.C., was blown overboard by the explosion while manning his gun and never was seen again, and Acting Able Seaman William Pickett of Lower Kars, N.B., at the same gun-post was killed almost instantly.

Three Died of Wounds

Three others — Acting Petty Officer Ernest Latimer of Vancouver, in charge of the gun, Able Seaman Joseph McGrath of Saskatoon, a bridge lookout, and Leading Cook Frank Prudhomme of Halifax—died later from their wounds.

Cmdr. Miles and the officers and men with him on the bridge were knocked down by the impact and several were injured, including Lieut. Dunn Lantier of Montreal. Sub-Lt. John A. Brebner also of Montreal, was in the port room and suffered severe wounds.

Lieut. Whitely J. Eastwood of Ottawa, the gunnery officer, who kept the shells popping until the last plane disappeared, said the blast put the fire control out of commission but each gun started its own individual barrage.

"B" gun, where the crewmen were killed or injured, got back into action with the rest with Leading Seaman J. O. Gordon of Hamilton taking charge, although injured and in pain.

Some Members Burned

Some members of "A" gun crew were burned and Lieut. Eastwood praised the work at the post of Leading Seaman J. Kobes of Victoria and Able Seaman Thomas Crews of St. John's, Nfld., and Able Seaman Henry Perrin of Windsor, Ont., were in action all the time and were wounded by splinters.

The Athabaskan picked up the commander and other survivors of an enemy submarine smashed by aircraft and Cmdr. Miles, looking for the German submarine captain who got the decoration for "sinking" the Saguenay, satisfied himself it was not the same man.

After the action the Athabaskan's gunners received a compliment from a British destroyer which signalled to Cmdr. Miles:

"Your gun flashes showing thru the smoke and fire, which was all we could see, were a proud sight."

"Thank you very much," replied Miles. "Am burying two of 'B' gun's crew shortly."

The gunners buried immediately were Pickett and Latimer.

Pte. A. Zachariah Alive and Well Says Report

Picton, Dec. 3—Pte. Alva Zachariah, previously reported as having died overseas, is alive and well, a cable to his mother, Mrs. Clayton Zachariah reveals. An official notice of his death had been received but was apparently confused with that of his half brother J. Willard Zachariah who was also officially reported to have died from wounds in Sicily.

The cable from Pte. Alva Zachariah was dated Nov. 30 and stated he was well and had been married in England on Nov. 27.

Santa's Assistant

Making toys was a hobby of Oscar Burley until a few months ago. Now he is supplying a variety of wooden articles for sale here, in Belleville and Toronto. Though in his 82nd. year, Mr. Burley has turned out a large quantity of toys in the workshop at his home. Lack of materials has cut the output of metal toys and those of wood, as made by Mr. Murley, are in demand.

Dr. S. W. D. Hart left for Kingston this week where he has joined the R.C.A.M.C., with the rank of captain. He is a native of Napanee and practised here sinie graduation a year ago. Dr. A. W. Heaslip, practictioner for 50 years is returning to the profession owing to Dr. Hart's departure for military service.

Dr. and Mrs. Shipside of Stirling have moved to Wellington where Dr. Shipside has opened a veterinary practice. He succeeds the late Dr. G. J. Smith.

Due to the fact that the arena is used as a training centre for the army, at Wellington, an open air rink is being constructed on the Consolidated School grounds.

A large bale of clothing has been collected, packed and shipped at Wellington. These will go to the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund and sent to Stalingrad.

The Navy League members are knitting special socks of undyed natural wool, which will be given a medicated treatment. These are worn by sailors who are shipwrecked, the special sox saving their feet which would suffer as a result of immersion. Each lifeboat and raft on Canadian ships, for a start, is to be supplied with a quantity of vaseline impregnated woollen socks.

Included among the animals listed in all Canadian selections, is Norvale Sylvia Finderne, owned by H. J. McFarland, Reserve All-Canadian senior yearling heifer. This animal was purchased at the recent Oakville sale from W. P. Laidlaw of Norval, the price being $800. The All-Canadian Holsteins are chosen by a committee of judges from the major Canadian fairs and exhibitions.

Wallace Havelock Robb, of Abbey Dawn, Kingston, was guest speaker at the meeting of Cressy Young People's Society at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Teskey. Mr. Robb read a number of his poems, for which he was given a hearty vote of thanks.

Prince Edward County Red Cross this week shipped to headquarters a total of 723 articles which were handed in last month. These included 105 quilts, 135 pairs socks, 60 sweaters, 40 steel helmet caps, 45 helmets clothing for women, boys, girls and babies. There was also a quantity of knitted goods for the Women's Auxiliary Services.

Religious Education Urged

Only 26 per cent of child life attend any place of worship on Sunday, and if the present decrease continues at the rate statistics reveal, there will be no Sunday schools in our Dominion in the next 15 years,' declared Capt. D. A. Strachan in an address at the Home and School Association last night.

"In my mind the reason for the decline in Sunday School attendance is that there is too little encouragement given in the homes.

"Very few people are really atheists, but they give no expression to their beliefs. Therefore, teaching religion in the schools, not as an academic subject, but as a way of life, is very necessary," Capt. Strachan believed.

"If we are to have a new and better standard of living after the war, we must prepare the children now, and the parents must co-operate 100 per cent," he declared.

The speaker felt religion in schools should be taught by the ministers in vinew of their special training, and not have such instruction in a text book as part of the curriculum.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma went to the movies with my sister Gladdis, the last thing she told pop being to be sure to be certain I went to bed at 9 o'clock, and I was reading my lyberry book on the floor and pop said, Benny, are you sleepy?

No sir, I said, and pop said, Then get sleepy in bed, because the witching hour has struck.

Aw G, hay, jimminy crickets, aw gosh, I said, If you have any message to impart, speak English. The first thing you know your feeble grip on the slippery veneer of civilization —will loosen entirely and you'll slip back to the dark prehistoric days when men conversed exclusively in grunts, so that often on moonless nights a man who thought he was talking to a friend was actually exchanging grunts with a stray pig, he said.

Well anyways, pop, it must of been an easy language to learn, I said, and pop said, It was, but like other easy things, it was unsatisfactory. Men didn't really start to enjoy language until they took the hard way and invented grammar, and now after hundreds of thousands of years a highly civilized man can walk into an expensive resterant and give himself the thrill of ordering an entire meal in French, and if the French waiter has been sufficiently dazed by the perfection of his accent, the man will have the additional thrill of being confronted by a trayfull of rare dishes that he never ordered. The mastery of language is a fine art and I strongly recommend its cultivation. And now good night and pleasant dreams, he said.

Aw pop, G roozalem, heck, I said, and pop said, Grunt grunt. Now close that book and scram to bed before I dig down through the ooze of the ages and employ the first of all the tongues, the language of force, he said.

The result being I went.

CHAPTER EIGHT

"What was the quarrel about? Didn't Miss Osborne's relatives like the terms of the new will?"

"No, sir, they didn't. And it did seem very unkind of her. They are her only relatives and not very well-off. It wasn't very fair to propose leaving all her money to charity, with the exception of—"

"With the exception of your legacy? Your employer was very rich, wasn't she?"

"Yes, sir, very rich indeed".

"In that case, there is sure to be a will in existence?"

"Yes, sir. There is".

"Have you any idea of its terms?"

"Well, sir, she never confided very much in me but I gather that the existing will leaves most of the property to her brother".

"Do you benefit under it?"

"No, sir. Miss Osborne never told me that she would leave me anything."

"And the old will will stand. Hard on you, isn't it? Especially since you would have inherited five thousand a year if your mistress had lived a few days longer".

"Yes, sir. It is a terrible disappointment".

"Five thousand a year would mean a lot to you?"

"A very great deal, sir."

"Tell me, was Miss Osborne on good terms with her brother's family?"

"I—I am afraid not, sir. But then, she was seldom on good terms with anyone, except me".

"I see. Where were you between lunch and the time you discovered the murder?"

"In bed, sir. When Hannah Gale told me at lunch about the new will being drawn up, I was quite overcome. She made me go upstairs and lie down. She gave me a sedative and I fell asleep. Hannah woke me at half-past three and I came down to find my employer. I found her in here" —her voice broke—"dead".

"Was there anyone else in the room?"

"Yes, sir. Miss Ann Osborne".

"What was she doing? Why hadn't she given the alarm"?

"Well, sir, she was reading a book".

"Reading a book"?

"Yes, sir".

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the Sheriff. Inspector Burrows snorted.

"That is all for the present, Miss Mimms".

The little woman scurried out of the room, casting a terrified glance over her shoulder at the covered chair.

Sheriff Black turned to Burrows. "Summon Miss Ann Osborne. No —on second thought, we'll see her father first".

"Reading a book!" repeated Burrows scornfully. "That's the phoniest story I've ever heard—and I've heard a few phony ones!"

When Stephen Osborne appeared he, too, looked shaken when he passed the covered corpse. His thin, intellectual face was very white and he moistened his dry lips nervously with the tip of his tongue.

"This is a dreadful business, Osborne", began the Sheriff when Stephen had seated himself.

"Dreadful? It's ghastly. I can hardly believe it".

"It must be particularly painful for you that it happened right in your own house".

Stephen groaned and covered his face with his hands.

"We'll want the fingerprints of the various members of your family".

"I won't have it!" declared Stephen, looking up. "Do you hear? I won't have it. You're not going to treat my children like criminals."

"Don't fly off the handle Osborne. We only want them to check with those we find in the room. Naturally, we shall find fingerprints of each of you on the various articles of furniture, for this room is obviously in constant use. We want to be able to eliminate all the prints that have been made by your family, so that we can tell if an outsider has lately entered the room. You can't object to that. You want to help us find the murderer of your sister, don't you?"

"Certainly, I do."

"Then you don't object to the fingerprinting. Thank you. Feathers!"

Sergeant Feathers came forward and took Stephen Osborne's fingerprints. Stephen did not resist. He seemed stunned, numbed.

"Where did your sister live?" asked the Sheriff.

"Park Avenue, New York City. She spent a week with us every summer".

"And she arrived on her annual visit at noon today? How unpleasant that a quarrel should have arisen so soon after she entered the house!"

"A quarrel!" Stephen stared at him. "How did you know there was a quarrel?"

"We won't go into that. The point is that there was a quarrel, almost a violent one. Over her new will, wasn't it?"

"Then you know about that, too."

"We know a good deal ,Osborne, and we'll know more before we finish. You'd better tell us all you can."

"What can I tell you? I know nothing about this terrible affair."

"Where were you after lunch until the time the murder was discovered?"

"Where was I? In the garden, I think. Yes, in the garden."

"You don't seem very definite about it".

"I was in the garden, I tell you, until I heard Miss Mimms screaming".

"All afternoon"?

"Yes. No. I was upset. I may have wandered into the field behind. I think I did".

"Did you see any stranger approaching the house?"

"No."

"Or anyone you knew?"

"No, I was thinking. I was too abstracted to have noticed anyone".

"What is your occupation?"

"I'm a cost accountant?"

"Where do you work?"

"The Coster Corporation—" Stephen stopped short.

The Sheriff looked at him with raised eyebrows.

"Yes You were saying—"

"That is, I was employed by the Coster Corporation. They recently merged with two other firms and I lost my job. They let me out yesterday."

"Oh!" Sheriff Black pulled at his moustache. "What was your salary with the shoe company?"

"Seventy-five dollars a week".

"It must have taken every cent to keep up this house".

"It did".

"Have you a private income?"

"No."

"Then you must have felt pretty bad when you lost your job".

"I did".

"How did you propose to live until you found another?"

"I—I don't know".

"You must have had some plan. Your sister was rich. It would be natural for you to ask her to help you".

"Yes, but . . . ."

"Go on, Osborne".

Stephen was silent.

"You did ask her, but she refused. Isn't that so? That was what the quarrel was about, wasn't it? She not only refused, she decided to make a new will and you stood to be cut off without a cent. That would have been serious for you, a man without a job. But someone killed her before she had a chance to alter her will. Convenient for you, eh?"

"See here, what the devil are you trying to insinuate?"

"Under the terms of her existing will, her death makes you rich. If she'd lived a few days longer—"

"I see. You—you—" Stephen panted, his eyes wide with horror, "you think I did it. I killed my only sister for her money; that's what's in your mind. Well, you're wrong. I didn't do it".

"That will be all for the present, Osborne".

Stephen stood stock still for a moment, staring from the lean, thoughtful face of the Sheriff to the frankly suspicious face of Inspector Burrows then with a gasp he hurried from the room. The two officials watched him go, then their eyes met—

"What do you think, Inspector?"

"I think his neck is close to the rope, Sheriff".

"Maybe you're right". Black tapped his teeth with a long forefinger. . . "And now, let's talk to the young lady who was reading a book!"

There was nothing hysterical about Ann Osborne when she came into the room. Sheriff Black thought he had seldom seen a girl more calm and self-possessed. To Inspector Burrow's intense disappointment, she did not even glance at the corpse. Burrows had been reading applied psychology and he had hoped for a display of emotion on Ann's part which would give him a clue to her inner feelings.

But what can you gather from a girl who strolls past a covered dead body to be questioned by the police with an air as casual as though she had been invited to cocktails?

A great deal, psychologists would answer; but Burrows was not a psychologist; he had been reading psychology, which is a vastly different matter.

Without comment, almost eagerly, Ann allowed herself to be fingerprinted, watching the operation with intense interest through her shell-rimmed spectacles. Sheriff Black thought, however, that he detected a certain tensity when she faced him for questioning.

"You were in this room with your aunt from lunch until the time the murder was discovered?"

"I was".

"Then you ought to be of great assistance to us".

"I'll do my best but I don't think there's much I can tell you".

"You were alone with her".

"Obviously not. Someone must have come in, or she wouldn't have been murdered."

"I see your point. But surely you must have seen that person and witnessed the crime?"

"If I had, I should have cried out at once".

"You were seated facing your aunt?'

"That is so".

"If you had stretched out your foot you could have kicked her?"

The ghost of a smile wreathed Ann's mouth. "So I could", she agreed.

"And yet, she was violently done to death and you know nothing of it?"

"It sounds odd, I know, but you see. I was reading".

"So I'm told. What was the book?"

"That's it over there on top of the bookcase. Henry the Fifth".

"Shakespeare. You have good tastes for one so young".

"Oh, I don't read old plays as a rule. I fished the book out at random".

"And became so absorbed in it that murder was committed almost beneath your nose and you knew nothing about it?"

"Yes."

Inspector Burrows breathed hard. "You don't expect us to believe that a pretty girl could get as wrapped up in Shakespeare—Shakespeare!—as all that?"

Ann turned slightly to regard him with amusement.

"You don't expect me to believe that I'm a pretty girl? I'm not, you know. I'm next door to downright homely. And even if I were pretty, mightn't I still have brains enough to recognize good stuff when I read it, whether it was Shakespeare who wrote it or—let's say—Ernest Hemingway?"

Her eyes travelled from Burrows to Sheriff Black and from Sheriff Black to Burrows. Then she continued calmly:

"I don't know how to make you understand. Neither of you look the type to read intently. If a book is any good I get lost in it. And when I'm lost in a book, I'm oblivious to everything else. Either you can understand that or you can't. If you can't, it's too bad; but there is nothing I can do to make you."

"But surely your attention would have been attracted by someone entering the room?"

"I shouldn't have heard anyone or anything, unless it was something explosive. I'm like that, you know. And, anyway, Sheriff"—she glanced up at him shrewdly—"I don't suppose the person who murdered Aunt Octavia went out of the way to attract my attention".

"Probably not. But Miss Osborne wasn't reading, was she? I can't understand how she could have been taken by surprise. Surely, she at least would have seen anyone who entered?"

Ann saw the trap. Sheriff Black was hinting that only a member of the family, whose entrance would evoke no suspicion in Aunt Octavia's mind, could have taken her by surprise.

"Not necessarily", she replied. "Aunt Octavia was facing me, with her back to the door and the French windows. Anyone could have sneaked in and tiptoed a few feet to her without her being aware of it".

"When the doctor was called in, he found you trying to unfasten the scarf from your aunt's neck."

If the doctor had told him that, he must also have told him to whom the scarf belonged—

"Certainly," said Ann, without an everyday occurrence". my sister's scarf. If it had been your sister, wouldn't you have done the same?"

"That's not the point. You know that nothing should have been touched until the arrival of the police."

"Oh yes; I read detective stories. But it was Dorothy's scarf. That made a difference".

"Tell me this, then. Supposing you had seen someone entering the room. Supposing you had seen this person murdering your aunt. You have said that, in that case, you would have given the alarm. But supposing the person was one of your own family; wouldn't that also have made a difference?"

"I don't care to suppose all that", replied Ann steadily.

"Was your sister wearing the scarf today?"

"You'll have to ask her. I don't take much interest in clothes details".

Looking at her brown sweater, short blue dress and slightly wrinkled brown stockings, Sheriff Black could well believe that.

"You are quite young", he said.

"Nineteen".

"I should have expected a girl of nineteen to be much more upset over an affair of this kind than you appear to be".

"Age has nothing to do with it. My sister is twenty-three, but I expect you'll find her quite upset over it. She's rather sentimental, you see, about death. I'm not. Death is hesitation. "The murderer had used

"But murder isn't."

"No", agreed Ann. "And I'm struggling between an intense interest in the murder as a murder, and a feeling that I ought to be shocked because the victim was my aunt".

"But you aren't shocked?"

"No. I'm not a hypocrite. People die horribly every day, but you wouldn't ask me to be morbid about them. Aunt Octavia meant no more to me than any name. you might pick at random out of a daily newspaper's list of motor fatalities".

"I see".

Sheriff Black looked quizzically at Burrows. The police inspector shook his head.

"That is all for the present", said the Sheriff pleasantly.

"Thanks. Good evening".

When the door closed behind Ann, Sheriff Black said quietly: "I like that girl".

"Well, I don't," replied Burrows. "She's too cold-blooded for me".

"You're a sentimentalist, Burrows, and she isn't. I could see her point; and you must admit that she's straightforward and candid about her feelings".

"She ought to be ashamed of them".

"I can see her doing a murder, though", mused the Sheriff. "She has a lot more nerve than her father".

"Perhaps the father did it and she's covering him up".

"Too early to theorize. Let's question one of the others".

"Which one?"

"Let's see the servant. Maybe we can get something out of her".

"Maybe", said Burrows doubtfully.

Hannah Gale came in and seated herself with a thump. Her arms folded, she gazed at the police officers with a look, that said: "Watch your step!" Hostile witness, thought Burrows at once. For that matter, they were all hostile!

She firmly declined to have her fingerprints taken.

"I've been an honest woman all my life and I know my rights. I don't intend to be treated like a gangster".

"We've already taken your employer's prints", said the Sheriff, "and we intend to take them from every other member of the family".

"It's like your nerve", snapped Hannah, "but if you've taken his, you can take mine".

At the end of the simple operation, when Sergeant Feathers attempted to wipe her fingers with the benzine-soaked rag, she snatched it out of his hand and wiped them herself.

"Look here", growled the police inspector, his temper thoroughly roused, "if you think we're going to stand your nonsense—"

Hannah fixed him with a steely eye.

Dressed Chicken Receipts Lighter

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Receipts of fresh dressed chicken have been much lighter than last week, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Local demand continues fairly good, supplies of fowl are sufficient for local trade only. The quality of both chicken and fowl is improving. Demand, both locally and out-of-town is good for turkeys, ducks and geese but dealers are not accepting orders for this kind of fowl for future delivery. Out-of-town enquiry for chicken and fowl is being taken care of from frozen stock. A few local turkeys are being bought by small dealers who are holding them for the Christmas trade. No offerings of turkeys or geese from western dealers is reported and larger dealers are not expecting receipt of much, if any, poultry from west of Manitoba.

Quotations are unchanged. Dealers paying producers and country shippers for fresh dressed poultry:

Broilers: Grade A milk-fed 34 cents lb., Grade B milk-fed 32, Grade B 30, Grade C 27.

Chicken: Grade A milk-fed, 5 lbs. and over 32, 4 to 5 lbs. 31, under 4 lbs. 30; Grade B milk-fed, 5 lbs. and over 30, 4 to 5 lbs. 29, under 4 lbs 28, Grade A, 5 lbs. and over 30, 4 to 5 lbs. 29, under 4 lbs. 28, Grade B, 5 lbs. and over 28, 4 to 5 lbs. 27, under 4 lbs. 26; Grade C, 5 lbs. and over 25, 4 to 5 lbs. 24, under 4 lbs. 23.

Fowl: Grade A, over 5 lbs. 26 1-2, 4 to 5 lbs. 26, under 4 lbs. 25; Grade B over 5 lbs. 24 1-2, 4 to 5 lbs. 24, under 4 lbs. 23, Grade C, over 5 lbs. 21 1-2, 4 to 5 lbs. 21, under 4 lbs. 20.

Geese: Grade A 24, Grade B 22, Grade C 17; Turkeys, Grade A 34, Grade B 32, Grade C 29; Old Toms, Grade A 30, Grade B 28, Grade C 25; Old Hens, Grade A 31, Grade B 29, Grade C 26; Old Roosters, Grade A 18, Grade B 16; Ducklings, Grade A 4 lbs. and over 26, under 4 lbs. 25, Grade B, 4 lbs. and over 24, under 4 lbs. 23, Grade C, 4 lbs. and over 19, under 4 lbs. 18.

NOTICE

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost. If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

BENES MAY ACT AS MEDIATOR

Czech President May Represent Poles and Russians Not on Speaking Terms

Washington, Dec. 3 — (AP) — Czech President Edward Benes may act as mediator between the Poles and Russians, who are not on diplomatic speaking terms, at the Churchill-Roosevelt-Stalin conferences.'

That suggestion cropped up in responsible quarters here today as the Red Army's advance toward the Polish frontier made the problem of severed relations between Poland and Russia increasingly acute.

Benes departed quietly from London several weeks ago and has been reported in the European press as having arrived at Moscow. Whether or not he is attending the Allied war councils as an adviser, it is generally believed the "Big Three" will discuss the question of administering liberated territories in Central Europe.

Czechoslovakia, it was pointed out, is about to sign a 20-year mutual defence pact with Russia and has often discussed the possibility of a Central European Federation with Poland.

While Benes would not be likely to present a formula for solution of problems between Poland and Russia, it is known the Czech president has shown great interest in a reconciliation between the two neighbors.

Even before the treaty negotiations were disclosed, the warmth of Russo-Czech relations was evidenced when Benes revealed he would not push his cherished idea of Central European collaboration if it took on the tone of an anti-Soviet bloc.

The proposed treaty between Czechoslovakia and Russia contains a clause providing for adherence of bordering states — principally, Poland. Should Polish-Russian difficulties be ironed out and Poland sign the pact, it may become the cornerstone for the eastern defence line against future German aggression.

Coroner's Jury Blames Boy For Mother's Death

Montreal, Dec. 3—(CP)—A coroner's jury today held 14-year-old George Webster criminally responsible for the death of his mother in their exclusive Westmount home following an attack with a baseball bat three weeks ago.

The jury reached its verdict after inquest testimony was taken at the bedside of Miss Sylvia Cust of Australia, house guest of the Webster's at the time, who is recovering from head injuries suffered in the same early-morning attack.

Miss Cust in her evidence today identified the youth as the person who struck her over the head with a baseball bat the morning Mrs. Andrew R. Webster was killed.

George Webster had been held by Westmount police since the day of the tragedy, first at police headquarters and later in hospital after he had developed a cold.

Two other victims of the early-morning attacks are recovering slowly in hospital after operations for head injuries. They are eight-year-old Andrew Webster, junior, and 12-year-old Mina Webster, brother and sister of George.

CUT RECRUITING FOR R.C.A.F. GROUND CREWS

Have Sufficient Number for Squadrons Now Formed or to be Formed

NEED AIRCREW MEN

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Dec. 3. (CP)—Air Minister Power today announced drastic reduction in the recruiting of men for R.C.A.F. ground crews.

"We have in the United Kingdom, in Canada or in training a sufficient number of groundcrew for all Canadian squadrons now formed or to be formed', Maj. Power said.

Ground crew would only be needed in the future to replace casualties, men discharged, or men who remuster to aircrew.

While ground-crew recruiting is to be practically ended, the Air Force will continue recruiting aircrew men and its needs in that respect are as great as ever, said the Minister. Canada's commitments under the British Commonwealth Air Training plan call for 50 per cent of all the recruits needed to keep the air training schools in Canada operating at capacity.

Over 80,000 Serving.

More than 80,000 persons, civilian and service, are employed on the ground in connection with the air training plan and the greater number are in uniform. In addition, the air force has had to recruit ground crews for home war establishment squadrons of the air force operating on both coasts and on Atlantic anti-submarine patrols.

The creation of all-Canadian squadrons overseas, not contemplated when the air training plan was drawn up, necessitated sending large numbers of ground crew overseas.

BEER GALLONAGÉ TO BE ALLOCATED SAYS CHAIRMAN

Gordon Says Beverage Rooms Must be Closed Half Hour After Sale Closes

PROOF OD IDENTITY

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP) — St. Clair Gordon, chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, today warned authority holders that their beer gallonage must be allocated so that the beverage rooms will be open some time during each week day.

Mr. Gordon said in a statement that recently there has been a "great deal" of criticism by the public of the fact that some hotels sell out their quota in two or three days and then remain closed for the balance of the week, while the Liquor Board requires that beverage rooms be opened each week day.

The Liquor Board has issued instructions to all alcoholic beverage retail sales outlets that on and after Dec. 6 "no sale of liquor, beer or wine shall be made to any permitholder or holder of individual beer or wine ration coupon book until he or she produces and exhibits to the sales clerk at time of purchase his or her National Registration certificate or in the case of the armed forces proof of identity and status in the armed forces," Mr. Gordon said.

Where evidence is obtained that persons are purchasing or attempting to purchase alcoholic beverages in name other than their own the matter will be handed to police authorities with a view to taking appropriate action under provisions of the Criminal Code and the Liquor Control Act, Mr. Gordon said.

With regard to the sale of beer in hotels Mr. Gordon's statement said the Liquor Board is insisting that the beverage rooms be cleared of patrons by 2.30 p. m. after the two o'clock sale, by seven after the 6.30 sale and by 10.30 after the ten p.m. closing hour.

Mail Service To Corsica Is Resumed

Ottawa, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Postmaster General Mulock announced today that mail service has been resumed to Corsica for "letters and postcards on strictly personal and private matters." The mail will be dispatched by "surface conveyance only, for the present," said the minister.

In another statement Col. Mulock said mail to be carried by ship now reached the United Kingdom in an average of 28 days after it is posted in Canada. Average time for surface conveyance between the United Kingdom and the Mediterranean war theatre is 21 days.

The "blue" armed forces air letter forms are reaching the United Kingdom from Canada in an average of six to eight days, he said.

Col. Mulock disclosed that shortly after Canadian troops reached the Mediterranean area a ship carrying 800 bags of mail for the Canadian forces was damaged by enemy action and had to put into port, resulting in delay of at least three weeks in delivery of the mail.

Berlin Mob Almost Lynches British Fascist

London, Dec. 3 (CP)—An angry Berlin mob which was fighting fires after a recent raid almost lynched a British fascist who broadcasts for the Germans when the broadcaster, during the excitement, spoke in English to another fire fighter, the German radio said yesterday.

The broadcaster possibly may have been "Lord Haw Haw," the American-born William Joyce.

A warden arrested the broadcaster and the fire fighter, the radio said, adding that while they were being taken to the police station "it was only with difficulty that people in the streets were prevented from lynching both of them."

Food Disorders In Turin Cause Nazis Anxiety

At the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Dec. 3 —(AP)— Germany has sent Brig.-Gen. Zimmerman of the SS Troops to industrial Turin in northern Italy to suppress food disorders which have become more serious since Wednesday's Allied air raid, it was reported today.

Zimmerman's first act was a proclamation that his task was to restore order "at all costs" and promising food would be supplied to the people.

Libera Stampa at Lugano, Switzerland, said a factory at Croce di Morone was attacked Nov. 7 by "Partisans," who included approximately 40 Allied prisoners, headed by an American, Lieut. Alberts, who lost his life in the battle. German casualties were said to have been 70 dead and 150 wounded, while the Partisans lost 36 dead and 58 wounded.

Reveals Foiling Of Lunatic's Plot To Kill F.D.R. in Nov.

Detroit, Dec. 3—(AP)—William A. Carlson, supervisor of secret service agents in the Michigan-Ohio district, in an interview with the Detroit News, said agents last month thwarted a plan by a mentally-deranged Pontiac, Mich., man to assassinate President Roosevelt.

The man, Walter Best, 38-year-old former worker in Pontiac and Detroit factories, was adjudged insane Nov. 23, 10 days after his arrest, Carlson said, and is in Gallinger Hospital, Washington, awaiting removal to a Michigan mental hospital.

Best's wife informed Oakland County authorities of her husband's plan, Carlson said, after receiving a letter from him disclosing his intention "to get rid of Roosevelt" and relating how the President had left Washington and that he would wait for his return.

"Best described how he got inside the military guard at the White House while soldiers were unloading a truck and that he was deliberating whether to steal a soldier's gun on the ground nearby when he was discovered," Carlson said.

Best was said to have told secret service agents that "I had electrodes running through my brain, and they told me to get rid of Roosevelt." A gun was found in his room in a Washington hotel, agents said.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH

Amos, Que., Dec. 3 —(CP)— Two children of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Belair were burned to death when fire destroyed their home at the nearby mining town of Cadillac yesterday.

The victims were Edouard, aged 3½, and Helene, 11 months. Mrs. Belair was visiting a neighbor at the time, and the father was at work.

Cause of the blaze is not known.

Big Three Leaders Met in Teheran Says Moscow Radio

Number of Political Questions Discussed As Well As Conduct Of the War

STATEMENT COMING

By JUDSON O'QUINN
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 4—(AP)—Decisions on how to deal with Germany on the battlefield and on "a number of political questions" have been taken by Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin at a conference in Teheran, capital of Iran, the Moscow radio announced today.

The meeting of the leaders of Great Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union was held in Teheran "a few days ago," said a brief announcement recorded by the Soviet Monitor. It was the first joint meeting of the "big three."

The announcement, made in an official Soviet News Agency broadcast for provincial Russian papers, said:

"A few days ago in Teheran, a conference took place between the leaders of the three Allied powers, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin. Diplomatic and military representatives took part in the conference.

Conduct of War Discussed

"At the conference, questions on the conduct of the war against Germany were discussed as well as a number of political questions.

"Corresponding decisions were adopted which will be made public later."

The announcer introduced the statement thus: "I am about to broadcast a statement to be inserted in every newspaper."

The Soviet Monitor said full details of the conference might be announced between noon and 2 p.m. E.D.T. today, basing his prediction on the customary routine of the Moscow radio when announcing future broadcasts.

In the absence of an official communique, it was believed these steps probably will stem from the conference:

1. A formal ultimatum to the German people to overthrow Hitler and his Nazis or take the brunt of growing Allied war power.
2. Bigger aerial blows on Germany, especially Berlin.
3. The promised second front, involving Allied land operations on the greatest scale, synchronized with developments on the eastern front and in the Mediterranean.

Decisions May Include

Decisions on the diplomatic front might include:

1. A bid to Axis satellites to abandon Berlin.
2. A plan for the occupation and policing of Germany.
3. A broad outline on how the peace may be kept secure in Europe.

It was believed the chief concern of the parley centred on military questions, since all three leaders are fully aware the Allies still face a formidable enemy, whose power in some ways becomes more consolidated as his armies withdraw into a smaller space.

For President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin the conference, held close to Russia, was their first meeting and it was the first time the Marshal had left the Soviet Union since the revolution. Mr. Churchill met Stalin last year when he flew to Moscow.

Military Action To Shorten War by Weeks or Months Likely Decided

CLOSE CO-OPERATION

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 4—(AP)—Military action to shorten the war by weeks or months, and probably a dramatic ultimatum to the German people to throw off Fascism and surrender, or else face destruction, are the explosive results expected from the conference of Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin.

This was Washington's reaction to the Moscow radio announcement that the "Big Three" had completed their extraordinary sessions at Teheran and that a statement would be issued later, outlining the military and political decisions reached.

Probably no pronouncement of this war has been awaited with such intense and world-wide interest. For to the extent that it foreshadows action on the fighting fronts and in the battle of nerves, it may furnish clear clues to the blows now in preparation against the fortress of Europe.

A hint that even greater offensives on the Russian front itself may be in store came from Chairman Tom Connally (Dem.-Tex.) of the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who said in a radio address Thursday night that as a result of the Big Three meeting "the armies of Russia will be strengthened and her campaign will be buttressed and fortified."

Beyond a doubt, however, one of the major topics of discussion was the second front the Russians have been urging from the day they were forced into the war by Germany's attack.

Stress Necessity of Invasion

Those most familiar with the Russian argument, as already presented to Allied statesmen and military leaders, believe Stalin and his military advisers stressed the necessity of invasion as the only means of forcing victory at a reasonably early date.

On the other hand, the Anglo-American position has been, and probably was at Teheran, that any attempt to open a second front would be suicidal without fully adequate preparation.

The promised attack across the channel does not, in the view of responsible persons here, rule out the possibility of a strike into the Balkans and that line of action is believed to have been taken up by the three leaders. It would involve even closer co-ordination of Anglo-American and Russian forces than the opening of a second front.

Britain has two armies in the Middle East area, opposite the Balkans—the 9th and 10th—and powerful Allies in the Partisans of Yugoslavia.

Germany's Newest Weapon Called 'Bumble-Bee' Gun

Stockholm, Dec. 4 (AP).—Germany's newest weapon against a seaborne invasion of the continent is a "bumble-bee" gun, the Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyeheter reported today. The gun is so-called, he said, because it fires shells of "extraordinary explosive force" which hum over the water like a bee. The shells were described as a sort of "super-surface torpedo". First pictures of the guns, the correspondent said, show them in emplacements in "the south-eastern anti-invasion wall."

CLARK'S 5TH ARMY PUTS WEDGE INTO GERMAN DEFENCES

Artillery and Aerial Bombardment Simply Pulverizes Many Nazi Strongpoints

ON WAY TO ROME

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 4 (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's Anglo-American 5th Army has smashed a wedge into German defences after the heaviest artillery and aerial bombardment of the Italian campaign pulverized many strongpoints, and has driven ahead two miles along the Via Casilina toward Rome, headquarters announced today.

(The Algiers radio reported the 5th Army had taken the important town of Calabritto, about seven miles southwest of Migano.)

British and American troops of the 5th Army launched their full scale offensive on mountain positions guarding both sides of the Via Casilina, a main road to Rome, on Thursday night, it was disclosed. The assault, aimed in the direction of Cassino, drove the Germans from the important Camino and Maggiore heights, respectively southwest and west of Mignano, front-line dispatches said.

On the Adriatic front, the British 8th Army knifing ahead toward the "back door" road to Rome, reached the outskirts of San Vito, southeast of the port of Pescara, and also swept up the towns of Lanciano, Treglio, Orsogna and Casoli, all in inland country beyond the Sangro Ridge. Orsogna, the farthest point of advance inland, is about eight miles northwest of the Sangro.

In reaching the vicinity of San Vito, the 8th Army was within 16 miles of Pescara, from which port a good highway cuts across the Italian peninsula to Rome.

Lanciano, which the Germans announced yesterday they were evacuating, lies some five miles from the coast, on the same highway as Casoli, further inland. Between the two cities is Castel Frentano, capture of which was announced yesterday.

These successes gave the 8th Army firm control of most of the eastern end of a lateral highway running southwest from San Vito to the mountains where Canadian and British troops of the army's left flank have been reported engaged in patrol activities for more than a week.

Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's 5th Army, after one of the heaviest barrages of the campaign, also mounted a drive toward Rome with full-scale offensive power. It thrust the Germans back two miles and gained important high ground near Mount Comino, four miles southwest of Mignano.

An R.A.F. statement reported that several German prisoners taken when the 8th Army smashed the lower Sangro River line had gone insane from the effects of the relentless Allied air raids and most of the others were shaken and exhausted from the ceaseless bombing which paced the attack.

Incessant Air Attacks.

"Terrific demoralization" of the enemy troops was brought about by the incessant air attacks, the statement said.

Do Your Duty, Vote on Monday

Monday is election day in Belleville and as a result of the balloting mayor, fourteen aldermen for the city council, one Public Utilities Commissioner and four trustees for the Board of Education will be elected.

There are about 7,000 voters resident in Belleville and about 3,000 non-residents, who are entitled to vote in the elections. Anyone who has followed the course of elections here in other years knows that nowhere near that number of voters exercise their franchise.

On Monday there will be the opportunity to vote in far more representative numbers than have been voting hitherto.

The civic bodies which are elective legislate for the city of Belleville and they are the form of government which is most directly concerned immediately with the residents. Hence it is easily realized how important an election is and how important it is to have a vote that approximates a representative vote.

The right to vote therefore implies a duty to vote.

This year there is a good number of candidates and these men deserve to have every voter cast his or her vote. They are willing to serve the city's interest.

Every individual voter has an interest in the civic administration. Therefore it is up to every individual to cast his or her ballot so that there may be a heavy vote. That will prove to the electors themselves and to the candidates that the citizens are deeply interested in every matter that comes for decision before these bodies.

POLICE BELIEVE CMDR. JOHNSON IS STILL ALIVE

People in Halifax Area Asked to be on Lookout for Strange-Acting Man

DAUGHTER DEAD

Halifax, Dec. 4—(CP)—Search for Cmdr. F. M. Johnson of the Royal Navy, whose daughter's body was found here under circumstances pointing to murder and suicide, developed today into a manhunt that encompassed the possibility the officer might be alive and in hiding.

While he directed a search for the missing navy man's body in Halifax Harbor's Northwest Arm, from which nine-year-old Nadia Johnson's body was lifted yesterday, police Chief J. J. Conrad disclosed his department was "not completely satisfied" the father was dead.

Chief Conrad asked the public to "be on the lookout for any man acting strangely." His request was directed especially to residents of the city's outskirts, indicating police might be expecting their quarry to try to get out of the area.

At all events, the chief said the Briton's body, "alive or dead, is needed to break through the mystery."

Cmdr. Johnson, whose Russian-born wife is near death in a New York hospital after an accident, vanished with his daughter from their home on the Arm shore Wednesday morning. He left behind a note saying, "This is the finis for me and mine," and saying he had put his affairs in order.

The note was described by Chief Conrad as "scrawled and jumbled."

The possibility Johnson still was alive may have been strengthened in the view of police by the fact the girl's body was weighted down by about 20 pounds of rocks. They were tucked inside the ski suit which she wore over her uniform of the Halifax Ladies' College.

Though the girl had been brutally beaten over the top and back of the head, an autopsy disclosed she had died by drowning. Medical Examiner F. V. Woodbury said indications were she had "put up a struggle in the water."

RUSSIAN FORCES ARE CLOSING IN ON ZHLOBIN

One Prong in Drive Captures Town Nine Miles From Rail Hub

GAIN AT KREMENCHUG

London, Dec. 4—(CP)—Red Army troops, sloshing forward through knee-deep snow and mud, were closing in from two directions today on Zhlobin, important German-held rail and communications hub at the juncture of the Gomel-Minsk and Leningrad-Odessa railways in White Russia.

Far to the south other Soviet forces plunged deeper into German lines west of their Dnieper River bridgehead below Kremenchug, and hurled back fierce counter-attacks aimed at the up-river Soviet positions in the Cherkasy area, a Russian communique said.

Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's white-clad troops were reported raising havoc with the German railway network northeast of Gomel, and the army communique said more than 100 populated places were overrun in Friday's steady advance. Keypoints taken in this two-pronged drive, aimed at enveloping Zhlobin, were Sverjen and Vosk to the north and Soltanovka and Staraya Rudnya to the southwest. The latter town is only nine miles from Zhlobin.

Dovsk is a junction on the Gomel-Mogilev and Rogachev-Roslaval railways, 18 miles northeast of Rogachev. Sverjen lies seven miles further west.

In the Dnieper bend, Soviet troops were said to have blasted their Kremenchug bridgehead, to their Kremechug bridgehead, to reach Novo-Georgievsk. The movement apparently was designed to relieve the pressure on Soviet units in the Cherkasy salient, 70 miles to the north. Here numerous Nazi counter-thrusts were repulsed, according to the Soviet communique.

Koristovka, rail junction 21 miles east of Znamenka, and Klochkovo were reported in Soviet hands after heavy fighting. Red Army troops were said to be shelling Znamenka, key to German lateral communications between the Kiev bulge and the Dnieper bend.

People of France Convinced Allied Invasion of Their Country Imminent

Madrid, Dec. 4—(AP)—Paris correspondents of Madrid newspapers reported today France is being swept by the conviction an Allied invasion is imminent.

The correspondent of Pueblo in a dispatch to his newspaper cited "great movements of American and British shipping, troop concentrations and an increase of observation flights over France" as a basis for the belief.

This and similar press dispatches from Paris coincided with a reported increase in German military activity both along the Atlantic wall and in the still incomplete defences of the Mediterranean, from the Pyrenees mountains north to Marseilles and east to the Italian border.

New restrictions have been imposed on residents of these areas, confining them to their homes between sundown and sunup, keeping them out of areas which the Germans consider of military importance, and evacuating are mounting guns and sandbagging windows and doorways of buildings, these reports said.

One of the main reasons behind the new fear of invasion, the Paris dispatches said, was the news of decisions arrived at in Cairo by the tri-power Allied conference. Both Germans and French, they added, were quick to note that the Chinese were absent from the parley's most important military sessions on Nov. 26. That fact convinced many Frenchmen that France might again be the scene of war.

The Pueblo correspondent advanced the suggestion that any invasion would take the form of a multiple attack along the Atlantic Coast, preceded, perhaps, by a full-scale invasion fent at Norway or Denmark. Many Frenchmen and Germans, alike, he said, are convinced that the really decisive battle for Western Europe will be fought in France or in Belgium.

Clothing Allowance Increased to $65

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP)—The clothing allowance on discharge for all three armed services has been increased to $65, irrespective of the length of service or time of year at which discharge takes place, Air Minister Power announced today at a press conference.

The allowance formerly was $35 for those with more than six months' service; $17 for those with less than six months' service, but if they were discharged between October and April they received an extra $10.

HOLD 357,630 ITALIANS

London, Dec. 4 (CP).—The War Office said today that on Nov. 15, Britain had 357,630 Italian prisoners of war in custody in the United Kingdom, the Dominions and elsewhere.

SHOOTS 1,300-LB. MOOSE

Sudbury, Dec. 3—(CP)—Aime Lahaie of Noelville, 35 miles southeast of here, claims a modern record with a moose he shot on a recent hunting trip. The forest giant weighed 1,300 pounds and had a 56-inch antler spread.

GOOD PRISON COOKS GET NEW JOBS

Reidsville, Ga., Dec. 4. (AP)—When George Sibbald, steward at the Atlanta Federal Prison, visited Tattnall State Penitentiary with other Government experts, he found improvement needed in the prison kitchen. Scouting around, he found five of his former kitchen help doing time at Tattnall. As Federal prisoners they were good cooks. Now they are bound for kitchen duty here.

POWER REPORTS RESHUFFLING OF TRAINING SCHOOLS

Formations and Units Of Air Force in Canada Will Be Affected

AIRCREW SURPLUS

Ottawa, Dec. 4. (CP)—Air Minister Power announced today that changes in the war picture will bring about "a considerable reshuffling of Training Schools, formations and units" of the air force in Canada, and a reorganization of "personnel and functions".

A number of Training Shcools devoted to flying training will be affected, principally those originally opened as R.A.F. "transferred" schools.

Certain elementary training schools, devoted exclusively to the elementary training of pilots under contract with civilian organizations, will cease operating for those purposes, but other use will be made of their facilies. Certain service flying training schools devoted to the advanced training of pilots will change the character and nature of the training carried on, said the Minister.

Maj. Power said there has been "a considerable reduction" in operational manpower wastage rates in all commands other than bomber command.

"This has had the result that a considerable surplus of aircrews has been accumulated in fighter command as a result of the absence in 1943 of operations involving heavy casualties", he said.

"Aircrew training will still be required and in large numbers. Canada's aircrew committments will not be affected.

"Fortunately, due to the intense recruiting campaign of last summer and this autumn and to remustering from ground crew, Canada has in hand and ready to undergo training in all categories a substantial reserve of aircrew material.

Mr. King to Broadcast In Anti-Inflation Talk Tonight

Ottawa, Dec. 4—Prime Minister Mackenzie King will make a half-hour broadcast over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation this (Saturday) night, starting at 8 p.m. E.D.T., on "The Battle Against Inflation," his office announced today.

NO HOUSING IN KINGSTON

Kingston, Dec. 4—(CP)—Kingston war services yesterday passed a resolution asking the Federal government to declare Kingston a restricted area for persons desiring to move to the city. Housing conditions in Kingston, with 20,000 soldiers stationed in adjoining camps, have deteriorated to an "acute and dangerous" state, the preamble to the resolution stated.

Campaign in Italy Thought Subsidiary To Great Allied Offensive To Come

London, Dec. 4 (CP)—Even as the 8th and 5th armies strike furiously at the Germans and slowly advance through Italy, military observers here are wondering whether the campaign in Italy has not already been marked down as a subsidiary to the great Allied offensive to come.

An expert in a semi-official position admitted this week that even the assumption that the Italian campaign represents the main spearhead of Anglo-American power in the Mediterranean may be erroneous.

"For the space of a few weeks about the time the Fascist government collapsed, there was a fleeting change of making Italy the scene of a great German catastrophe," he said. "The German command dodged that blow by quickly throwing into the country some 25 to 30 divisions. They now are being held there by a much smaller Allied force."

"It is conceivable the Germans are hoping the Allied command will be induced to launch a major invasion of northern Italy, and so tie up troops at more vital targets. It is equally conceivable the Allies are satisfied the Italian campaign is serving its purpose as a 'holding' attack, and are not disposed to allow it to draw off troops and transport needed for the forthcoming grand assault.

"In short, the role of the forces in Italy as part of the concerted and converging Anglo-American-Russian attack upon Germany's European fortress may become a subsidiary one."

In support of the theory that Italy has been relegated to a secondary place in plans of the Allied high command, these points are made:

The mass of shipping used in the Sicilian invasion and in the Salerno landings is not being used for further offensive moves in Italy.

No major invasion has been attempted in the region of Leghorn from newly-liberated Corsica;

Yugoslav guerillas were ready to aid in an invasion of the Balkans from Italian ports and airfields facing the Adriatic, yet no such undertaking developed.

On the other hand, it is known that the Allies have been reinforced in Italy of late. Newly-arrived Canadians presumably include a division and, with the 1st division, will form a Canadian corps.

Feint at Berlin To Avert Attention From Main Attack

Rail Centre Raided To Stop Supplies From Reaching the Scorched Capital

23 BOMBERS LOST

By ROBERT STURDEVANT
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 4—(AP)—The R.A.F. bomber command, tricking the Germans with a well-timed shift of targets, sent Mosquitos roaring over scorched Berlin and heavy bombers feinting at the Nazi capital last night, then struck with devastating effect at the great German trading and railway centre of Leipzig where 1,500 tons of explosives were unloaded.

The deception drew off the great majority of German night fighters which rose once more to give battle when a part of block-busting squadrons headed for the expiring capital.

Then just as the main attack seemed about to break over Berlin, the major armadas streaked southward 90 miles and hit Leipzig, from where the Nazis have be[illegible] to succor th[illegible] supplies

Halifaxes and Lancasters of the R.C.A.F. bomber group took part in the Leipzig raid, and R. C. A. F. Mosquitos on intruder patrols attacked enemy airfields over a wide area. R.C.A.F. headquarters announced. No Canadian planes are missing.

Battered Berlin did not escape new destruction.

Made Turn to South

As the heavy bombers made their abrupt turn toward the south, swift two-engined Mosquitos darted in to strike selected targets and keep the weary capital under siege for the second successive night following five heavy blows.

Striking well after midnight in a quick change of procedure, the heavy bombers dumped high explosives and incendiaries on Leipzig's industry and on her freight yards already strained to the limit to accommodate Russian-bound war traffic currently forced this way by Berlin's mangled communications.

First reports from crews told of a concentrated and effective bombing of the city of more than 700,000 population.

Leipzig is one of the world's largest railway terminals. Main rail lines from Regensburg, Berlin and Kassel intersect there and it is one of the gateways to the eastern front. More than 20 firms there are engaged in the manufacture of aircraft components and it also is the home of assembly plants for Junkers and Messerschmitt planes.

Reports reaching Spain from Germany said Leipzig was one of the several big cities in the Berlin area now being drawn on heavily to support the capital's bomb-battered millions.

Eighth of War on Leipzig

The raid was the eighth of the war on Leipzig, last battered by the R.A.F. on the night of Oct. 20 after a long respite lasting late in 1940.

A Swedish business man told Stockholm correspondents only today that the industrial city appeared back to normal when he was there a few days ago.

Other R.A.F. planes rounded out the night's assaults by sowing mines in enemy shipping lanes, and fighters lashed out at enemy airfields over a wide area.

Reports from Berlin through neutral countries said that three of Berlin's biggest bakeries had been destroyed in Thursday night's assault and that bread now was coming in from Leipzig and Madgeburg.

Berlin's Funkhaus (broadcasting house), situated in the far west end of the city, was hit, a Swedish dispatch said, and an eyewitness reaching Stockholm reported "there was hardly anything left" of the borough of Ch[illegible]lottenburg, also in the west en[illegible]

The badly-affected transportation system was said to have been further crippled by the raid, making idle the trains that had run through the Potsdamer and Stettiner railway stations.

U. S. Faces Fuel Crisis Says Ickes

Washington, Dec. 4—(AP)—Interior Secretary Harold Ickes has told Congress the United States faces a fuel crisis unparalleled in its history as a result of the loss of 40,000,000 tons of coal production through miners' strikes.

He made this statement, it was learned today, in asking for a $3,550,000 special supplemental appropriation to carry out a plan of allocating available coal supplies this winter. The Senate Sub-Committee on deficiency appropriations approved the amount.

District allocation offices would be set up in 65 cities under Ickes' plan.

In a letter to the Sub-Committee Ickes' office said the latest series of strikes, in late October and early November, cut coal production 10,000,000 tons on top of a production loss of 30,000,000 tons during earlier work stoppages growing out of the contract dispute between John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and operators.

Ickes' letter said in part: ". . . Allocation will involve such diversions of coal as may be necessary to meet the most critical needs.

FAGS GETTING THRU TO PRISONERS OF WAR

Proof that shipments of cigarettes are getting through to local boys interned as prisoners-of-war in Germany was indicated here this week upon the receipt of a card from Sgt. D. J. Dall by Mr. Albert Jones of the Canadian National Railways Cigarette Fund. The cards was in thanks for a shipment of cigarettes received in October. "Many thanks for the parcel of cigarettes," he wrote.

Sgt Dall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dall, North Front Street and was a crew member of an R.C.A.F. bomber shot down over Germany last winter, when he was taken prisoner.

STOKER LONGHURST LOSES HIS WALLET

An opportunity has arisen where someone can really display his interest in the boys who have joined the fighting forces and are serving their country. Stoker Randall Longhurst, R. C. N. V. R., Brockville, came home a few days ago to spend a well-earned leave with his sister, Mrs. A. Carmichael, James Street, and while enjoying himself as every soldier, sailor or airman should when on leave lost his wallet. Seaman Longhurst is not the only serviceman, who has this misfortune while on leave but in his case it is urgent, that he find the wallet. It contains his leave pass, identification card, railway ticket and other important papers, which would be almost impossible to duplicate. In addition to these items, all the money he has for the continuance of his leave is in the wallet. If the wallet is found, kindly return it to 164 James St., or telephone 2826-W.

BOYS PILFER DRINKS FROM MILK WAGON

City police apprehended a trio of teen-aged lads who were stealing chocolate drinks from a dairy delivery wagon on Ann street Friday. Strangely enough the three boys resided on the west side of the Moira River and had found their way to Ann street where they were doing their pilfering. Taken to the police station the boys were severely reprimanded by Chief Probert and all promised to behave themselves in the future.

ADMITS STEALING BICYCLES IN CITY

Provincial Police apprehended a teen-aged lad on Friday who had broken his parole from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School. After being lodged in the police station however, the boy subsequently admitted to local authorities he had been responsible for the theft of three bicycles that were reported stolen in the city recently Two of the bikes were recovered where they had been left abandoned.

PLOWING OPERATIONS STILL CONTINUING

Mild December weather is enabling farmers to catch up on their fall plowing operations, it was learned from vendors on the local market Saturday morning. Considerable plowing is now being done in Prince Edward county, it was stated, as farmers in this district were held up until late in the fall through harvesting of canning factory produce.

Late plowing operations apparently apply only in those districts where the growing of canning factory produce is common as in the area north of Belleville farmers claim the fall work is practically all caught up. The open season extending on into December is unusually late, according to farmers, although it has been known to plow in January.

AMELIASBURG COUNCIL GIVEN ACCLAMATION

From all reports elections in many of the district townships of Hastings and Prince Edward counties will not be held this year, with councils and reeves in many instances being returned to office by acclamation. This is true in both counties where nominations have already been held.

The entire council of Ameliasburg township was returned uncontested with Earl Onderdonk receiving acclamation as reeve; Gerald Anderson as deputy reeve and Norris Whitney, Harry Redner and Arza Pulver as councillors.

Candidates for Municipal Office and School Trustees Heard at General Meeting

Small Attendance and Speakers Say Meetings Should be Discontinued

NO HECKLING

Out of approximately five thousand persons, whose names are on the voters' lists in the city of Belleville, only 75 residents showed sufficient interest in the forthcoming municipal election to attend the general meeting at the city hall on Friday evening, to hear the civic administration policies and platforms of aspirant councillors, members of the school board, Hydro commissioners and mayors.

And the feeling, that such meetings were no longer needed was expressed by Chairman ex-Mayor George O. Tice, as he called the assembly to order preparatory to the speaking of the candidates for the various civic positions up for election.

"I must say, that I am surprised at the few ratepayers in attendance here tonight", stated Mr. Tice. "If I were in council today, I would recommend that such meetings are no longer necessary. Definitely there is no need of them. It is a useless waste of money to heat and light this hall, when such a few taxpayers demonstrate their interest by turning out".

This feeling was re-echoed by Mayor Harry Rollins as the first speaker of the evening. He indicated, that the smallness of the crowd was an indication that ratepayers in Belleville were quite well satisfied with the administration of city business during the past year.

Tribute Paid City Officials.

Turning directly to the issue of the evening Mayor Rollins assured his listeners that he, as mayor, had strived to give the citizens good sound business administration during past twelve months. He paid tribute to the various city officials and departments for the co-operation shown during the past year and expressed his personal appreciation to the members of the Women's Christian Association. "The work of this organization goes largely unsung", he said. "Only by assuming a responsible position in the city can the realization of the work they do be attained".

Tribute was also paid by the mayor to the council members of the present and of the past, whose sound business principles had been instrumental in putting the city of Belleville in an enviable financial condition, "one of the best", he termed it, "in the Dominion of Canada".

"Belleville is also one of the best educational centres in the province", he stated. "The foresight of previous councils responsible for building schools in the city has been proven".

A plan for the rehabilitation of the boys and girls in the fighting forces was claimed by the mayor as being one of the foremost planks of his election platform.

"I strongly recommend, that a reception committee be set up to welcome the boys when they come home, to welcome them as they deserve to be welcomed and to let them know their service to the country has been appreciated. There should be a citizens' committee, whose duty it is to see that no soldier is discharged from the services without reestablishment into a civilian position equal to, or better than the one which he left".

Advocates Building Program

"We should ask of the government", he continued, "for the loan of money at a rate of not over three percent to permit, a building program, that would assure every man a home of his own. And when you start a building program, the work created would take care of every boy coming home from overseas".

Plans of the present Post-War Planning Commission have laid the foundation for a program which will take 25 years to complete, he said.

In conclusion Mayor Rollins assured the electors that he stood the same on all civic questions—"Equal rights for all and special privileges to none".

"I stand or fall on those terms", he said. "If my leadership has been satisfactory I appeal for your support on Monday".

GLENCOE E. THOMPSON

Ex-Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson, seeking election to the chief magistrate's chair, assured his listeners that he did not intend to criticize his opponent for his civic administration durin the past year. "I came here to tell you what I have done in past years, and of what I hope to accomplish in the future," he said.

Mr. Thompson referred to the fact that when he first came into council the tax rate of the city was too high and that it was his foremost effort to try and have it reduced.

"Along with other members of the council I helped to reduce your tax rate from 45.5 mills to 41.5 mills and in the years which I acted as your mayor, this rate was reduced another four mills to 37.5 mills."

"I wonder if the ratepayers of the City of Belleville realize just what that means," he said. "It means just this, that for every one thousand dollars in assessment their taxes were reduced eight dollars. That is worth considering."

Favors Reducing Water Rates.

Mr. Thompson drew attention to the Waterworks Department indicating that it was making between $25,000 and $35,000 profit each year." He maintained that this profit should never have been built up.

"True, I admit our water rates may be low, but nevertheless the department has made a large profit. Where did it go. The taxpayers never got any of this profit." He asserted that despite the large surplus, water rates in Belleville had gone up, and the mayor of the past year had made no efforts to have them lowered.

"I stand on my past record as a member of the city council and as your former mayor, and if elected I will again make every effort to have the tax rate lowered and to reduce your water rates," stated Mr. Thompson in conclusion. "I am in favor of water rates being lowered. There should be no surplus in this department."

GEORGE A. REID.

Hydro Commissioner George Reid referred to the city gas works, declaring that the department was a "bugbear and a liability to the city."

"As far as I can see," he said, "the gas department cannot be made to pay expenses and debenture debts but it must continue until the war is over. That means there is approximately $12,000 a year which must be made up out of taxes. It is the view of the Utility Commissioners that profits should be taken from the Hydro and paid to the city treasurer in the reduction of taxes and also the profit from the Front street store."

Profits from the Front street store were from two to four thousand dollars per year, he stated, while there was a surplus at the Hydro Commission of $46,000. The net profits of the Hydro Commission would amount to an average of approximately $17,000 per year and it was stated by Mr. Reid that the Commission would like to turn this over to the city to help meet the debenture debt of the gas plant.

Many Users Taxpayers.

Against the argument that the profits of the utilities should go back to the users only Mr. Reid pointed out that 68 per cent of the users are taxpayers. He stated that the Commission should use good judgment about turning the profits back to the city and indicated the only thing for the Commission to do had been to send the resolution through to the Ontario Commission to deal with as they saw fit.

Reference was made to the policy of uniform Hydro rates being adopted throughout the province and Mr. Reid quoted rates paid by district centres to show their unfairness. Other municipalities such as Ottawa, Toronto and Brantford paid less for their Hydro. As an example he stated that if Belleville paid the same rate as Ottawa, power used in this city would cost $63,700 less per year.

The fact that Trenton gets more industries than does Belleville was indicated by the speaker to be partly as the result of Hydro in that town costing 67 cents less per horsepower than it does in Belleville. If Belleville had the same rate it would mean $4,690 which is almost one half mill, he said.

He declared as ridiculous the assertion of his opponent that he was seeking to raise the Hydro rates through his sponsoring of a resolution asking for uniform rates across the province.

"My record is before you," he concluded. "I was one of the deputation which interviewed the Ontario government regarding the bay bridge. We got it free and saved taxpayers in Belleville $25,000. I was your mayor when the Filtration Plant was constructed and when your two bridges were built. It is on my record that I solicit your vote on Monday."

ALDERMAN RUSSELL WOTTEN.

Speaking as aspirant to the Public Utility seat up for election, Alderman Russell Wotten declared the resolution sponsored by Mr. Reid asking that surplus utility profits be turned over to the city to reduce taxes was "pure unadulterated political bunk".

"It is absolutely against regulations to have Hydro surplus turned over to the city to reduce taxes," declared Mr. Wotten. "If Mr. Reid wants to have this come about he will have to get elected to the Ontario Hydro Commission and not to the Belleville Utilities."

Hydro principle as determined by its originator, Sir Adam Beck, was "Hydro at cost to the consumer", according to the speaker. Regulations stated definitely that the surplus must go back to the consumer, he said.

Referring to the uniform Hydro rate as recommended by Mr. Reid, the speaker declared that despite quotations of the cost of power in Toronto, Ottawa or Brantford, if the recommendation were to pass, Hydro rates in Belleville would be increased.

Rates Quoted.

In support of his assertion that Hydro rates in Belleville would go up if uniform rates were adopted, Mr. Wotten quoted horsepower rates for centres along the lake front and in districts to the north. The present rate for Belleville was $24.96 per horsepower but according to the speaker if uniform rates were adopted this would be increased to $30 per horsepower.

"Just who is going to play Santa Claus to these other municipalities with higher rates than ours?" asked Mr. Wotten. "If uniform rates are adopted, it will be Belleville."

The statement by the former speaker that Trenton got more industries than Belleville because of its cheaper Hydro rate was attacked by Mr. Wotten. "Take a look at the rates paid in Oshawa, in Peterboro and in Kingston," he said. "They all pay more than does Belleville and they have anywhere from four to six times as many industries."

Mr. Wotten took exception to Mr. Reid's statement that the Hydro surplus in Belleville was $46,000. "True," he said, "there is a cash surplus of $46,000, but there are also assets worth $20,000 which could be turned into cash. I maintain that this is too much surplus. It should be returned to the light users.

"The principle I stand for is that Hydro surplus be returned to the users who helped build it up," he concluded. "And on that principle I stand for election as Hydro Commissioner."

Eleven aldermen of the city spoke following the addresses by the Mayor and the aspirant for the office of Mayor and the Commissioner of Hydro and candidates for office of Commissioner. They were called individually by Chairman Ex-Mayor G. O. Tice, who introduced each alderman as he arose upon the platform and stepped forward to address the assembly.

Ald. Jack Allin was first to be introduced and Mr. Allin stated that, having served on the Board of Education for eight years and on the City Council for four years, he wished to continue serving the city of Belleville in whatever way he was most useful, stressing better housing as one of the major factors of importance in the future of the city. He said that the City was losing any possibility of inducing further industrial expansion due to insufficient housing conditions, that not only one but several industries had refrained from establishing in the city due to this situation. He also stated, that he wanted Belleville to have good, successful business men to run the Council and direct their every effort to furthering the prospects of the city. He stated, that everyone in the city should be considered shareholders in the prosperity of their city, and upon these grounds petitioned the electors to return him to office for 1944.

Ald. H. J. Armstrong declared himself for further reduction of taxes. He pointed out that during his tenure of office every effort had been expended to better street conditions, that he had given fair service for the money, that had been spent because it was the citizens' money, that had been spent. He said, that the pavements of the city were showing deterioration and that assessment had been made to resurface these pavements within the budget. He pointed out, that snow had been successfully cleared from the sidewalks and roads of the city last winter although the budget had been slightly exceeded, and furthered his statement that preparations were completed to contend with any similar condition this winter within the amount proportioned for such work. His application to the voters for return to the Council for 1944 was based on his record of service during 1943.

Ald. Ormonde E. Butler stated that he had served the people of Belleville to the best of their interests in the capacity of alderman during his terms of office. He stated, that he thought the citizens, the voters of the city were evidently secure in their belief that their present civic government was doing a good job by the turn-out. He thanked those who had come out to learn what there was to learn about their present members of council and aspirants for office, that it was their privilege to know all there was to know about such plans as might be expressed and said that it was absolutely necessary to have the right men in charge. His talk was well within the allotted time, in fact, very brief. As chairman of market and city property, "the only department that brings in revenue," he stood upon the record already established.

Ald. Fred G. Chamberlain spoke for only about two minutes of his stipulated time. He stated briefly that, as chairman of Tourist and Publicity his committee had stayed within their appropriation and asked for the support of the voters for return to office for the coming year.

Ald. C. R. Clapp stated that "I think I have done a fair job." He said that his present job was small but has large possibilities. He said that any surplus in civic finances should not be spent in wartime but should be devoted to post-war planning. He said that it would take several years to carry out the post-war schemes but that they were Vote from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Elect: Mayor.
14 Aldermen.
1 Utility Commissioner.
4 Members Board of Education.

Rawdon Service Club Honors Enlisted Men

A concert was held in Springbrook Friday night under the auspices of the War Service Club, Rawdon Township, to present 10 wrist watches to members of the Armed Forces. It has been the policy of the War Service Club to present a watch at one time or another to each man or girl enlisting in either of the three services, and these watches presented Friday were to the more recent volunteers.

The program which was attended by over 200 people consisted of a debate when it was resolved That a man can do a woman's work better than a woman can do a man's. On the affirmative were Percy Ray and George Williams, and on the negative, Mrs. (Rev.) Holden and Mrs. Clayton Thompson. The negative won. Mr. Lorne Johnson was chairman with Mrs. Hiram Mumby as president. Mr. George Thompson gave a number of character stunts. Mr. W. J. Tanner, Reeve of the Township spoke, praising the number of enlistments from Rawdon and the work of the War Service Club.

Removal of Feet From All Fowl Insisted on by Market Inspectors

Inspectors of the Prices Board made their rounds of Belleville market Saturday instructing farmers offering fowl that the regulations called for the feet of fowl, chickens, ducks, geese and turkeys being removed if they wished to charge the maximum price. All farmers had been aware of the regulations but felt that the fowl "looked better with the feet on."

Prices Firmer

With regulations regarding the feet of fowl being removed being enforced, however, prices seemed a bit firmer with farmers asking 40 cents per pound for best grade. Quite a number of ducks were offered at prices ranging from $1.50 up to $3. Live ducks were offered on the outside market at from $2.50 to $3 each.

Egg prices were firm with first grade bringing 55 cents, while pullets sold at 48 and 50 and mediums at 52 cents per dozen.

Potatoes $2 Per Bag

Potatoes held at the ceiling price of 48 cents the peck and $2 bag, while carrots, beets and turnips brought 50 cents the peck. Large cabbages sold at 20 cents, cauliflower up to 25 cents, beans 25 cents the quart and onions 50 cents the half peck.

First grade Spies, McIntosh and Delicious sold at the usual $3 the bushel while combination grade of Macs and Snows sold at $2.50. First grade Talman Sweets brought $2.50 the bushel.

Up to ten-thirty no young pigs were offered on the market, while one load of green elm cordwood sold at $11 the cord.

Canada Enters Year With Large Cattle Population

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP).—Canada will enter 1944 with the largest—and healthiest — cattle population ever reported at the opening of a year, officials forecast today.

Since 1937, when Western Canadian drought conditions led to severe reductions in herds, the cattle population has increased by about 500,000. Beef cattle, prospering on ample feed available from the 1942 crop, are averaging many pounds heavier than in past years. Dairy cattle are in good condition, with the average milk production per cow higher.

On June 1, cattle and calves on farms totalled 9,600,000, compared with 8,080,000 in 1937. The second yearly count comes on Dec. 1, when there is usually a falling off due to autumn marketings. But authorities said it was probable that the number on Dec. 1 would be about 9,500,000.

The Dec. 1 statistics now are being tabulated and will be issued in a few weeks, officials said.

In spite of enlarged marketings of cattle generally this fall, more calves are being retained on farms, statistics showed. Inspected slaughterings of calves in the June to August period this year numbered 171,800, from an estimated total of 2,600,000 calves on farms. In 1940, 204,200 calves were slaughtered in the same period, although there were only 2,007,000 on farms.

The existing price policy favors raising calves to maturity, authorities said. Under the price ceiling policy, the prices of beef are allowed to rise during the late fall and winter months and it is advantageous for farmers with adequate feed supplies to feed their animals for longer periods.

Silent is the voice we loved to hear.
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thoughts to reach,
Sweet to remember her, who once was here,
And who, thought about, is just as dear.

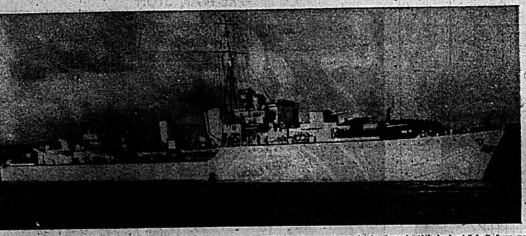
H.M.C.S. "ATHABASKAN"



Damaged by a glider bomb in a battle with a score of Nazi planes last August, H.M.C.S. "Athabaskan," Tribal class destroyer, is back at sea again. Her losses in the engagement were five dead and twelve requiring hospital treatment. The bomb passed completely through "Athabaskan's" hull from port to starboard, through the Petty Officers' Mess, exploding in the water 20 feet clear of the ship. Here is the "Athabaskan," before the action. —(R.C.N. Photo.)

U. S. Customs Returns Coats Given to Girls

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 3 (AP)—Expensive fur coats given to two girls in Dante's magic show by Canada's Mr. X—Harry F. McLean of Merrickville, Ont—have been returned to the performers by the United States customs office which took them and four others for appraisal when they were declared at the U.S.-Canadian border.

F. J. Quigley, deputy collector of the customs service, said the coats were returned yesterday when it was learned the girls, Victoria Lopes and Eugenia Montes were Mexicans. Customs regulations permit non-residents of the United States to bring in clothing for their stay duty free, he explained.

One of the recovered coats was mink, appraised at $1,995, and the other an otter, valued at $712.50.

E. J. Cannon, customs appraiser, placed a wholesale valuation of $8,170 on all six coats, but Dante said they were worth $18,000 at retail. The duty is 50 per cent of the customs valuation.

Dante said he was confident the four other girls in the troupe would regain possession of the coats, but he was unsure when.

The magician said the coats were given the girls in Toronto two weeks ago by McLean, who has gained international fame for gifts presented to persons met in Canadian cities.

2-Month-Old Baby Dies in Montreal

Montreal, Dec. 3 (CP)—Two-month-old John Latreille died in hospital during the night of what authorities said was gastronic trouble and infection brought on by malnutrition. He was removed from a private nursery here 19 days ago.

The death brought to 17 the number of deaths of infants following their removal from private nurseries in the district in the last few months, and to 11 the total since a provincial investigation of nurseries started several weeks ago. Three persons are at present facing charges of criminal negligence in connection with some of the deaths.

Battle of Dieppe Was Great Success Says Air Officer

Canadian Newsmen Told by Australian Air Officer in Charge at Dieppe Lessons Valuable in Other Landings

(Written For the Canadian Press

By ARTHUR R. FORD)

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 3. (CP Cable)—A pleasant surprise for the Canadian newspaper delegation during its visit to the Australian operational area was meeting the Australian air officer who was in charge of the forward air operations in the Canadian-led raid on Dieppe, France, in August, 1942.

He is Air Vice Marshal A. T. Cole, known to Australians and flying men throughout the world as "King Cole". An Australian airman with a great record in the last war, Cole was on the command ship with Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, Canadian Commander of the Dieppe show, and his tactics helped save the Canadian expeditionary force from terrific bombing by the Germans.

In an officers mess hidden in tropical growth in the area in which he now is air officer commanding, Cole gave his views of the Dieppe raid.

10 of 11 Objectives Accomplished.

Despite the heavy casualties, the raid was a great success accomplishing 10 of the 11 set objectives, he said.

"Dieppe made possible the safer landings in the North African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns", he said. "Lessons learned at Dieppe have proved and will continue to prove invaluable.

Cole was enthusiastic in praise of the Canadian troops and airmen. A typical story of heroism he saw with his own eyes involved a number of troops left on the beach without barges.

A destroyer made a desperate effort to go in and pick them up. When the men on the beach saw certain disaster faced the destroyer if it continued they flashed the following message: "Sorry, we have had to surrender".

Cole also told of five officers who held a beach with tommy-guns while their men were taken off. All these five young officers gave their lives for their men.

"These are the traditions that make a great fighting force", he said.

Cole now commands an international air force consisting of Australian, British, American and Netherlands Fliers. He had the highest praise for the Canadian airmen he commanded in Britain.

Bumper Fruit Crop In Niagara Belt Indicated in 1944

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—A bumber fruit crop in the Niagara Fruit Belt is indicated for next year, Alex MacLaren, Director of Farmers Services, Ontario Department of Agriculture today told the special committee of 22 meeting at Queen's Park to arrange details for Ontario School children to work on farms next summer. This year, Mr. MacLaren said the Niagara Fruit Crop had been a disappointment, but present reports indicate next year's crop will be big.

The committee endorsed last year's regulation limiting release of students only for work on farms and in cheddar cheese factories, though an attempt was made to have the tobacco industry included.

"Tobacco is no more necessary than liquor," Fred Avery, Ontario Department of Labor argued.

School Children's Farm Work

Mr. MacLaren declared last year about 25,000 school children worked on farms and cheddar cheese factories, from a total of 105,192 registered secondary schools. There were 22,280 boys, who worked, with an additional 3,000 girls in canning and cheese factories. Of these figures 26 per cent of the boys worked in April, 27 per cent in May, and 5.2 per cent in June, or a total of 58 per cent of the boys worked on farms before examination time. Of the girls, 15 per cent worked in April, 24 per cent in May and 5 per cent in June, or a total of 44 per cent were working before examination time.

Mr. MacLaren said all reports indicated the aid given the farmers by both boys and girls made the difference between operating or going into bankruptcy. Farmers reported they never had better help. Mr. MacLaren questioned whether the 13-week period of last year should be increased.

It was also stated the vegetable crop will be good for next year, though last year the canning industry faced a disastrous situation. Question of providing seed for the vegetable industry is being considered though it was stated if seed has to be sent to European countries it might make the Ontario situation difficult.

The committee is also determining dates for closing schools in Spring. Opening in the fall, as it was pointed out where schools reopen early, mothers and sisters also leave their work in canning factories to return to aid the children.

Large Fires Left Burning in Berlin

London, Dec. 3 (CP Cable)—Undisclosed number of R.C.A.F. bomber group squadrons accompanied the R.A.F. in last night's smash at devastated Berlin, R.C.A.F. headquarters announced today.

One Canadian bomber is missing. The R.A.F. lost 40 planes.

Returning airmen said large fires were left burning, with smoke rising to great height.

"Fires were very well concentrated and there was one huge explosion while we were there," said Flt. Sgt. L. H. Geller of Hamilton, Ont., navigator in an R.A.F. Lancaster. "The explosion made a whiteish glow which lasted several seconds."

FO. R. M. Rumble of King City, Ont., said it was clear over the target with plenty of flares and searchlights. Smoke rose 9,000 feet over the capital, he said, and he could see fire blazing from 150 miles away.

Other Canadians among R.A.F. squadrons included PO. and J. G. Thompson of Brampton, Ont.

Influenza Epidemic Severe at Hamilton

Hamilton, Dec. 3 (CP)—Dr. J. E. Davey, Hamilton M.O.H., today said that influenza epidemic here was of such proportions that he warned Hamiltonians to stay out of crowds and to stay at home at the first sign of illness.

It was learned that the hospitals are crowded and that friends and relatives of patients have been asked not to visit them. Many doctors and nurses are said to be influenza victims.

Authorities are carrying out a check of persons handling food in hotels and restaurants, to be sure none is a flu-carrier.

More Than 1,000 Nazi Prisoners Taken in 3 Days

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press War Correspondent

With the 8th Army in Italy, Dec. 1 — (Delayed) — (AP)—More than 1,000 shivering German prisoners have been gathered in by the 8th Army in three days and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's men pushed on past Rocca San Giovanni today with new words of praise from their commander.

The Germans contested the British advance bitterly at some points and at 3 a. m. counter-attacked in the region west of Mozogrogna. The attack was unsuccessful and was regarded as an effort to prevent the British forces from exploiting their gains too rapidly rather than an attempt to regain lost ground.

At one point where 100 enemy prisoners were taken 50 Germans were found dead.

However, much of the fighting today was in the nature of mopping-up operations as the Germans withdrew to prepare for the next blow.

The number of prisoners is expected to grow as Germans continue to drift into British dugouts to give up the struggle, or find themselves cut off by the advancing Allies.

Among the enemy equipment captured was a field gun found abandoned with its muzzle cap still in place, showing that the crew had had no opportunity to use it.

The German 65th Infantry Division has been badly crippled by the Battle of the Sangro.

Week's Vacation With Pay Approved For 37,000 R.R. Men

Ottawa, Dec. 3 —(CP)— The National Labor Board today approved an application for one week's vacation with pay for some 37,000 railway workers.

The board's ruling was given in a decision on applications by the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees (A. F. of L.) for employees of seven Canadian railways; the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, roundhouse and railway shop workers for 3,000 Canadian Pacific Railway employees; and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and other transport workers (C.C.L.) for some 9,000 employees of Canadian National Railways.

The board said it was reserving any finding on wage-increase applications of the C.B.R.E. and the maintenance-of-way employees until it heard the general wage application now pending from 17 other railway brotherhoods. In granting vacations to the firemen and oilers a previous ruling, given Sept. 15, 1943, refusing vacations pending disposition of an application for wage increases, was withdrawn.

The maintenance-of-way employees concerned, numbering some 25,000, are employees of the C.N.R., C.P.R., Temiskaming and Northern Ontario, Dominion-Atlantic, Esquimalt-Nanaimo, Quebec Central and Northern-Atlantic railways.

Grounds for Decision.

The board dealt at some great length on its reasons for decision in this case and referred to it in its decision on the other applications.

"The fact is that the condition (vacations with pay) is steadily becoming more and more prevalent and there seems no good reason why the class of railway worker concerned in this application should not enjoy the privilege merely because the employer does not approve," the board said.

"Accordingly, effective Jan. 1, 1944, the privilege of one week's vacation with pay in the calendar year will be extended to the hourly-rated or otherwise, already enjoying a week's vacation or more there will be no change."

A LITTLE CONFUSED

Atlanta, Dec. 3 — (AP) — A Negro was arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on charges of failing to sign up for selective service. "Why didn't you register?" asked Assistant U. S. Attorney Raymond W. Martin. "I did," the man replied, "but I don't know whether it was for the draft or for sugar."

Consecon Boy Writes From India

Consecon.—Following is a copy of a letter from LAC Arthur Weir, R.A.F., Indian Command, Overseas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weir, who live on their farm, near Consecon, (Little Kingston). Arthur attended High School in Consecon village.

His brother, Lorne Weir, R.C.A.F. is with the Medical Corp, in Pennfield, Ridge, New Brunswick. They have also one sister, Thelma, formerly a school teacher at Salem, now Mrs. L. Hicks, Dundas, Ont.

September 24th.

Dear Mother and Dad:—

I know you will be anxious to get these letters so will try and write often. There is bound to be long periods without mail getting through. I suppose I will soon have to start sending Christmas cards, if I want them to get there in time. Guess I won't be home for Christmas this year, but it has always been my idea since enlisting that the war would be over in '44. However we'll have to wait and see. I expect to pass a winter and see no snow or ice but endure a heat as great or greater than it ever gets at home in summer.

The Indian currency seems to present no difficulties. Guess I got used to thinking in English currency. The rupee a small note is worth about 30c. The coin currency is the anna worth 2c. Sixteen of them is a rupee.

I spent one day in Bombay and I really have a curious and modern city to describe. The streets are very wide and all paved. There are a few street cars and some new American, Canadian and English manufactured autos.

From the traffic I should judge there is no gas rationing but I don't know about that. Also there are many beautiful tall buildings of five or six stories.

Not only a few of these but the whole city is made up of them. The shops display everything one could wish to buy except chocolates and sweets. I expect because of the heat but the prices are very high. However, as I said the Indians are business men and will often come down half rather than miss a sale. I hope to be able to bring home some of the fine silks and etc., it might be too risky sending some for Christmas.

I wish you could see the robes some of the Indians wear. Some are white with a tinge of silver, others blue and various colours. They cover the body from the head to the ankles.

In fact Bombay is a mixture of Oriental splendor and Western achievements. Chinese restaurants seem to abound there also. Unfortunately from my way of looking at it, the Indians usually act as waiters, chauffeurs, etc. while some other nationality is at the business end. They have innumerable one-horse cabs, but also some taxis. The horses are usually very poor and worn out looking. I don't know whether that is lack of feed or hard usage. Cows are held sacred here.

I want to get a better look at this country by the way and get a full idea of the whole political set-up.

Well hope you are well and getting along O.K. I only wish letters didn't take so long to come.

Art Weir.

Capital Closeups

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 4 —(CP)— The expectation on Parliament Hill is that the session of parliament opening at the end of next month will be the most active in several years.

Many observers believe it will be the last before a federal election. If that is correct the government is likely to bring forth considerable important legislation, getting its fences in order, politically speaking, for the hustings.

The Opposition parties also are expected to be unusually active in the House. Both Progressive Conservatives and C.C.F. have been keeping themselves before the public during the recess and probably will continue to do so within the House of Commons after parliament reconvenes.

The Throne Speech debate, as in recent years, is expected to be very lengthy, as it provides an opportunity for all parties to put their views on the official record, and, incidentally, into the newspapers.

Number Please: Along with budgetary and other financial problems, one of Finance Minister Ilsley's headaches is regulating the number of telephones in the various departments. It's a job that's plagued finance ministers for years.

Just for the record, this is the procedure that has to be followed when a civil servant thinks he's entitled to a telephone:—

1. He gets the approval of the head of his branch.

2. The branch head gets the approval of his deputy minister.

3. The deputy minister makes out a set of forms asking for the phone and sends it to the finance minister.

4. The finance minister turns it over to a special telephone official who provides a report, which is sent back to the deputy minister of the department concerned.

5. If the deputy still thinks a phone is needed he gets the approval of his own minister.

6. The document then goes back to the finance minister who — if he approves — takes it before treasury board.

7. If treasury board's half-dozen cabinet ministers think the phone is needed they pass a formal treasury board order.

8. The phone is installed.

World-Wide Importance

Never were meetings of great leaders of nations of such titanic importance to the world as the conferences associated with the names of Churchill, Roosevelt, Chiang Kai-Shek and Stalin for these men stand like the pillars of Hercules supporting the structure of the world and of the world that is to follow the coming of peace and security. Representing the power of national spirit, sane world outlook and material strength which are wearing down the enemies of humanity, they hold the promise of peace and victory and of world security. So all the Allied peoples, the neutrals and the overrun nations look to the South African conference and the recent meeting of the British, American and Russian leaders for results which will shape history for the coming generations.

The Germans and Japanese have been jittery about it and as one writer described it, "the Axis propagandists are galloping in all directions" to try and offset through their organizations the momentous events stemming out of the Cairo meetings. The Germans were extremely worked up about it — a clear revelation that the decisions of that meeting were of importance to the whole world as they concern the future of the war against Japan and the era that will set in with victory. Of the meeting of Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt, just held in Iran, the interest is likewise world-wide, for not even the enemy can ignore such decisions as will come down from the meeting of these three men.

The parleys have taken place at a time when the Axis is weakening and is being harassed on land and sea and in the air, when their satellites are wobbling, and when there are rumors of such united action as will give the assurance of the complete destruction of the tyranny of the enemy in the coming days.

Germany and Japan are fighting a losing fight. A united world stands against them, and no cleavage is to be allowed to impair the Allied blows nor will anything be permitted that will dull the edge of the purpose of the Allies to beat Germany and Japan to their knees and unconditional surrender. The Allies are going about the task of cutting out the cancer of Nazism and Nipponese militarism and oppression.

Never was there such a demarcation in history as between the sides at war. On one side stand the powers that battle for freedom and justice and that are inspired by love of country and the sense of justice among men, as well as the neutral and overrun nations, while on the other are the gangster, outlaw nations whose governments are the very expression of evil and wrong, and whose leaders are without honor. With Axis principles the enemy leaders have inevitably associated themselves with crime for their whole purpose has been unlawful aggression. On the other hand the justice of the Allied cause is the great inspiration of the world. Therefore these four great figures can work in harmony for they are builders. The enemy have of their own free will and desire for power and greed sold themselves to the spirit of evil. And here as in every other phase of life, "the wages of sin is death."

But the United World is held together through the sincerity of purpose of the Allies whose representatives in these great days have been meeting in the Middle East.

In Cradle of Civilization

The war has laid heavy burdens on the United Nations leaders Churchill, Stalin, Roosevelt and Chiang Kai-Shek, to mention the four great powers' outstanding men. It has called them to tremendous tasks and giant labors, it has taken them to many parts of the earth, and it aims to bring through their inspired leadership the world to peace and elimination of the evil influences in the community of nations.

It has taken them latterly into a part of the earth which was the cradle of civilization, the union between the eastern and the western world and between ancient and modern cultures. Three of these men met in North Africa, the scene of ancient Egyptian and Phoenician cultures in the land of the Pharaohs of old and of the great pyramids and it is announced that the British and American leaders have conferred in Iran, (Persia), the land of Darius and Xerxes whose civilization was young as compared with Egypt's in the earth's promitive days. In this same part of the world grew the great Hebrew culture. From the East came the leader of China whose civilization probes deep into time.

Mr. Churchill, the student of history and maker of history, Mr. Roosevelt, the representative of the youngest great power, Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, from the oldest existing empire, and Mr. Stalin, from that Russia which has been rebuilt, met in a historic part of the world. It was an inspiring setting for men and leaders to meet in, with the voices from the past, the appeal and prayer of the present and the hopes for the future all blending into a world expression that these men understand and others through them will understand. They meet to restore the world to peace, to cleanse the world, and to bring in a new flowering of liberty and civilization. These great figures aim first of all to win the war and in winning it to create a world society of nations that will not have to fear such threats to security as the present time has had to face for they look to a community of nations that will move to the heart beat of peace.

The scenes were historic ground and the decisions will reverberate to the farthest ends of the earth.

This time is one of the great moments of history for never did men of so representative capacity and authority meet in all previous history.

Representing Britain, the cosmopolitan empire of nations in which is harmony, the United States, the powerful and dynamic younger nation with its roots deep in British and western civilization, Russia with her union of eastern and western cultures and her complex empire and union of races, and China, enduring down the ages and smiling in spite of Japanese greed and rapacity and with her eyes set on the goal of the fullest expression of democracy, these leaders represent United Nations, neutral nations and peoples under the Axis yoke, waiting to be free. A vast compass of life comes within their study and inspires the four.

Stalin Learning English

(Buffalo Courier-Express)

It's very nice that Joseph Stalin is learning English, the language of his principal allies. Inasmuch as Russians are natural linguists, it's much easier for Stalin to learn English than it would be for President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill to learn Russian—and it takes up the time of only one man.

English will be very useful to Stalin for consulting with the Allies during the progress of the war and in conferring with them around the victory table. His knowledge of their language will also be appreciated by representatives of the United States and Britain.

It is significant that Stalin isn't bothering to learn German. His soldiers are already making themselves perfectly clear in the only language the Nazis really understand — the language of bombs, bullets and bayonets.

Berlin Revives the Slave Market

(Overseas News Agency)

Berlin looks like an old-time slave market, a young Pole who escapes from there told the Polish Telegraphic News Agency in Stockholm.

German foreman, he said, examine Polish labor conscripts, feel their muscles and select the strongest, just as in the slave market days of old.

Polish conscripts, the youth said, are treated worse than other foreigners in Germany and often work without pay. The pittance usually given them is frequently withheld on the pretext that they must make good damage caused by their "negligence."

All men, if they work not as in the great taskmaster's eye, will work wrong, work unhappily for themselves and you.—Carlyle.

SAME OLD BOTHER

And now, Thanksgiving come and gone,
For Christmas we must start to plan.
That same old bother's coming on
Of what to get to please a man.

That same old bother; shall it be
Pajamas, purple robe or ties,
Or shaving stuff or hosiery?
And if it's gloves, who knows the size?

For women there are many things
Displayed on counters in the town,
From ermine wraps and diamond rings
To pads for jotting numbers down.

But what to get for Joe or Jack
Or William, Frederick, Ed or Dan!
Oh, here's the same old bother back!
What Christmas gift will please a man?

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 4th., 1923.

In the local municipal elections yesterday W. C. Mikel, K.C., was elected mayor by a majority of 1318 votes over Geo. A. Bennett, the mayor of this year. Following are the aldermen elected and the votes they received: H. W. Greenleaf 1458; W. H. Patterson 1381; R. J. E. Graham 1331; A. E. LaRoche 1186; R. P. White 1176; D. V. Ketcheson 1153; A. Robinson 1152; W. R. McCreary 1128; S. H. Treverton 1110; A. H. Ketcheson 1075; G. E. Foster 1045. R. Gardiner 996. Of this year's council eight aldermen sought re-election and seven were returned, namely Messrs. Greenleaf, Patterson, Robinson, Treverton, Foster and Gardiner. M. J. Lynch was defeated. Ald. Elect White has had previous experience in the council; the others are entirely new to the position.

Mr. G. D. Rawe of Madoc was in town today.

Aussies Pressing Campaign to Drive Japs Out of Huon

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Dec. 4 — (AP) — Wareo, strategic juncture of jungle trails forming the line of Japanese retreat, is tottering before Australian forces pressing a campaign to drive the enemy from the Huon Peninsula of Northeastern New Guinea.

Aussie elements advancing from the south have reached a point within half a mile of the native village and old mission station after investing the outlying settlement of Kuanko.

Simultaneously, a second Australian force made fresh progress against Wareo, a mountain redoubt resembling captured Sattelberg, by pushing along a river bank from captured Bonga, five miles east on the coast. Wareo is more than 10 miles northwest of Finschafen.

Stiff fighting was reported by Allied headquarters today. The Australians brought up artillery to blast defensive positions. Supporting the ground operations, a score of medium bombers pounded the enemy supply area near Kamlagidu Point north of Bonga on Thursday.

That same day more than 50 bombers, covered by fighters, heavily bombed and strafed Borgen Bay on nearby New Britain Island.

In the northern Solomons, more than 100 divebombers and torpedo bombers struck at two airdromes southeast of the United States beach at Empress Augusta Bay.

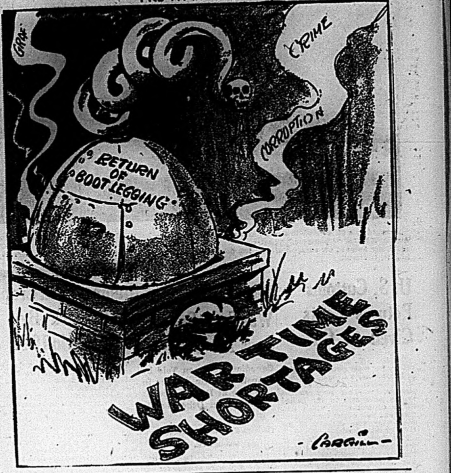
"PRE-WAR STUFF"



Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Now and again a plague of grasshoppers devastated the crops of the West. An affliction of this type came along early in the 19th century, blighting not only the splendid crops but also the hopes of members of Lord Selkirk's Red River Settlement. The next season, larvae polluted the fields, extinguished even the fires. Undaunted, Lord Selkirk spent thousands of dollars to have seed-wheat brought from far regions, and once again crops were fruitful.

The history of the Red River Settlement brings a lesson in courage under adversity. In 1811 Lord Selkirk—who owned a controlling interest in the Hudson's Bay Company—bought more than 110,000 square miles of land in the basin of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers. He organized this colony with Highlanders from Scotland, and with supplies of implements, grain and stock. Always with him was the dream of a settlement more prosperous and progressive than any in British America. But life was a constant struggle for his energetic Scotsmen. They had to fight the wilderness — and, what was still worse, endure many crop failures. In addition, they had to contest the claims of their rivals of the North-West Company. Their leader was a great "promoter." He imported flocks of sheep, attempted flax-growing and the export of tallow. For all his devotion to his colony, these ventures were unsuccessful. Many years after his death his territory was bought back from his heirs by the Hudson's Bay Company.

Many settlers reckoned the Indians among their best friends. The honesty and integrity of the stately redskin chief were proverbial in the West. The tale is related of an Indian who arrived at a furtrading post of the North-West in the spring of the year, the season when beaver leave their winter homes and can easily be shot. The chief badly needed ammunition for the hunting and had fine fur pelts with which to barter. But the entire trading post was locked up! What was to be done? After deliberating, the chief entered the store room through the parchment window, took the powder, shot, tobacco and food he wanted—no more—and carefully left on each cask and case the right number of skins to pay for these "purchases."

Danes Executed To Stop Sabotage

Stockholm, Dec. 4 — (AP)—Five Danes, ranging in age of 18 to 27, have been executed by German occupation authorities at Aarhus in an attempt to check a mounting wave of sabotage in Denmark, advices reaching Stockholm today said.

News of the executions coincided with reports a machine shop in Copenhagen had been wrecked and a nearby shoe factory damaged by a heavy explosion last night. The blast was described as one of the most serious acts of sabotage yet committed in Denmark.

More than 300 acts of sabotage were committed last month, with 65 per cent directed against factories producing materials for the Germans, the Danish news service said.

JUDGE LOANS BUCK

Omaha, Dec. 4 (AP)—Judge Geo. Holmes fined Gene Long $2 on a charge of running through a stop sign. Long said he had only a dollar with him. So the judge loaned him the other buck.

In Manhattan

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 4. (CP)—Katharine Cornell came back to Broadway this week with Raymond Massey playing opposite her in a Dodie Smith play which got lukewarm reception from the critics.

The consensus was that Miss Cornell gave an excellent performance and her Canadian-born leading man a fair one in a vehicle that was not worthy of their talents. The play, entitled "Lovers and Friends", is one of those in-and-out-love affairs.

The dialogue has its brisk and breezy moments, especially when Carol Goodner is on the stage, but when Miss Cornell and Massey get to discussing their emotional complications it becomes stuffy and unsatisfactory.

The staging and directing by Guthrie McClintic, Miss Cornell's husband, is done well and carefully.

Most of the action takes place in a London drawing room but this is not a drawing room comedy. Perhaps it would have been better if it was.

"Star and Garter" one of the successful musicals which have enlivened Broadway this season, ends its long run this week. But other musical hits, like "Oklahoma!" "Early To Bed", "Rosalinda" and "The Merry Widow", are still going strong.

SPIRITED ARTILLERY DUEL

London, Dec. 4 — (CP) — British and German long-range guns on opposite sides of Dover Strait engaged in a spirited 45-minute duel beginning at 3 a. m. today. Shells fell in the Dover area, but first reports said there were no casualties.

The exchange was begun by British batteries, which opened up a bombardment, apparently directed against enemy ships on the other side of the Strait.

ATTEMPTED "ROUNDUP" FAILS

Challis, Idaho, Dec. 4 (AP)—The Idaho Fish and Game Department said an attempted antelope "round-up" with an airplane failed this week when the animals escaped from a corral-like enclosure before cowboy ground crews could block off the opening. On an earlier attempt the antelope broke down the corral. Game officials want to transplant some of the herd to another area.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

Chester A. Arthur, who was President of the United States from 1881 to 1885, had 80 pairs of pants.

Although James Madison weighed only about a hundred pounds and went home from college in such frail health that he expected to die soon, he lived to be 85 and surpassed all other presidents in the age he attained except John Adams, who died at 91.

Benjamin Franklin was opposed to slavery as an institution but owned a few Negro slaves himself.

Under date of February 4, 1710, William Byrd of Westover wrote in his secret diary in shorthand:

"The sheriff of Isle of Wight was here about the quitrents which I ordered him to seel by inch of candle."

Candle auction or sale "by inch of candle" was the phrase used in England and the English colonies to designate a public auction at which persons were permitted to bid until a small piece of candle burned out. In some cases a pin was thrust through an ordinary candle about an inch from the top and the bidding went on until the candle burnt down to the pin and caused it to drop into the candlestick, whereupon the last bidder was declared the buyer.

"By inch of candle" was also applied to a form of excommunication in which the offender was allowed time to repent only so long as a candle continued to burn.

The word "anthracite" is derived directly from Greek "anthrax," meaning coal. It is a noun and is applied to hard coal; that is, coal consisting of nearly pure carbon. Accordingly, we should correctly say "anthracite," not "anthracite coal;" the latter is tautological and equivalent to "coal-like coal."

"Bituminous," on the other hand, is an adjective and should properly be followed by the word "coal." Bituminous coal is soft coal; that is, coal that yields considerable volatile bituminous matter when heated.

There is no scientific evidence to support the popular theory that moonlight, being reflected light, is "polarized" and therefore particularly potent in affecting the growth of plants.

The phrase, "a poor thing but my own," occurs nowhere in Shakespeare in that exact form. That is merely a popular version of Touchstone's observation in "As You Like It:" "A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favored thing, sir, but mine own."

Mrs. George Lazier and Mrs. Lorne Lazier were hostesses to the W.M.S. ladies for their December meeting at their home near Shannonville on Thursday. An interesting feature of the afternoon's program was the presentation of a Life Membership to Mrs. Frank Doxtator, who has been a capable leader as president for the past four years. Mrs. W. D. Robertson read the address to Mrs. Doxtator and Mrs. (Rev.) Lougheed read one to Mrs. Robertson, who was presented with a beautiful toilet set and mirror reflector, having resigned office after nearly 24 years faithful and efficient work as recording secretary. Both ladies expressed suitable thanks for the gifts. A social time was enjoyed, when refreshments were served.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Bossy Female is Still With Us

In the Aegean, where plenty of fighting is going on at the moment—in the olden days some of the tribes were ruled by the women. We have to take the word of historians for that. These ladies were known as matriarchs, and they stood no nonsense from the men.

It's a mistake to think that the matriarch died out with the prehistoric —civilization of the Aegean. We have them today in every city block, in every hamlet and town, not to mention the great open spaces. The dictionary defines them as: "A woman who rules her family; a mother who is head and ruler of her family and descendants."

A letter came to this column the other day telling of one of these masterful ladies who had never forgiven two of her sons because their marriages displeased her. I hate to refer to these over-filial boys as "simps", but they come to their mother's house with their unrecognized wives, leaving money and little gifts, which she never acknowledges while they are there.

During these visits, the matriarch never speaks to her daughters-in-law, but you can imagine how she snatches up and examines the gifts and money when the front door is closed.

The daughter has never been allowed to marry. When a young man had the hardihood to call, the temperature of the parlor dropped to zero. Mother sat there and glared. The suitor never had the courage to come back, but if he did, he was told not to repeat his call.

Father can't go out and indulge in a game of pinochle with his cronies. Father is told to remain home of evenings, because he's old, his sight is poor and he might be run over crossing the streets. Father likes to read in the kitchen where, of evenings, he can be by himself. Mother turns off the light, tells him to go to the living-room but she interrupts him every little while, and father goes to bed.

She takes daughter's pay envelope, allowing her just enough for carefare and a cup of coffee which the girl drinks with the sandwiches she brings from home Meanwhile mother goes storming through the house, bossing, laying down the law, proclaiming she's not appreciated, that she's given her life to her family and they are a nest of serpents and ingrates.

The daughter, on the verge of suicide, writes me these things. And why should any self-supporting girl with a decent job put up with such conditions? Why doesn't she take up her residence elsewhere, and have a little life of her own? And why doesn't father take up his hat in the evening, go off and join his friends in a game of pinochle and let mother rave minus an audience?

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bridesmaids Are Inappropriate At Informal War Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to have an informal church wedding, and is to wear a street-length dress. Her groom, a sergeant, and his best man, also a sergeant, will of course wear their uniforms. Don't you think it would be in best taste for her to have only one attendant, her sister? She is considering inviting two of her close friends to be bridesmaids, but she and I will abide by your advice.

Mother

Yes, indeed I do think it would be in best taste for her to have only one attendant, her sister. To have a maid of honor and also bridesmaids is inappropriate at an informal wedding.

Correct Use of "Junior"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If my baby-to-come is a boy, we are going to name him after my husband. Sometimes I have seen a boy's name with Jr. after it, and sometimes with junior. May one use either form?

Jean

Yes. If Junior is abbreviated, it is written Jr., that is, with a capital. If it is not abbreviated, it is written with a small letter, junior.

Christmas Cards to Mourners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am making up my Christmas card lists. Is it proper to send Christmas cards to people in mourning?

B. C.

Yes, it is both proper and kind. But we should choose these cards with special care and tender understanding. We might appropriately send cards of religious inspiration. We should not send gay cards, never a card with the word "merry" on it.

Even more thoughtful, especially if the loss is a recent one, is the little note of friendliness and understanding to those of our friends in mourning. Our warm-hearted words can bring deep comfort.

Another Christmas Card Query

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper to place your name and address on the back of Christmas card envelopes?

Marie

Yes, this is a practical thing to do, for it will not only provide a return address but will also provide friends with an address they may not have. In these days of frequent change of address many people reconstruct their address-books from their Christmas cards.

TIP ON BEHAVIOUR

Grumbling about shortages? Sulking about rationing? Going into a tantrum when you can't have something you want?

So you were the child who sulked or went into a nasty tantrum when you couldn't get what you wanted? You never grew up, eh?

Well, you'll never have a better chance than now, today, to change the pattern of your behaviour. Your family and your friends will be comforted to see that at last you're "growing up," that you too have decided to be a soldier in the gallant the moral of this is MORALE.

The Marry-Go-Round

Love Takes a Holiday

In a girl's bright lexicon, there is no such thing as a "bachelor". All men are HUSBANDS — potential, current, deleted or departed.

If there were "showers" for the bridegroom, half his cynical bachelor friends would probably present him with pocket-flasks, (to hold a bracer) and the other half would bring bottles of aspirin, (to cure a headache).

Plain men are often the most interesting and attractive. When Nature gives a man a lot of pulchritude, she hates to spoil it all by giving him an over-supply of brains and backbone.

A girl forms her opinion of herself from what she sees in her mirror; a man forms his opinion of himself, from what he sees in women's eyes.

A girl does not go to the altar fearfully and tremblingly, these days. She figures that, if she can't get any happiness out of matrimony, at least she can get a little happiness out of alimony.

Brunettes are popular, nowadays; and redheads are the great vogue in Hollywood; but no matter which a man may marry, a blonde will always be a banana peel on his path.

The zero hour in a perennial bachelor's life, is that one in which he discovers that the younger debutantes have ceased to think of him as Prince Charming and have begun to regard him as Santa Claus.

There is a psychological moment in every love-affair, at which it balances briefly, and then either skids into marriage, turns into an entanglement, goes on the rocks or evaporates.

Two things that can never be resuscitated are a dead political issue and last summers' dead romance.

Fashion Flashes

Something new is the lined coat that can serve as a raincoat or as an all-purpose coat during the cold weather. It is of waterproofed twill in lustrous black, lined with white alpaca pile fabric.

A welcome addition to the fur field is bleached racoon, combining the hardiness of racoon with the fluffy white and blonde coloring associated with lynx. Grand for jackets and fingertip coats that are good for general or dress wear.

A different look from the general run of after-dark things was given by a dress of dark brown moire worn with a turquoise blue feather hat and matching blue suede gloves.

Figure flattery is inherent in the softly fitted reefer coat with a well defined waistline section. A smart reefer is in red woolen, with high, wide notched revers. Collar, revers and front closing are banded with black Persian lamb.

Table Top trimming is the thing for a short or long skirted dinner dress. A delightful afternoon into evening dress is a short-skirted black crepe with deep square, slanting neckline the base of which is threaded with cyclamen velvet ribbon pulled through rhinestone rings and finished with a big bow at one side.

British Girls Anxious To Get Near to Action

Many Wives of Canadian Fighting Men Join the R.C.A.F. Women's Division Overseas

By DENISE DALTROFF
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Dec. 4 (CP)—The number of members of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division) in Britain has increased tremendously since the initial contingent came some 18 months ago and the number is increasing constantly now that girls are able to enlist in England for this service.

The majority who join the service here are English girls who have married Canadian airmen, but there are also Canadian girls who were already overseas before the war.

Many of the English girls who enlist do so because their husbands have been killed or are reported missing and they want to get as close to fighting as they can. They join a Canadian service because he was a Canadian.

They are such girls as AW Dorothy Roe and AW2 Mary Smithers whose husbands were reported missing on flying operations. The new WD's are given three weeks basic training and then, according to their past experience, they train as cooks, or for clerical duties so work in the equipment section or as teleprinter operators or dental assistants.

Unlike the CWACs who live in barracks, WD's find their own places to room. Most of them share flats with two or three other girls. After the day's work the WD's go to their flats, cook dinner and do their washing, ironing or darning.

Some of them attend cooking classes in their spare time or a conversational French course. During the summer they played softball which has now given place to badminton, and later on the girls hope to skate.

Visit Hospitals.

WD's regularly send a small party each Sunday to a hospital to cheer up injured Canadian airmen.

"The boys seem really to appreciate it and we benefit from the visit just as much as the boys," said LAW M. Mackinner, Moosomin, Sask. "We get cheered up just to see them so cheerful despite all they have to bear."

Cupid has had a busy time since the girls came to Britain.

There were the marriages of Flt. Officer Nancy Smith, Calgary, to Major D. R. B. McArthur, Toronto; Sgt. Mary Ward, Shawinigan Falls, Que., to Lieut. E. A. Reneman, Dutch naval officer; Cpl. Lois Leavens of Toronto to LAC. D. S. (Red) Wimble of Vancouver; LAW Mary Isove to Pte. Roy Wolfe both of Toronto, LAW Faye Brownless of Gravenhurst, Ont., to Flt.-Sgt. Max Webster of Windsor, Ont.

With the growth of the WD's in Britain more officers are required and some of the girls from the first group of WD's to arrive have been chosen to train with W.A.A.F. officer cadets.

They are: Sgt. Helen Cottrell, Hamilton, Ont.; Cpl. Peggy Douglas, Winnipeg; Cpl. Hazel Kendall, Toronto; Cpl. Margaret Ley, Arden; Cpl. Margery McLarent, Montreal; Sgt. C. A. Stackhouse, Lachine, Que.; Cpl. L. G. Simms, Toronto and AW C. M. Smilk who enlisted in Montreal but whose parents live in Stornaway, Scotland.

Spinsters' Dance For War Victims' Fund Success

The Cadet Rangers of Belleville sponsored their annual Spinsters' Dance on Friday night, in the City Armouries. Approximately 125 couples were in attendance and fully enjoyed the fine entertainment, which the evening afforded. The girls, gowned in their long dresses in gay and multi hues were seen intermingling and dancing with boys in the navy, army, air force and civilian dress to the "soft and swing" strains of the 6R.D. orchestra.

Books of theatre tickets were awarded to the winners of the Spot dances and the lucky check number.

Miss Ethel Smith, accompanied by Mrs. John Hibbard at the piano, again delighted her listeners with a number of vocal melodies.

Patrons of the function were Mrs. B. C. Donnan, Mrs. M. Haig, and Mrs. J. O. Smith.

Warm praise and commendation is extended to Lieut.-Col. Donnan for his generous donation of the Armouries for the occasion; to the members of the C.W.S.F., for their unstinted time and effort in working in the canteen, checking and selling tickets; to Templer's Flower Shop for its donation of ferns and flowers for the stage, and to all those who contributed in any small way towards the success of the dance.

Proceeds of the affair are to go in aid of the British War Victims' Fund.

HOLLOWAY STREET W.M.S. MEETING

The Christmas meeting of the W.M.S. was held Thursday afternoon in the church parlours. Mrs. A. Campbell presided. Mrs. Cordes, convener of the Nominating Committee presented the slate of officers for 1944, which are as follows:

President, Mrs. L. Reid
1st Vice President, Mrs. A. Campbell.
2nd Vice President, Mrs. M. B. Weese.
Recording Secretary, Mrs. Coulter
Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. F. Scott.
Treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Moynes.
Christian Stewardship, Mrs. W. Johns.
Community Friendship, Mrs. Denton.
Temperance Secretary, Mrs. W. Stoneburg.
Missionary Monthly Secretary,—Mrs. Grills.
Supply Sec.—Mrs. E. Hubbs.
Press Secretary, Mrs. J. A. Dilts.

Baby Band, Mrs L. Lloyd.
Pianist, Mrs. Downey with Mrs. Hubbs assistant.
C.G.I.T. Secretary, Mrs. B. McMurray
Finance Committee, Mrs. Johns, Mrs. Hagerman, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Cordes.

A vote of appreciation to Mrs. Hagerman the retiring president, was enthusiastically adopted.

On account of illness, Mrs. Hagerman was unable to be present.

Mrs. Cordes gave a very fine devotional service, on "The Christmas Story", as told in the Gospels.

A short Memorial service for Mr. Denton, one of the elders of the church, was conducted by Mrs. Dilts, and included the reading of "Sunset and Evening Star" requested by Mrs. Denton.

Marjorie Hitchon sang a solo.

A reading by Mrs. Mott, "The Master is Coming Today", and a Christmas story, the "Hard Road to Christmas" by Mrs. Weese, brought a very fine program to a close.

Corner Library

(By O.D.)

Adamic, L.—My Native Land.

The book begins with sketches of the history of Yugoslavia. With these sketches as a background the author discusses the present confusing political situation and the probable future of the Balkans.

Therek, Max.—A Surgeon's World.

The autobiography of a successful doctor. The author was brought from Hungary by poor parents to live in the Chicago slums and he worked himself through school and medical college and practiced among his foreign born neighbours.

Hathaway, Katherine—Little Locksmith.

"Autobiographic, the story is one of the glimpses of life and thoughts of an invalid from childhood to maturity climaxing in the purchase of an old house in Maine".

Masters, David—Up Periscope.

This book contains stories of actual British submarine encounters in the present war. These stories show the courage and fine spirit of the seamen who operate the submarines of the Royal Navy.

Herron, Francis—Letters From the Argentine.

These letters are written by a small town Iowa editor with a farm background. He spent eight months in the Argentine and made a serious attempt to know the people and their agricultural problems.

Political issues dealt with by the big three, Washington speculates, included both the larger matters of international organization to secure peace after the war and the more limited questions involved in the settlement of eastern European problems.

Specific Problems

There are several of these specific problems which may have come up, including: (1) A formula for establishing cordial relations between Russia and Poland, (2) A decision as to whether "unconditional surrender" is applied by Russia and Britain to Finland (the United States is not at war with Finland); (3) The question of whether Russia wants additional territory along her western frontier such as Bessarabia, (4) Whether Russia objects now, as once she did, to a federation of small states in eastern Europe, (5) And whether access can be furnished Russia to year-round routes for her sea borne commerce in a post-war world.

It is doubtful that Russia's attitude toward her future relations with Japan came up, at least officially, even though, for Britain and the United States, Russian participation might prove the key to a relatively quick victory in the Pacific.

33 CANDIDATES WHO SEEK ELECTION MONDAY

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER PRESENTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF ITS READERS THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION ON THE CANDIDATES FOR THE VARIOUS ELECTIVE OFFICES:

For Mayor

HARRY W. ROLLINS

Popular in all walks of life, municipal, business and social, Mayor Harry W. Rollins is offering himself for re-election to that office on a platform of "fair play" and on the strength of his ten years in municipal council, including his one year as mayor.

Mr. Rollins is a "son of the soil," having been born at Ivanhoe and attending public school in that district, later going to high school at Madoc, and Ontario Business College at Belleville. Associated with the Houston Lumber Company of Tweed, Mr. Rollins came to Belleville with that firm in 1927 and is now sales manager for the firm. He is a member of Bridge Street United Church and of the Masonic Order.

Entering municipal life in Belleville as a member of the Board of Education, Mr. Rollins served three years in that capacity prior to his election to council ten years ago. During his council term he served five years as chairman of Light and two years as Public Works chairman, together with one year as chairman of Regional Planning.

In his one year as mayor, Mr. Rollins advocated a policy of economical civic administration and for the future urges an active rehabilitation program for the re-establishment of members of the armed services back into civilian life.

GLENCOE E. THOMPSON

A life-long resident of the city of Belleville, Ex-mayor Glencoe E. Thompson is offering himself for election to the chief magistrate's office purely upon his municipal record in this city and on a platform of further reduced taxation.

Born in Belleville, Mr. Thompson attended public and high school here and first entered business as a clothier with the late C. H. Vermilyea at the old Oak Hall on Front Street in 1914. He remained there for a period of 14 years when he entered the baking business as proprietor of the Purity Bakery. After an extended career in the baking business he sold his interests in 1943.

Mr. Thompson has had seven years' experience in city council, four years as alderman and three years in the mayor's chair. During his aldermanic term he acted as chairman of Industries, chairman of Light and chairman of Public Works.

Offering himself for the position as mayor four years ago and the following year was re-elected for a two-year term. During his term of office as mayor a substantial reduction in the tax rate in Belleville was made. His term as mayor was noted for his efforts to have profits of the Public Utilities turned over to the city and for his opposition to the water reservoir now being built at the Belleville Water Purification Plant.

A member of the Reformed Episcopal Church, Mr. Thompson is also a member of the Masonic Order and is a member of the local Kiwanis Club.

For Hydro Commission

GEORGE A. REID

Experience in three departments of municipal life, as mayor, alderman and as Public Utilities Commissioner is offered by George A. Reid as a candidate for re-election as Hydro Commissioner. Mr. Reid served for two years as councillor and for the same period as mayor of the city of Belleville, while he has been a member of the Public Utility Commission for a period of ten years. He was a member of the first Utility Commission formed in the city.

Born in Centreville, Ontario, Mr. Reid was educated there and at Newburgh High School. He came to Belleville 30 years ago to enter the insurance business and is now special representative of the Great West Life Assurance Company. He has been with the same company for the past 29 years.

Long interested in Hydro, Mr. Reid is a firm believer of uniform Hydro rates throughout the Province of Ontario and during the past summer was instrumental in a resolution being passed at Kingston during a Hydro convention asking the Provincial Hydro Commission to consider uniform Hydro rates. During his term as mayor the two concrete bridges across the Moira were built by the city.

A member and Elder at St. Andrew's United Church, Mr. Reid is also a member of the Masonic Order and of the Orange Lodge.

F. RUSSELL WOTTEN

Seventeen years' experience as a city councillor and as member of the Belleville Board of Education is the public service background offered by Alderman F. Russell Wotten, proprietor of Wottens' Ltd., in offering himself for election as commissioner of the local Public Utilities.

Born at Markham, Ontario, 49 years ago, Mr. Wotten was educated at Inniskillen, and in Peterborough, coming to Belleville 30 years ago. For several years he was employed at the former Ritchie Company store but in 1920 he began business for himself.

Municipal life called him in 1926, when he was elected to the city council where he served until 1931, when he was appointed High School Trusteee. He acted as School Board member until 1939 when he became chairman and the next year again became a council member. He has served as chairman of Waterworks and this year is chairman of Light.

Past President of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. board, Mr. Wotten is a member of the local Kiwanis Club and belongs to the Masonic Order. He is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

For School Trustees

CARL D. CROSBY

At present a member of the Board of Education, Carl D. Crosby is seeking re-election to that Board on Monday. Mr. Crosby has lived in Belleville for some years, coming from Prince Edward County, where he was born and received his early education. He entered the automobile business on coming to the city and for some years was employed by J. B. Boyce, later becoming shop foreman. He then entered the insurance business in his own name and carried on this business until after the outbreak of the war, when he joined the War Time Prices and Trade Board and at the present time is Rental Administrator for this district. A member of the Masonic Order, he is a Past Master of that order. He is a member of the United Church.

H. B. FETTERLY

Prominent in educational matters in the province for many years, H. B. Fetterly, former member and chairman of the Board of Education, is seeking re-election to that Board. Mr. Fetterly was born in Cornwall and was educated in the rural public schools and Cornwall High School, later entering Queen's University graduating as an M.A. He taught school at Avonmore and Winchester and for fourteen years taught in the Cornwall Collegiate, for some years acting as principal. He was Inspector of Public Schools for Dundas County and came to Belleville in 1930 as Superintendent for the Ontario School for the Deaf, relinquishing that post in 1934 and since that time has lived retired in this city. He served on the Belleville Board of Education for seven years, one being served as chairman. Mr. Fetterly is vice president of the Association of Public School Trustees and Ratepayers in Ontario and Associate Editor of "The Argus" of that Association. He is a 32nd Degree Mason and a Past District Deputy of that Order, also a Past Grand Master of Ontario East for the Loyal Orange Order. He is a member of the United Church. Mr. Fetterly has taken an active interest in C.A.S. work and is President of the Society.

WILLIAM J. HARRISON

Mr. Harrison was born in 1896 at Plainfield, where he attended the public school and high school and then came to Belleville where he attended the Ontario Business College. At the present time he is with the War Time Prices and Trade Board but was for twenty years associated with the automobile sales business conducted by Mr. J. B. Boyce. He has been a member of the School Board for the past ten years, chairman of the Vocational Committee, chairman of the Property and Supply Committee, and was chairman of King George School under the old system of the twenty-one member board in 1934. He was chairman of the Board for one year. Mr. Harrison is a member of the Masonic Order and an attendant at Tabernacle United Church.

BYRON C. SISLER

Mr. Sisler, manager of the local branch of the Dominion Bank, was born in 1894 in North York County. He came to Belleville ten years ago and was a Council Appointee to the School Board back when that Board was composed of 21 members. He has been in the banking business for 32 years with the exception of four and a half years when he was overseas with the Canadian Army in the First World War. While in France Mr. Sisler was promoted and commissioned and was finally discharged with the rank of lieutenant. His army associations have lasted for 28 years and he is now Second in Command of the Argyll Light Infantry Battalion. Mr. Sisler was educated at Mt. Albert High School and is a member of the Masonic Order. He has been a member of the Board of Education for ten years and held office as chairman in 1942. He is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

GEORGE WISHART

Mr. Wishart became associated with the Dominion Entomology Laboratories on Dundas Street, East, after coming to Belleville in 1929. He was born in Carp, Ontario, in 1896 and attended school at Renfrew and high school in Arnprior before going to Ottawa where he attended Normal School. After teaching school in the country and in Ottawa city schools, Mr. Wishart registered at the Ontario Agricultural College and the Toronto University where he received his Bachelor of Science and Agricultural degree and, later, at McGill University, received his Master of Science degree. It was in 1927 that he first became affiliated with the entomology science. Mr. Wishart has not been connected with civic affairs prior to this year's campaign.

YOUTH JUMPS IN CAR TROUBLE FOLLOWS RESULTS IN ARREST

Oklahoma City, Dec. 3—(AP)—A youth jumped into Mrs. S. E. Vaughn's car and drove off. Then 17-month-old Deanna Sue Vaughn, whom he had not seen in the back seat, began wailing loudly. Fearful of a kidnapping charge, the youth took the car back to the original parking place—just in time to be arrested by police accompanying the child's mother.

Marmora

Marmora — Group 1 of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild held a successful euchre in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening with ten tables in play, including several visitors from Bonarlaw. The prize winners were: Mrs. Sanford Lawrence, playing as a gentleman and Mrs. Lottie Langley.

Miss Edith Henry of Frankford spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Henry.

Sgt. Don Prentice, of the R.C.A.F., Toronto, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Prentice.

Sgt. William Prentice has completed his R.F.D. course at Kingston and is home on furlough.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hickey, Phyllis and Jimmy spent the weekend with relatives in Toronto.

The many friends of W. J. Pack are pleased to learn that he is making satisfactory recovery after his recent operation in Nicholls' Hospital, Peterboro.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Scattered rails and industrials managed to keep the recovery ball rolling in today's market but many leaders were unable to participate because of profit taking on the two-session rise.

Trends were notably foggy near the fourth hour. American Distilling was an isolated wide jumper, pushing up several points after yesterday's retreat.

Canadian stocks were mixed. Dome Mines was up a point and McIntyre and Lake Shore added fractions. Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagram yielded fractions.

In front at intervals were N.Y. Central, Texas Co., Goodrich, Western Union (A), U.S. Rubber, International Harvester, Boeing, Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse and Union Carbide.

FOR COMMISSIONER ON MONDAY

MR. AND MRS. HYDRO USER KEEP THESE FACTS IN MIND WHEN VOTING:

I am absolutely against the principle of so-called Flat Rates for all Municipalities in Ontario, because if this is adopted Belleville Power Rates will definitely increase from 15 to 20%.

Belleville pays 24.96 for its power at the substation, or about the lowest in Eastern Ontario. The average price paid by other municipalities is 30.54. Now think what must happen to your rates if that scheme is accepted.

WHY SHOULD WE HELP PAY THE ELECTRIC BILLS OF OTHER CITIES?

BELLEVILLE HYDRO HAS A $66,000.00 SURPLUS

WHY CAN'T WE USE PART OF IT, LIKE TORONTO DID?
Read this:

"When the excessive surpluses and reserves of the Toronto Hydro were exposed a rebate to their Domestic and Power Consumers followed in due course. While this is less satisfactory than a Reduction in Rates it embodies the principle of returning surpluses to those who create them."

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER PRESENTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF ITS READERS THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION ON THE CANDIDATES FOR THE VARIOUS ELECTIVE OFFICES:

For Aldermen

JOHN ALLIN

Mr. Allin was born in Bowmanville in 1899 and was educated in the public schools and collegiate there. He took a course in Mechanical Engineering at Central Tech in Toronto in preparation for his career in this field. At the present time he is mechanical superintendent in one of Belleville's major war industry plants and was associated with this same company in peace time for fifteen years. Prior to his connection with the plant in Belleville, he was with the Canadian Acme Company in Toronto as master mechanic. A former chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. Allin has been a member of the Board for eight years in all. He instituted the "free" system for books in the public schools during this period on the Board. He has been appointed by the mayor as chairman of the special committee to investigate the serious housing situation in the city. Mr. Allin is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

HAROLD J. ARMSTRONG

Mr. Armstrong first came to Belleville, 33 years ago and entered the employ of the Canadian National Railways as a clerk in the Freight Office. He was born in 1893 at Northport, Prince Edward County, and was educated in the Picton public schools and high school, later attending the Ontario Business College in Belleville. At the present time, Mr. Armstrong is supervisor of clerical staff in the Transportation Department of the Railway. During the ten years in which Mr. Armstrong has been an alderman in the City Council, he has held the posts of chairman of Street Lighting for three years; chairman of Water Works, until the time the Public Utilities Commission took over from the Council; chairman of Regional Planning for two years; and has been chairman of Public Works for the last two years. He is a Mason and a member of the Railroad Brotherhood. At one time Mr. Armstrong was active on the Fair Board for two years. He is a member of Christ Church.

ARTHUR L. BURKE

Offering himself as an alderman in the city of Belleville for the first time, Mr. Arthur L. Burke, is nevertheless experience in municipal life, having acted both as councillor and as reeve in township council.

Born in Huntingdon township, Mr. Burke attended rural school and also Madoc High School. He entered the employ of the railroad as a young man and for several years served as telegraph operator. Approximately 30 years ago he took up farming on the first concession of Sidney. A decade or more ago he offered himself as township councillor and from 1932 to 1935 served as reeve of Sidney. Retiring from the farm he moved to Belleville and for the past seven years has been associated with the Belleville office of the Great West Life Assurance Company.

A member of the Masonic Order, he is past master of the Eureka Lodge and is also a member of the Orange Order. He is a member of Holloway Street United Church.

ORMONDE E. BUTLER

Mr. Ormonde Butler studied law at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and was admitted to the Bar in September, 1931. He practised law with his father under the firm name of Butler and Butler in Belleville, until his father was appointed magistrate in 1934. Immediately after he went into partnership with Col. B. C. Donnan under the firm name of Donnan and Butler, and remained associated with the present Crown Attorney until June, 1938, when he set up practice independently.

Mr. Butler was born in Belleville thirty-six years ago and attended the primary and secondary schools in the city before entering into his study of law. He is at present chairman of the Boys' and Girls' Work, and director of the Kiwanis Club and a member of the Knights of Columbus. He has served four years in the Council and the past year was chairman of Market and City Property. He is a member of St. Michael's Church.

FRED G. CHAMBERLAIN

Born in Belleville fifty-nine years ago, Mr. Chamberlain has been absent from the city for only sixteen years. During this period out of town he was employed as an accountant with the Grand Trunk Railroad and spent a few years or less in various Western cities, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Sioux Lookout, Ontario. At one time, following his return from the West, Mr. Chamberlain was associated with the Springer Lock Company, the present Corbin Lock Company as secretary-treasurer for seven years. He is a member of the Masonic Order and has been active on the Belleville Fair Board for several years. At present he is in business independently as an accountant, and acted as city auditor in Belleville from 1929 to 1941. He is a member of Christ Church. Mr. Chamberlain served the past year in the Council.

CLARENCE R. CLAPP

Associated with the automobile industry in Belleville for the past 22 years. Alderman Clarence R. Clapp was born in Thurlow Township, and came to the city, 33 years ago, to become an employee of the Steel Company of Canada. He is now proprietor of the Front Street White Rose gasoline service station bearing his name and is local agent for Dodge automobiles.

Becoming interested in municipal life, Mr. Clapp offered his services to the city at the election of 1935 and was elected as councillor for the following year. He repeated in 1937 and then was absent from the city hall until 1941, when he was again elected as alderman. He has served in the council since. During his terms as alderman he has been chairman of Public Works, of Welfare, Fire, and this year is chairman of Regional Planning.

An ardent lawn bowler, Mr. Clapp belongs to the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club and was on the executive of the former C.O.B.L. team representing this city. He is a member of the United Church and belongs to the Masonic Order and to the Order of the Eastern Star. He is also a member of the Belleville Club.

HARRY J. CLARKE

Born in Belleville in 1869, Mr. Clarke has spent all his life in the city. He retired from active business four years ago and has been a member of the City Council since 1939. Educated in Belleville schools he taught school at the old high school for 15 years, from 1892 to 1907, and taught school in the country for four years. He has been a School Inspector for 32 years. During his four years on the City Council he has been chairman of Finance for three. He is at present treasurer of the Public Library and has been on the Library Board for over 40 years. An Elder in Bridge Street United Church, Past District Grand Master of the Masons, Past Grand Superintendent of the Royal Arch Masons and a member of the Foresters for 20 years, Mr. Clarke has had a long and interesting career in civic affairs.

WILLIAM J. DOYLE

For the past twenty-five years, Mr. Doyle has been in the hardware business on Front Street, associated with his father who took over the John Lewis Hardware store in 1918. Mr. Doyle was educated in the city at the public schools and the old high school and attended business college here. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Army and Navy Veterans, the Kiwanis Club of Belleville and the Fish and Game Association. Born in Picton in 1891, Mr. Doyle came to Belleville at an early age and has remained throughout his lifetime. Mr. and Mrs. Doyle have two sons in the Royal Canadian Navy at the present time.

WILLIAM FAIRBAIRN

Born in Kingston in 1876, Mr. Fairbairn, now a retired railroad engineer, was educated in the Kingston schools and attended the Kingston Normal School. He has been a resident of Belleville for the past 45 years and, before his retirement, was engineer on the fast trains between Toronto and Belleville for several years. Mr. Fairbairn has never been associated in any other business than railroading since his first job with the Canadian National Railways when he went into the Belleville round-house in 1891. He was a member of the Board of Education for six years when the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Institute was constructed and opened, and has also been a member of the Belleville Fair Board for five years. He is a member of the Brotherhood of Engineers. He is a member of the Masonic Order and a Presbyterian in religion.

FRANK S. FOLLWELL

Coming to Belleville from London, England, at the age of three months, Mr. Frank Follwell has resided in the city ever since. He was educated at the city public schools, the Collegiate, and spent two years at Queen's University preparing to enter into a medical career. Changing his decision he went with the Canadian National Railways as a brakeman and remained with this company for three years before going into the retail business on Front St. in 1930. He is a junior officer at present of the Masons and a former junior officer of the Moira Chapter. He is also at the present time chairman of Property and a past director of the Belleville Kiwanis Club and a member of the Sons of England. A member of the local Ration Board and of the Salvage Commission, Mr. Follwell has been active on the City Council for the past three years and has held the post of chairman of Printing and Stationery. He is a member of Christ Church.

WILLIAM HARVEY

Retired Canadian National Railways shopman, Mr. William Harvey was born in England and coming to Canada as a young man entered the employ of the old Grand Trunk Railway. In 1910 he was transferred to Belleville and after thirty-five years' service with the G.T.R. and with the succeeding C.N.R., retired from the railway in 1942. Since, he has been acting as agent in general insurance.

Ranking as one of the veterans for service in municipal life in Belleville, Mr. Harvey for 18 years served as a member of the Board of Education, serving one term as chairman. He has acted as councillor for seven years and during his tenure of office handled many chairmanships. He has twice contested the mayoralty.

A member of the Masonic Order, Mr. Harvey is also a member of the Baptist Church.

Born in Sidney Township, Mr. Charles Hyde was educated in rural schools and at Belleville high school, later attending Ontario Business College in this city. He is offering himself as candidate for alderman for his second consecutive year after having served lengthy terms both as alderman and as a member of the Board of Education.

Mr. Hyde has been in the plumbing business practically all his life, serving as a plumbing apprentice as a young man and entering business for himself in Belleville 28 years ago. He has served ten years as member of the Board of Education and was chairman in 1938. He has served seven years as alderman.

Fraternally Mr. Hyde is a member of the Masonic Order, of the Orange Order and of the Order of the Eastern Star, while he also belongs to the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club. He is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

A. J. MAGUIRE

Born at Clinton, Ontario, in 1901, Mr. Maguire attended public schools and three years at high school in that centre. He has been connected with the Canadian National Railways in the Motive Power Department since 1919 and is a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. This is the first time Mr. Maguire has entered political life, having been associated with labor organization and conventions solely to date. Mr. Maguire is an active participant in the activities and functions of Bridge Street United Church.

W. LORNE McDOUGALL

W. Lorne McDougall, member of Insurance firm of Haig, McDougall and Bateman, is entering the civic arena for the first time, but has served the city of his adoption in many ways since coming to this city in 1934. Lorne was born in North Bay and after receiving his public and high school education in North Bay, went to Queen's University and graduated as Bachelor of Commerce. He came to Belleville in 1934, and has served since that time as chairman of the Y.M.C.A. Board for two years; chairman of the Belleville Citizens' War Services Committee, chairman Belleville Committee of Air Cadets; chairman of Group Pay Roll for three Victory Loan drives; is now secretary-treasurer of the Belleville Regional Post-War Planning Commission; member of the Industrial Commission; director of the Kiwanis Club; vice president, Hastings Accountants Association; past president Belleville Fire and Casualty Insurance Agents Association; member of the Council for Ontario Agents Association. His time has not all been taken with business, for he served a term as president of the Bay of Quinte Baseball League. Lorne is a member of the Masonic order and a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

ROBERT A. PRINGLE

Mr. Pringle was admitted to the Bar in 1937, after receiving his degree at Osgoode Hall in Toronto. He attended school in both Montreal and Toronto. Born in St. Catharines in 1913, Mr. Pringle's associations have been directed to the law from early school days. Entering into partnership with the late Col. Ponton in 1937 he practised law with this well known barrister until his death in 1939, since when he has been independently practising. A member of the City Council since 1940, Mr. Pringle has been chairman of Industries and chairman of Industrial Commission, and is particularly interested in promoting greater industrial associations in Belleville. Through his connections with his father, who is a vice president of the Canadian National Railways, Mr. Pringle has been constructively active in developing interest in bringing industries to Belleville and holding those already located in the city and locality. He is a member of the Post-War Planning Commission, which was set up by the City Council and has been a member of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville for the past year. Mr. Pringle is a member of St. Thomas' Church.

FRANK W. POTTER

Mr. Frank Potter was born in Montreal, in 1875, and came to Belleville first in 1898. At this time he was a fireman on the Canadian National Railways. He was educated at Brockville, where he attended high school for two years. He is a member of the Masonic Order, the Independent Order of Oddfellows and the Sons of England, and was for 47 years a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. This will be Mr. Potter's third term with the City Council if returned on Monday and during the last year has been chairman of Fire on the Council. Mr. Potter has retired from the railroad after forty-seven years' service and during the last five years of his active association with the company was engineer on passenger runs between Belleville and Toronto.

ARTHUR SNARE

Mr. Snare came to Canada from England, where he was born in 1897 and settled in Prince Edward County in 1911. A few years later he came to Belleville as local manager of the Dominion Stores and between 1921 and 1925 was in Trenton with the same firm. In 1926, he returned to Belleville and established a hairdressing and barber business on Campbell Street and later moved to his present location on Front Street. Mr. Snare was educated in England and, after arriving in Canada attended school at Bloomfield. He is a Mason and a past patron of the Eastern Star. He is also a life member of the Ontario Hairdressers and Barbers Association. Mr. Snare is a member of the Baptist Church.

A. GILBERT STACKHOUSE

District Supervisor for the Manufacturer's Life Assurance Company in Belleville, since 1938, A. Gilbert Stackhouse, 246 John Street, is offering his services municipally for the first time since coming to the city.

Born in Ottawa, Ontario, Mr. Stackhouse went to school there and later attended Queen's University and has been associated with the Manufacturer's Life since 1925. He came to Belleville in 1938, as supervisor for the Belleville district.

A member of the Kinsmen Club, Mr. Stackhouse is also a member of the United Church and belongs to the Masonic Order. Interested in boys' work, he is chairman of the Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira Lake.

CLAUDE D. TICE

Seeking election for the second time to the Aldermanic Board is Claude D. Tice, City Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer, and veteran of the First Great War. Mr. Tice is a native of Hastings County having been born in Rawdon Township near Stirling. He received his early education in the public schools of Hastings and his secondary schooling in Western Canada, completing the same in Toronto. He entered the lumber business in Saskatoon and latter went to Minneapolis, Minn., in the same occupation. Enlisting in 1915 at Cobourg, he transferred to the Forestry Corps and went overseas with that unit. Returning from overseas he came to Belleville and entered business with his father and in 1921 joined the staff of the Ontario Intelligencer in the sports department and working through the various departments of the editorial office he advanced to the position of City Editor. He has reported the business of city council for many years. Mr. Tice is a member of the Masonic Order, the Presbyterian Church and associate member of the Kiwanis Club.

for 1944.

SERVICE IS MY PLATFORM, and a SQUARE DEAL for every Working Man and the Ratepayers.

To The Electors of the City of Belleville:

On Monday next, you are called upon to use your franchise to elect a Mayor, Aldermen, Public Utilities Commissioner and Board of Education. May I say to you, choose them wisely, and elect men with whom you would trust your own business affairs.

I have served you for the past six years on the Council. Two years Chairman of Light; two years Chairman of Public Works; one year as Chairman of Regional Planning, and this present year as Mayor, and upon this record I now offer myself for the office of Mayor for a second term. I enter this contest with no malice against my opponent, who already has had three terms in this position and is now asking you people for the fourth one. I personally think that a Mayor, to enable him to show his best, should have a second term. That I leave to you electors.

When I entered the Council in 1937 the tax rate stood at 49.9 mills under ex-Mayor Bone. Today, your tax rate is 37 mills, a reduction of approximately 13 mills, and to every member of these Councils I would like to pay tribute, although part of this reduction was caused by the retiring of debentures. My platform is Low Taxes, Progressive, Sound Business Administration.

So, electors, I ask you to support me when you go to the polls on Monday, and if I am elected I will give you the same leadership as in the past.

Signed,

MAYOR HARRY ROLLINS.

For Aldermen

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER PRESENTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF ITS READERS THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION ON THE CANDIDATES FOR THE VARIOUS ELECTIVE OFFICES:

ISAAC STEPHENSON

Mr. Stephenson was born in Cumberland, England, 58 years ago and came to Canada in 1913. He was educated in England and apprenticed as a painter there before crossing the Atlantic. Since his arrival in Belleville he has been in business for the past twenty years in sign painting and duco work. At the present time he is doing government work at No. 6 Repair Depot, R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, where is a foreman painter. He is a member of the Masonic Order and a member of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. Mr. Stephenson was for six years a member of the Old Age Pension Board, and was a member of the Health Board until he was forced to drop it with his present work taking him out of town. He has contested the elections as an aldermanic candidate each year for the past six years.

JOHN J. TRUDEAU

In the automobile business most of his life and now proprietor of the Trudeau Motor Sales with branches in Belleville, Tweed, Stirling and Picton, John J. "Jack" Trudeau is seeking election to the Aldermanic Board for the first time. Jack was born in Tweed and after his education was completed in that village he entered the automobile business working in Toronto, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Oshawa, later returning to Tweed in 1927 where he purchased a business and became the Ford dealer. In 1934 he branched out and purchased a business in Belleville and then enlarged to Stirling and Picton. At the present time he is handling the Chrysler products but finds time from active business to assist in other worthwhile objectives. Mr. Trudeau is Past President of the Kiwanis Club serving this term as chairman of Agriculture for the Ontario - Quebec - Maritime district of Kiwanis International. He is president of the Ontario Garage Operators' Association and director on the Board for Ontario Industrial Accident Prevention Association. He is a member of St. Michael's Church and the Knights of Columbus. He is also a member of the Belleville Agricultural Society. He was general sales chairman of the Third and Fourth Victory Loans and general sales vice-chairman of the Fifth Victory Loan.

Offering himself for municipal service for the first time, Mr. Ray L. Vickers, 233 Moira Street West, is a native of Belleville, having been born and educated in the city. He has lived in Belleville all his life with the exception of ten years when he resided in Toronto.

A toolmaker with the Reliance Aircraft and Tool Company, Mr. Vickers learned his trade as a toolmaker and as auto mechanic in Belleville. A member of Holloway Street United Church, he is also a member of the Masonic Order.

NEWTON C. WILBUR

Manager of the local Tip Top Tailors shop, Mr. Newton C. Wilbur, has proclaimed his intentions to stand for the City Council as Alderman in the December 6th civic election.

Mr. Wilbur has spent thirty-three of his thirty-nine years in the city, attended both public and high schools and has been serving the public in the men's furnishing trade on Front Street, for the past twenty years. He is a lodge member of the Masonic Order, a director of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville, and a man who has shown considerable public spiritedness during his association with this latter organization.

HAROLD "TWIG" WOODLEY

One of the youngest members of the Belleville Council from the point of years of service, Alderman Harold "Twig" Woodley was elected to that body for the first time last year and has now completed his first year in council. Born in Montreal, 45 years ago, Mr. Woodley came to Belleville, when seven years of age and attended school in this city. He is a member of the local Woodleys' Furriers establishment.

Vitally interested in sports, Mr. Woodley coached many junior baseball teams in the city and for many years acted as umpire in the Central Ontario Baseball League. He is a member of Christ Church and lives at 110 Bridge Street, West. Serving as chairman of labor during his first year in council, Mr. Woodley is president of the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association and is chairman of the local Post-War Planning Committee. He is also a member of the local Kinsmen Club.

CANDIDATES

coming and were vitally essential to the city. The plans he spoke of were the sewage disposal and incinerator projects and the sponsoring of small homes with an assessment value of $800 with the franchise of a vote not the present curtailment unless the assessment was $1200. As chairman of Salvage he said that 112,000 pounds had been collected this year and that the Firemen and Public Works Department were to be thanked for their help, and that the money realized from this would be turned over to the proper war charities.

ALD HARRY J. CLARKE — commenced his statement by saying: "For the past four years I have been privileged to represent you on the City Council, and for the last three years I have been chairman of finance, the most important committee of the council. While I make no claim to any superior knowledge as a financier, I do know the value of money, and it has been my constant aim to give your business the same care, that I would were it my own, and thanks to the co-operation of the several chairmen, and the efficient and hearty co-operation of our financial officers, I believe that I have been successful.

"As chairman of finance you naturally expect me to give you the facts as to your financial position and this I propose to do. When I entered the council four years ago your Sinking Fund Debenture debt was $988,168.47, and your Serial Debenture debt was $1,618,276.17, according to the Auditor's report for 1939. In four years your Sinking Fund debt has been reduced by $746,632.72, and the Serials by approximately $100,000 per year, or approximately $400,000.

"When I asked you a year ago for a renewal of your confidence, which you gave me in no uncertain language, I told you that I expected to close the year with a surplus. I am able to tell you that the Auditor's report shows, that we had an operating surplus of $40,447.14 in 1942 and I can confidentially promise you that we will close 1943 with a surplus, and this, in spite of the fact, that we issued no debentures for the new Foot Bridge, which we are paying for in two annual installments out of current revenue. One half of the cost has already been paid.

Our Tax Collector has established an all-time record for collections at this date. Our total roll is $454,956, and on November 6th, he had collected $407,952, or 89.8 percent of the total roll, and he had two months to improve that record. In addition, he has collected $42,589 on arrears of taxes prior to 1943, leaving the outstanding arrears to date at $27,662, as compared with $186,273 at the end of 1939. Beyond any argument our city is in excellent financial condition.

"In conclusion, let me thank you for your confidence in electing me at the head of the poll at each election that I have contested. I hope that I have been able to live up to your expectations, and, if I have succeeded then I confidentially ask you to again give me the privilege of serving you in 1944. I have ample time and it is at your disposal, if you want it."

Following Mr. Clarke's statements, he was questioned by Mr. Jamieson Bone from the assembly. Mr. Bone wanted to know why, if there was a surplus of $40,00 in 1942, it had not gone into reducing the tax rate in 1943. Mr. Clarke's reply was that the figure was not arrived at until the middle of the year. Mr. Bone, before retiring, made the statement "In my day we did not wait... we did it."

ALD. FRANK S. FOLLWELL — was also brief in his appeal to the civic electors stating, that he had officiated on the City Council for four years as chairman of printing and stationery and could show a small surplus, that if it were not for his committee he represented, Mr. Clarke would not be able to prepare his financial statements and, therefore, along with other necessary printed forms, it was an important function within the Council for the good of the citizens. He paid especial tribute to the Industrial Commission and to Mr. J. O. Herity, manager of the Chamber of Commerce on their efforts to keep the factories operating in and for the benefit of the city. He directed the attention of his listeners to the fact, that the city's population was greatly increased, which was caused by expanded industry and must be met openly if these industries were to remain in the city, and pointed out, that it was absolutely necessary to increase the housing facilities to accommodate these people. He said, that there were plans afoot for the immediate rehabilitation of boys and girls, who are being discharged from the services and for those, who will follow them at the completion of the war, when general demobilization takes place. He thanked the electors of the city for their pait kindnesses to him and urged everyone with the franchise to get out and use it, "whether you use it for me or not."

ALD. CHARLES A. HYDE, speaking almost too briefly, said that the whole story had been told by those who had preceded him and that he was unable to elucidate further on what had already been uttered. He promised to do everything humanly possible to fulfill the office if selected by the voters to continue.

ALD. ROBERT A. PRINGLE opened his address by stating that Ald. Clarke, Chairman of Finance, had neglected to mention that the city assessment had risen $1,000,000 since 1940. He said that as chairman of industry he had contacted fifty or sixty firms with prospects of bringing them to Belleville, as well as being in close contact with the two railroads, and through them, in contact with American industry and American railroads with the prospect of interesting further expansion in Belleville. He pointed out that there are fifty-one industries in the city at the present time with a total monthly payroll of $3,000,000 but that there should be more, both industry and payroll buying power. He asked for return to office on the platform of an honest endeavor to increase the industrial life of the city so that the residential life might also increase and make Belleville prosper as a result.

ALD. FRANK W. POTTER, as Chairman of Fire, praised the local fire department, which he enumerated at 18 men. He stated that the fire hall had been repaired at little expense to the Corporation and that a school of instruction had been set up for these guardians of the public safety. He made reference to the two pumps which had been given to the city by the Ontario government and declared that he would do everything to continue to maintain this department at as low a cost as possible during the coming year if the public deemed him worthy to carry on the work he had been doing.

ALD. HAROLD "TWIG" WOODLEY made his speech in a quick manner, speaking fast and directly. As the final speaker on the council to be heard, he referred to the mayors' convention held in Ottawa at which a committee formed of four members of the city council, four members of the Chamber of Commerce and other representatives of the civic body attended with satisfying results. He declared that the city was in need of several improvements which would come as a matter of course, the proposed esplanade, a city park where citizens might spend their leisure time, a sewage disposal plant which would adequately meet the needs of the city and a proper and conclusive postwar rehabilitation plan. He stated that all but the latter were temporary work, to cover a transitory period, but the latter was a substantial solution if properly directed and handled. He thanked the public for past support and asked to be returned to office in order to carry out the plans in which he was so interested.

After the members of the council had completed their addresses, the Chairman called on those, who were seeking election to the Aldermanic Board and these were called in alphabetical order. ARTHUR L. BURKE was the first speaker and he told of his municipal experience in Sidney Township, where he served for fourteen years, seven of which were as reeve of the Township. He stated that since moving to Belleville, he had taken a keen interest in civic affairs and was prepared to give his experience to the city as Alderman. "My service in the Township brought me in close touch with City Councils and I believe I can serve the city of my adoption worthily", said Mr. Burke in asking for support at the polls.

WILLIAM J. DOYLE, a lifelong resident of this city and a business man for a number of years, stated he had no promises to fulfill and none to make but if elected would give his full time to the betterment of the city as a whole. "What is good for me and the city will be given my full support", said the speaker.

WILLIAM FAIRBAIRN, a resident of Belleville since 1891, and a retired C.N.R. engineer, stated he was seeking election for the first time. "I represented this city on the Board of Education for a number of years and was a member, when the new Collegiate was erected", said Mr. Fairbairn. "I have been a member of the Fair Board and have served wherever I was needed and now being retired I have the time to devote fully to the affairs of the city and that is why I am asking you for support. There is a rumor going around, that I belong to some organization and I wish to deny it emphatically. I am standing on my own feet, and if elected will serve this city to the best of my ability".

WILLIAM HARVEY, an ex-member of the council and the Board of Education stated that his watchword would be "Service" if elected on Monday. "I have always enjoyed serving the city", said Mr. Harvey and wished for the electors all of the best in the years to come.

LORNE McDOUGALL stated that this was his first bid for municipal office and if elected would work for the best interests of the community. "I have always been a champion of youth", said Mr. McDougall, "and for nine years have been connected with boys' work at the "Y" and latter with the air cadets. I am a firm believer in playgrounds and if we have them we will not have to build prisons for men". He referred to the Beaches, stating they should be developed and in speaking of the sewage disposal plant, thought that the government might order the building of this plant with the cost to be assessed against the water users. He was in favor of the work down on the flood control project and was vitally interested in the housing situation. He asked for the liberal support of the electors on Monday.

ARTHUR J. SNARE, stated that he had lived in Belleville for 20 years but it was his first bid for public office. He stated he was vitally interested in the future of Belleville and that he had heard a lot of talk about the esplanade but it was still far from being finished because some of the right-of-ways had never been secured. "Something should be done to relieve the congested traffic on the main street", said the speaker. "We want a bigger and better Belleville and I think if elected I can help to bring this into effect".

A. GILBERT STACKHOUSE believed it was time for a change and new blood in the Council and was offering his services to that end. He stated that although a recent arrival in Belleville, having been nere since 1938, he would be able to give constructive leadership in helping to form the policies of the Council. In conclusion he asked for the support of the electors.

JOHN J. TRUDEAU stated he was a substantial taxpayer in the city and had had sufficient business experience to consider himself eligible to serve as an Alderman of the city. "I believe in keeping taxes down", said Mr. Trudeau but not at the expense of essential services. If elected I will give sound business administration".

CLAUDE D. TICE stated he was the only veteran with the exception of another member of the council, who was offering himself as a candidate and believed that with his knowledge of the returned man's problem he would be able to assist in the Post-War Planning scheme. He was of the opinion that a perfected rehabilitation program should be worked out and the money set aside so that when the boys came home, that work could be started immediately for them during the transition period into their civil life. "Having been a reporter of the City Council for the past fifteen years", said Mr. Tice, I think I know something of the procedure of Council and the way it is operated and with this knowledge would be able to serve the citizens well in my first year". The science of flying has made rapid strides since the beginning of the war and will make still greater strides in the years following the hostilities and he advocated the promotion of a municipal airport. "Other municipalities are working on this project and if it is good enough for them it surely is good enough for us and should be revenue producing," said the speaker. He believed that a certain fund should be set up under government supervision for rehabilitation work so that the ordinary expenditures and essential services of the city should not be interfered with. He thanked all for their support of last year and asked for a more liberal vote on Monday.

NEWTON C. WILBUR stated he had nothing more to offer than his record of 20 years in business in Belleville. I am offering my self as a young man and am willing to give my full time to the city's interests if elected", said the speaker in soliciting the support of the electorate.

Messrs. A. J. Maguire, Isaac Stephenson and Ray L. Vickers, other candidates for office, were not present at the meeting.

WILLIAM J. HARRISON.

"Personally I am firmly convinced the Board of Education is the largest industry any city possesses. I might tell you that Belleville is fortunate in having as good, and maybe better system of education than the average city in Ontario, asserted William Harrison, Chairman of the Board of Education.

"This fact was well proven by Premier Drew's recent statement that we have to turn to the future to more up-to-date means and ways of teaching, namely the use of radio, phonographs and motion pictures in our schools, which I can tell you now that the Belleville Board has long since established through the cooperation of the Board and Home and School Clubs.

"As chairman of the Board for the past year I have endeavored to keep expenditures at the lowest level possible, even though factd with the increased salaries which war conditions and increased costs of materials and maintenance have seen," added Mr. Harrison in comparison.

Assisting Government.

"Our Board is materially assisting the government in making space and equipment for war emergency classes at the Collegiate, which naturally has cost the Board considerable in light, heat and upkeep. In the face of these increases we have been able to carry on without increasing our annual budget for 1943 and will undoubtedly show a surplus. My principle is to carry on in the same measure of economy without cutting our efficiency in the present effort of the introduction of kindergarten classes, which were first inaugurated this semester, this relieved the stress on the home during war time," explained Chairman Harrison.

"In conclusion I might say I have been privileged to serve on the Board of Education in several capacities for the past ten years and now as chairman offer myself for re-election for 1944," concluded Mr. Harrison.

HIRAM B. FETTERLY.

As a former school trustee, H. B. Fetterly addressed the meeting and stated: "The most important business of any community is the proper education of the rising generation. Our children are our greatest asset hence the best possible education is none too good to fit them for their future as citizens of the nation. This requires experts to give them the proper training.

"Your trustees who administer your educational institutions should have the experience, which will enable them to administer these institutions with the greatest efficiency.

"I have the following qualifications and experience: I am a graduate of Queen's; I have had many years' experience in teaching in all grades of schools, several years as principal of the Cornwall Collegiate Institute, 13 years Inspector of Public Schools, four years superintendent of the O.S.D.; for seven years I have been a member of your Board of Education. During that time supervisors in music have been appointed in both Public Schools and the Collegiate and manual training and household science have been made available to the senior pupils of the public schools. Many changes have been made in the collegiate which have greatly increased its efficiency. The work of the public schools has been co-ordinated as a result of the appointment of a supervising principal.

"I am also vice-president of the Association of Public School Trustees of Ontario, which has been organized for the defence of our public school system.

"After the last war there was a terrible epidemic which carried away more people than were lost in the war. Medical examinations of the services indicate that a very large percentage of our people are not now in good physical condition. In order to remedy this condition immediate steps should be taken to establish a publis health unit in Belleville so that all our people will receive proper medical and dental attention to prepare them to resist a possible epidemic after this war is over and for the future as well. By acting in co-operation with the Children's Aid Society and the V. O. N. much could be accomplished at small cost and the results would justify the cost a hundred-fold.

"I appeal to you for your support for another term; first because of my educational qualifications; second on my experience as a teacher and administrator and third on my record on your Board of Education."

GEORGE WISHART.

Speaking as a candidate for election for the Board of Education, George Wishart said:

"In offering myself as a candidate for trustee on the Board of Education, I believe that I am well qualified to serve you. I am a property owner and have lived in the city for fourteen years. I have a considerable knowledge of and experience in educational matters. I am a qualified school teacher and have taught school both in rural areas and in the city of Ottawa. My interest in the welfare and education of the children of Belleville is assured by the fact that I have children in both collegiate and public school. I have served for three years on the advisory vocational committee of the Board of Education and for many years have been an active member of the Ann Street Home and School Association. I believe in the further extension of free education so that every child may secure whatever education his or her ability may demand. I am vitally interested in serving you on the Board of Education. Only your votes will make it possible for me to do so."

Others seeking election for positions on the Board of Education are B. C. Sisler and Carl D. Crosby.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 244

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The mind of Adam Oxport is quite a puzzle to me in a bridge game. His line of reasoning does not seem to strike a responsive chord in me.

Suppose I start with an opening bid of one when he is my partner. And suppose he has a hand strong enough to help make more than a game. He will not jump at once if he has no suit longer than four cards.

But when I bid again, he will hop to five or six. His excuse is that he likes to keep the bidding low on the first round. But he will not say why he must keep the bidding so low.

Take a different case. As his partner, suppose I start with an opening bid of one heart and he has this hand:

♠7 4 2
♥6 5
♦8 4 3
♣A Q J 9 4

Do you know the responses Adam will pull? It makes me shudder. He has three tricks with two high cards among them. He has a biddable suit. He has enough for an immediate response of two clubs.

But his first response will be one no-trump. If I then bid two hearts, he will step in with a bid of three clubs. That gets me. So I ask him, "Why not show me your club suit before you bid no-trump?"

He replies, "I have enough honor tricks (cumbersome mincemeat of high cards) for a responding bid of some kind. But not enough to go to the two-level."

So I say to myself, say I, "Now, don't get rambunptious, Kibby, old boy. He may not be as dumb as he looks. Maybe he knows something too. Ask him and you may learn something."

So I persist, "Then, why did you bid three clubs?" And he never bats an eyelash when he says: "I wanted to show you my club suit."

Fancy that. He says he has not enough to bid as high as two in order to tell the truth about the club suit. Yet he will bid as high as three to give me the same information he could have done at two.

So many seemingly good bridge players do that. And they give you the same song and dance. I don't get it.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Falcon in Danger"

"The Falcon in Danger" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre is highlighted by an exceptionally novel plot, "The Falcon in Danger" and brings Tom Conway to the screen for the third consecutive time as the suave, debonair detective who outwits the cleverest crooks and solves baffling crimes ahead of the police.

Jean Brooks, Elaine Shepard and Amelita Ward play the principal feminine roles in this RKO Radio picture, and such well known actors as Clarence Kolb, Robert Emmett Keane, Richard Martin, Felix Basch, Ed Gargan, Erford Gage, Cliff Clark, Ed Dunn and Richard Davies enact the important male characters.

The plot revolves around the mysterious disappearance of the pilot and two passengers from a cross-continental air-liner which makes a crash landing near its destination. Investigation reveals that the passengers were carrying $100,000 in negotiable securities when they boarded the plane. A daughter and niece, respectively of the two passengers, bring The Falcon ransom notes, demanding $25,000. for return of the missing men, and he agrees to help them solve the case. When a dummy ransom package, planted in a public park, is picked up by the henchmen of a well-known crook, The Falcon trails them to the headquarters of their chief, and as a result is suspected by the police of being a party to the supposed kidnapping. He is saved from arrest when one of the missing men suddenly appears at his home, and relates a story of being forced by two strangers to give up the securities and bail out of the airliner. Later the missing papers are found in the apartment of the second missing passenger, who is cleared of suspicion when his body and that of the pilot are located in a desolate section of the country.

The method by which the Falcon traps the murderer and thief, and the exciting escapes and experiences he undergoes in doing it, provide one of the most gripping and suspense-laden films in this popular crime series.

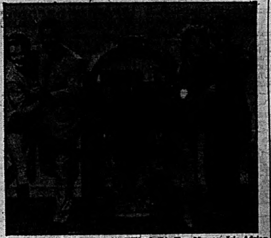
"Juke Box Jenny"

"Juke Box Jenny" is the second splendid feature on the screen of the McCarthy Theatre today, a bright tuneful frolic for these times.

It's a cute story about the juke box craze that has swept the country wild—there are now more than a million of them, and it's a script cleverly played by a young cast of favorites including Ken Murray, Harriett Hilliard, Don Douglas, Iris Adrian and Marjorie Gateson.

In addition there is a rare treat for the swing addicts in the music of Charles Barnet and his orchestra, and Wingy Manone and his band, hot from New Orleans, and the Milt Herth trio, the newest sensation of the five-cent plot machines.

British Associated News winds up a swell program—a "news" that is hot off the European fires and has its first appearance at the McCarthy Theatre every weekend.



AT THE McCARTHY — Harriet Hilliard (L), Ken Murray, Iris Adrian and Don Douglas in Universal's comedy musical production, "Jute Box Jenny," now at the McCarthy, with "The Falcon in Danger," starring Tom Conway.

An old logs never dies, it seems. Rose Franken, who wrote "Claudia," wanted Elsie Ferguson, a star in the early days of the screen, to appear in a new play, "Outrageous Fortune." Miss Ferguson's main interest is her farm and she refused to leave it. She got excited when she read the script and now she is again a favorite of the show public. . . Paramount's Canadian Newsreel has given many a thrill. You are sitting in a theatre when suddenly you see the face and hear the voice of your son or brother. . . . There are regular reports that "Meet the Navy," the RCN show, will be made into a motion picture. The company may appear on Broadway and assign the profits to USA service relief, a nice gesture. . . Two films around now have Canadian backgrounds. Sonja Henie's "Wintertime" has a Quebec locale and Errol Flynn's "Northern Pursuit" deals with Nazis in the North who want to fly over Ontario and bomb the Welland Canal. . . After the success of "Stage Door Canteen" movie people decided to give the Hollywood Canteen the same treatment.

Greer Garson didn't start anything when she married Richard Ney, younger by ten years. . . Mary Pickford, Ginger Rogers, Norma Shearer and Eleanor Powell married younger men. . . Hollywood nickname for a toupee—a dome dollie. . . There is no doubt that Television will move right into home and theatre as soon as the war is over. Theatre men are preparing for it. . . Dorothy Lamour will wear a fur-lined sarong in "The Road to Utopia," which has an Alaska setting. The other Utopians, as usual, will be Hope and Crosby. . . Sophie Tucker, the famed blues singer of other days, will sing two old songs and a new one in "Sensations of 1944". . . Cecil B. DeMille's "The Sign of the Cross" will be reissued with a special prologue. Claudette Colbert, Fredric March, Charles Laughton and Elissa Landi appeared in the original version. . . Walter Huston, the Canadian star, owns a 7,500-acre ranch in California.

Joseph Calleia, the movie villain, was born in Malta and left there to study engineering in England. From that he jumped to acting, touring this continent in 1918 as a Scottish comedian, kilts and all. The public didn't like him that way and he was soon conducting a street car for a living. He returned to the stage as a singer and in 1935 entered the movies. . . . Joan Blondell, wife of Dick Powell, went to New York to act on the stage and took their two children with her. So Dick spends his evenings running home movies of nine-year-old Norman and five-year-old Ellen. . . Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins are still maintaining the feud that started in "Old Maid." Their latest film together is "Old Acquaintance." During the filming of "Old Maid" someone asked Bette Davis how it felt to work with such a fine actress. "I don't know," she shrugged. "Why don't you ask Miss Hopkins?" . . . Wallace Beery has been taking movies of daughter Carol Ann since she was nine months old. He'll make them into a film called "From Gingham to Grease Paint."

AT THE BELLE

"CLAUDIA"

"Claudia," that gay, enchanting, half-woman, half-girl, half-angel, half-devil, is coming to the Belle Theatre today.

And a long awaited news it is, to the millions who have followed the adventures of that charming, unpredictable, typically American young lady in the pages of Redbook magazine, as a novel, as a sensational Broadway success, and as a tremendously popular radio program.

The most magnetic, refreshing young personality to reach the American public in years, "Claudia" is the creation of the famed novelist and playwright, Rose Franken.

Of Dorothy McGuire, who enacted the title role on the stage, so many critics said, "She is Claudia" and "Claudia is Dorothy McGuire", that there could be no other choice for the role on the screen. Robert Young plays her husband, the half-baffled, but wholely understanding and loving husband, David. And as a tremendously pleasant surprise, Ina Claire is seen as "Claudia's" mother.

Into "Claudia's" pleasantly rural and rather frivolous existence come many disturbing things. She meets a cosmopolitan British playwright played brilliantly by Reginald Gardiner, who is intrigued by her whimsical charm.

Tragedy strikes Claudia when she learns her beloved mother is doomed to die. Yet at the same time she learns that she is to become a mother. Thus with the realization that life and death work hand in hand, she suddenly matures.

Edmund Goulding directed this 20th Century-Fox film. William Perlberg was the producer. Olga Baclanova, Jean Howard, Frank Tweddell, Elsa Janssen are featured in the film for which William Goetz was in charge of production.

The Paramount Canadian News, and a new edition of the March of Time, "America's Food Crisis", precedes the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Great Victor Herbert"

Victor Herbert, the Irish-American composer who wrote love songs the world has never stopped singing, comes to the screen as the central figure in Paramount's lavish musical romance, "The Great Victor Herbert," which is scheduled to open next at the Capitol Theatre. Not so much a story of the great composer's own life as a drama of his influence on a stage-struck young couple, "The Great Victor Herbert" tells the romantic story of an actor and an actress who find fame as the stars of Herbert's operettas and the inspiration of their lives in the maestro's friendship. The sweethearts in this story of Broadway in the gay days at the opening of the twentieth century are played by Allan Jones, popular singer of screen and radio, and Mary Martin, the girl who made "My Heart Belongs To Daddy" a national sensation last season. The title role is played by Walter Connolly, who is acknowledged by experts to be a nearly exact double for Herbert. The drama is set off by the singing of some of the best-loved of all Victor Herbert songs, including "A Kiss In The Dark," "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life" and "Kiss Me Again." Prominent in supporting roles are Susanna Foster, the new singing discovery, Lee Bowman, Judith Barrett and Jerome Gowan.

One of the world's best-known melodies, Johann Strauss, "Blue Danube Waltz," to which millions have waltzed since it was written, is sung by Lily Pons in the Parisian star's sparkling new musical comedy, "That Girl from Paris," the added musical hit starting next at the Capitol Theatre, in which she is co-starred with Jack Oakie and Gene Raymond.

The famous melody undergoes an alteration in its rendition which would probably astonish its composer. Miss Pons sings it in a New York roadhouse to the accompaniment of a four-piece orchestra. The instrumentalists offer interesting "swing" variations in an effort to disconcert the vocalist, and the familiar tune is heard bedecked in brilliant new crecendoes.

The "Blue Danube Waltz," is one of the six numbers which utilize the tiny soprano's gorgeous coloratura voice in "That Girl from Paris." "Una Voce Poco Fa," frm "The Barber of Seville," panofka's "Tarantella" and three modern melodies by Arthur Schwartz and Edward Heyman—"Seal It With a Kiss."

AT THE BELLE — "Claudia's" not really unhappy, she's just trying to tell her mother something important, but she can't make up her mind just how!. Dorothy McGuire has the title role in the new 20th. Century-Fox hit due today at the Belle Theatre.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Dec. 4 — (AP) — Look for another explosion from Judge Landis' office before the winter is over with the recent warfare in the minor league convention serving to light the fuse...the Judge's decision when the insurgent group appealed to him was that if they had succeeded in tossing out the votes of the non-operating leagues, he would have stepped right in under that "conduct-detrimental-to-baseball" provision...and instead of merely saying yes or no on a question of rules interpretation, Landis began making pointed queries about whether the major owners and big minors had used their working agreements as a club over the little fellows and who helped entertain that southern sheriff — reported to be the most popular guy in town because he held the controlling vote in one league.

The Big Question:

What apparently puzzled Landis about the whole affair was why a class "D" club, for example, would vote to deprive itself of voting power in the National Association ... and if the most popular answer is right — well, the Judge's favorite targets are the "chain store" operators...and some of the men on the inside of the recent scrap (who might, of course, be prejudiced) say there are plenty of bull's eyes to hit if Landis can see them.

Cracking the Whip:

The minor leaguers voted (and rightly, we thought) against the amendment to the major-minor agreement that would make them responsible if ineligible players appeared in exhibitions in their parks ...their stand was that Landis could fine the players and it wasn't their job to "act as policeman"... yesterday Landis told the big leaguers (and presumably the minors were included) that the rule would be enforced "whether you pass it or not."

AT THE CAPITOL—The wise-cracking Jack Oakie disports himself in song as well as chatter in his stellar comedy role in "The Girl from Paris," in which Lily Pons and Gene Raymond are also starred. Coming next to the Capitol with the added musical "The Great Victor Herbert."

KINGSTON ARMY DEFEATS NAVY BY 5-3 COUNT

Winners Secure 2-0 Lead in First Period and Never Headed

IN SECOND-PLACE TIE

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—Kingston Frontenac Army moved into a second-place tie with St. Catharines Saints in the senior Ontario Hockey Association race last night by defeating Toronto Navy 5-3.

The soldiers built up their margin in the first period, attaining a 2-0 lead on goals by Red Hamill and Gus Giesbrecht. They held the Navy even through the last two periods, both teams scoring twice in the second and once in the third.

Scotty Mair, Joe Klukay and Hugh Barlow scored for Navy, who now are tied with Toronto R.C.A.F. in the league's cellar spot. Kingston scores, in addition to Hamill and Giesbrecht, went to Vic Grigg, George Galbraith and Gar Peters.

Lineups:

Kingston: Goal, H. Mortimer; defence, Phillips, Galbraith; centre, Doran; wings, White, Peters. Alternates, Giesbrecht, Foster, Hamill, Tisdale, Grigg, Booth.

Navy: Goal, Evans; defence, Milne, Garrett; centre, Barlow; wings, Klukay, Livingston. Alternates, Ogston, Mann, Mair, Gee, Thompson.

RUNIONS SCORES TWICE IN BEATING ST. CATHARINES

Former Belleville Player Stars as Hamilton Retains First Place

CLEAN CONTEST

St. Catharines, Ont. Dec. 4—(CP)—Hamilton Majors strengthened their hold on first place in the Ontario Hockey Association's senior series last night by defeating St. Catharines Saints 3-1. Saints earlier this week handed Hamilton its first defeat of the 1943-44 season.

Majors won in stereotyped fashion, relying as usual on its ace line of Johnny Conick - Doug Runions - Dillon Brady to furnish all the scoring. Runions scored twice, sandwiching his markers around a goal by Blink Bellinger for St. Catharines, and Conick completed the scoring at 9:50 on Runions' pass.

Lineups:

Hamilton — Goal, Childs; defence, Dinning, Scherer; centre, Davey; wings, Shillington, Liscombe. Alternates — Robertson, Runions, Brady, Conick, Manorek, Sherry.

St. Catharines — Goal, Grosskurth; defence, Backor, Fritz; centre, Noble; wings, Mundrick, McAttee. Alternates — Delmonte, Boston, Reynolds, Mason, Bellinger.

Referee, F. W. (Dinty) Moore, Port Colborne; linesman, Jack Boyd, St. Catharines.

Summary.

Border Permits Given Only Applicants With Low Category

By the Canadian Press

In reply to criticism by A. C. Stewart of Yorkton, Sask., who had resigned from the Saskatchewan War Mobilizaion Board Thursday, regarding border crossing permits, Mr. Justice P. M. Anderson, chairman, said at Regina last night all authorities granted hockey players to proceed to the United States, with one exception, had been granted because the category of each applicant was so low "the army would not take them." Mr. Stewart had said the previous chairman, the late Mr. Justice J. F. L. Embury, had consistently refused such permits to hockeyists.

Mr. Justice Anderson explained the only exception to the low category class had been Doug Bentley who is now with Chicago Black Hawks. He had been given a permit as an "agriculturist" by the former chairman, Mr. Justice Anderson revealed, adding he had been guided by this precedent in giving a sanction to Bentley again this year.

President Tom Richardson of the Eastern Baseball League announced last night at New York that Quebec City had applied for a franchise in the circuit but, owing to transportation difficulties, there was little chance the application could be granted.

Judge George B. Harris at San Francisco yesterday dismissed a charge of assault against catcher Ernie Lomardi of the New York Giants on the ground that there was provocation when the player struck a war worker during a night club dispute. The complainant, Wade Jones of Richmond, Calif., has sued Lomardi for $20,000 damages in civil court because of the alleged "slapping."

Washington, Dec. 4—(AP)— You could almost hear a hoarse railbird crying "come on, number two" in the staid halls of the United States Senate yesterday. Two committees met to talk about taxes and juvenile delinquency and wound up in a free-for-all discussion of horse racing and the two-buck window where you pays your money and you takes your choice. As to taxes—the finance committee heard all kinds of testimony against a proposed five-per cent increase in the levy on betting but not one in favor of it.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 4 — (CP) — The National Hockey League's new rule providing a maximum $1,000 fine for players criticizing officials or other players to the press drew varied reactions. Andy Lytle of the Toronto star describes the rule as "gag law" while Doug (Windsor Star) says it is just another example of the league's disinclination to co-operate with the press. Doug writes: "The sooner the hockey fathers stop resenting criticism and co-operate more whole-heartedly with the scribes who can help them sell what they have to offer for public approval, the sooner a grand game will attain its rightful place in the sport sun."

Ken Johnson of the Owen Sound Sun-Times raised this moot point: "Allowing the players to speak their minds keeps a lot of coaches and managers on their toes. People have a little faith in an organization when voices come from all ranks but when just one stereotyped announcement comes from the top they get suspicious that all is not as it should be."

Elmer (Montreal Star) Ferguson takes the opposite view. He writes: "When it comes to the time a sports writer has to take the word of a player, fresh out of the heat of a losing battle, as to the efficiency of a referee, this observer will wish to cease being a sports writer ... the rule isn't designed so much to prevent criticism as to prevent players making asses of themselves."

Actually, the press ignores the players' usual routine criticism of officiating but there are occasions when the public wants to know the player's side of a story. Then he should be free to tell it. The rule is not limited to criticism of officials but applies also to criticism of other players.

Such criticism has been quoted for years by the best of sports writers. An example occurred this week in Baz O'Meara's Montreal Star column, referring to Bucko McDonald's bodychecks which put Toe Blake of Canadiens out for two weeks. Baz writes: "Canucks don't feel any too good about it. They claim McDonald has laid low three of their players this year with his heavy charging..." The "they" apparently referred to Canadiens players. They were not named but if identified they are liable to fine.

This corner believes players should be free to speak their minds. I'll string along with Voltaire who wrote: "I disapprove of what you say but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

TUNNEY MOVES KATAN-WATSON BOUT TO CITY

Pair Will Meet at Hume Arena for British Empire Title

ATTRACTIVE CARD

"Police protection was most inadequate in Toronto last Wednesday night, when the British Empire championship bout between "Whipper Billie" Watson and John Katan ended in bedlam with fans having their clothing torn, so we are moving the venue of the return bout to Belleville, where I know these two ring battlers will be given a fair showing by the fans," stated Promoter Frank Tunney of the Queensbury A. C. over the long distance telephone today as he announced an Empire title bout for the Hume Arena next Thursday night.

Last Wednesday at Maple Leaf Gardens Watson had gained his famed "commando" hold on Katan after 53.47 minutes of torrid championship wrestling. With Katan lying helpless on the mat Al Dunlop leaped into the ring and attacked Watson, claiming to be Katan's manager. Bedlam broke loose as scores of fans attacked Katan and Dunlop and the show terminated in a general mellee with finally Katan being disqualified.

"Palermo John" immediately protested the decision and again challenged Watson, who Katan claims is usurping the British Empire title ever since last June. After taking the matter to the Commission Promoter Tunney was advised to move a second meeting of these two arch ring enemies out of Toronto altogether. Belleville being the second city in the matter of drawing crowds in Tunney's circuit naturally got the call.

"There'll be a new Empire champion crowned in Belleville next week," promised Katan when he learned of the switch today. Watson had not been officially notified of the Commission's sanction up until noon, as his contract was mailed to him by Mister Tunney. Two guaranteed preliminaries will precede the title bout Thursday here.

WM. COX ASKS FOR HEARING

New York, Dec. 4 — (AP)—Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis today said that William D. Cox, who resigned as owner of the Philadelphia Phillies during Landis' investigation of betting on ball games, had denied statements he made to the Commissioner concerning wagers he had made on ball games and asked for a hearing.

Landis said that through an Attorney Cox has notified him the original remarks Cox made about his supposed betting were made to test the loyalty of "a certain man in Philadelphia," and that these remarks concerning wagering were not true.

As a result Cox asked for a hearing to clear himself in the matter and the commissioner notified him to appear before him today.

GOOD CROWDS ATTEND

Toronto, Dec. 4 —(CP)— Ontario Rugby Football Union teams played to 134,785 cash customers in 28 league games and, one play-off secretary Harold Bailey announced last night. The largest attendance was recorded Oct. 30 when 14,074 fans watched a doubleheader between Ottawa Combines and Toronto Balmy Beach and Hamilton Flying Wildcats and Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes.

SCORING RECORDS THREATENED BY TWO PLAYERS

Bruneteau Can Beat Goal Record and Cowley the Assist Mark

LEAFS, RANGERS MEET

By the Canadian Press

Unless Bill Cowley and Modere (Mud) Bruneteau start show down at all intersections, two scoring standards will be shattered when the National Hockey League completes its 4 1-2-month schedule next March.

In a little more than a month's play, Bruneteau has collected 15 goals to imperil the all-time mark for goals in one season set in 1917-18 when bullet Joe Malone of Montreal Canadiens sank 44 pucks in 22 games. Bruneteau's current yield scarcely threatens Malone's two-a-game average, but the 29-year-old left wing of Detroit Red Wings could easily topple the full season's record in his remaining 39 games.

Within easier range is the Detroit club mark, established in 1930-31 when Eddie Goodfellow scored 25 times.

Cowley, long a successful exponent of the axiom that it is more blessed to give than to receive, stands better than an even chance to improve the league mark for assists in one season, which he set himself in 1940-41 and equalled last year. Now third in the individual scoring race behind Doug Bentley and Bill Mosienko of Chicago Black Hawks, the 31-year-old centre of Boston Bruins already has 18 assists compared with the 45 he compiled in 1940-41 and 1942-43.

Cowley and Bruneteau have a chance to pad their averages this weekend, both against Montreal Canadiens. Detroit meets the undefeated league leaders in Montreal Saturday while Boston plays host to the flying Frenchmen Sunday. The only other team besides Canadiens to play two weekend games is New York Rangers, who play at Toronto Saturday and at Chicago Sunday.

LANDIS TO HEAR COX'S STORY

Former President of Phillies Barred from Baseball for Gambling

New York, Dec. 4 — (CP) — High Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis of baseball, today will hear the case of William D. Cox, recently resigned president of the Philadelphia Phillies. Two weeks ago, Landis ousted Cox from baseball for life for alleged betting on Philly ball games, and now Cox says there was positively nothing to it.

The hearing was requested by Cox to clear himself.

Through an attorney — Lloyd Paul Stryker — Cox asked for the hearing last Saturday, saying he never made a cash wager on the Phils' games, despite Landis' statement that he had been told that Cox had made "between 15 and 25 bets of from $25 to $100" from the time the 1943 season started thru May 20. And in a radio broadcast, Cox said he had made a few "sentimental bets" on the Phils. These admissions came, Landis said, weeks after Cox, at the first hearing in the Commissioner's investigation in mid-August, had denied betting.

On Nov. 23, Landis announced Cox's banishment from baseball, and the same day the Phillies' directors approved the sale of Cox's stock in the club to Robert R. M. Carpenter, Jr., young Wilmington, Del., sportsman, and the election of Carpenter to the presidency.

Landis said Strycker, in asking for today's hearing, told him Cox originally made admissions of betting to a certain man in the Phillies organization in order to test his fellow's loyalty, and it was on this premise that he came to the hearing today.

"Strycker said he was convinced Cox had never made a bet," Landis explained yesterday in announcing the hearing.

DESTROYER HURWORTH LOST

London, Dec. 4 (CP)—Loss of the destroyer Hurworth was announced by the Admiralty Friday. She was commanded by Cmdr. R. H. Wright, D.S.C. No details were issued.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

In The Same Boat.

Four men who were to be sent abroad at short notice took French leave and left the camp for a few hours to say goodbye to their families.

At the London terminus they were caught by a ticket collector who wanted to see the railway vouchers which they did not possess.

He was about to call the Military Police when a burly sergeant of another regiment asked what the trouble was and said he would put the men under arrest.

Ordering them to fall in, he marched them through the barrier. Once out of sight of the ticket collector he dismissed them and told them to buzz off.

They started to thank him, but he cut them short.

"That's all right, chums. It was the only way I could get past the barrier myself. I hadn't a rail voucher either."

Thorpe's Greatest Game.

Jim Thorpe, who rose to heights while with the Carlisle Indian School in Pennsylvania in the early part of the century, not only stood pre-eminent in American football circles, but in his day was champion of the world of athletics, stated Clark Shaughnessy in his publication "Football in War and Peace."

Thorpe in his day was the world's greatest all-round athlete and even the King of Sweden during the 1921 Olympic Games stated this when Thorpe proved a one-man team representing the U.S.A. to win many events.

Speaking of football recently, Jim Thorpe, All-American halfback in 1911 and '12, stated his fondest memories of 23 years of football were of the Carlisle-Harvard game played Nov. 11th, 1911, at Cambridge, Mass. Thorpe went to the field with an injured leg that was bandaged from the ankle to the knee.

Fiercest Game.

"It was the roughest and fiercest game I ever participated in," admits Thorpe, who should know as it was during this game he was carried from the field, the first time he was unable to leave under his own power.

However, before the Carlisle Indian left in the last quarter, Harvard had something to remember him by. Game leg and all Thorpe had made one placement kick from the 48-yard line, two from the 37-yard line and another from the 18, Carlisle finally winning 18-15. There were other days in his 23 years on the American gridiron when Jim Thorpe booted more placements and scored more touchdowns, but as Thorpe points out they weren't helping Carlisle beat such a power-packed team like the Harvard eleven of 1911. Besides being a star grid star and a track and field athlete, Thorpe also excelled at baseball and played several seasons with John McGraw's New York Giants when the Polo Grounders were as strong in the major leagues as the Yankees are today.

This and That.

Joe DiMaggio, former Yankee star, now in the army, celebrated his 29th birthday Thanksgiving Day . . . He was born in Martinez, Calif. . . . Vernon (Lefty) Gomez celebrated his 33rd birthday on Friday, the day after . . . Gomez was also born at Rodeo, Calif. . . . Oris Hockett is 30 years old on the rolls of the Cleveland Indians and 34 in the records of a war plant where he works. . . .

Hunk Anderson, co-coach of the Chicago eleven, barred all but players from the Bears' dressing rooms in Washington after his team lost to the Redskins . . . Ensign Joe Manaci, former Bears' back, had a hard time getting in to see his old pals.

Hank Gowdy, first big leaguer to join up in the First World War, is now a major in the infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga. . . . When not in war, Hank is a coach for the Cincinnati Reds. . . . Sonja Henie gave a preview of her ice show in Chicago for service men who were the guests of Mayor Edward J. Kelly. . . . Remember When

The Ottawa Rough Riders won the Dominion football title and Grey Cup beating the University of Toronto 17 years ago today, 10-7, on a frozen field at Toronto. Joe Miller was the outstanding star with his kicking for the Capital City squad.

Look, Mr. Tunney

Down in Montreal a wrestling fan, Mark Maritzer by name, was awarded $3,500 for injuries sustained when two wrestlers took on their pugnacious efforts around the ringside. If Marse Tunney continues to have such men as Hannigan, Bishop et al around the Hume Arena, well judge for yourself. However, Tunney says his next local show will be different, "Frankly I hope to give the Belleville fans my greatest show yet staged, and that includes the Maple Leaf Gardens," said Frankie.

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

There was a feeling of stress and tensity at the Armouries Tuesday evening and actually it was no wonder. The occasion came about as the entire N.C.O. class of sergeants was paraded before staff officers from all parts of M.D. 3 for examination. Sgt.-Major Charlie Tice was in charge of the class and the genial Charlie showed more anxiety than his entire class, but his worries were unfounded as rumors have the majority of the sergeants coming through with flying colors.

The examining board was headed by Lieut.-Col. Hogan of Kingston, a finer officer and gentleman the boys have never been paraded before, they all agreed. Assisting him were Captain Sordy of the First Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, recently returned from overseas, Captain Frappe, G.S.O. 3, Captain Wm. Hurst, G.S.O. 3, and several Warrant Officers from Kingston and Peterborough.

The examination consisted for the greater part of map reading, squad drill, bayonet drill, tactics, as well as examinations in small arms, such as the Bren, Reising machine gun and rifle.

★ ★ ★

With the above worries all over the Officers' Mess of the Argyll Light Infantry entertained the Garrison Sergeants' Mess at dinner and a social evening in the formers' Mess Wednesday night. After the tenseness of the previous evening the N.C.O.'s let down their hair and enjoyed to the utmost the hospitality of the officers. Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan welcomed the sergeants on behalf of his officers and following a healthy repast the evening, or night as it turned out to be for many, was spent at cards, billiards and other forms of light recreation. Sgt.-Major Jeffery, president of the Sergeants' Mess and R.S.M. Herb Willerton extended the thanks of the N.C.O. class to their hosts.

The highlight of Wednesday evening's get-together between the officers and sergeants came when Lieut. Doug Kalbfleisch, training officer of the A.L.I., was taken fully by surprise and presented with an inscribed silver platter, a gift from his fellow officers, and a gold ring bearing the crest of his mother unit, the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards of Ottawa. Major B. C. Sisler, 2nd in Command of the A.L.I., assisted by other officers, made the presentation of the platter, while R.S.M. Herb Willerton did similar honors for the N.C.O.'s.

Present during the evening were Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble, former O.C. of the unit, and Lieut.-Col. P. H. Wills, both of whom were called upon to speak as they returned for an evening of good fellowship with their old contemporaries.

Lieut. Kalbfleisch with noticeable feeling expressed his thanks. Lieut. Kalbfleisch has been transferred back to his unit in Ottawa and leaves on the 11th of the month.

A Habit

On to the parade ground marched the colonel. He gave a look at the paraded men, rubbed his monocle, and had another look.

"Hang it all," he barked at the adjutant, "what's the idea of parading all the big men in front of the smaller men?"

"Sorry, sir," explained the adjutant, "but it seems that the sergeant was a greengrocer up to a few months ago."

Drill will be taboo for the rank and file at the Armouries Tuesday night, the occasion being a chicken shoot for all ranks below the rank of a sergeant.

Actually the men will take over, it's their night to howl, and the officers and sergeants can stand aside and merely attend to the duties of seeing that the boys enjoy themselves.

The open shoot for everyone below the rank of a sergeant will take the form of "mystery shooting" which gives all an equal chance to get one of the coveted chickens. Other entertainment will be provided the men and refreshments served by the senior officers. R.S.M. Herb Willerton will act as master-of-ceremonies.

He was just a little boy, not over seven or eight, and he was in the drug store buying a stamp:

Little Boy — Yes.

Friend — Well, what did you ask him for Little Boy — Nothin'!

Friend — Then why are you writing him?

Little Boy — I mean I don't want anything for me. I got all I want.

Friend — Did you ask him to give some presents to somebody else?

Little Boy—Uh-huh. My mother's brother. He's a soldier in Italy. And my two cousins. They're sailors in the Pacific.

Friend—What did you ask Santa Claus to give them? A whole lot of presents?

Little Boy — Nope. Just one.

Friend — What is that?

Little Boy — Plenty of ammunition.

Officers and members of the local unit of the Canadian Women's Service Force will hold a "turkey shoot for chickens" next Wednesday night. Originally the lassies had intended to hold a turkey shoot but found there is a scarcity of gobblers, so they bang away in the Armouries shooting gallery with fine large chickens being substituted for turkeys. Sergt.-Major Turner, telegraph instructor with the local reserve army unit, is quite pleased with the progress the girls of the C.W.S.F. are making in their operation of "the bug".

While the N.C.O.'s are holding their fowl shoot next week, the members of the C.W.S.F. will serve eats, including hot coffee, to keep the "non-comishers" happy.

A Long Spell.

An A.A. detachment isolated on a lonely gun-site played cricket a good deal to relieve boredom. One day a passing traveller was invited to join in the game.

"Perhaps you'd like to bowl"? asked one of the players. "That's our officer batting; he won't mind."

The first ball delivered spreadeagled the stumps. In ominous silence the officer put down the bat and stalked away, while the entire company went wild with joy.

"What's the matter?" asked the startled guest. "Why are you all so pleased?"

"Wouldn't you be pleased?" chuckled a private. "He's been in for three weeks?"

Little Benny's Note Book

Supper was all ready and pop wasn't home yet, and ma couldn't make up her mind whether to be mad or worried, saying, He could at least telephone if he's going to be late, oh dear such a man, I don't suppose anything could of happened to him, oh dear isn't this aggervating?

Which just then we heard pop's car drive up, and he came in the house with his doorkey, ma saying, Well I must say it's high time, I hope you like cold food.

I'm terribly sorry my dear, but an official investigator was asking me a lot of questions, and you know you cant very well put those fellows off by pleeding that a hot dinner is waiting for you, pop said, and ma said, Goodness, it must of been a man from the army intelligence service, I've heard of the careful way they go around checking up on people through their friends. Who was he investigating? she said.

Maybe I oughtn't to tell, pop said, and ma said, Now dont be silly to the point of absurdity. If it's a military secret as far as you're concerned, it might as well be one as far as I'm concerned too. Who was he investigating? she said.

Me, pop said, and ma said, What, why that's rediculous. Why should they be investigating you for land sakes? What kind of questions did he ask you? she said.

Well, the first question he asked was, Where ya think ya going? pop said. Then, without even giving me time to look up the answer to that one, he blurted out the 2nd question, which was, Who ya think ya are? The third and concluding question, which was really 2 questions in one, was, Are ya blind or just a dope? Anyway, I must of answered them all to his satisfaction, because he gave me this little ticket as a reward, pop said.

William Potts, that's a traffic ticket for going through a red light or something, ma said, and pop said, I was afraid of that.

Oh, come and eat what's left of your dinner, such a man, ma said.

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 4 —(AP)— Here's what happened when the professor went hunting: Dr. Geo. Coleman of the University of Iowa flushed a covey of quail. Coleman shot, hit, but didn't knock the bird down. The quail flew about 30 yards, wheeled and winged straight back into the professor's hands. He has four witnesses.

New York, Dec. 4 —(AP)— Firemen of Hook and Ladder Company No. 11 got out of warm beds at 3:01 a.m., tore down a building wall, put out a very hot fire between two partitions, and were back in bed in less than 30 minutes. The fire was in the firehouse.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER NINE

"You may bully your wife, Sam Burrows, but you can't bully me. I knew you twenty years ago. You always had a swelled head, even before you had a badge to swell it larger. There are a few things I could say, if I cared to talk. Perhaps the folks in this town would like to know where the money went that was paid by the bootleggers who used to run their stuff through Lakelawn. Dont try any funny business with me, for—"

Burrows turned purple and glared at the tell-tale grin of Sheriff Black, whose shoulders were quivering.

"We won't go into that now", said Sheriff Black, becoming serious. "Where were you between lunch and the time the murder was discovered?"

"Where was I? A lot of places. Mostly in my kitchen, but all over the house as well. I had my work to do and I went where it took me".

"Did you enter this room before the alarm was given?"

Hannah frowned. Had any of the family admitted entering the room, she wondered? If they had, then so would she. She wasn't going to have one of them singled out for suspicion.

"Perhaps", she said cautiously. "It's more than likely but I don't remember".

"If you were 'all over the house', you must have noticed where the others were?"

"I'm paid to do the housework, not to spy".

"But without spying you would notice the people you encountered?"

"Maybe I would, maybe I wouldn't. I'm a hard-working woman and I keep my mind on my work."

"Miss Mimms, for instance, was asleep in one of the upstairs rooms. You saw her into bed, I believe?"

"That's so. And she couldn't get out. So you needn't go suspecting her".

"What do you mean, she couldn't get out?"

"The room she was in is at the top of the house. It's full of old furniture and the boys keep some of their rubbish in the drawers. I didn't want one of 'em going in and wakening her, so I locked her in and took away the key. She couldn't get out without sliding down the drain-pipe, which no one but a flatfoot would consider likely. At half-past three I called her and she went down to Miss Osborne. It was shortly after that, I heard her screaming".

"And Mr. Osborne. Where was he?"

"In the garden".

"How do you know?"

"I saw him going out".

"How do you know he stayed there"?

"If you knew Mr. Osborne, you'd know that when he goes out to the garden he stays there".

"You didn't see him from the windows?"

"I haven't time to stand at windows. He came in when Miss Mimms screamed and made some remark about having been in the garden. That's good enough for me—and it would be good enough for you, if you knew him as I do".

"You're very loyal".

"And well I might be. I've workedo for the family for twenty-four years and I know 'em inside out. If you knew 'em half as well, you wouldn't be wasting time looking for a murderer in this house!"

"Where were 'Mike' and Dorothy?"

"You'll have to ask them. It isn't my business to keep track of their comings and goings".

"Feeling the way you do about the Osbornes, you were probably burned up when you heard Miss Osborne saying she was going to cut them out of her will?"

"I could have wrung her wretched old neck!"

There was a pregnant silence; then—

"And someone did do almost that very thing", observed Sheriff Black quietly.

"Well, you needn't look at me like that. It wasn't me. It wasn't one of the Osbornes, either. None of them would hurt a living creature or, for that matter, a dead one. They always treated the old witch a sight too well and precious little thanks they got for it. If you've any more to ask I'll thank you to ask it and let me go about my business. The younger children will be going to bed soon, and they haven't had their warm milk yet".

"It would be too bad if the law came between them and their hot milk", said the Sheriff smoothly. "You can go".

"Humph!"

Hannah flounced out of the room, muttering something not quite under her breath about the house being "turned upside down by a pack of——" That last word (blank)—Sheriff Black hoped he hadn't heard correctly. It sounded something like —rafters!

"What a wild cat!" said Burrows.

"We were too easy with her. If we let her cool her heels in a cell for twenty-four hours, she wouldn't have so much to say"'.

Black smiled.

"The world would be a better place if there were more like her in it. You tried getting tough with her, Inspector, but I noticed it did not work. I wonder what she'd have said to me if I hadn't been polite? We'd better see Peter and Marjory before they go to bed".

Inspector Burrows left the room. A few minutes later he returned on the heels of Mrs. Edith Osborne. He looked sheepishly at th Sheriff. Edith shivered slightly as she passed the covered chair but when she faced Black she was quite composed, although every pale. Her hands were clenched at her sides as thought with a very real physical efforts she was trying to keep a grip of herself.

"I'm afraid I can't allow you to question my younger children tonight. This affair has been a terrible shock to their nerves and I have sent them to bed".

"I've told you already", snapped the police inspector, "it's no good taking that stand with us. We're investigating a murder and—"

"Let it go, Burrows," said the Sheriff quietly. "I see your point, Mrs. Osborne. We'll talk to the young children tomorrow, when they've had a good night's rest. Please sit down".

Edith seated herself. She looked out of the window with tired, haggard eyes, beginning to realize what the murder of Octavia was likely to mean to her family. Her lips trembled as she thought of what might lie before them in consequence of it.

"We'll have to take your fingerprints", said Sheriff Black quite gently. "And we'll need those of Peter and Marjory as well. Sergeant Feathers will go with you and take them. Tell me, Mrs. Osborne, where did you spend the period between lunch and the discovery of the murder?"

"Shortly after lunch I went into the garden to look for my husband. Failing to find him"—at this Black and Burrows exchanged glances—"I concluded he must have wandered into the fields beyond, a thing he often did when he was perplexed or worried, and I returned to the house and went to my room. I had a splitting headache, so I lay down for a while and didn't rise until I heard Miss Mimms screaming".

"Did anyone enter your room while you were lying down?"

"No one. I have no one to prove my alibi, Mr. Black, if that is what you mean."

"Mine is an unpleasant job at times, Mrs. Osborne. I have to ask questions whether I like it or not".

"I know, Sheriff. I'm sorry if I spoke sharply".

"I think that's all for the present. Sergeant Feathers will go with you to take the childrens' fingerprints."

After Mrs. Osborne and the Sergeant had left, Inspector Burrows clenched his first and growled: "The way these people act makes me wonder who are the police—us, or them. They'll have me thinking in a minute that I'm the guy who did it!"

"They're nice people", replied Sheriff Black. "It makes me feel like a heel to put them through a cross-examination".

"Who'll we talk to next?"

"What about the girl who owns the scarf—Dorothy Osborne?'

"O.K., I'll call her—if she hasn't drunk her hot milk and gone to bed".

The way Dorothy reacted to the shrouded corpse was almost sufficient to console Burrows for the calm poise of her sister. She threw one frightened glance at it and darted across the room to the chair by the window. Sheriff Black looked at her appreciatively. She was quite the most beautiful girl he had ever seen at close range. Surely this lovely creature could not be implicated in anything so sordid as a murder?

Sergeant Feathers, who had returned to the living-room, was also gazing pensively at Dorothy; but Burrows maintained a stony exterior. Even the loveliest woman was just another female to him. Burrows turned a jaundiced eye on such allurements.

"Don't be frightened", said Black, with his friendliest smile. "I only want to ask some questions".

Inspector Burrows had the silk scarf in his hand. He held it under Dorothy's eyes.

"Perhaps you can tell us about this".

Dorothy gasped and shut her eyes. She swayed. For a moment she almost fainted but with a visible effort she regained control of herself.

"It's mine', she whispered hoarsely.

"We know that. What we want to know is how it came to be about your aunt's neck when she was found dead—and who put it there!"

Terrified, the girl stared at Burrows.

"All right, Inspector", growled Sheriff Black. "I'll handle this".

"Sure, sure", stid Burrows. "Go ahead". Women, he thought. Bah! Give 'em looks and they had most men falling over themselves to be nice to 'em.

"Did you wear this scarf today, Miss Osborne?" asked the Sheriff, in a kindly tone.

"Yes", shuddered Dorothy. "I wore it this afternoon when I went out after lunch".

"Where did you go?"

"I went over to the Flemings—they live not far from her — to play tennis. But I—I didn't feel like tennis, so I came home in half-an-hour or so".

"Did you enter this room?"

"No. Or rather, I almost did. I was about to come in through the French windows—it's quicker than using the front door—but I saw the top of Aunt Octavia's head over the back of her chair and changed my mind. I went round to the front and up to my room".

"Taking the scarf with you?"

"Oh, no. I am not sure what I did with the scarf—I think I must have dropped it, perhaps in the hall. I didn't have it when I reached my room".

"You are sure of that?"

"Quite sure. I have a habit of dropping things about the house. This afternoon was warm and I wasn't wearing it; I was carrying it over my arm".

"How long did you stay in your room?"

"Until I heard the screem. I lay on my bed for a while"—sobbing bitterly, she might have added, for the scene at lunch had shaken her badly—"and must have dropped off to sleep".

"I see; then there is little you can tell us .If you don't mind, Sergeant Feathers will take your finger prints".

"You don't think I—"

"Oh, dear, no. There's nothing to worry about in having your fingerprints taken. It's purely routine".

Sergeant Feathers stepped forward with alacrity. The eyes of Inspector Burrows were hard and bitter as he watched his stalwart subordinate gently, almost caressingly, imprinting Dorothy's fingers on the while card. He noted grimly that the process took considerably longer than usual.

"The mother, the daughter, the dead woman's maid!" he exclaimed when Dorothy had gone. "All in their rooms, all feeling faint. What is this? A sanitorium?"

Michael Osborne was next to be questioned. The Sheriff took a liking to him at once. Young, dark, slender and very much alive, 'Mike' was exactly the sort of boy the Sheriff would have wanted for a son. That was the trouble: all these people were so confoundly likeable.

"You hardly need that", said Michael, when Sergeant Feathers approached with the inked pad. He displayed his hands ruefully. They had obviously been washed but were still pretty black. "I never seem to get them very clean".

"Perhaps you can explain this", began Sheriff Black, spreading out the oil-stained silk scarf.

Michael surveyed the black smears and frowned, wrinkling his nose.

"Fraid I can't Looks like oil".

"It is. And how would oil get on it"?

"Search me. "Oh"—the boy reddened—"I wonder if I—You know, I had a bad habit of wiping my oily hands on the first thing I come across. I was working on my car this afternoon—"

"That may be it. Can you remember coming across this scarf?"

"No, I'm afraid I can't."

"Think hard."

Michael thought hard. He shook his head.

"I can't remember".

"Did you come into the house this afternoon'?'

"Yes, once. I came for something I'd left in my room".

"Through the French windows of this room"?

Michael stared. "Heck 'no! Aunt Octavia was in here. Through the kitchen".

"And through the hall?"

"Yes".

"The scarf may have been lying in the hall. Try to remember whether you saw it there".

Again Michael wrinkled his nose.

"Fraid I can't."

"You keep your car in a shed at the side of the house? While you were working there did anyone pass?"

"Yes Dad did. He was going to the garden".

"Did you see him coming back"?

"No, I didn't".

"Did you see anyone else"?

"I don't think so. Wait a minute, I saw Ted Fleming. He spoke to me and went on out to the garden".

"Who is he"?

"Oh, Ted's an old friend of the family. He's keen on Dorothy". Michael was suddenly conscious of the scratching of Sergeant Feather's pencil. "Gosh!" he gasped. "Don't take down that last remark!"

Sheriff Black smiled faintly.

"And why was he going to the garden?"

"I didn't ask. He's always been welcome to come and go as he pleases. Ted's all right".

The boy glanced over his shoulder at the mantled chair with its gruesome occupant.

"Say, was it really murder?"

"Definitely".

"Good Lord! I wonder who could have—"

"That", said Sheriff Black grimly, "is what we are trying to find out."

"You don't think one of—" Michael's eyes widened indignantly. "Oh, you can't!"

"We're trying to get at the facts". Sheriff Black patted the lad's shoulder. "Run along, boy, and don't think about it".

"That's easy to tsay", replied Michael, as he left the room.

Sheriff Black lit a cigar. He paced the room for a few moments with a gloomy frown before announcing: "There's nothing more I can do here tonight, Burrows. I'm tired. I'm going home. Have that moved to the undertaker's"—he indicated the stark figure of Octavia Osborne —"and arrange for an autopsy. We had better hold the inquest Monday and get it over. You'll have to see that summonses are issued to everyone in the house——oh, and you'd better summons this Ted Fleming as well. Drop in at my house in the morning and we'll talk the case over. 'Night".

"Good night".

Some time later, when Inspector Burrows was leaving the house, the uniformed officer at the gate accosted him.

"There was a woman here a few minutes ago, Inspector, who wanted to speak to you", he said, talking quietly so that the reporters—still waiting impatiently — could not hear. "Said it was about this business .

"Then why the devil didn't you send her in?"

BIG THREE AGREE ON 'SCOPE AND TIMING OF OPERATIONS' TO SMASH GERMAN ARMY

Relentless Attacks on Subs, War Plants and on Land From 3 Sides Will Be Made

Concord Will Make An Enduring Peace

By JOHN F. CHESTER AND WILLIAM McGAFFIN
Associated Press Staff Writers

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 6 —(AP)— Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Joseph Stalin have agreed completely on "the scope and timing of operations" to smash the German army from three sides, an announcement signed by the three statesman in an epic four-day meeting in Teheran, Iran, and released here today disclosed.

The Allied leaders also charted a peace era in which all nations would be invited to join "a world family of democratic nations" based on the reaffirmed principles of the Atlantic Charter.

Four-Day Conference

The history-making conference of the heads of the world's most powerful military and political combine was held in the Iranian capital from November 28 to December 1, attended also by scores of military leaders and diplomats from Britain, Russia and the United States.

Heavily underscoring the urgency of the military phase, the combined British and American general staffs subsequently returned to Cairo, scene of the November 22-26 meeting of Chinese President Chiang Kai-Shek with President Roosevelt and the Prime Minister, and staged concentrated planning sessions from last Friday through today.

Mr. Churchill joined in these and other sessions, leading to the probability that other disclosures of paramount international importance are still to come.

President Roosevelt's whereabouts since the Teheran conferences were not disclosed.

Two Declarations

Two Teheran declarations signed simply "Roosevelt, Stalin, Churchill, and dated December 1, announced these results:

WAR—"Our military staffs have joined in our round-table discussions and we have concerted our plans for the destruction of the German forces. We have reached complete agreement as to the scope and timing of operations which will be undertaken from the east, west and south.

"The common understanding which we have reached guarantees that victory will be ours."

"No power on earth can prevent our destroying the German armies by land, their U-boats by sea and their war plants from the air. Our attacks will be relentless and increasing."

PEACE — "We are sure that our concord will make it an enduring peace. We recognize fully the supreme responsibility resting upon us and all the United Nations to make a peace which will command the good will of the overwhelming masses of the peoples of the world and banish the scourge and terror of war for many generations.

"We shall seek the co-operation and active participation of all nations, large and small, whose peoples in heart and mind are dedicated, as are our own peoples, to the elimination of tyranny and slavery, oppression and intolerance. We will welcome them as they may choose to come into a world family of democratic nations."

Count on All Nations' Participation

After expressing their respect for Iran's independence and territorial integrity, and promising economic aid to that country which has facilitated the flow of Allies supplies to Russia, the three leaders said:—

"They (Britain, the United States and Russia) count upon the participation of Iran together with other peace-loving nations in the establishment of international peace, security and prosperity after the war in accordance with the principles of the Atlantic Charter, to which all four governments have continued to subscribe."

Atlantic Charter

The Atlantic Charter declaration by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt after their historic sea rendezvous in August, 1941, set out these general Allied principles and post-war aims:—

1. They seek no territorial or other aggrandizement,

2. No territorial changes that do not accord with the "freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned."

3. Respect for the right of all peoples to choose their own form of government; restoration of "sovereign rights and self-government" to those "forcibly deprived of them."

4. Endeavor, "with due respect for existing obligations," to promote a better distribution of raw materials and trade to all states, "great or small, victor or vanquished."

5. Full collaboration among nations in the economic field in order to improve labor standards and social security.

6. "After the final destruction of Nazi tyranny," a peace established to assure all men "freedom from fear and want."

7. Freedom of the seas for all nations.

8. Abandonment of the use of force and disarmament of nations "which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers" pending establishment of "a wider and permanent system of general security."

Much Cordiality

Dispatches from Teheran said the conference atmosphere was one of extreme cordiality. The main declaration by the three leaders concluded:—

Churchill Gives Self Birthday Party While Attending Parley at Teheran

Teheran, Iran, Nov. 30. (Delayed) (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin matched eloquence tonight in a demonstration of mutual admiration as the British Prime Minister, at an enthusiastic birthday dinner he gave himself, eased into his 70th year amid the exhilarating applause of his two fellow statesmen.

Stalin, who set the key to the evening's atmosphere, breezed into the British Legation talking freely through an interpreter to the assembled guests, removed his great coat and lifted a glass to Mr. Churchill.

The dinner-jacketed Mr. Churchill shepherded his guests into dinner in the victorian setting of the legation dining room. Thirty-four sat down around the long mahogany table. Mr. Roosevelt sat on Mr. Churchill's right and Stalin on Mr. Churchill's left.

Mr. Churchill's W.A.A.F. daughter, Mrs. Sarah Oliver, the only woman present, acted as hostess.

Capt. Randolph Churchill also was present.

The menu consisted of Persian soup, boiled salmon and trout from the Caspian Sea, turkey ice called "Persian Lantern" and cheese souffle. This was followed by a small birthday cake on which there were 69 candles crowded over the "V" sign marked in the white icing.

At the conclusion of the dinner Mr. Churchill announced he was going to follow the Russian custom of toasts and formal toasts were drunk in French and Persian wine to the King, President Michael Kalinin of Russia and President Roosevelt. These were the first of the long evening.

Mr. Churchill toasted Mr. Roosevelt twice—once as Roosevelt, the President, and once as Roosevelt, the Man. Then he toasted "Stalin the Great". Stalin replied with toasts to "My Fighting Friend Churchill", and to "My Fighting Friend Roosevelt'. Mr. Roosevelt replied to both with appropriate words.

The three men simply were reflecting over the matter of Mr. Churchill's birthday the same goodwill and understanding already reached, according to all sources, in the series of plenary conferences on grave issues.

Stalin, of course, talked through an interpreter, but he had his own "sign language" for effectively expressing his sentiment. Whenever anyone was toasted he got up with his glass, walked over to them and smilingly clinked glasses before drinking. There were 34 guests present and each one gave at least one toast. Eye-witnesses maintain Stalin got up and clinked glasses at every toast.

The party was somewhat reminiscent of the hospitality Stalin offered Mr. Churchill at the Kremlin when the Prime Minister visited Moscow. It broke up about midnight.

Japs Say Allied Planes Raided Marshall Islands

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—A Tokyo broadcast quoted Japanese Imperial headquarters today as saying a fleet of 100 carrier-based Allied planes had raided the Japanese-held Marshall Islands Sunday morning and admitted the attack, unconfirmed by Allied sources, had caused some damage. The broadcast, recorded by Federal Communications Commission Monitors, claimed 20 planes had been shot down.

The Tokyo communique also claimed that Japanese naval airmen had pursued the Allied task force and had sunk one medium-sized aircraft carrier and a large cruiser. A large aircraft carrier and a cruiser were damaged, the bulletin added.

British Subs Sink 16 Vessels

London, Dec. 6 —(CP)— An Admiralty communique said today that submarines of the British Mediterranean fleet, continuing their offensive against German shipping, had sunk 16 vessels including two medium-sized and 14 small supply vessels, in forays into the Aegean Sea.

In addition, warehouses on Naxos island off Greece were shelled, and a seaplane and a 300-foot floating dock were sunk nearby, the bulletin said.

Another submarine ranging the western Mediterranean sank a landing craft loaded with motor transport in the Gulf of Genoa, and a medium-sized tanker was torpedoed off Toulon.

The announcement did not say when the attacks took place.

Eight submarines took part in the attacks. While they were not named, their commanding officers were: Lieuts. N. L. A. Jewell, M. F. R. Ainslie, E. J. D. Turner, J. R. Drummond, R. Gatehouse, M. L. C. Crawford, H. R. Clutterbuck and C. Gordon.

PULPWOOD INDUSTRY NEEDS

Toronto, Dec. 6. (CP)—Paul Kellogg, acting president of the Newsprint Association of Canada, said today in a Canadian Club luncheon address here that the pulp and paper industry estimates it needs "20,000 extra men from prisoners-of-war or the armed forces in order to be sure of sufficient pulpwood supply".

Conference Text

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP) — Following is the text of the declaration of Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt, and Premier Stalin at the conclusion of their Teheran Conference:

We, the President of the United States of America, the Prime Minister of Great Britain and the Premier of the Soviet Union, have met these four days past in this capital of our ally Iran and have shaped and confirmed our common policy. We expressed our determination that our nations shall work together in the war and in the peace that will follow.

As to the war, our military staffs have joined in our round-table discussions and we have concerted our plans for the destruction of the German forces. We have reached complete agreement as to the scope and timing of operations which will be undertaken from the east, west and south.

The common understanding which we have here reached guarantees that victory will be ours.

And as to the peace, we are sure that our concord will make it an enduring peace. We recognize fully the supreme responsibility resting upon us and all the United Nations to make a peace which will command the good will of the overwhelming masses of the peoples of the world and banish the scourge and terror of war for many generations.

With our diplomatic advisers we have surveyed the problems of the future. We shall seek the co-operation and active participation of all nations, large and small, whose peoples in heart and mind are dedicated, as are our own peoples, to the elimination of tyranny and slavery, oppression and intolerance. We will welcome them as they may choose to come into a world family of democratic nations.

No power on earth can prevent our destroying the German armies by land, their U-boats by sea and their war plants from the air, our attacks will be relentless and increasing.

From these friendly conferences we look with confidence to the day when all the peoples of the world may live free lives untouched by tyranny and according to their varying desires and their own consciences.

We came here with hope and determination. We leave here friends in fact, in spirit and in purpose.

Signed at Teheran, December 1, 1943.

CIANO REPORTED SHOT BY FIRING SQUAD IN ITALY

Son-in-Law of Mussolini Has Been Executed for High Treason

SHOT IN BACK

London, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Count Galeazzo Ciano, the 40-year-old son-in-law of Benito Mussolini, was executed this morning — shot in the back by a firing squad — according to unconfirmed reports reaching here from the Swiss border.

This latest ironic twist to the Italian upheaval was reported both by Reuters news agency and the Swiss telegraph agency which said the former Italian foreign minister, whose meteoric career was upset when he had a falling out with his father-in-law, had been sentenced to death by a special court of Mussolini's Republican Fascist government sitting in northern Italy to try "traitors."

The life of the 40-year-old count was a story-book tale of a rise to right-hand man to Mussolini in the hey-day of Fascism, of great popularity, prestige and wealth, and then, when the regime was tottering, a break with his father-in-law.

By last October, Mussolini's former affection for his son-in-law had changed until "his only feeling for him is sheer hate," Marshal Pietro Badoglio reported.

For Ciano, at the last and fateful meeting of the Fascist grand council last July 24, was one of 19 members who voted in favor of Mussolini's resignation. Five voted for the Duce.

There was another reason for Ciano's fall from grace—German antipathy for him.

At the time of his dismissal as foreign minister and appointment as ambassador to the Vatican last February it was widely reported that the Nazis disliked and distrusted him.

SALONIKA ATTACKED

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 6—(AP)—British four-engined bombers, flying from bases in the Middle East to the head of the Aegean, attacked the Salonika railway station in Greece last night and started fires in the freight yards, it was announced today.

American bombers yesterday raided shipping off the Dodecanese island of Leros, hitting three ships and forcing the crew to abandon one of them.

12,000 MINERS IN NOVA SCOTIA GIVEN INCREASES

Pay Boosted Dollar a Day and Holidays with Pay

BOARD CRITICIZED

By JACK WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The National War Labor Board today granted wage increases of $1 a day and holidays with pay to some 12,000 Nova Scotia miners, in line with recent awards to miners in the West, but it expressed sharp criticism of the Royal Commission which boosted the Western rates and of the mine union's Western executive.

The increase of $1 a day granted British Columbia and Alberta miners by the O'Connor Royal Commission "once again demonstrated that outlaw methods properly timed make quite an impression," the National Board said, in apparent reference to the western strike which led to the Commission's appointment by Labor Minister Mitchell.

The Commission's decision had "not enhanced the prestige" of the National Board.

The drive to higher wages could "not be allowed to ramble on — otherwise the price ceiling will break."

Realize Consequences

Sane labor realized the consequences of inflation, but "the trouble is that sane labor is in the process of being swallowed in a vortex as is also the work of this Board."

The decision in which these statements appeared was on an application from employees of Dominion Coal Co., Acadia Coal Co. Ltd., and Old Sydney Collieries Ltd., a case in which evidence was submitted a fortnight ago. Today's judgment provided:—

1. Increase of $1 a day in all day wages, and for contract and other employees not above rank of foreman. (District 18 of the United Mine Workers of America had asked an increase of $1.25.)

The increase granted is effective from Nov. 1. The Nova Scotia basic rate thus becomes $4.90 a day.

Week's Vacation

2. One week's vacation with pay each year — not requested by the Union but granted in view of the O'Connor Commission's action in granting two weeks' holidays to Western miners.

3. Decision was reserved on the miners' application for certain other adjustments.

The Board said it had noted "with a considerable degree of

LIVING COSTS TO BE HELD AT PRESENT LEVELS

Prime Minister King Gives Pledge of Floor For Farm Prices After War

WAR ON INFLATION

Ottawa, Dec. 6—(CP)—Canadian management and labor today studied Prime Minister Mackenzie King's broadcast announcement of a new labor code and a revised wage-control order, and awaited further details of the measures, expected within a few days.

The address was delivered Saturday night over the National Network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation under the title "the battle against inflation."

Keystone of the wage-control announcement was Mr. King's statement that existing cost-of-living bonuses will be added to basic wage rates, with government action to hold living costs at their present levels obviating any need for further bonuses.

Details of the new labor code, based on the National War Labor Board's public inquiry some months ago, are expected to be announced Tuesday or Wednesday by Labor Minister Mitchell.

Revised Labor Policy

Here are other major announcements in Mr. King's half-hour address:-

1. The government is prepared to accept the main proposals on which there was agreement in the majority and minority reports of the National War Labor Board's public inquiry as a "basis for a revised labor policy."

2. The new labor code will provide for compulsory collective bargaining and will include formation of a new National War Labor Relations Board, separate from existing War Labor Boards.

3. The government believes it can hold living costs at their present levels. But it will review the whole program of price and wage control and take "appropriate" action if the costs rise more than three per cent and remain at that level for two consecutive months.

4. The government will propose at the next session of parliament legislation for a floor for farm prices after the war.

5. The Prime Minister will outline on another occasion plans for a "national minimum of human welfare," embracing useful employment for all willing to work, standards of nutrition and housing, and social insurance against unemployment, accident, death of the breadwinner, ill health and old age.

Calls on Farmers to Hold Line

Calling upon farmers and labor to hold the line in the battle against inflation, Mr. King said the winning of the war still was the major problem. Until victory was achieved, no amount of planning would solve post-war problems, although Canada was giving attention to such problems as could be foreseen.

Mr. King said it was possible the war against Germany would end next year —but if it was not won before the end of this winter, the next summer would see British,

Coastal Command And U. S. Planes Make 15 Attacks

U-Boats Seeking To Attack 3 Convoys But All Get Thru Safely

ONE BOMBER LOST

London, Dec. 6 —(CP)— Six German submarines were destroyed in the Atlantic in eight days by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Coastal Command planes and United States naval planes smashing a renewed outbreak of U-boat warfare, the Air Ministry announced Sunday.

In all, 15 attacks were made on U-boat wolf packs seeking to attack three Atlantic convoys recently, a communique said, and one R.A.F. heavy bomber was lost.

The convoys were brought safely to port, and so intense was the battle against two large U-boat packs that not a single torpedo was fired against the merchantmen.

Only bad weather saved the U-boats from further losses, the Air Ministry said.

Wing Cmdrs. L. W. Skey of Toronto and L. G. Archambault of Quebec City lead the R.C.A.F. Coastal command squadrons. Wing Cmdr. P. A. Gilchrist of Weyburn, Sask., commanded one of the R.A.F. squadrons.

Bagged by Canadian.

The sixth submarine was destroyed by a Sunderland flying boat in which FO. A. H. Russell of Edmonton was making his first attack as captain.

Russell, flying the big plane, bore through rain and fog and into the heavy fire from the U-boat's conning tower and deck guns. His depth charges blew the conning tower several feet into the air. Russell flew back again, dropping flame floats to mark the survivors for rescue craft.

Describing the attack, he said: "We saw the conning tower rise several feet at the height of the explosion and when the plumes subsided there was no trace of the U-boat. Later we saw oil and about 15 bodies.

Three of the subs fell victim on the sixth day, all being sent down by heavy bombers' depth bombs.

In each of the six confirmed sinkings, wreckage and bodies were seen afterward on the surface, and a total of 80 to 90 survivors were seen following some of the successful attacks. Results were not observed in the other nine attacks.

On the first of the eight days, the communique said, three submarines were attacked by planes from Iceland escorting convoys. No U-boats were seen near the convoys themselves, but they were found by aircraft sweeping the approaches.

On the second day United States heavy planes swept the neighborhood near the convoys, and one plane attacked with unobservable results. Later another United States plane straddled a surfaced U-boat with depth charges, and it sank by the bows, with 30 survivors left in the water. That was the first confirmed sinking.

A heavy bomber on the same day

Winnipeg Girl Found Strangled

Winnipeg, Dec. 6 —(CP)— City police today investigated the death of attractive 16-year-old Grace Edith Cook whose body was found yesterday in a downtown hotel room, 12 to 25 hours after she had been strangled.

Police announced they were holding Albert Westgate, who was paroled last June after serving 14 years of a life imprisonment sentence for the murder of Mrs. Lottie Adams of Suburban St. Vital in 1928.

Westgate, held in custody without charge, helped the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Cook, search for Grace.

He took them to the hotel where he said he had seen Grace Friday night, police said.

Provincial Coroner, Dr. Russell Gorrell, said the girl evidently had been strangled with bare hands. There was no evidence of criminal assault.

German Satellites Advised to Quit War Soon by Soviet Journal

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Dec. 6. (AP)— While publication of the results of Premier Stalin's Teheran conference with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt was awaited here, the Russians applied new pressure today to persuade Germany's satellites to quit the war.

The Soviet Trade Union journal "War and the Working Class" delivered a strong warning that Finland, Hungary and Rumania would suffer worse consequences the longer they lingered in the battle.

"It is clear", the publication said, "that the vassals of Germany which continue the robbers' war against the Allies and delay their withdrawal from the Hitlerite coalition will seriously worsen their fate".

The warning was the strongest yet published here and was regarded as particularly significant in view of the fact that it followed closely on the Teheran meeting.

The article severely criticized Polish circles in London and quoted a Polish newspaper there as reporting that Polish guerillas would fight the Red Army unless the Russians renounced the provinces of Vilna in the Western Ukraine and Western White Russia.

"Soviet public opinion expects the creation of a new, strong democratic Poland will be one of the fruits of victory', the magazine said. "But Poland has no choice. To go with Hitler means to share Hitler's fate. To remain neutral also means to go with Hitler."

PLANE CRASH FATAL

Winnipeg, Dec. 6. (CP)—No. 2 R.C.A.F. Training Command announced last night that an instructor and three students from No. 33 Service Flying Training School, R.A.F., at Carberry, Man., were killed at midnight Friday when their training plane crashed near Sidney, Man. Those killed were United Kingdom personnel.

Impressive Ceremony Marks Presentation of Stalingrad Sword

By LLOYD STRATTON
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Teheran, Nov. 29 (Delayed) (AP) —The story of the meeting between Prime Minister Churchill, Premier Stalin and President Roosevelt which will last the longest probably will be the story told in picture.

Nearly every significant feature of the meeting and its personalities were photographed. But to me the most outstanding and graphically colorful ceremonies of all were those held today in the Russian embassy shortly before the termination of the conference. Gathered there was the greatest concentration of global power ever assembled under the same roof.

First came the solemn, impressive presentation of a Stalingrad sword to Stalin.

The sparkling crimson sheathed sword lay across a table made especially for the occasion and placed in the centre of a 50 by 75-foot room used for all the conferences.

The Stalingrad sword was wrought in London by Tom Beasley, a veteran artisan who has made all the ceremonial swords in Britain for several decades. It was inscribed to the Soviet heros who defended the city.

The domed, sky-lighted room carried a bluish-gray color scheme with four draped windows on the south side and the opposite wall broken by two big fireplaces.

In filed 16 British soldiers, specially chosen from the Buff regiment, who lined up in front of the fire places. They were followed by an honor guard of 22 Russian officers. Each was armed with a Tommy-gun and wore black boots, blue breeches, olive drab tunics with red shoulder boards - and black

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CARELESS USE OR AIR RIFLE CAUSES ALARM

The discharge of an air rifle in the vicinity of the Belleville Agricultural Park caused considerable worry and concern to parents residing on Yeomans St. Sunday afternoon. One lady reported the shooting to the police stating that pellets from an air rifle were striking close to her and her children as they crossed the Exhibition Park. Subsequent police investigations failed to throw any light on the identity of those using the air rifle, although a thorough search of the area was made.

BOYS THROW BOTTLES ON HOUSE ROOFS

City police found glass strewn about the premises at 40 Great St. James St. on Sunday following complaints from the residents that boys were throwing bottles on the rooftop. Investigations revealed that mischievous lads were lurking in the vicinity of Mount Pleasant Road, that overlooks Great St. James St. from a height of approximately 30 feet, and had been amusing themselves by hurling glass bottles down upon the roof-tops of nearby houses on the street below. A considerable amount of glass was found in front of No. 40 Great St. James St. when police arrived, but the responsible parties had dispersed.

DISTRICT POLICE REPORT STOLEN CARS

Two automobiles were reported stolen in other centres over the weekend and co-operation in the matter of recovery sought from local authorities. At Havelock a 1929 model Chevrolet coupe bearing Ontario licence plate number 99-Y-32 was taken, while at Oshawa a 1937 Lincoln coach was stolen The latter vehicle carried marker plate number H-3315 when taken.

DEMONSTRATION ROOM TO BE SET UP IN KIWANIS CENTRE

Members of the Belleville Red Cross Corps will receive special instruction and demonstration on setting up a room in a private home to care for patients having communicable diseases, it was announced this morning by corps officials. Upon instructions from headquarters in Toronto it has been decided to set such a room up in the work rooms at the Kiwanis Centre during the regular meeting Monday evening. Special lectures on the care of such patients will be given during the meeting, it was stated. All members of the corps are asked to be on hand at the Centre at eight this evening.

FRIENDSHIP GROUP SEES RUSSIAN FILM

On Sunday evening the Friendship Group of the Bridge Street United Church met in the basement of the Church with a fine number in attendance. The meeting opened with a sing-song of some of the old carols. A motion picture on the industries of Russia was then shown. After a contest to get all acquainted a dainty lunch was served by the ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Church. The meeting closed with the singing of "Abide With Me". Each Sunday evening a hearty welcome is extended to all young people away from home to attend these meetings at the close of the regular church service.

BLIND PIANIST ENTERTAINS SERVICEMEN

The regular Sunday "Open House" at the Y.M.C.A. was augmented by the appearance of Bill Navan, who entertained the servicemen gathered in the main reading room with selections on the piano. Bill Navan has been blind from early infancy. Born in Belleville in 1923, Bill has taught himself the intricacies of the piano and other musical instruments, which he handles with equal efficiency. He was educated at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind at Brantford, and for several months was in charge of a concession stand at St. Thomas. He is an expert typist.

At the present time he is employed in one of the war plants in the city and is interested in organizing an orchestra among the other employees for playing at dances and other social functions of the company. He entertains in the canteen during the noon-time recess at the plant and his fellow employees gather around the piano and listen to his playing with very evident enjoyment. His appearance at the Y.M.C.A. on Sunday was the first time, but he expressed a desire to return each Sunday and on any other occasion that he might help to entertain the servicemen, who frequent the "Y".

LADIES' AUXILIARY ATTENDS SERVICE

Comrades of Branch 99 of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion B. E. S. L., marched to the strains of the bugle band of the Belleville Air Cadets in a Church Parade on Sunday morning. The service was held at Emmanuel Church and, in spite of the cold morning, most of the members of the organization turned out. The sermon was preached by Rev. Telford Russell who took as his text, "The Great Soldier." A solo was sung by Mr. S. Pomeroy. President D. Bradford expressed thanks to those who came out and also to the band for their services.

6 RETREADED TIRES STOLEN AT PICTON

Tire thieves entered a Picton garage and service station over the weekend and stole six retreaded tires, Provincial Police here learned yesterday. The service station and garage is operated by Howard Woods of Picton and the break-in and robbery was not discovered until Mr. Woods went to his place of business on Sunday. A rear window was forced to permit entrance. The six newly-retreaded tires stolen were of considerable value to the owner.

BYRON LOTT DIRECTOR OF ONT. HONEY CO-OP.

Byron O. Lott, well-known apiarist of Sidney township residing at Holloway, has again been appointed to the directorate of the Ontario Honey Co-operative, it has been learned. The organization held their annual meeting last week in Toronto with Mr. Lott being re-appointed as member of the Board of Directors. Mr. Lott lives at Holloway during the summer months and stays at the Hotel Quinte during the winter.

GEORGE MARTIN DIES SUDDENLY

Victim of Stroke While Hunting — Body Guarded by His Dog Found by Searchers

Picton, Dec. 6 — Death came suddenly to George Martin while hunting on MacDonald's Island, West Lake, on Friday. His lifeless body was found beside a tree, with his dog keeping a watch and refusing to leave his master. According to Dr. D. S. Lighthall, Mr. Martin suffered a hemorrhage of the brain. He had left with his dog and gun, not leaving word of his whereabouts. When he did not return late in the afternoon, his son, Bruce Martin, set out and succeeded in securing information which led him to MacDonald's Island, now owned by Garnet Rowsome of Belleville. He did not succeed in finding his father and was joined by a search party from the district. Car lights were used and the body was found sitting beside a tree. The dog refused to let searchers near until the son arrived.

Mr. Martin was a veteran of the last war, having served in the 39th Battalion. He was in England nearly three years and suffered a disability as a result of an air raid. He was born in England and came to Canada as a boy of 15 years. He farmed in Athol township until seven years ago when he went to the Outlet to reside, his son having a summer resort there. He was a popular guide for summer visitors and keen on hunting and fishing. He was a member of the Canadian Legion and of the United Church.

Survivors are his wife, a son, Bruce, and a brother, Stirling Martin.

The funeral was held at the Disciple Church at West Lake this afternoon.

1000 Children Greet Santa

The arrival of Santa Claus here Saturday attracted crowds which thronged the streets for some hours, and more than one thousand children greeted him at a local department store during the morning, while additional hundreds visited him at other stores in the afternoon. Arranged by the Chamber of Commerce, the parade was held down Main Street. Santa was seated on a wagon decorated with evergreen and drawn by a team of fine horses. Preceding him, on another decorated wagon, was Picton band who added to the gayety of the occasion with their music.

Municipal voters went to the polls today to elect reeves for Athol and North Marysburgh townships and councillors in Bloomfield. All others were given acclamations.

Tabernacle Church Women's Association Host at Open House

The regular Open House service for the entertainment of the men and women on active service was conducted by the Y. M. C. A. Sunday.

Entertainment of various sorts; the free use of showers; the Reading Room; and other facilities were made available; music and hearty sing-songs formed an important part.

Mr. H. W. Ackerman, Mr. J. E. Shortt served as a reception committee Mr. Ron Hupfield, War Services, Secretary, and members of the Hostess Club were busy with the entertainment activities.

The Women's Associaion of Tabernacle United Church provided splendid refreshments for the afternoon tea served at five o'clock. This was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The evening was spent in musical entertainment followed by a Quiz'.

Several men from Australia were among the guests yesterday and each Sunday finds representatives from almost all quarters of the globe uniting in the Sunday "At Home" program.

SPREAD INVESTIGATION

Halifax, Dec. 6. (CP) — The hunt for Cmdr. F. M. Johnson of the Royal Navy spread afield today as police pressed their investigation into his mysterious disappearance and the slaying of his young daughter here.

Circulars describing the officers were sent out to law enforcement agencies in Canada and the United States as city police, though convinced Johnson took his life after killing the girl last Wednesday, did not neglect the possibility he might still be alive.

Parole-Breaking Boy Is Held By City Police

Only a short time after he had escaped the custody of police here, an 11-year-old parole-breaking boy from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School was re-arrested as he emerged from Docter's Hotel on Station Street where he had stolen $14.50 from a cash register Sunday afternoon.

The lad was apprehended by city police lurking at the rear of Marble Hall off the upper end of Pinnacle Street shortly before three o'clock Sunday morning. He was lodged in the cell block after it was learned the boy had broken his parole after being employed by a nearby farmer recently.

Sunday morning police were told by the lad that he had stolen a bicycle here and abandoned it near the old fair grounds off Wellington Street. Accompanied by P.C. Evans the lad went to the scene in the police cruiser, where he disappeared in the thick brush at the south end of Wellington Street leaving the officer unable to follow through the low underbrush.

Two hours later Constable Culhane, of the Canadian National police, observed a young lad emerging from the rear of Docter's Hotel and becoming suspicious Culhane apprehended the lad. City police were notified and P.C. Evans again had his quarry in custody. Found on the lad's person was a large sum of money. Later he admitted he stole $14.50 from the cash register at Docter's Hotel after stealthily gaining entrance by the rear door.

Today at the police station the boy admitted to authorities he had stolen $10.85 from off a counter in a Front Street department store on Saturday afternoon while the clerk was not looking. The boy then purchased a wallet and was carrying all of his ill-begotten gains in the wallet when apprehended. He will be returned to the Bowmanville institution.

Canadian Tank Soldiers Settle Down in Camps

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(C. P. War Correspondent)

An Italian port, Dec. 6 (C.P. Cable) — Canadian tank soldiers newly arrived from Britain are settling down in camps on Italian soil. Trained for months in England, they came to Italy to join the men who had been in action since invasion day, September 3.

Their ships brought them to this busy, war-scarred port and lorries then conveyed them to camp in flat country and fruit groves. The men, established in tents, found the weather colder than they had expected but the scenery as beautiful as pictured.

Headquarters staff with the troops included Major Pat Grossman of Chilliwack, B.C., who is second in command.

Fire Destroys Sidney Twp. Townhall, Much Road Equipment Also Damaged

Fire of an undertermined origin stated to have started in an open part of an adjoining implement shed completely destroyed the Sidney township town hall at Wallbridge early Monday morning, together with implement shed and causing unestimated damage to township road equipment contained therein.

Replacement cost of the town hall was estimated by township officials to be in the neighborhood of $5,000 while the amount of damage to township road equipment contained in the implement shed was not estimated. Equipment damaged included a crawler tractor, stone crusher, snowplow, graders and other tools. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Discovery of the blaze in the implement shed was made at 1:30 this morning by Don Patrick of Frankford and another man who were proceeding through Wallbridge to their homes at that hour. They stated that had there been sufficient water handy then the blaze might have been put out.

With no water immediately available, however, the two men turned to getting nearby —neighbors out of bed. These in turn telephoned to neighbors farther away but by the time a bucket brigade could be formed the flames had progressed to the town hall proper.

Belleville Fire Dept. Assists

Fearing for the safety of other nearby buildings in the village a call was put through for assistance from the Belleville Fire Department which answered the alarm with five men, including Fire Chief William Lynch, and the city pumper. To the work of the fire department today was credited the saving of the residence occupied by Mr. Morley Phillips. The house was only about 30 feet from the town hall.

"We simply could not have saved the Phillips' house or barn, or possibly the Wallbridge cheese factory, if the Belleville Fire Department had not given us assistance," stated Deputy Reeve Sam Nicolson.

100 Years Old

Under the searing heat of the burning town hall built one hundred years ago with sturdy timber framework, the Phillips' residence caught fire on several occasions but with streams of water from the city pumper equipment the blaze was extinguished. A bucket brigade, pumping water from Phillips' well, kept the pumper supplied with water.

"We were indeed pretty lucky," stated Fire Chief Lynch. "If the Phillips' house had really got going nothing would have saved the barn immediately to the west, or the Wallbridge cheese factory. As it was only the paint on the walls was seared, while the roof was kept from igniting by constant streams of water."

No Statement on Cause

No comment on the probable cause of the fire was made by township officials when contacted by the Ontario Intelligencer this morning. They repeated the statement of those discovering the fire that the blaze had started in the open shed to the north of the hall. No fire had been in the hall proper since Friday evening, it was stated.

Township records were contained in the safe built in a corner of the building. Whether the strong box withstood the heat of the burning building was not known. Insurance on the building was carried by a Stirling agent, while that on the implements was written by a Frankford man.

Dancehall Customer Alleged to Have Drawn Knife During Ejection

While ejecting an undesired patron from the Aajmaa Club dance hall on Front St. Saturday night, the party is said to have pulled a knife and threatened Clem Bowler, the manager of the dance, police were told later.

According to reports received by police Mr. Bowler had requested the undesired customer to leave the dance as he was annoying other dancers. When requested to leave the party refused and Mr. Bowler physically ejected the man from the premises. It was while putting him out that the undesired person is alleged to have pulled out a knife and threatened Mr. Bowler, eye witnesses agreed when the matter was reported to police. A description of the man was given the authorities, as well as his name, police stated today.

Airman in Fracas

At about the same time in the hallway adjoining the Trianon Ballroom across the street an airman from the R.C.A.F. became engaged in fisticuffs and was generally causing disturbances. He was apprehended by police and detained until given over to the custody of R.C.A.F. service police and returned to his station.

Influenza Claims 376 in London

London, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Influenza claimed 376 lives in London and other large cities in Britain during the week ended Nov. 27, it was disclosed today, more than tripling the number of fatalities recorded during the previous week.

Health authorities describing the current influenza wave as the worst since that of 1937, which caused 2,000 deaths weekly at its peak, acknowledged that the number of cases was rising steadily.

Prayers were said in northern churches Sunday for the recovery of victims.

De Marigny, Wife Arrive in Cuba

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 6 — (AP) — Count Alfred De Marigny, who was asked to leave Nassau, Bahamas, following his acquittal of the murder of his rich father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, has arrived here with his 19-year-old wife, Nancy.

The couple, who arrived here yesterday in a small freight boat chartered for the trip of two nights and a day, will stay temporarily in a suite at the Hotel Nacional. They expected to take a home later in suburban Varadero.

Seven Fatalities During Weekend

By The Canadian Press

There were seven weekend fatalities in Eastern Canada. Three lost their lives in a Montreal fire, two were drowned, one was accidentally electrocuted, and one was killed in an automobile accident.

Three infant children of Adrian Boisvert — Nernand, Lise, and Pierette — were burned to death in a fire which destroyed his Montreal home early Sunday morning.

Willard Campbell, five, and William McInerney, four, both of Saint John, N.S., drowned Saturday when they fell through the ice of nearby Treadwell's Lake.

George Kennedy, 43, died instantly Saturday when he touched a metal framework carrying high-tension electrical wires at the plant of the Dominion foundries and Steel Company at Hamilton, Ont.

L. Cpl. Eddie Humphries of the Canadian Army Provost Corps was killed Saturday when the jeep in which he was riding blew a tire and crashed into a rock on a highway near Walford, Ont., about 50 miles west of Sudbury.

8th Army Drives To Moro River, 5th Takes Heights

Algiers, Dec. 6 — (AP) — The Anglo-American 5th Army, by-passing German strong points, has captured new heights commanding the road to Rome west of Mignano, while the British 8th Army's drive has carried to the Moro River, 10 miles north of the Sangro, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Nazis launched strong counter-attacks against British and American infantry storming the heights in bitter hand-to-hand battles, and threw in new reinforcements including mechanized grenadiers against the 8th Army in a desperate attempt to halt the Allied drives. A flame-throwing tank was captured by British troops.

A counter-attack west of Venafro was hurled back by the 5th Army with severe losses.

Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's headquarters announced that the enemy, who is fighting stubbornly for every inch of ground, had been driven from three commanding elevations by Americans who are smashing into Nazi fortifications in the area of the rugged slopes of Mount Aggiore. British infantry of the 5th Army are rooting out Nazi defenders in the equally-rough area of Mount Camino.

From their newly-won positions the Allied troops could gaze out across the valley of Cassino, and beyond it to the valley which leads northwest into Rome.

German Units Cut Off

In one sector, small units of Germans still holding out on the summit of a ridge were cut off by the Allied drive well beyond.

British warships, steaming within range of enemy shore batteries, were disclosed to have supported the 8th Army's drive up the Adriatic coast in recent days with bombardments of German supply routes, bases and shipping.

The British destroyers bombarded the coastal road between Pescara and Giulianova, sent shells screaming into the coastal towns of Ancona and San Benedetto, and sank three enemy coastal craft and a merchant vessel.

Aerial support of the Allied ground forces was limited by bad weather, but the enemy-held Yugoslav port of Split was bombed yesterday by medium bombers and a floating dock at Orbetello, on Italy's west coast, was hit and left burning.

The British 8th Army's drive to the Moro River represented a gain of about 2½ miles from San Vito, capture of which was announced yesterday, and carried the Adriatic offensive to within 14 miles of Pescara.

Victory Strategy Agreement May Lead to Try for Knockout Against Germany This Winter

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 6. — (AP) —President Roosevelt Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin fixed the time for an Anglo-American invasion of Western Europe at their conference in Teheran, and also apparently agreed upon a secondary assault on the continent from the south.

This "Big Three" agreement on final victory strategy, calling for co-ordinated attacks on three sides of Hitler's vaunted European fortress, may make it possible now to try for knockout blows against Germany this winter.

Britain and the United States have been massing troops and munitions for many months in preparation for such grand scale attacks, and it seems likely that the plans of this conference can be put into operation in less than the six months which Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt usually have had to allow for their high strategy decisions.

Those are the main points of military implication noted by Washington observers in the Teheran declaration announced today.

Further Disclosures Possible.

Further disclosures about the accomplishments of the momentous meeting are considered possible. It has been the custom of the President and Prime Minister on some past occasions to enlarge in subsequent speeches upon the initial statements of conference achievements.

The enemy will have to find out for himself on the battlefields of Europe, however, the time, strength and direction of the military actions agreed upon, so that any further specific amplification will probably be of a political nature.

Both Washington and London had expected that an "unconditional surrender" ultimatum would be considered at Teheran. But if it was, the three leaders either decided to issue it at a future moment more propitious for a German crack-up or voted against it altogether.

The declaration must remove from the German leaders and masses any lingering hope they hold of employing the strategy of divide-and-conquer. It confronts them with a combination of powers which they must surely realize is invincible.

Reds Threaten Railway Centre Of Mogilev

London, Dec. 6 (CP) — Smashing ahead northwest of Propoisk, the Red army today was threatening Mogleiv, one of the last important German-held rail centres in White Russia, as other Russian units squeezed the Nazi defence lines near Zhlobin and Rogachev in the Gomel area.

A Soviet communique said the Red army hurled back German counter attacks and swept forward northwest of Propoisk to capture the heavily fortified strongholds of Varodol, Bahki and Zabluka.

Front dispatches, telling of deep Russian penetrations from one end of White Russia to the other, said the Germans were beginning to show signs of a lack of reserves and were using engineers as first line troops in some sectors of the snow-swept front.

To the south in the Kremenchug area, the Russian war bulletin said, Soviet units captured several strong points after fierce engagements which often developed into hand-to-hand fighting.

Nazi Assaults Fail

The communique said the Nazis were continuing to attack in the Cherkasy area, between Kremenchug and Kiev, but all their assaults were repulsed.

A German communique said yesterday that the Russians had launched fierce new attacks in the Crimea from their bridgehead, northeast of Kerch, but were hurled back. Rumanian satellite troops, the Nazi bulletin said, broke through Soviet positions south of Kerch and dashed for the coast. The Russians made no mention of action in the Crimea.

German Force Wiped Out.

The Soviet communique said the Germans had landed on Kindurinskaya Kosa, at the mouth of the Dnieper River a few days ago, but the force was wiped out yesterday. The Germans had taken Vordtadt and Pokrovskey Khutara before the Red army launched the counter-attack, the communique said.

A Moscow dispatch said the worst snowstorms of the season were sweeping White Russia, making the Red army's advance difficult.

The dispatch pointed out, however, that Russian troops were on three sides of Kalinkovicl, Mozyr, Zhlobin and Roagchev—strung out along the Leningrad-Odessa railway.

Roosevelt Wishes U.S. Troops in Iran Early Return Home

Leaders Plan for World in Which War Will Cease to be a Necessity

Teheran, Iran, Dec. 2 (Delayed) —(AP)—President Roosevelt made two informal speeches today to United States soldiers based at Camp Amirabad here, telling them of his meetings with Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill, praising their work here, and wishing them an early return home.

He said he and Messrs. Stalin and Churchill had made progress in their effort "to plan for a world for us and our children when war would cease to be a necessity . . but of course the first thing is to win the war . . and all of you who are here and farther south in Iran can always remember you have taken a very necessary and very useful part in winning the war."

Speaking to a large body of men after an inspection, the President said:

"If you had said to me or I had said to you three years ago that we would meet in Iran today, we would have probably said that we were completely crazy.

"I got here four days ago to meet with the Marshal of Soviet Russia and the Prime Minister of England to try to do two things.

"The first was to lay military plans for co-operation between the three nations looking toward the winning of the war just as fast as we possibly can, and I think we have made progress toward that end. The other purpose was to talk over world conditions after the war, to try to plan for a world for us and for our children when war could cease to be a necessity.

"We have made great progress in that, also, but of course the first thing is to win the war and I want to tell you that you, all of you individually and collectively, are part of that purpose.

"All of you who are here today and all of you who are farther south in Iran can always remember that you have taken a very necessary and a very useful part in winning the war."

RUSSIA'S PLAN OF EDUCATION IS DESCRIBED

Miss Margaret Gould of Toronto Speaks at Bridge Street United Church

"To my mind the Russian secret weapon is not at all secret," said Miss Margaret Gould of Toronto, well-known social worker, speaking at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening. "It is the education of the masses, and a tremendous opportunity for the people to learn to work. All the people now had a chance to go to school, learning not only to read and write but also to learn about science. It was a tremendous task for the young and older."

Another phase of the so-called "secret weapon" was the spread of Russian health services and the eradication of disease. Today Russia is controlling epidemics in territory retaken from the Germans. Another is a tremendous emphasis on the life of the child and also the important place the mother holds. Other factors were the emphasis on young people marrying and having healthy children, scientific teaching in feeding, recreation for the young, training of young people to live worthy lives. Mechanical and scientific training was another angle of Russia's development.

All children have the advantage of recreation centres. They are trained to get jobs and everything is applied on a national scale and not on the basis of charity. The constitution pledges the right to work, to health protection and to the preparation for motherhood. There are nurseries for children of mothers who work.

Change in Russian Psychology

There has been a tremendous chang in the psychology of the Russians in the last twenty years. The Russians were formerly sad with a drear outlook on the future but under the new plan the people show a happier life with plenty of fun and humor, for they are easily made to laugh or to cry.

Russian invention has been proven by the use of military devices in the war.

"To my mind," Miss Gould stated, "the finest civilization is where you have a moral basis to society."

The Russians have outlawed discrimination in their recognition of the equality of the people.

In that she believed that Russia had made its finest gain. This is laid down in the constitution that all people are equal and have a right to health and that men and women are equal.

The Russian idea is that when one works he should benefit by what he produces and that no man should get ahead of another but that one should get ahead with the others.

Business of self-government is carried into camps, schools, waterworks plants, nurseries. Everything is done by the people themselves, they pay for it and they enjoy it.

Set Back by War.

But under the war the whole country has been overworked and has suffered a heavy set back. It is almost incomprehensible that 340,000 square miles of land had been devastated by war and that the areas overrun by the enemy had been occupied by many millions. On the battlefields it is estimated that Russia has lost six millions. About 15 to 20 millions have died or been lost or taken into slavery in Germany. Germans admit several millions of Russians have been carried off to Germany to labor.

Today millions of Russians are living in the forests or dugouts without schools or hospitals or comforts.

Miss Gould praises Canadians for what they have done in their gifts-to-Russia fund and she emphasized the need, for in Russia clothing and furniture are not being manufactured. Russians have expressed their gratitude for these gifts by notes written on scraps of paper picked up or on pieces of wallpaper.

Miss Gould spoke of the suggestion in Canada to adopt towns and cities, mentioning what some cities had already done in this regard. She mentioned food and surgical instruments as some of the donations Canadian municipalities might send to somewhat similar municipalities in Russia.

How near Canada is to her neighbor, Russia, was indicated by Miss Gould who said that after the war it might be possible to use a holiday to motor in Russia via Alaska.

She closed on the note that Russia is a neighbor who will mean more to Canada in the future. "The moral basis of Russian life is a good deal like ours," she remarked. "We have come to know this people through war and we want to known them in future in other ways."

Two Russian films were shown, one of happy childhood in Russia and the other on how Russian wounded are cared for.

70 Survivors Tell Of Struggle In Icy Waters

Seattle, Dec. 6 — (AP) — A two-day struggle for life in the icy waters of the North Pacific off the Alaskan coast was described here last night by 70 survivors of the Liberty ship John P. Gaines which broke in two in a heavy sea.

The United States Navy in a brief announcement Saturday, reported the breaking up of the ship and said 11 men were still missing in a lifeboat. A U. S. Army transport rescued the 70 men.

Obituary

DAVID B. PIERSEN
(Aurora, Ill.)

Funeral services were conducted last Thursday in Aurora, Illinois, for David Bernard Piersen, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Stephens-Adamson manufacturing Company. Mr. Piersen passed away on November 29th following a heart attack and was 63 years of age.

One of the best known industrialists in the State of Illinois, the late Mr. Piersen was also well known in Belleville. He worked with the Stephens-Adamson Company from its founding in 1902 and in 1923 was made president, and in 1934 Chairman of the Board of Directors. G. A. Freeman, vice-president of the Canadian company and E. H. Walters, manager of the Toronto office were in Aurora to attend the funeral services.

MRS. FRANK (O'BRIEN) O'NEIL
(Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Frank O'Neil, who prior to her marriage was Miss Libby O'-Brien, Bettes Street, Belleville, died in Leaside, Toronto, early this morning. During her residence here Mrs. O'Neil was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church and was highly esteemed. Old friends here will regret to learn of her death.

Surviving her are her husband; one son, Francis; one sister, Mrs. George Brown, Toronto, and one brother Mr. Peter O'Brien, Hamilton.

The funeral will take place Thursday morning in Toronto.

Dropped First Bomb In War on Germany, Flier Now Missing

Guelph, Dec. 6 — (CP) — First Canadian to drop a bomb on Germany in this war and the first Guelph man to be decorated, Sqdn. Ldr. Herbert Montague (Tubby) Robertson, 25-year-old holder of the D.F.C., is missing after air operations against the enemy.

Notification that he had failed to return from operation was contained in a telegram received today by his sister, Mrs. Roy Chappell, from the R.C.A.F. casualties officer in Ottawa.

Sqdn. Ldr. Robertson was awarded the D.F.C. early in 1940 after an attack on the Ruhr Valley. In a low-level attack, his crew dropped bombs squarely on the target. The aircraft was tossed 300 feet in the air by the explosions.

His citation later said the decoration was awarded "for remarkable courage and presence of mind when his aircraft was endangered." He suffered a head injury which kept him in hospital three months.

Sqdn. Ldr. Robertson returned to England eight months ago after acting as an instructor in Western Canada for more than a year.

Huge Production

An item of news on Friday indicates to what a degree the production of Allied war materials has been going forward. It was that more than one thousand four-engine bombers rolled out of United States aircraft factories in November while the output of all U. S. planes reached the great total of 8,789, and naval construction struck a new peak which included the completion of about a dozen aircraft carriers. Combat vessel construction made the greater part of the quarter million tons of naval production. To the United States navy went more than 2,000 planes and nearly two thousand of them were fighters and bombers. The 1943 program of building 260 destroyer-escort craft would be surpassed at the weekend Secretary Knox said Friday night, reaching about three hundred.

These are figures which speak for themselves. They show why Hitler was anxious in the early days of the war to strike swiftly and set his hopes upon the blitzkrieg to bring it about.

Then these figures have to be taken in association with the production from the other United Nations.

Such signs show how powerful are the movements on land, on sea and in the air against the enemy. It is productioin which Hitler and Tojo cannot approach. By this output the Germans are suffering losses in all phases of the war, being beaten everywhere, as Allied output rises and the Axis ability to produce dwindles.

Berlin Disappearing

Estimates now placed on the battering of Berlin are that at least half of the city has been destroyed, the entire centre of the capital gone and half the buildings wiped out.

Berlin more than any other capital city is the very heart and nerves of the state. It was highly industrialized and it represented the spirit of Nazism and Hitlerism. Hence the blows which she has received in recent air blows mean destruction of a large share of war productivity and a disruption which cannot be repaired. They mean too that the alleged "invincibility" of Hitlerism which Hitler and the Nazis so much exalted and tried to use as a weapon of war simply does not exist nor did exist and that the power of the Germans to prevent these late disasters is non-existent. Goebbels has said that Germany could not long delay reprisal blows but the blows have not come and this fact should account for more loss of morale by the Huns.

Allied Power

In the battle of the Sangro river just before the recent Allied advance Allied guns fired ten thousand shells an hour against the enemy. This demonstrates the power of the Allied forces against which the German forces on the east and on the south front and elsewhere and in the air cannot prevail.

Hitler had planned by intrigue, surprise and blitzkrieg to win and he had launched the war after years of preparation when he thought the time was ready for him to strike. It took the Allies time to develop the great manpower and industrial power they possessed and overtake and wear down the enemy. Now Hitler cannot compare with the industrial power of the Unitied Nations which has been harnessed to the war to crush Hitler and free the enslaved states. The ebb of Hitler's striking strength has been very apparent in the last year and more. He cannot do anything to make good the losses for his power is shrinking. Any superiority he had has long since departed, never to be regained. Great as Allied power is today it will show very clearly in action in the final blows against the aggressor Germans and Japanese what the Allied power really is. Allied munition and naval production as well as the manufacture of planes gives some notion of the Allied strength. The ten thousand shells an hour hurled against Hitler's troops in Italy tell a tale of the coming end, for Allied power is far in the lead of Germany and Japan.

Blow at Heart of Nazi Conspiracy

(New York Herald Tribune)

Mass bombing is a terrible and a repulsive thing, even when it is visited upon Berlin, the arrogant capital which invented it and has inflicted it with ruthless savagery on so many others. But it is at its least repulsive when it falls upon Berlin, and in Berlin it falls on that forbidding section between the Tiergarten and the Spree which is at once the heart and centre of the great Nazi conspiracy of evil and their fantastically ugly monument to all the pride and barbarity of German militarism. There is hardly another section of similar size on the face of the earth where one could see the block-busters detonate with less regret.

Berlin is a curious city, beautiful by nature with its many parks, wide avenues and densely tree-lined streets, and made hideous by man with the vast, tasteless, overstuffed architecture of the empire or the equally vast, pretentious and graceless erections of Hitlerian vainglory. One can only smile with a heavy irony at the propaganda sputterings over the "destructions of irreplaceable art and historic buildings." Art there was there before the war, accumulated in the great Berlin museums from more gifted peoples; but it is to be hoped that the Nazis may have had the grace to store that important heritage of European civilization in safety. There was little art on the streets and the history was of a kind which civilization will gladly forget.

From Swiss and Swedish reports the bombers seem to have done the job which many millions have been longing to see. Apparently they went straight down the Wilhelmstrasse from the Unter den Linden toward the Potsdamer station. They reportedly levelled Goebbel's and Ribbentrop's new palaces; one can only hope that they got the Foreign Ministry, Goering's colossal Air Ministry the source of so much evil, and, though it may be hoping too much, Hitler's splendid Reich Chancellery from which Nazism was to rule the world for the next thousand years. None would weep for them, none, anywhere on this earth. Retribution is at last reaching to the very inner heart of the Nazi empire.

New Rail Control

(Christian Science Monitor)

Almost as if the need for it had been foreseen, an unusual device is being added to single-track railway lines as the equipment, and finances, permit. It is known as "CTC," which means "centralized traffic control."

By means of this device, a dispatcher is enabled to control the movements of signals and switches for a distance as much as 100 miles or more. With a lighted panel before him, the movements of all trains in this district are displayed constantly to him. He notes what freight trains are covering the road rapidly, and, by means of the levers before him, can signal others to take sidings, for which he throws the switches in advance.

Sometimes, these "meets" (as the meetings of two trains in opposite directions are termed) can be figured so closely that neither train is obliged to come to a full stop, the one in the siding pulling through slowly. Prior to the introduction of this device, trains had to receive train-orders at various intermediate stations, and to slow down or stop for these. Once issued, it was difficult to supersede them, until trains had reached another station.

But now, the dispatcher merely adjusts his signals to conform to the progress of each train, as indicated on the illuminated panel before him.

JUST FOLKS

FRIENDSHIP'S SOURCE

Oh what is it that makes the friend
We cherish to our journey's end?
Not merely flesh than can be weighed,
Measured and in fine dress arrayed,
For there are those of size exact
Which oft from us but scorn attract.
So, friendship, constant, unafraid,
Must be of subtler substance made.

What is it unto which we cling
And give our hearts to cherishing?
Not outer looks, for all have learned
That love is not with those concerned,
But deeper seeks the shining eye,
Sure understanding of a sigh
And, that which is more precious still,
Devotion through both good and ill.

Just hear a name! What comes to mind?
More than the passing strangers find?
The spirit underneath the smile,
The strength that walks the extra mile
For company when need is great,
The willingness to share our fate
And strength on which we can depend,
These are the symbols of a friend.

Plane Crashes Near Bancroft Early Saturday

Pilot of Training Plane From Uplands Lost in Snow Storm

FLIER IN HOSPITAL

Bancroft, Dec. 6—(Special)—Apparently becoming lost in a blinding snowstorm which swept through North Hastings on Saturday a Harvard R. C. A. F. training plane from Uplands Air Training Station at Ottawa crashed into a grove of trees one quarter mile southeast of Bancroft shortly after ten o'clock Saturday morning. Operator of the plane, D. Potts, suffered only scalp wounds and shock as the small trees broke the force of the crash, although almost completely wrecking the aircraft.

Villagers heard the aircraft circling low over the village the operator apparently seeking a landing place a short time before the crash occurred. Ten minutes after the crash the flier was in Bancroft Red Cross hospital under the care of Dr. S. S. Lumb, who also attended at the scene of the crash. The flier regained consciousness shortly after reaching the hospital.

That the aircraft had been flying through sleet and snow some time prior to the crash was indicated on the flier's report pad strapped to his knee.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

These settlers had to carve from the dense forests not only homes and furnishings but also boats, wagons, sleighs and other necessities. Picture the first log cabins. Rude, small dwellings seldom more than 20 by 15 feet they were built by the joint labor of the colonists—who knew perhaps better than we do the value of co-operation. Round logs were notched at the corners and raised one upon another. Glass was seldom available, so oiled paper stretched over the holes in the walls took the place of sparkling window panes.

Delicious meals bubbled and sizzled in the depths of the enormous fireplaces, many of which were 9 feet wide and 5 feet high. Pots and kettles hung from a cross bar of iron or wood. Potatoes, pork and other meats were cooked in the pots. Bread was baked in the big kettles, usually about 2 feet in diameter, or in an oven adjacent to the fireplace. Roasts grew tender on the spit.

To each according to his ranked Empire Loyalist soldier—settlers. The field officer was granted 5000 acres—the captain 3000—the subaltern 2000—the non-commissioned officer and private, 200. And 50 acres more for his wife and each child. On becoming twenty-one, each child was given 200 acres. Tools and agricultural implements were also given to the pioneers.

Almost anything provided an excuse for a celebration in those far-off, trying times. Hospitality came to the fore with the visit of a neighbor, the success of a hunting expedition, the launching of a homemade boat, a wedding, the completion of work at a "bee." Life would have been unbearable without some fun now and then. Later on, when fierce political battles wefe waged, the victorious gathered for prolonged feasting. Many an ox was roasted whole to satisfy the hunger of weary parliamentarians and their equally worn-out henchmen.

Labor Minister Daly Disappointed

Toronto, Dec. 6—(CP)— Labor Minister Daley of Ontario last night expressed disappointment at Prime Minister King's announcement of a federal proposal in his Saturday night broadcast of a labor code applicable to war industries only.

"We are very disappointed," Dr. Daley said, 'It is our firm opinion that no proper distinction can be drawn between what is a war industry and what is not a war industry. A Dominion code should apply to all industry."

Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell, who represented Ontario at the Ottawa conference, said Ontario's position had not changed nor would it be changed, but he wished to study the Dominion play before commenting upon it.

Queen's Park sources last night indicated that Premier Drew prepared a statement before leaving for the United Kingdom which anticipated Mr. King's announcement and protested against it.

HEALTH CHATS

TREATMENT OF COLITIS

The common and troublesome disorder of the large bowel, evidenced by periodic attacks of pain, together with alternating attacks of constipation and diarrhea, has been called by a number of names. It is referred to as irritable colon, as unstable colon, as simple colitis, as spastic colitis, and as mucous colitis.

According to Doctor Turner Bynum, of Oklahoma, this disease is due to a disturbance of the way in which the bowel acts in nervous persons, and it may be brought on not only by conditions within the bowel itself, but also by upsets in other organs of the body such as the liver or gallbladder.

There is no actual inflammation of any part of the colon or large bowel when the disease first begins. However, as time progresses such inflammation may appear.

Doctor Bynum says that our present-day method of living, with its hustle and bustle and high speed activity, often interferes with proper care of the normal intestinal functions. As a result, in part at least, nervous indigestion develops.

It would appear that colitis runs in families. Nervous tension, anxiety and worry, sleeplessness, unhappiness, family difficulties and various forms of dissipation have brought on this kind of irritable bowel. Among other things which may help produce this condition by acting directly on the bowel, is the taking of laxatives and various roughage foods.

If the contents of the bowel move through it too rapidly, time is not given for the fluids to be absorbed, and so the stool is loose or liquid. On the other hand, if the material moves too slowly, too much fluid is absorbed from it, and the mass becomes hardened.

As a general rule, when a person includes enough fruits, vegetables, and whole grain cereals in his diet, enough bulk remains to produce normal elimination.

The continued use of laxatives results in inflammation and the development of colitis.

In treating the irritable colon, a bland diet is used. This diet is made up of such foods as eggs, meat, fish, fowl, soups, milk, cereals, cheese — such as rice and farina—and white bread. Macaroni or spaghetti, custards or puddings, gelatin, potatoes, bananas and fruit juices are also used. No coarse foods are employed. Vegetables and fruits are avoided at first, but gradually are added. They must be well cooked, and often mashed through a sieve. Sweets, nuts, and highly seasoned foods must be limited. When this diet is employed, some preparation which forms bulk, such as agar-agar or psyllium seed, may have to be used. Mineral oil may also be of value.

Since many patients remain on this somewhat limited diet for some time, vitamin preparations must be given in order to prevent deficiencies. As the condition improves, the coarser foods such as whole-grain cereals, vegetables and fruits are added. Warm oil enemas may be given and retained over night to produce a bowel movement when necessary. The patient's nervous condition must also be treated. Various sedative drugs are helpful in this respect. Atropine also has been found of value.

CAT AND MOUSE ACT

Thirty years ago the British government was having difficulty in enforcing the "cat and mouse act."

"Cat and mouse act" was the nickname of the Prisoners Act passed in 1913 by the British parliament.

Early in that year the withdrawal of a reform bill seemed to endanger the chances of women's suffrage and suffragists under the leadership of Emmeline Pankhurst began a campaign of violence, which consisted in smashing windows, defacing golf links, interrupting public meetings, cutting telegraph wires and burning buildings.

When sent to prison for these acts of violence the women went on "hunger strike" with a view of reducing themselves to such a state of ill health that the government would be compelled by public opinion to release them.

The government countered with a law whereby such prisoners could be temporarily released on the grounds of ill health.

This act was ridiculed by the public because it gave the government the privilege of rearresting the women after they had recovered sufficiently from the effects of the hunger strike.

Many prisoners were released and rearrested under the Prisoners Act and thus made to serve out their full sentences in installments.

Of course, the law was called "the cat and mouse act" because it suggested the way a cat plays with a captured mouse, releasing it only to seize it again before it can make good its escape.

After a bomb outrage at Lloyd George's house, Mrs. Pankhurst was sentenced to three years of penal servitude.

During the first year she spent only about 30 days in prison, although she was arrested and released no fewer than eight times.

At the outbreak of the First World War, Mrs. Pankhurst ceased all women's suffrage activities and engaged in recruiting and other patriotic work.

The London Daily Mail was the first to apply the term "Suffragettes" to Mrs. Pankhurst and her militant daughters.

At the time of her death in 1928, Mrs. Pankhurst was running for a seat in Parliament with the support of the Conservative party and a year later she was honored with a bronze plaque in Westminster Abbey.

Bitter Fighting Rages Along Entire Yugoslav Front

London, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Bitter fighting raged along almost the entire length of Yugoslavia's irregular front today as fresh reserves of German and Bulgarian troops were thrown into the struggle to smash guerilla opposition, a communique from the forces of Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) said.

The broadcast announcement said reinforcements being rushed to Yugoslavia included two divisions from Austria. It asserted Polish, French and Russian prisoners were being used to plug the Nazi ranks, and repeated the charge that Chetnik guerillas of Gen. Draja Mihailovic were fighting alongside the invading armies.

Particularly bitter fighting was reported from Slavonia, where the communique said the enemy failed to break through into liberated territory after achieving local successes in the capture of Cacini, a town on the Zagreb-Osyek railway.

Another guerilla success was reported from Bosnia, where Tito's forces said they captured Irnovo, near Sarajevo.

At other points along the mountainous defence positons held by the guerillas in the Hinterlands, Tito's forces said they had repelled all enemy attacks.

IMPRESSIVE

visored caps circled by red bands and with a gold star in front.

The highest military figures of this war and the diplomats grouped themselves around the room. Suddenly Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar, entered, walked to the table, surveyed the scene and departed.

Then came Stalin, appearing noisily and clad in a plain khaki beige uniform with gold starred epaulets. He was wearing a single decoration, the order of Lenin.

A few seconds later Prime Minister Churchill walked in wearing the uniform of an R. A. F. commodore.

A 22-piece Russian Army band, at a signal sounding like "brrnsk," played the "Internationale" and then "God Save The King" while Mr. Churchill stood to salute Stalin with right arm raised and hand half-clenched.

A British officer picked up and held the sword rigidly before him while Mr. Churchill spoke on behalf of the King about the "steel-hearted citizens of Stalingrad."

Stalin replied with a low-voiced expression of appreciation.

Stalin took the sword from Mr. Churchill's outstretched hands, kissed the naked blade and handed it to Marshal Klementiy Voroshilov. A Russian officer, using the arm-swinging, stiff-legged Soviet ceremonial march, took the symbol from Voroshilov, wheeled and with snap and precision marched from the room.

The gathering then moved out to the white-pillared portico where a large number of news and motion picture photographers had a field day.

RELENTLESS

"We came here with hope and determination. We leave here friends in fact, in spirit and in purpose".

It was the first time President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin had met.

On the first day of the conference Stalin, accompanied by his Foreign Minister, Vyacheslav Molotov, walked up the steps of the Russian Embassy Compound, which was the President's residence during his stay. He left Molotov talking in an ante-room with Harry L. Hopkins, the President's official adviser, and strode on alone to come face to face with the American Leader who had flown thousands of miles across ocean and desert for the rendezvous further cementing Allied unity in war and peace.

It was believed to be the first time Stalin had left Russia since the communist revolution in 1917.

Well Guarded.

The Russian Embassy conference area, and Teheran itself, swarmed with Russian tommygunner guards, and even Embassy servants carried pistols.

Security measures were heightened because it was learned a number of German saboteurs had been dropped by parachute in Iran a few weeks before the Big Three arrived. Most of them were reported captured.

A number of Iranians whose loyalty was questioned, including at least one army officer, were locked up during the conference.

One of the ceremonious highlights of the conference at the foot of the snow-capped Elburz Mountains was the presentation by Prime Minister Churchill of the "Sword of Stalingrad" to Premier Stalin—a British recognition of the Russian heroes who turned the Nazi tide at Stalingrad last winter.

Details of the military decisions reached naturally were not disclosed, but dispatches from Teheran said there was no talk of "a second front" circulating at the conference—an indication that that subject already had been disposed of except for final details.

No Post-War Problems Cited

Nor was anything specific concerning a multitude of post-war problems, such as the Russian-Polish boundaries, dealt with in the general declarations except for the reference to the principles of that Atlantic Charter and the desire to recruit a world wide "family of democratic nations."

The statement of Iran spoke of post-war "conferences of International Agencies" to deal with all economic matters.

The "surrender-or-die" ultimatum, which some had expected, was not forthcoming. Instead, the Big Three calmly and confidently told Germany they were going to crush her armed forces in a three-sided assault and multiply the devastating air raids on her home soil.

Surrounded by the most extraordinary security measures in history, the gray-mustached, calm, impassive Stalin was flanked at Teheran only by Foreign Minister Molotov, and Marshal Klementi E. Voroshilov.

Flanked by Staffs

Obviously pleased and gratified, Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt were encircled by their staffs of approximately 60 each, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the British Imperial General Staff; Field Marshal Sir John Dill, Chief of the British Military Mission to the United States;.. Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, British Chief of Air Staff; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, Chief of the British Naval Staff; Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary; Sir Archibald Clarke Kerr, British Ambassador to Russia; Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army; Gen. Henry H. Arnold, U. S. Army Air Chief; Lt.-Gen. Breham H. Somervell, Chief of U. S. Army Service Forces; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in Chief of the U. S. Fleet and Chief of Naval operations; Admiral William D. Leahy, President Roosevelt's Chief of Staff; Harry L. Hopkins, the President's official advisor; W. Averell Harriman, U. S. Ambassador to Russia, and John G. Winant, U. S. Ambassador to Britain.

Dined Together Nightly

The first momentous meeting of Marshal Stalin and Mr. Roosevelt occurred at 3 p.m., Nov. 28, in the tree-circled Soviet Embassy, the main building of which had been given to the President as his conference. Home an hour later Mr. Churchill arrived to complete the triumvirate.

From then on the conference assumed an intimate, almost family aspect, with the three dining together nightly.

These talks were punctuated by full dress discussions with the military chiefs, the first of which lasted from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Nov. 28. Preceded by separate Anglo-American staff sessions on Monday and Tuesday mornings, the military meetings reached a smashing climax long after sunset on Tuesday.

The most powerful gathering of military brains of this war opened its final plenary session at 4:30 p.m. that day and concluded at 7:30 p.m., with plans fully drawn to concentrate the total military might of Russia, Britain and the United States on a "relentlessly increasing" basis guaranteeing that "victory will be ours."

Churchill's Birthday Party

Satisfaction approaching exultation with the strategy drawn at Teheran was evinced the night of Nov. 30 at Mr. Churchill's 69th birthday dinner at the British legation. More than 50 toasts were drunk with Marshal Stalin ambling amiably around the table clinking glasses with each man toasted, and himself raising his glass to:-

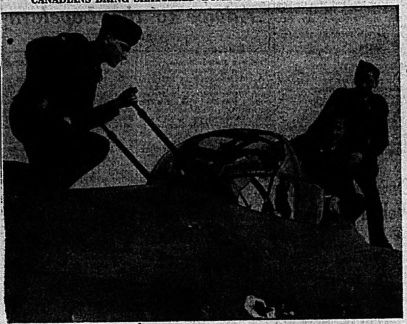
"My fighting friend Churchill."

"My fighting friend Roosevelt."

Significantly, not a single mention of a "second front" was made then or on any other time during the conference, so far as could be determined from outside the guarded walls. It was assumed this quesion had been settled, even to the details.

Newspaper observers closer to the session than others — most newsmen were held at Cairo during the conference—had reason to believe that the Teheran meetings had filled the gaps in the Moscow conference of foreign ministers and in fact gone well beyond it.

CANADIANS BRING SHATTERED BOMBER BACK FROM LEIPZIG



Take a look at this shattered gun turret on a Lancaster of the Canadian Bomber Group's "Thunderbird" squadron and get some idea of what R.C.A.F. airmen go through to make life difficult for the Nazis. But the turret tells only a fraction of the hair-raising story of the night's attack by a crew of R.C.A.F. and R.A.F. men. More than 100 cannon and machine-gun holes were counted in the fuselage of the bomber, which was attacked seven times by enemy fighters en route to its target, Leipzig. Yet the bomber got back to fight again. Looking over the damage, left to right, are Flight-Sgt. G. V. "Andy" Andrew, of 114½ North Christina St., Sarnia, Ont., 20-year-old rear gunner; Flying Officer Rod James Dunphy, 20, of Wardlow Apts., Wardlow Ave., Winnipeg, navigator; and Flying Officer Jimmy Dodge, 20, of Spirit River, Alta., air bomber and former newspaper carrier for the Edmonton Bulletin. Their R.A.F. gunner was injured by cannon shell fragments in the turret shown here. Despite that and the damage to their hydraulic system which prevented lowering the bomb doors and automatic release of the bombs, the crew pressed home their attack. Over the target Dodge released the 4,000-pound blockbuster by hand, letting it crash through the closed bomb doors. The containers of incendiary bombs were chopped away from their carriers with an axe through the bomber's floor boards. On the return flight, Dunphy held together the shattered wires of his navigational equipment in order to get "fixes" to help the plane to base. Four cannon shells passed through the glass-enclosed cockpit, narrowly missing the navigator, bomb aimer, and pilot, and smashing holes in all the plastic windows; but the crew brought the great aircraft safely to its home field. There, the undercarriage had to be lowered by hand because the hydraulic system was out of commission. During the night's action, one cannon shell just missed a million-candlepower photo flash carried amidships.—(R.C.A.F. Photo).

LIVING COSTS

Reviews War Against Inflation

He reviewed the fight against inflation—"one of the quickest and surest ways" of weakening the home front, and said:-

"The battle of inflation is being waged by the people of Canada in co-operation with their government. The price ceiling is the front line of that battle. If we fail to hold that line the whole structure of our war effort will be impaired.

"We would endanger the continued and uninterrupted production of munitions of war and of foodstuffs. We would be lessening the value of war savings and indeed of all savings, both compulsory and voluntary.

"We would be cutting down the value of allowances to soldiers' dependents and of the pensions of disabled soldiers themselves.

"Worst of all, by jeopardizing production through industrial strike, we would be adding further risk to the lives of our fighting men. If the battle line begins to crumble, if the price ceiling breaks down, in the long run all stand to lose."

exploded depth charges under another U-boat, and it went down stern first, leaving 20 to 25 crewmen afloat. Another heavy bomber, led by Wing Cmdr. R. M. Longmore, signalled that it was attacking a submarine, but no further word was heard from the plane.

Medium bombers ended the second day with another attack near nightfall, but results were not seen.

A medium bomber bagged the third sub on the third day, leaving a patch of oil, debris and bodies.

"Later a third convoy was threatened by a concentration of U-boats," the communique said, "and on the sixth day a Liberator attacked a surfaced U-boat near this convoy. An hour afterward the Liberator renewed the attack on the U-boat, which had resurfaced. The submarine went down stern first, leaving wreckage and bodies in the water."

Four heavy bombers joined in the fifth kill, made that same day. One sighted a submarine, and another attacked, but the U-boat crash-dived. Later this second heavy bomber, joining a third, attacked with depth charges and the submarine crew ran on deck, inflating dinghies. The U-boat was destroyed. Fifteen to 20 survivors took to the dinghies.

Russell's Sunderland got the sixth U-boat later in the day. From then on there were no further incidents.

alarm" the spread of increasing wages resulting from wage increases granted steelworkers after a strike early this year, and continued:—

"If it was proper for the O'Connor Commission to base its decision —frankly stated to be a compromise one — to any extent on a comparison with United States coal mine wages and shipyard and logging wages in Canada as invited by District 18, U.M.W.A., then who is to say to the railway worker that the same method of comparison is not open to him? This Board's policy seems to have been in error."

Application on File

(Canadian railway workers now have an application on file with the National Board seeking to have Canadian railway rates brought up to the higher level paid to railway workers in the United States.)

The companies, in opposing the Union's application for increases in Nova Scotia coal mine rates, had estimated that the over-all cost of the increases sought by the Union would be $15,460,225 a year — an increased cost on 1942 production figures of $3.44 a ton.

The Board said it presumed increases granted Nova Scotia miners would have to be met in the same way as had been done in the west — by increases of from 10 to 65 cents a ton in the retail price of coal — and it was doubtful whether the price increases could be held to coal alone because of coal's importance in the costs of other industries.

Missing Girl Returns Home

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — After four months of "seeing what it was like to be on my own," pretty 16-year-old Mary Elizabeth Harvey is home again, found through a Canadian Press story Dec. 1 reporting her disappearance. The girl disappeared from her home last July 31 without explanation and was working in a St. Catharines, Ont. restaurant when located yesterday.

Her father, Stewart Harvey, who went overseas with the medical corps nearly four years ago, died overseas of pneumonia in November. Mary Elizabeth did not know of his death.

Mary Elizabeth's young brother, eight-year-old Jimmy, was so glad to have his sister back that he "sat up all night telling her what had happened while she had been away." Young Jimmy has taken on the important position of man-of-the-house since his father died and he couldn't understand why "Sister Mae" didn't come home.

Mary Elizabeth said she took a boat to Port Dalhousie on July 31. She went to St. Catharines by trolley and got a job in a restaurant there.

Australian Troops Press Steadily Toward Wareo

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Dec. 6 — (AP) — Australian troops with the aid of artillery and air cover pressed steadily toward Wareo on the strategic Huon Peninsula on New Guinea today after repulsing three Japanese counter-attacks.

The Aussies, victory of Sattelberg four miles to the south, turned back the counter-thrusts Saturday with the help of artillery. Attack planes ripped up the Japs' rear positions.

These Australians were spurred on by the likelihood of early support from two other digger elements also closing in on Wareo's strongly-defended heights. One unit captured Bonga four miles to the east last week and pushed inland, and the other was coming up from the Southeast.

Bombers of the South and Southwest Pacific commands likewise pushed their ceaseless offensive, dropping heavy bomb loads which left targets aflame on Bougainville and New Britain islands, while the United States 7th Army Air Force reached deep into Japan's defence perimeter to start fires at Hare Island in the lonely central Pacific atoll of Kapingamarangi, only 400 statute miles southeast of the major Japanese base of Truk.

Four-engined aircraft also bombed Mili atoll in the enemy controlled Marshall group, starting fires and destroying a grounded medium bomber, and set an oil dump afire on Nauru Island southwest of the newly-conquered Gilberts.

FAIL TO IDENTIFY LIGHTS

Torono, Dec. 6—(CP)— Toronto lifesavers and Scarboro Township Police combined here early Sunday morning in a futile search to identify red and green lights which had been seen flashing out on Lake Ontario, about two miles from shore. It was believed at first an aircraft had been forced down, but a check showed there were no aircraft in the area at that time.

"Here's our wartime plan of finance"

"ACTUALLY, we're not doing too badly today. We've cut our spending to essentials only—and I really mean 'essentials'.

"We're buying War Savings Certificates and Victory Bonds. Some of these we're going to use after the war to get things we're doing without now.

"We're buying more life insurance because our bonds and other savings wouldn't keep the family very long if I should die.

"For less than $100 a year I'm buying another $10,000 life insurance. The second year it will not likely cost me more than $80."

This is the London Life Earning Power Series 15 Year Term policy. Premium for $10,000, age 30, is $96.50, other ages in proportion. (First year dividend, 1943 scale, $20.20.) For lifetime protection, this policy may be changed to a permanent plan any time within ten years.

Monthly Meeting Of Women's Missionary S.

Wallbridge — The December meeting of W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. F. Helm on December 1st. and was presided over by the president, Mrs. W. Badgley. Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. G. A. Ketcheson. The treasurer's report was read by Mrs. Badgley, also a letter of resignation from the treasurer, Mrs. B. C. Hinchliffe. The society refused to accept the resignation and unanimously voted that she keep her position. The members all feel that she has done a good work and while she hasn't been able to attend many meetings in person, everyone knows her heart has been with the organization. Mrs. P. Shorey gave a very interesting paper from the Study Book. A letter from Mrs. Lent was read by Mrs. James Hinchliffe thanking the community for a plant which had been sent to her daughter while a patient in Belleville hospital.

Rev. Mr. Scott then took charge of the meeting for election of officers for 1944. It was moved and seconded that Mrs. F. Shorey be corresponding secretary; that Miss Ella Phillips be Mission Band superintendent and Mrs. James Hinchliffe be Supply Secretary. The other officers were re-elected. Rev. Mr. Scott read the installation service and closed the meeting with prayer.

WEDDINGS

SHARPE—McMULLEN

Stirling.—An arch of evergreens with pink and white streamers and bells formed an impressive background at the home of the bride's father, near Stirling, on Saturday, December 4th, at 4 p.m., when the Rev. J. F. Lane, of the United Church, Wellington, Ont., (a former pastor of Eggleton Church), assisted by Mr. K. Stewart, minister of Eggleton United Church, united in marriage Marion McMullen, daughter of Mr. George McMullen and the late Mrs. McMullen, to Burton Roy Sharpe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sharpe, Stirling. The wedding music was played by Mrs. L. Hardy, of Warkworth.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a lovely picture in her floor length gown of white chiffon and shoulder length veil. She carried Sweetheart roses.

The bride's sister, Miss Helen McMullen, as bridesmaid, wore a long gown of double pink net over taffeta with shoulder length veil and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

The flower girl, Miss Ruth Sharpe, sister of the groom, was wearing a floor-length dress of blue embossed taffeta and carrying a nosegay.

Groomsman for the occasion was Mr. Angus Johnson of Stirling.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Carleton Potts, of Mount Pleasant, sang a solo "O Perfect Love".

Following the ceremony, the reception was held in the dining-room where over forty guests were received by the bride's sister, Mrs. Bert Reid, who wore an air force blue gown with black accessories and corsage of pink carnations. The groom's mother was attired in a powder blue wool dress with black accessories and corsage of rose carnations.

The wedding guests were served dinner by Misses Alma Johnston, Marjorie Bateman, Helen Kirby, Mrs. Irvine Potts and Mrs. Gavin Scott, girl friends of the bride, assisted by Mrs. Clayton Wright and Mrs. Bruce Stapley, cousins of the bride.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver; to the groomsman, a gold penknife and chain. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was an English china cake plate; to the flower girl, a gold locket; and to the pianist, soloist and waitresses, English china cups and saucers.

For the wedding trip to Eastern Ontario, the bride chose a two-piece rose wool dress with brown tweed coat and brown accessories. On their return the bridal couple will reside on the groom's farm at Mount Pleasant.

COATES—BUCHANAN

The Rev. Dr. James Semple united in marriage on Saturday evening in the vestry of Bridge Street Church, Jessie Mae Buchanan of Winnipeg, Manitoba, to Edward Judson Field Coates, also of Winnipeg, but now stationed at Mountain View, as a R.C.A.F. staff pilot.

December Meeting Of W. M. S.

Foxboro — The December meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the S.S. rooms on Thursday afternoon with a large attendance. The president, Mrs. S. C. Gay, was in charge. The devotional service was well given by members of the Mission Band under the leadership of Mrs. George Priest and Mrs. J. Reynolds. Miss Eunice McRoberts gave the story "The Birth of Christ" and Mrs. James Reynolds told the story of "The Gift." Readings were given by Misses Freda Ash, Irene Atkin and Isobel Mc Cullough. Mrs. Murney Reynolds gave a Temperance reading and Mrs. J. G. Sills gave a chapter from the Study Book. A Christmas hymn was sung and meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Recent Bridal Couple Feted

On Thursday night, November 25, relatives and friends gathered at the home of Wesley Crawford, Roslin, to honor his daughter, Edith, and her husband.

Supper was served at 7 o'clock by Mrs. E. Way and Miss V. Gray.

During the evening, Mrs. N. Welsh favored with solos. Games and dancing were also enjoyed.

On November 30, over one hundred friends and neighbors arranged a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hall. Music for dancing was played by Mr. John Hart and the Barker Bros. An address was read by Mrs. A. Bates after which Harry and Edith thanked one and all and invited them to come and visit them in their new home. The bride and groom received many beautiful gifts including a chest of silver and a set of dishes.

Lunch was served and dancing continued until the "wee hours" of the morning.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The annual re-organization meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was held in the Church Hall on Wednesday last with the President, Mrs. Fleming presiding.

The business session was taken up with reports of the year's work of the Society, given by the Secretaries of the various departments. These reports not only indicated much work accomplished, but also a deep interest in the Missionary work of the church. Of special interest was the report relative to the organization of a "Girls' Auxiliary". An initial meeting being a pot luck supper, a round table conference following, at which Miss Laura K. Pelton, general secretary, was guest speaker.

The officers for the coming year are:

Honorary President, Mrs. Graham
President, Mrs. Fleming.
First Vice President, Mrs. C. Baragar.
Second Vice President, Mrs. McCullough.
Secretary, Mrs. Parsons.
Treasurer, Mrs. Diamond.
Mission Band, Mrs. Weir.
Home Helpers, Mrs. Pigden.
Welcome Welfare, Mrs. Hornsby.
Library and Literature, Mrs. Mantle.
Glad Tidings, Mrs. Bell
Flower, Mrs. Wood.
Pianist, Mrs. Mantle.

Rev. J. G. Hornsby addressed the meeting and installed the new officers. The meeting closed with prayer.

Christmas Concert Well Presented

The auditorium of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church was packed to capacity on Friday evening, when the Sunday School presented its annual Christmas entertainment and the audience thoroughly enjoyed the many fine offerings on the program.

After the singing of the National Anthem the superintendent, Mr. R. L. Orr, who acted as chairman, spoke a few words of welcome and expressed the hope that the various items would help to remind all of our Lord and Saviour, God's gift to mankind.

A Christmas Radio Broadcast was presented by the Beginner and Primary department, with Douglas Soule acting the part of the announcer. The tots sang "Joy, Joy, Joy", "Happy, Happy Christmas", "Christmas Bells are Ringing" and "Lullaby" while recitations were given by Diane Hales, Eleanor Blackburn and Joan Faulkner. The little folk won the hearts of their audience, not only by their well-rehearsed numbers but by their cute impromptu antics and innocent by-plays.

A play "Something New" was given by Miss Nora Hales' class. A group of girls decide that Christmas held nothing new for them but followed the same routine year after year: trimming trees, giving and receiving gifts, feasting and games. But when they discover an underprivileged girl, feel sorry for her, and are so moved that they give up all their own presents, they realize the truth that Christmas is ever new when it touches human hearts to do good. The actors in this drama included Bonnie Hetherington, Evelyn Lee, Doris Woods, Betty Snare, Ruth Snare, Shirley Reynolds, Shirley Carson, Audrey Jobson and Alice Moore.

A beautiful pantomime "Joy to The World" was presented by the Young Adult Fellowship. Those taking part were Mildred Bertrim and Helen Thompson, as angels and Norma Haw, Kay Moore, Margaret Moore, Marjorie Hales, Mrs. H. Hall, Roma Wright, Mabel Burrows, Margaret Hagerman, Jean Thompson and Jean Stephenson, representing various nationalities assembled to worship the Christ Child.

The intermediate and junior children gave their message in the form of a phantasy entitled "Street of Hearts". This ambitious offering was significant of theme and very cleverly staged. It shows Mary and Joseph on the night of the Nativity, seeking a place to rest. On the stage is a street of hearts consisting of ten heart-shaped dwellings. Joseph knocks at the hearts' doors but the occupants of each has some excuse to offer for his or her inability to give the strangers shelter. But upon reaching the last heart on the street they find a kind occupant, willing to let them enter his heart, though he has to sleep outside. Three wise men appear with their gifts only to find that Mary, Joseph and the Christ Child have departed. They entrust the owner of the kind heart with their precious gifts. Then, framed in the baptistry arch a lovely tableau depicting the manger scene comes to light and all the actors of this play bow in the attitude of worship as, a cradle song to the tune of Brahams' Lullaby is beautifully sung by Mrs. Douglas Smith.

Those taking part in this phantasy include Anne Burton, as Mary, Lloyd Faulkner as Joseph, Bobby Swayne, Gloria Haw, Joan Faulkner, Harriet Thompson, Teddy Soule, Ronald Phillips, Barbara Girling, Denton Wessels, Audrey Jobson and Ralph Neal as hearts; Bruce Neal, Ralph Hall and Russell Soule as wise men, Delores Knox as Mary in the manger scene.

A vocal solo "O Holy Night" by Miss Muriel Jobson and a duet "Lullaby" by Misses Mildred Bertrim and Jean Cook, were beautifully rendered. A medley of Christmas carols, played on the piano by Miss Betty Snare was well received. Rev. H. O. Eastman pronounced the benediction.

Argyll Chapt. I.O.D.E.

A regular meeting of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E., was held on December 4, the Regent Mrs. B. C. Donnan presided.

The business at hand having been settled the chapter set about the task of making out its Christmas gift list.

The funds and organizations subscribed are as follows:

Prisoners' of War Fund, $100; Sailors' and Minesweepers' Fund, $100; Kinsmen Fag Fund $50; Polish Relief Fund $25; Russian Relief Fund $25; Service Centre Fund, $25; Salvation Army, $25; Victorian Order of Nurses $25; Endowment Fund $25; Blanket Fund, $25.

A motion was passed that cups and saucers and towels should be presented to the Blood Clinic.

The Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E., Scholarship is to be presented this year as usual.

Individual Christmas presents are to be given to the Old Folks' Home.

Husband Furious Because Wife Saves up Money Secretly

A girl who read an article of mine about "wives who don't know when they're well off," writes me agreeing that the ladies whose case histories were discussed were selfish without realizing it, but wants equal attention given husbands in the same category. She cites her own father as an example.

"Judging from pictures we have, mother must have been a very pretty woman when she was young," she says. "Today, under 40, she looks 60. Until my sister and I were old enough to help, she has done all the work for a family of five, even the washing and ironing. She went to a night class and learned pressing to keep father's clothes in order.

"She still does the marketing, walking blocks to save a few cents on a head of lettuce, and though father's income is ample, she goes in for little economies. It makes me furious because mother is really an intelligent person, and if she hadn't been skimping pennies all her life, she might have succeeded in one or two lines in which she has gifts.

"Father has accepted everything—the housekeeping, the rigid economy—as his due, but he never knew about mother's secret. As the oldest child, mother's ambition has been to send me to college or to continue my musical education. For this she has put by money but when the news broke about this secret bank account, father was raving. He acted as if she had stolen the money, and demanded it.

"It was the only occasion on which mother stood firm. And we children stood by her. Now the question is can father claim this money; can it be used for my music which I would prefer to go on with, rather than go to college?

—"M. L. K."

Your letter suggests your father may be so unreasonable as to take legal steps to gain possession of the money, but that hardly seems possible in this enlightened age.

The wisest thing to do under the circumstances, is to try good naturedly to shame into realization of how "small" and selfish he is acting. Your mother's thrifty provision for his daughter's education should win the highest commendation in his eyes.

If he regards her simply as a servant, and not as a real partner in marriage, then it would well for her to "strike" for a while, as any servant would against a "Simon Legree."

It would be tragic if this matter reached a point where it threatened to break-up your home, which it may do if both your mother and father do not have cooler heads.

What he probably resents most is your mother keeping something secret from him, not her possession of the money. A lot of men are that way.

Since the rights of wives vary from state to state, it would be well for your mother to ask her bank whether your father has any legal claim to her deposit.

33 Girls Accepted Into Sodality At St. Michael's

Gowned in the traditional white, thirty-three girls of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, were accepted as new members into the Sodality of the Children of Mary at an impressive ceremony in the church on Sunday afternoon.

The procession formed at the back of the church, with the President of the Sodality, Miss Nellie Dorian, at the front carrying the banner. Behind her came the new members, followed by Miss Joan Boyle, carrying a carved statue, and two little flower-girls, Rosemary Ross and Elizabeth Houlihan. The senior members of the Sodality marched behind the flower girls.

Following the ceremony, a meeting was held at St. Michael's Academy, when the new members were addressed by Sister Mary Hilda and Miss Nellie Dorian welcoming them into the Sodality.

STOOPED TOGETHER

Salt Lake City, Dec. 6 — (AP) — The man sputtered when a traffic court judge fined him $20. He crumpled a $20 bill and threw it at the clerk's feet. The clerk calmly wrote a receipt, crumpled it, tossed it toward the man. Both stooped simultaneously to pick up their papers.

Silver Anniversary Of Wedding Day Is Observed

Fond reminiscences of twenty-five years of happily wedded life were recalled to Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Shannon of Plainfield, when on November 27, they celebrated the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day.

During the day, messages of congratulations and best wishes for many years to come were received by Mr. and Mrs. Shannon, not only from relatives and friends in Canada, but from overseas as well.

In the evening, a party was arranged in honor of the celebrants, and the Rev. J. Shannon of Wolfe Island, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Shannon on behalf of relatives, a silver tea service. Innumerable other gifts were also received from their many friends. Heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the tokens of remembrance were expressed by both Mr. and Mrs. Shannon.

Following the presentation, cards and dancing afforded a great deal of pleasure for the merrymakers.

Among the guests present for the festive occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Mulrooney and Margaret Mulrooney of Madoc; Rev. J. Shannon and his mother, Mrs. T. Shannon of Wolfe Island; Mrs. Rose Thompson of Waterloo, Ont.; Irene, Geraldine and Clare Shannon of Peterboro; Mrs. P. Feeney, Betty Feeney and Helen Shannon of Belleville.

LOYALTY AMONG WOMEN

One of the best things which women have learned from men, in the last two decades is the benefit and wisdom of organization — getting together for a purpose.

Men have been "organizing" for this or that, ever since the beginning of time; but it is only in the last twenty years that ALL women have stopped playing a lone hand and begun organizing with determination and enthusiasm. Now there is scarcely a woman who doesn't belong to some organization—the C.W.A.C.'s, the WRCN's; the WAAF's, the Red Cross, or some woman's political club or charity organization.

Now there is the same solidarity among women as there has always been among men, and the same loyalty; and what was once known as the "catty" woman has almost disappeared. The type is positively dated — as outmoded as high button shoes. It has taken years to weed them out — but their day is done!

You know how men have always been. Loyal to their own sex! The Strongest Union the world has ever known is the M.F.M.A. or Men-For-Men-Association — founded by Adam—an unwritten but invincible masculine coalition which women could not comprehend until they began getting together and standing together themselves.

One man's secrets are always safe with another man. A woman may have lived with her husband for ten years and yet not know a single fact about the private life or private morals of one of his pals. She can't dig it out of him with a steam-shovel! He won't talk about another man even in his sleep! In all the years that men have been loyally guarding each other, no man has ever been known to give another man away to his wife of his bosom or the girl of his heart. He'll cheerfully lie to the best woman in the world in order to protect a recalcitrant brother. It is his CODE.

And if you want to see a man at his tenderest and most solicitous, watch him when he's helping a cock-eyed brother to negotiate the way from the taxicab to his front door and gently handing him over to his waiting spouse with a perfect alibi. Or when he's bracing up a hazy prospective bridegroom for his wedding, or dosing a convivial friend with a hangover. It's positively touching!

This beautiful solidarity of the male sex has always existed. Men may fight each other publicly or privately, in business or in politics. But after the fight is over and they have blackened each other's eyes and called each other all the worst names on record, you will see them genially fraternizing jokes or cigars, just as before.

And now women have their CODE. They are in the Army, the Navy, in politics and in business. They have learned to guard each other's secrets, help each other out of a spot and boost each other's game as faithfully and adroitly as men do. And this solidarity, this loyalty, this ability to work together is probably the best thing that women have ever learned from men!

It has taught women not only to understand women, but to understand MEN. And how! Do you belong to the W.M.P.S. — Women's Mutual Protective Society?

SWIFT'S WEEKLY WARTIME FOOD HINTS

Sauces

A good sauce can make a party dish of leftovers

Now that we all must learn to make do with less meat or less familiar meats the importance of knowing how to make appetizing sauces is more important than ever.

So this week's Food Hint tells you how to make the basic 'Mother Sauce' or Béchamel. Once you can do this perfectly you can turn out a wide range of appetizing sauces, for instance:

In each case add ingredients to 1 recipe Mother Sauce.

Barbecue Sauce (Brown base) Add 1 tbsp. Worcester Sauce, ½ tsp. mustard dissolved in 1 tsp. vinegar.

Bearnaise Type Sauce (White base) Boil 1 cup cider vinegar with one onion chopped fine, until vinegar is reduced by a quarter. Allow to cool slightly. Add to Mother Sauce with 1 tsp. chopped parsley. Beat the yolk of 1 egg, stir in part of sauce, return to remaining sauce and stir 2 minutes in double boiler. Season with salt and pepper.

Brown Gravy (Brown base) Simmer meat trimmings and 1 small onion in 1¼ cups of water for 1 hour. Add to Mother Sauce.

Hollandaise Type Sauce (White base) Stir sauce into beaten yolks of 2 eggs, return to heat for two minutes stirring constantly and slowly adding 1 tbsp. lemon juice.

Experiment yourself with other flavourings and ingredients, tomatoes, pickles and herbs can all be used.

MOTHER SAUCE

1¼ cup milk or stock
1 small onion
1 sprig parsley
1 bay leaf
4 or 5 pepper berries
Pinch of mace or thyme
1½ tbsps. butter
2½ tbsps. flour
Salt and pepper

Simmer milk or stock, (use meat stock for brown sauces) with onion and herbs for 30 minutes. Melt butter, stir in flour (for brown sauce allow mixture to brown slightly). Stir in hot milk (or stock). Stir and cook over boiling water until thick and smooth. Strain. Season.

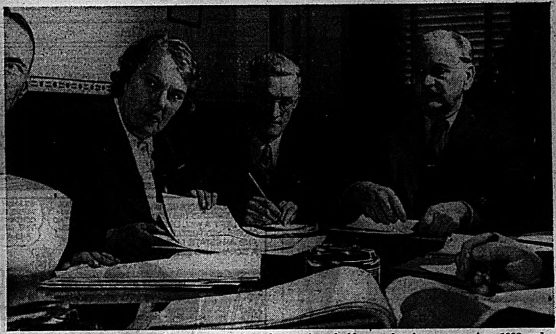
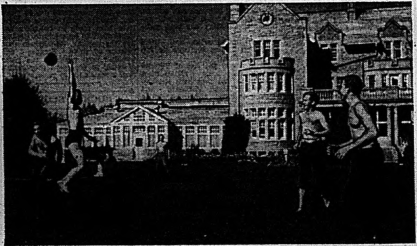
War has brought many changes to the Canadian scene but none more striking than in Edmonton, Capital of Alberta. Here such projects as the Alaska Highway and the Canol pipeline have brought to the thriving northern city a huge increase in population and business. Above trucks are parked near Legislature.

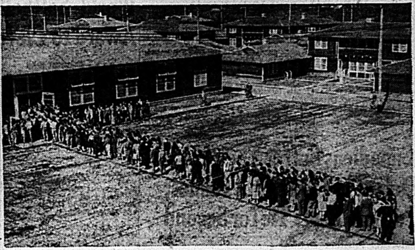


Housing problems, shortage of consumer goods and many other problems have been thrust upon Edmonton's City Council. Mayor Fry, shown here presiding at meeting of aldermen, has been mayor since 1938 and with other civic authorities has kept pace with the vast developments in co-operation with U. S. officials.



Former residence of Alberta Lieutenant Governor is now used by the U.S. Army Air Force to house air crews in Edmonton between flights. Here young fliers toss pigskin around on lawns formerly used by royalty for bowling and teas.

Many romances have sprung from invasion of thousands of U.S. servicemen. Here Mary Yeo, C.W.A.C. and Sgt. Pfeiffer, Springfield, find tandem not out of date.



Lunch hour at the former Jesuit College, taken over by U.S. engineering Department. In an effort to co-operate in alleviating housing shortage U.S. built many units such as those shown above for civilian and army personnel.

At the many canteens and service recreational centres operated in the Alberta capital, Canadians, Americans, Australians, New Zealanders give true meaning to the term "United Nations". Both Canadian and U.S. M.P.'s patrol streets.

Not unusual in many Canadian cities women cabbies came early in Edmonton, and in large numbers. Who wouldn't ride in a taxi with Pearl Woollett driving.

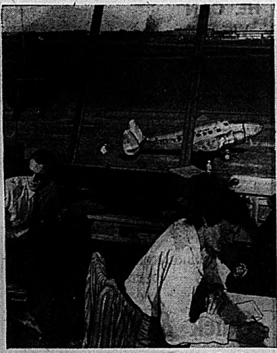
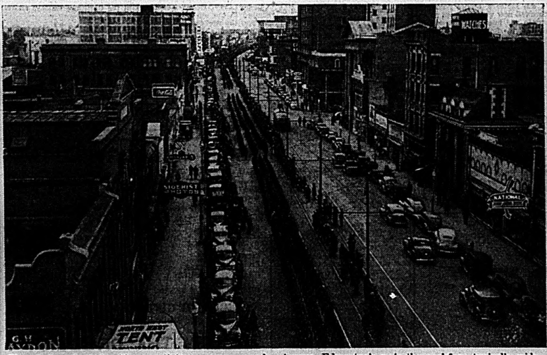
ARGUMENTS GENERATE MORE HEAT than LIGHT

"Nothing can stop us now" is a saying often heard in Edmonton where vast riches of Canadian north west will, it is thought, maintain present rate of expansion. Betty Maguss, former newspaper employee, works for U.S. firm.



Edmontonians are nothing if not air-minded with one of Canada's busiest airports at their doorsteps. Both CPA, shown here, and TCA operate from its runways.



The city's principal military activity centres around Air Observers' School, operated by CPA, and the RCAF manning depot. Here 3,000 airmen parade down Jasper Avenue, Edmonton's main thoroughfare, typically wide as in most Western cities. Population increase from 100,000 to more than 135,000 indicates sizes of boom.

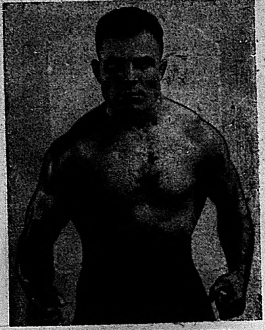
MEETS WATSON IN TITLE GO



DOES PALERMO JOHN KATAN

It was after considerable bickering that "Whipper Billie" Watson agreed to defend his British Empire heavyweight wrestling title against John Katan, the Palermo assassin. Katan claims he beat Watson in London last summer but the Commission refused to recognise his claim for the Empire crown. Last week at Maple Leaf Gardens a title bout terminated in a melee and afterwards Katan was disqualified. He protested vigorously to Promoter Tunney and also to the Commission that he was being given "the business" end of the stick and he demanded a return bout. The Commission agreed to make the Hume Arena at Belleville the venue of this important championship match on Thursday night. "I'll put that baby face Watson and his commande held so far out of business that it will physically torture his manager, Phil Lawson, promised Katan as he signed the contract. Two high-class preliminaries will precede the Katan-Watson brawl.

Canadiens Suffer Their First Defeat in 15 Straight Games; Toronto Leafs Tie for Second

Habitants Smother Detroit but Lose to Boston Bruins

LEAFS BEAT RANGERS

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The slender margin of a goal left Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers companions in misery today.

This strange union of anything but kindred spirits developed from the National Hockey League's sixth weekend of competition, which saw four contests draw a cumulative paid attendance of 50,243.

The two Sunday contests provided the link between Montreal and Rangers, the league leaders losing 5-4 to Boston Bruins on foreign ice for their first defeat in 15 league games while New York succumbed 7-6 to Black Hawks at Chicago Stadium.

The loss extended New York's string of games without victory to 14. The only point Rangers have acquired in that stretch — derived from a 2-2 tie against Canadiens a week ago Sunday — saved them from threatening the longest losing sequence record, established when Philadelphia Quakers dropped 15 consecutive games from Nov. 23, 1930 to Jan. 8, 1931.

Canadiens, on the other hand, could rationalize the interruption of their undefeated string by pointing to a record of 11 victories and three ties in previous starts, good for a 4½-game lead over Chicago and Toronto Maple Leafs, joint holders of second place. One of the victories came Saturday as the Habitants crushed Detroit Red Wings 8-2 at Montreal while Rangers bowed 11-4 at Toronto.

Hamilton Provides Highlights

Individually, weekend highlights were provided by Jackie Hamilton, Gerry Heffernan and Cliff (Fido) Purpur. Hamilton, 18-year-old Leaf rookie elevated in mid-season last year from Toronto junior ranks, collected four goals and one assist in Saturday's victory over Rangers while Heffernan matched the output for Canadiens against Detroit. Purpur had three goals for Chicago Sunday.

Heffernan also scored once against Boston Sunday while teammates Fern Majeau and Elmer Lach connected twice, but Bruins hung on grimly for a verdict which lifted them into sole possession of fourth place, two points ahead of Detroit, and which partially atoned for the humiliation of their 13-4 loss against Canadiens last month. Boston goals were evenly distributed between Johnny Crawford, Al Palazzari, Herb Cain, Bep Guidolin and Bill Cowley, who has scored at least one point in all 14 games Boston has played.

At Chicago, Rangers appeared safely in port for the first victory when they seized a 6-5 lead in the third period on goals by Ossie Aubuchon and Grant Warwick. But Purpur, whose two second period goals had given Hawks a 4-4 tie, knotted the count 6-5 with little more than two minutes to play. Then, 59 seconds from the finish, George Allen combined with Earl Seibert and Bill Mosienko to beat hard-working Ken McAuley for the goal that stretched Chicago's string of home victories to six.

Sports Roundup

New York, Dec. 6 — (AP)—From India Sgt. John Derr, former Greensboro N. C. sports editor, sends a harrowing report of the hazards of golf in the Far East that makes our shortages of caddies and golf balls sound like minor league stuff ...The tale is told in the "C.B.I. Roundup" involves sunbaked fairways that will send a well-hit drive bouncing crazily into a rough that really is jungle, greens with "more lumps than an Indian mattress" and caddies and ball boys — you need at least two of the latter — who pay even less attention to their duties than those at home...to this the cheerful Sgt. Derr adds a pencilled comment: "Only lost four balls, two caddies last week"...the same paper reports that a bomber squadron in China is seeking a new baseball diamond because the one now in use is so situated that "if you over-run third, you're liable to land in Jap-occupied territory."

Real Giants:

Six of the eight managers of National League baseball clubs used to play for the New York Giants under John McGraw and four of them—Mel Ott, Billy Southworth, Frank Frisch and Freddie Fitzsimmons—were members of the same club in 1925. The other two are Casey Stengel and Bill McKechnie ... Wonder where you'll find another record like that?

World Softball Series Award to Cleveland in '44

By the Canadian Press

The Amateur World Softball series, a feature that has attracted many Canadian teams in recent years, has been awarded to Cleveland, O., in 1944 to be played at the Lakewood Elks Club. The date of the round-robin tournament has not been set but the series will likely be played in September after local associations in both the United States and the Dominion have declared winners for the season. Last year the tourney was staged at Detroit.

The tournment sanctioned by the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, will be limited to 32 teams, 16 in the men's group and 16 for women.

Pte. Max Bentley piled up five goals as Calgary Army whipped H. M. C. S. Tecumseh 12-4 Saturday night in the Alberta Services Senior Hockey League at Calgary. Ptes. Bobby Carse and Alex Kaleta, also former N. H. L. players, indulged in generous scoring.

The World Baseball series reached the U. S. base at Anchorage, Alaska, yesterday, when five major leaguers, headed by Manager Frankie Frisch of the Pittsburgh Pirates, brought a film of the Yankee-Cards tournament. The warfront tourists included Stan Musial and Danny Litwhiler of the Cards, Hank Borowy of the Yanks and Fred Walker of the Dodgers.

Green Bay Packers scored a 38-29 verdict over Philadelphia-Pittsburgh Combines in one of two scheduled National Football League games Sunday. In the other engagement, New York defeated Washington 14-10.

L. Di Benedetto of New Orleans was re-elected for the fifth straight year at the closing session of the Amateur Athletic Union in its 55th annual convention at Columbus, O., yesterday. The records committee accepted as a new indoor record the pole-vaulting mark of 15 feet 8 1-2 in. by Cornelius Warmerdam.

Two tie games were played in the Quebec Senior Hockey League out of three fixtures staged over the weekend. R. C. A. F. of Montreal and Commandos wound up with a 3-3 score at Ottawa Saturday night but in the return game at Montreal Sunday afternoon Air Force turned back Ottawa 5-2. Quebec Aces and Montreal Royals each scored six goals in the other Sunday engagement.

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — B. L. Anderson, Secretary-Treasurer of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, writes in the Canadian Annual Golf Review that "if the war does not appear headed for early conclusion next spring, I believe many clubs will fold for the duration although some clubs which hung on this year may be able to continue for another season." .... To prevent a ball shortage in 1944, Anderson urges all available old balls be returned to manufacturers for recovering during the winter months.

They Rise Again:

Withdrawal of the Cornwall Army hockey team from the Quebec Senior Hockey League because of the Army's soldier-first policy has had a beneficial result. The Army now is entering a team in the Cornwall Intermediate League, formed to provide winter entertainment for the city. Jack Park of the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder writes: "To use the words of Lt.-Col. Rodolphe Larose, who sums the situation up in one sentence, service hockey in Cornwall now will be played to entertain and interest the masses instead of the few."

Track Topics:

Jockey Robert Summers, the former Winnipeg hockey player who became a top rider on both Western and Eastern tracks this year, has contracted to ride for the Four Oaks stable in Ontario next season ...Johnny (Vancouver Province) Park says Austin Taylor has not forgotten his dream of sending the Kentucky Derby winner to the post some day. The Vancouver breeder disposed of most of his thoroughbreds when war broke out. But when his more serious duties are finished Taylor, whose Indian Broom finished third in the 1936 Derby, will be back shooting for the classic again.

Incidentally:

Commenting on Reg Threlfall's assertion his Winnipeg Bombers would beat Hamilton Wildcats four games out of five, Walter (Hamilton Spectator) McMullen writes: — "He should have had them leave that losing game to the last." .... Dink (Montreal Gazette) says Montreal's famous girl skiers and swimmers, the Wurtele twins, Rhoda and Rhona, will be subjects of magazine articles in both Canadian and United States publications shortly ... Tiger Mitchell, goalkeeper for Regina Army Caps last winter, has obtained his discharge from the Army owing to a bad back. And Bill (Red) Tilson, a forward star with Caps, now is serving overseas. Bill is a brother of the Red who played for Oshawa Generals.

KINGSTON ARMY SINKS THE NAVY

Frontenacs Take Over 2nd Place With 11-6 Victory

By The Canadian Press

Kingston Soldiers sank Toronto Sailors 11-6 in Saturday night's senior O.H.A. fixture for a repeat victory in home-and-home games against the tars on two successive nights. As a result, Frontenac Army nosed ahead of St. Catharines to take exclusive possession of second spot in the league standing only one game behind the leading Hamilton Majors whom they are to meet at Hamilton in their next outing.

Frontenac and Navy were even 4-all at the second recess but, after that, the puck flew past netminder Evans six times in a row between the two last Navy scores. Seven Frontenacs figured in the goal column with Jim Peters having three and Red Hamill and Red Doran accounting for a pair each. Tisdale accounted for one goal and four assists and other Kingston scorers were Giesebrecht, Foster and Booth. For Navy, Art Thomson performed the hat trick, two of the goals being unassisted, while Benson, Scotty Milne and Joe Klukay each scored one. By getting three points during the evening, coach Hamill went up to league leadership once more in the individual standing.

WEEKEND STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Gerry Heffernan, Montreal, who sparked Canadiens Saturday by banging four goals into the Detroit nets when his team defeated Red Wings 8-2. He collected an assist during the same game and last night he added three more points to his weekend record when Bruins defeated Canadiens 5-4.

Herb Cain, Boston, who tallied once and teed up the puck for two more last night.

Bill Cowley, Boston, who scored one goal and collected points for two assists.

Fernand Majeau, rookie Canadien, who made two of the Montreal counters last night.

Fido Purpur, Chicago, who scored three goals last night when Black Hawks defeated New York Rangers 7-6.

Ab Demarco, Rangers, who got one counter unassisted and collected two more points last night.

Jack Hamilton, Toronto, who scored four goals and one assist as Leafs licked New York 11-4 Saturday night.

MANY DETAILS BROUGHT OUT IN COX HEARING

Judge Landis Remains Adamant in Keeping Cox Out of Baseball

LONG DISCUSSION

By TED MEIER
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Must reading for hot stove league fans this winter is the testimony at the William D. Cox hearing here Saturday before baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis at which Cox, former President of the Phillies, sought without success to be cleared of the charge he bet on ball games.

The testimony brought our many hitherto undisclosed details in the turbulent 1943 career of the 34-year-old New York banker who purchased the Phillies last January and on Nov. 23 was banned from the game for life by Landis. It is fascinating reading.

The reason, Cox testified, that he stated to Landis Nov. 3 and Nov. 6 and to the public in a radio broadcast Nov. 23 that he "made a few small sentimental bets on my team to win" was because it was part of "an ill-advised plan to play detective to smoke out a certain group of Philadelphians in the organization about whom I was suspicious."

"The truth is he did not bet," Cox's attorney, Lloyd Paul Stryker, declared. "When Cox first saw you, Judge (on Aug. 14), he told the truth. He did not bet . . . in the absence of proof the least that can be done is to exonerate him of the charge of betting on games."

No Help Given

At the end of the seven-hours long hearings, however, Landis declared "there is no help I can give Cox...There is an utter impossibility to connect this plan with the repetition o his story on Nov. 3 and Nov. 6."

On those two dates Cox said he made "approximately 15 to 20 bets of from $25 to $100 per game on the Phillies to win." He said he ceased on May 20 when he learned of the rule against betting.

Cox declared he planned to "give out false information to test the loyalty of a man so that if this information came back to be through other channels I would discover who the people were."

Question by Landis: "What was the name of the man to whom you told this false information?"

"Mr. Randolph" (L. Wister Randolph, Vice President, stockholder and director of the club). "I told him on Aug. 10 that I made a few small bets on the team in the early part of the season...This information came back to me Oct. 15."

This was the date of a stormy board of directors meeting at which Nathan (Babe) Alexander, assistant to Cox, called upon Cox to resign as President and sell his stock because of "his obvious mal record in running the club."

Cox later did resign as President and sell his stock to Robert R. M. Carpenter, of Wilmington, Del., who installed his 28-year-old son as President.

Alexander, called as a witness by Landis, testified he had preferred "50 charges" against Cox at the meeting Oct. 15."

TRACK TESTS FEATURE MEET

The first indoor athletic meet of the Hi-Y noon meeting was held at the Y.M.C.A. Friday with track tests being featured under the sponsorship of General Secretary J. E. Shortt. Some remarkably good times were recorded by the dozen contestants, the individual times being as follows:

L. Sills 14 4-5 seconds; D. Williams 16 secs.; N. Akey 15 secs.; K. Anderson 14 secs.; E. Lywood 14 1-2 secs.; L. Greatrix 15 secs; G Latchford 14 secs.; N. Ritz 13 4-5 secs.; D. Martin 14 1-2 secs.; Ben Hubbell 15 secs.

Weekly indoor athletic tests will be continued in the Hi-Y group until the Christmas holidays arrive.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Short Act

Two American music-hall artists sought employment in one of London's leading theatres.

The manager inquired the length of their act.

The pair hadn't had an act for a month of Sundays, and didn't know just what to say; but being resourceful, replied, "Twenty-five minutes."

"Twenty-five minutes" exclaimed the manager. "Why my dear sirs, ours is a long bill. I cannot give you twenty-five minutes I suggest that you go on for eight minutes."

The performers stared at him abhast.

"Eight minutes!" they screamed "Why, we bow for seven minutes!"

(Iron out problem.)

There is to be a meeting of interested sponsors of junior hockey at the Hume Arena a little after eight this evening, that is before the election returns start coming in. It seems there are three organizations desirous of sponsoring junior hockey in this city, the Belleville Juniors, Reliance A.C. and St. Michael's Academy, while still another organization has been mentioned.

The question arises—are there sufficient players available for two or three clubs?

Take a city the size of Toronto for instance, some 750,000 of a population and they have but two junior "A" clubs, Marlboros and Young Rangers. Kingston with a population of 35,000 souls boasts of one civilian junior "B" puck squad. True enough the more teams we have the more boys there are to be given an opportunity to learn the game. What tonight's meeting decides is of little difference to this corner, but careful consideration should be given all angles, as the sponsoring of a hockey club is not a bed of roses, especially junior hockey in Belleville.

(Another team in.)

From Marmora comes word that a junior O.H.A. club will be sponsored in that village and the good people of Marmora and Deloro are seeking affiliation into the local O.H.A. group along with Stirling, Trenton and Belleville. No doubt they'll be admitted with open arms, but as the provincial puck body demands a covered rink for all O.H.A. games the Marmora team will doubtless have to use the nearby Madoc rink for their home ice, which also is quite in order.

Then Fl. Buff Horton long since has entered a junior hockey team from the No. 8 Manning Pool base recently opened at the Trenton R.C.A.F. main station, so as the picture now stands there are clubs already entered from Marbora, Stirling, Trenton and the Air Force without mentioning Belleville.

Here's where the rub comes in—could three clubs procure playing dates at the Hume Arena in a seven-teamed group? Home and home games for a seven-club loop means a schedule of 42 games without mentioning anything pertaining to group play-offs. At this rate of statistics it would mean 18 home dates for three Belleville teams, which means a powerful lot of junior hockey for Belleville. In the event Fl. Horton's junior Flyers chose the Hume Arena as their home ice, then it would boost this figure to 24 games here.

(Katan has manager.)

No sooner did John Katan sign papers to meet "Whipper Billie" Watson in a British Empire championship bout here for Thursday night, than up pops "Palmero Johnnie" with the statement he had engaged Al (Boo Bunny) as his manager. Frankly Katan is as mean a "heel" as ever clicked one and he can't get any unorthdox ideas from the buxom Bunny simply because Palermo John knows all of the tricks not included in the book. However, that's the way it stands today and even Watson and his headman (Lawson) are unable to understand how Katan can benefit from anything Dunlop might advise him. Fortunately the brawl is a commission - sanctioned affair, which in itself should be sufficient to swell the patronage Thursday night.

Today promoter Tunney was trying to line-up some ring ruffian to take on "Hard-boiled" Hannigan and he's apparently finding it a tough job, as the boys don't like the way Hannigan plays the game.

(Remember when—)

It was decided at the annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association, 29 years ago today, to divide the playing time of a hockey match into three periods of 20 minutes each. Previously a game was split into two 30-minute halves. Since that memorable day 29 years ago, however, many drastic changes have been made in Canada's national sport in an effort to streamline the pastime. So-much-so that patrons of three decades ago wouldn't even recognize the game of today in the event they hadn't seen a match for 30 years.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 245

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There are no priorities on accurate bidding that is simple. But bridge experts seem to thrive on inventing ersatz responses. Even if they give partners the ellybake.

A noted expert recently created this rule: "Do not take out to the second level with less than two honor tricks." Then he adds a list of exceptions to show when you can do it with less.

His rule takes care of an unusual situation. His exceptions cover all the normal spots. That's putting the car before the wrong end of the horse. Which is not Horse Sense.

Why not cover the popular situations with a rule. Then only the unusual case will be an exception. That would be easier to learn and remember. That is how Horse Sense does it.

Suppose your partner started with an opening bid of one spade and you held this hand:

♠9
♥Q J 10 7 6 5
♦9 8 7
♣A J 4

With that hand, many players would first respond with a bid of one no-trump. Then, if they got a second chance to bid, they would bid the heart suit.

Ask why and they will tell you they do not go to the second level with so few honor tricks. Only because they are unable to remember the exceptions in the rules they are following.

You have two high cards in more than two tricks. Your suit is rebiddable. Even if partner does not assist that suit the first time you name it, you can bid that suit a second time.

It stands to reason your hand will play better in hearts than it will in anything else, including no-trump. So, give yourself a chance to show partner that it is rebiddable.

Furthermore, all bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. If you bid at all, your first choice is a takeout.

First things should come first.

AT THE BELLE

"Claudia"

After a brilliant career in the pages of Redbook Magazine, as a novel, and on the stage and radio, Rose Franken's lovable "Claudia" scored a new triumph, completely captivating the entire audience at the Belle theatre. In the person of Dorothy McGuire, who enacted the title role in the Broadway production, she is a delightfully different heroine who can't miss being a national favorite. Warm, human and enormously popular entertainment, the picture is beautifully and effectively conceived and executed.

"Claudia" is a thoroughly unpredictable young matron. Happily married to a successful architect, she lives in their newly-acquired farm some forty miles out of New York City. Around her activities is woven an unconventional plot, which finds her at first a flighty teen aged girl and moves with her to maturity.

Amusingly naive—to those who don't know her—Claudia discovers in quick succession many things. She meets every situation, from the imuplsive charm of the footloose male next door, to approaching motherhood and the unexpected loss of her adored mother, with her own light-hearted fortitude and courage.

Dorothy McGuire, who created a furore with her understanding portrayal on the stage, makes her first appearance before the cameras a memorable one. And there is no doubt but that she is destined for stardom. So real, so believable is she that no one can resist her, especially her tolerant, understanding husband, Robert Young, gentle, and at all times loving. "Claudia's" husband is nevertheless constantly baffled by her aprpoach to life's many problems.

Ina Claire is "Claudia's" patient mother, and her spontaneous portrayal ranks with the finest performances of her brilliant career. She is fully aware that her daughter can outdo any three women three times her age in getting into baffling situations but she is just as confident in her ability to charm her way out of them.

It is easy to account for the phenomenal success of "Claudia" in all her many triumphs when you see how easily, and how naturally she handles herself. The realization strikes all at once that it is not only the charm of Miss Franken's heroine, but also the effortless acting of Dorothy McGuire. Truly, she is "Claudia" and she alone can portray her with such consummate artistry.

Adapted for the screen by Morie Ryskind, the dialogue is crisp and effective and the mood of the picture shifts from the earlier, lighter humor, to the more mature earnestness as the central theme develops in dramatic style.

Other important roles in "Claudia" are handled expertly by Reginald Gardiner, Olga Baclanova, Jean Howard, Frrank Tweddell and Elsa Jannssen.

The direction under the expert guidance of Edmund Goulding, blends the picture smoothly and maintains the debonair humor throughout.

The Paramount Canadian News and a new edition of the March of Time "America's Food Crisis" precede the feature attraction.

JUKE BOX JENNY

Juke Box Jenny played to capacity house Saturday night, and believe us folks, it is the surprise musical comedy of the year — it has everything — soft and sweet music —the hottest jive imaginable and a story that will hold your interest right to the climax. Ken Murray is really immense and supported by the singing star Harriet Hilliard, you have entertainment deluxe — Get away from everyday snags with this top-rate musical honey — we can't get any better than we have to offer you right now.

THE FALCON IN DANGER

A surprise-package mystery is presented in RKO Radio's "The Falcon in Danger," which brings Tom Conway to the screen for the third consecutive time as the lady-killer sleuth who always gets his man — and his woman.

The hunt for the criminal, who sent two men to their deaths from a speeding airliner and stole $100,000 on securities, provides the basis for the thrilling action which is highlighted with sparkling comedy.

An excellent cast includes Jean Brooks, Elaine Shepard, Amelita Ward, Clarence Kolb, Robert Emmett Keane, Cliff Clark, and many others.

Universal News of the World will be presented Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Great Victor Herbert"

The world has never stopped singing the immortal love songs of Victor Herbert—now it will hear them from the screen in the first motion picture built around the personality of the great Irish-American composer, "The Great Victor Herbert," which Paramount will present tonight at the Capitol theatre.

With Allan Jones, Mary Martin and Walter Connolly playing the chief roles in a cast that numbers hundreds, "The Great Victor Herbert" goes back to the days when Herbert was czar of gas-lit Broadway, and tells a romantic love story played to more than a score of the master's melodies.

Under the direction of Producer-Director Andrew Stone, whose enthusiasm for the great composer and his work goes back to boyhood, the cream of Herbert's music was included in the film. "The Great Victor Herbert" brings back such unforgettable pieces as "Kiss Me Again," "I'm Falling in Love With Some One," "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life," "A Kiss in the Dark" and "Thine Alone."

"That Girl From Paris"

The added musical is experiences of a tiny French diva who secretly enters a strange country in quest of her sweetheart, is the keynote of "That Girl from Paris," starring Lily Pons, Gene Raymond and Jack Oakie. A young girl who flees from the altar of a marriage for convenience in Paris and pursues a young American musician to this country, Miss Pons offers several vocal treats by Rossini, Johann Strauss and original numbers by Arthur Schwartz with her world-acclaimed voice. Herman Bing, Frank Jenks and Mischa Auer have other principal roles in this RKO Radio film musical.

The Canadian Universal News completes the grand double featured musical program.

Food Situation Is Improving

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Delhi, Dec. 6 — (AP) — A faint ray of hope in the shape of military aid which is improving the food situation has appeared at least in the agonizing famine disaster which for six months has borne down upon 60,000,000 of India's 400,000,000 people, but now disease has followed hunger to claim its toll.

A survey of the situation as it stands today shows that control of widespread epidemics has replaced starvation as the No. 1 problem of Eastern India.

No reliable famine fatality figures have been published but estimates based on the information available place the figure at somewhere between 20,000 and 70,000 deaths a month for the last five months.

But military aid, in the form of trucks bringing rice and doctors to fight disease, has brightened the picture somewhat. Hundreds of soldiers on trucks push into rural Bengal province with rice. Five hundred civilian and army doctors with precious medicine have been on the job long enough to see encouraging results.

The outstanding coloratura soprano of the world, Lily Pons, comes to the Capitol tonight in "That Girl from Paris". On the same program "The Great Victor Herbert."

Hollywood and HERE

By HYE BOSSIN

Though Not Without Honor—

Not many years after the turn of the century a lively little girl romped on the pavement of a Toronto street almost in the shadows of the City Hall tower. Within a comparatively short time her talent and personality was to make her the darling of this continent. The affection of millions for her provided the impetus that began the forward march of the motion picture.

The bright little Canadian had become an actress of promise at the age of sixeen. The leaders of the stage offered her chances that would have won any other person to them but she was attracted to a new medium of entertainment, one that was being ridiculed on almost every side. She was faced with a tremendous personal decision. Her choice made history.

Of this girl William C. deMille, a ranking playwright at the time, in a letter dated July 25th, 1911, wrote to the then dean of the theatre, David Belasco:

"Oh, by the way, you remember that little girl, Mary Pickford, who played Betty in 'The Warrens of Virginia'? I met her again a few weeks ago and the poor kid is actually thinking of taking up moving pictures seriously. She says she can make a fairly good living at it, but it does seem a shame. After all, she can't be more than seventeen and I remember what faith you had in her future; that appealing personality of hers would go a long way in the theatre and now she's throwing her whole career in the ash-can and burying herself in a cheap form of amusement which hasn't a single point I can see to recommend it. There will never be any real money in those galloping tintypes and certainly no one can expect them to develop into anything which could, by the wildest stretch of the imagination, be called art.

"I pleaded with her not to waste her professional life and the opportunity the stage gives her to be known to thousands of people, but she's rather a stubborn little thing for such a youngster and says she knows what she's doing.

"I suppose we'll have to say goodby to little Mary Pickford. She'll never be heard of again, and I feel terribly sorry for her."

And now Mary Pickford is a living legend. A million hamlets would be proud to claim her. But in Toronto's City Hall, where oil portraits of civic notables hang everywhere, there is none of Mary. The house in which she was born, which attracted many tourists, was neglected until torn down. In Ontario's capital there is no fixed example of pride in her.

In the city, province and country which gave Mary Pickford to the world nothing exists to honor her but the love of her people.

HERSHEY BEARS REMAIN ATOP AMERICAN LOOP

Beat Capitals on Sunday and Draw With Bisons on Saturday

REDS BOW TO BARONS

By the Canadian Press

Hershey Bears today remain atop the American Hockey League as a result of their 4-2 conquest of Indianapolis Capitals last night and their 2-2 draw with Buffalo Bisons Saturday night.

The Bisons defeated Pittsburgh Hornets 2-1 last night, while Cleveland Barons whipped Providence Reds 4-2. In the other two games Saturday night Hornets defeated Reds 4-2 and Barons gained a 2-1 decision over Indianapolis Capitals.

In the Bears' entanglement with Capitals, Captain Wally Kilrea scored the 100th goal of his A. H. L. career. His counter at 11:29 in the first period put Bears in the lead.

Other Hershey goals were counted by Bill Hudson, Johnny Harms and Peggy O'Neil. Alex Titson and Nakina Smith were the Indianapolis marksmen.

Saturday night the Bears rallied in the third period to score two goals and give them a tie with Bisons.

Bison scorers were Maury Riimstad and Dede Klein and Bears' goalgetters were Fred Hegert and Billy Moe.

In the Bison-Hornet encounter at Buffalo, Bob Walton—down from the Montreal Canadiens—drove home Walt Atanas' rebound early in the first period. Fred Hunt scored Bisons' second counter 12 minutes later.

Wendell Jamieson bagged Hornets' only goal in the second period.

After seven home games without a defeat, Reds bowed to Barons 4-2 at Providence last night.

Defenceman Dan Sprout gave Barons an early lead, but Harold Cooper tied it up. Just before the end of the first period Lou Trudel's goal kept Cleveland ahead for good. Peter Horeck added another counter in the second and about halfway through the third Tommy Burlington tallied the fourth. Jack Toupin scored Reds' second goal late in the third round.

A reshuffled Hornet lineup handed Reds another 4-7 defeat at Pittsburgh Saturday night. Hornets jumped into the lead early in the first period. They were tied for a few minutes in the second but Tony Hemmerling's count gave them a 3-1 start in the final period. Bill Gauf registered their fourth counter at 19:47.

Land Mine Exploded While He Was Driving in Truck

Trenton, Dec. 6—Mrs. Henry Scarlett, 64 Princess Street, has received a letter from her son Pte. Harry Scarlett who was wounded in the early stages of the battle of Italy. He informed his mother that while he was driving in a truck a land mine exploded sending him and his companions into the air. He was taken to hospital where he was confined for some time being unable to walk, however, he has again fully recovered and is back on the battlefront.

His great disappointment according to his letter, was the fact that he lost all his clothes and personal belongings.

Pte. Scarlett went overseas in July 1940 a member of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment. A brother Douglas is with the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps in England, as a radio technician.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER TEN

"She wouldn't go in, Inspector. Said for you to call on her when you'd finished here. She lives in one of that row of brick houses down the road a bit. "Bide a Wee," she said the name was. You are to ask for Miss Somethin'-or-other Whipple."

The reporters were clamoring for the police inspector's attention. He silenced them temporarily with a wave of his arm.

"If you'll wait a little longer," he said, "I'll tell you all you want to know."

Burrows plodded along the dark road to the rose-brick houses. He came to the gate on which was painted Bide A Wee. There was no need to ask for Miss Whipple, for that lady opened the door to him in person.

"You wanted to see me, ma'am?"

Miss Whipple's eyes gleamed behind her rimless glasses.

"Won't you come in?"

She led the way to a prim parlor crowded with bric-a-brac. Seating himself gingerly on a gold-and-plush chair, Inspector Burrows felt himself being shouldered and jostled by an overwhelming display of china dogs.

"This afternoon, Mr. Burrows," began the spinster gingerly, her eyes lighting up, "I happened to be sitting at the window and I saw everything that went on over at the Osbornes'. About three I noticed—"

"Wait a minute," said Inspector Burrows thoughtfully. "You are quite a distance from the Osbornes'. I don't understand how you could see anything very distinctly."

"I have a telescope," retorted Miss Whipple tartly.

• •

In the still of the night, Edith Osborne lay awake listening to the fitful breathing of her husband, every breath a longdrawn sigh. He was awake, too; she could feel the tension of the situation just as he did. There was nothing she could do about it; nothing she could say . . . Octavia had not died—she had been killed. And murder in a haunting sense makes its victims live. Octavia would never die. The swift tightening about her throat of the scarf which had ended her life had granted her a terrifying immortality.

No, words were worse than useless. Edith could not say, to her husband: My dear, I know your sister was murdered in your house; I know the police think one of us did it; and, of course, I see that there is nothing else for them to think. I agree that it is going to root up our whole life and wreck it; but let's not think about it, let's stop worrying and go to sleep.

In the hush of the night, the house lived. Its timbers stretched themselves, groaning and creaking; faint whispers rustled through dark passages and empty rooms; and behind the wainscot ran an odd gurgling sound. The clock on the dining room mantelpiece whirred and clicked before striking a deep sonorous chime htat hung upon the still night air, swelling like circles that widen on the surface of a pool when a stone is thrown into it.

Suddenly a cry echoed through the house. Edith thought she had imagined it until she heard it again. Stephen sat up.

"That's Peter," he whispered hoarsely. "Sounds like a nightmare."

He slid his feet out of bed and fumbled for his slippers. Edith let him go. Comforting his son might do him good. Stephen padded along the gloomy hall and into the room where the boys slept. He could dimly see the limp form of Michael, sunk in slumber; and the small white form of Peter, sitting up in the other bed, quaking with terror.

Stephen put his arms round the boy and held him tightly, feeling with pity the spasmodic shudders than ran through the slim body.

"It's all right son, nothing's going to hurt you. Daddy's here."

Gradually, Peter allowed himself to be soothed. The tears stopped coursing down his wet cheeks and the shuddering ceased except for an occasional tremor.

"Oh, Dad," he whimpered brokenly, "it was awful. I th—thought Aunt Oc—Octavia was in the room."

"Hush, boy, hush! You'll waken the others. It was only a dream, Peter, only a dream."

"Bob D—Dowell told me once that when people die th—that way their ghosts haunt the places where they were killed forever."

"Bob was talking nonsense, son. There are no such things as ghosts."

The boy was silent for a moment.

An icy grip tightened on Stephen's heart. What could he say to dispel the shadow of Octavia's death from Peter's mind? He could find no words that would do it.

Kicking off his slippers, Stephen pushed back the bed-clothes and slipped in beside the boy. Peter put two slender arms about his neck and nestled close to him.

"You won't leave me, Dad? You will stay all night?"

"Yes, son, I'll stay."

"I'm glad."

"Good night, Peter."

"Goo' night, Dad."

At five in the morning Stephen gently extricated himself from his sleeping child's clinging arms and tiptoed downstairs. He opened the back door and went out to the garden. He had forgotten his slippers and the dew was cool and refreshing on his bare feet. It was a lovely morning, but the sky was clear and blue, the air sweet and fresh. A bird chirped in the branches of a tree above his head and far away a rooster crowed a shrill challenge to the sun.

Yesterday dawned like this, he thought; and yesterday was the most dreadful day of my life. What will today bring?

His roses were coming on. Every day more blooms opened out to their full splendor. An hour later when Edith came down, she found her husband staring at a rose as though it were a crystal ball. He was still in pyjamas and bare feet. Horrified, she made him go and dress.

Hannah was up and a fragrant odor of coffee began to pervade the house. The normal Sunday morning breakfast hour was half past nine, but Edith and her husband breakfasted alone at seven. Edith had decided to let the children sleep until they wakened of their own accord.

At eight a boy came clattering up the gravel path and deposited the Sunday papers on the doorstep. Stephen was looking out of the window and the boy gave him a curious stare. He had seen Stephen at least a hundred times in the past year but he gaped at him as though he were an oddity viewed for the first time.

Stephen went out to bring in the papers. He stooped to pick them up and the glaring headline, which was spread across the top of the front page of the uppermost paper, struck him like a physical blow:

WOMAN MURDERED WHILE NIECE READS SHAKESPEARE

With shaking hands he lifted the paper. He leaned back against the portico, weak with horror, and read the sub-heads and the columns of type beneath them:

LAKELAWN — Tragedy entered a quiet home here, Saturday afternoon when Octavia Osborne, 71, wealthy spinster of Sutton Square, New York City, was strangled with a silk scarf while sitting in the living room of her brother, 50 year old Stephen Osborne. Ann Osborne, a niece of the murdered woman is alleged to have been reading a book—Shakespeare's Henry the V—in the room at the time of the crime. She told the police that she heard nothing until her aunt's companion entered the room and gave the alarm.

A local resident, whose name the police are withholding for the present, has come forward to say that, although she was watching the house all afternoon from the window at which she was sitting, she saw no one enter it except members of the family and Mr. Edward Fleming, son of a prominent Bradbury lawyer, who is locally reputed to be engaged to the eldest daughter.

A scarf, found knotted tightly about the neck of the murdered woman, belonged to Dorothy Osborne, one of her nieces . . .

(Stephen skipped rapidly through the text): visit was cut short by a serious family quarrel which arose when Miss Osborne announced the terms of a will she intended to make, disinheriting her brother . . . draft of a new will was found partially burned in a fireplace . . . Osborne had lost his job the previous day . . . police questioned various members of the family and took a set of fingerprints from each . . . scouted the possibility that a tramp might have committed the crime . . .

With haggard eyes Stephen read to the bottom of the page, then followed the injunction: "Turn to page 16." Descriptions of the individual Osbornes, further details of the crime and veiled hints that no outsider could be responsible for it . . . .

There was a picture of the house, taken from the fields behind, in which the French windows were marked with an X; a snapshot of Sheriff Black entering the gate, with a police car in the background, and an awe-struck crowd in the roadway over which ran the caption "Crowds Flocking to Scene of Mysterious Crime."

Adroitly enough, the newspapers were proclaiming the police impression: "There are seven members of the Osborne family and one of them must have done it. Take your choice." The insinuations were plain. No reader could doubt what they were intended to convey: that Octavia Osborne was murdered by her own flesh-and-blood. All over the country at this moment millions of people were asking and exclaiming: "Isn't it awful? Murdering an old woman for her money! I wonder which of them did it? If you ask me, the husband—" "Well, I don't know. I can't quite swallow that yarn about the girl reading while it was done. I shouldn't wonder if she—"

Stephen could visualize George Bramwell's avid red face in the bus on Monday morning as he eagerly swapped speculations with the other men; and could almost hear him saying: "Y'know, I rode out with Osborne only the other evening. He looked worried, I can tell you. Five to one he did it! It stands to reason: he lost his job and was ripe for murder when the old woman refused to help him. Wonder if he'll hang?"

With a groan Stephen tore the paper to shreds and crumpled it into a mangled ball. He snatched up another paper and crushed them together. As he turned to go down the garden to burn them in the incinerator, he saw several strangers in their Sunday best lounging in the road with expressions of morbid gloating on their scrubbed pink faces. They nudged each other; one of them whispered something which made the others burst into loud guffaws.

Some time later, Edith came to him he was savagely stirring the ashes in the incinerator.

"Time to dress for church, Stephen."

He stared at her.

'Church? Edith, are you mad? We can't go to church. If you'd seen the papers! The faces of those staring louts in the road! They'll all be gossiping about us— the whole town —if we go out they'll nudge each other and point. 'They killed an old woman for her money!' We can't face it, Edith. It's too much".

"I know how you feel, Stephen, my dear, but it's got to be faced sooner or later. We've got to keep going as though nothing had happened. Every Sunday morning since we've been in this house we've gone to church and we must go today, of all days. Peter and Marjory can stay at home, but the older children must come with us. Don't you see, we'll be letting ourselves down if we shrink from facing our neighbors. If they stare, let them. We'll show them we're innocent, whatever they think".

How Stephen lived through the walk to church, the seemingly endless services, and the walk back to the house, he never really knew. Staring feces. Goggling eyes. Gloating whispers . . .

A village with a scandal to gnaw on is hell on earth; and the murder of Octavia Osborne was such a scandal as Lakelawn had never before known.

A camera clicked as Stephen entered the church and he started as though he were shot.

When the Osbornes came out, they were greeted by a few hoots and jeers. And then, all of a sudden, there was silence. The pastor had come through the door behind them. For a moment he stood gazing with a stern, set face at the crowd; then he walked up to Stephen and shook his hand. He shook hands with all the other Osbornes, and said, in a voice loud enough to be heard by those standing around: "I sympathize greatly with you in your trouble and I admire the fortitude with which you are facing it. My blessing go with you".

When they were leaving they met the Flemings. The distance from the lawyer's house to the church was so short that he, his wife and son almost invariably covered it on foot, but this morning their limousine was waiting Mr. and Mrs. Fleming, entering their car, acknowledged their neighbors with the most distant of bows. But Ted Fleming hung back and spoke urgently to Dorothy.

"Meet me in the orchard behind our garden at four this afternoon. I've a lot to discuss with you—darling".

Mrs. Fleming leaned forward, looking out of the open window of the car.

"Edward! We're waiting".

Someone tittered in the group about the church door.

'Oh, Edward!" was heard in mocking falsetto. "Don't keep mama waiting! Mama will spank!'"

There was a roar of coarse laughter. Red with embarrassment, Ted ducked into the car and it glided majestically away.

All the way back to the house Stephen could hear footsteps behind, the footsteps of a giggling cluster of curiosity-seekers, following eagerly to swell the gaping crowds at his garden gate.

At a quarter to four Sunday afternoon, Dorothy left the house and started down the path to the gate. Halfway, she halted in dismay.

There were now hundreds of people pushing and jostling in the narrow road and long lines of cars parked on either side. A policeman was doing his best to keep the crowd under control, but he could not be everywhere at once.

Some sightseers had cameras. Three or four clicks as Dorothy hesitated told her that she had been caught by as many candid camera murder fans. From the top of a car, a news-reels crew was filming the crowd.

The camera swung about to take in Dorothy. She averted her face and hurried into the house; then went out by the back door, through the vegetable garden, and into the field behind. Here there were other curiosity-seekers, but not in the numbers that eddied to and fro at the front. Her face grimly set, her head down, she hastened through the field to a path which joined the road a few hundred yards from the house. At the end of the path she paused and looked right and left like a hunted animal.

The road in her immediate vicinity was clear. With a thankful gasp she ran across to a birch grove on the other side which skirted the orchard at the foot of the Flemings' garden.

In the orchard she flung herself on the grass and covered her face. She could still feel the cruel scrutiny of those morbid eyes. It had been like one of those nightmares in which you are walking partially clad along a crowded street. . . Those eyes! Horrible, beastly eyes; the eyes of human animal revelling in the misery of their fellows. What had she done that they should look at her watch, she was dismayed to were something in a cage?

They had taken her photograph. In their homes they would hand the prints about, delighted to have such mementos to exhibit to their friends. They would say: "That's Dorothy Osborne. You know, one of the family that murdered the rich aunt. Yes ,we drove over to see the house and she came out in the garden. . the nerve of her. . . ."

In a thousand movie theatres she would be thrown on the screen for audiences to gape at and wonder whether she was the one who "did it'.

For a long time she lay on the friendly earth, clinging to it. . . When at last she sat up and looked at her watch, she wa dismayed to find that it was twenty after four. Where was Ted? She stood up and took a few paces down an avenue of trees.

"Ted!" she called softly. "Ted!" No answer.

Someone was coming. Dorothy saw a flash of white between the trees and hurried in that direction. But she stopped dead when she saw that the person who was approaching was not Ted, but a trim maid in a black dress, snowy cap and apron.

"Miss Osborne? Mrs. Fleming sent me to look for you".

"Mrs. Fleming sent you?"

"Yes, Miss"—the girl eyed her covertly from beneath lowered lids —"she told me to ask you to have tea with her. She is on the terrace."

"Oh!" Dorothy hesitated. "Alone"? she asked, and could have bitten off her tongue as soon as the question was utterec.

"Yes, Miss, alone", replied the maid.

"Tell Mrs. Fleming that I'm not feeling well and wish here to excu— No, wait, please. I'll come".

Mrs. Fleming was not on the terrace but on the smooth stretch of shaven lawn below it. A tea-table had been laid in the shade of a spreading elm and there were two wicker chair placed beside it, in one of which sat Mrs. Fleming. A tall woman in the late forties, with a pale face, she was beautiful in a serene, impersonal fashion.

V. R. Butts, Repatriated to Canada From Shanghai, Visits Daughter Here

Sun-tanned and showing little the effects of many long months internment at the hands of the Japanese, Mr. V. R. Butts, of the Imperial Chemical Industries (China) Ltd. on Saturday in Belleville saw his wife and daughter together for the first time after he bid them goodbye in China back in the spring of 1941.

Mr. Butts was repatriated to Canada on the exchange ship "Gripsholm" which docked last Wednesday in New York. His wife met him in Montreal and they stopped off in Belleville on their way to Toronto to visit their daughter who is attending Albert College.

Interned since last February, Mr. Butts was asked of his treatment in the Pootung Internment Camp at Shanghai, immediately across the Whangpoo River from the city, but a negative reply was forthcoming.

"Other repatriates have already talked too much," he said. "I still have a great many friends back in China and I'll say nothing which might jeopardize their safety at the hands of the Japanese."

Crowded Living Conditions

Of actual living conditions in the internment camp, Mr. Butts talked quite freely, however. "They are facts, all quite generally known by the authorities, and can do no harm," he stated.

One thousand and eighty men, including 350 Americans and 15 Dutch were in the camp in which Mr. Butts was interned. All were men, with no women or children. The camp in which they were housed was an old brick warehouse owned by the British American Tobacco Company. It had been condemned structurally years ago, and was quite unfit for habitation.

"Just to give you an idea of conditions," related Mr. Butts, "there were only seven showers installed for over 1,000 men, and each man had about 48 feet of floor space, with about 125 men to a room."

Food Inadequate

Food supplied by the Japanese was entirely inadequate, it was stated, but supplemented by one parcel monthly through the International Red Cross, inmates were able to sustain themselves.

The general morale of the men was good but all hoped for release by repatriation, "or better still by victory." The only news of the outside world provided the men in the internment camp was through the Japanese - English newspaper, "which was mostly propaganda."

A workers' settlement area of about five acres, demolished by gunfire and bombs during the Japanese invasion of 1937, provided a recreation field for the men. This was surrounded by double barbed wire. The five acres were cleared by hand sufficiently to make a football field and softball diamond. Playing equipment was provided by the local branch of the Red Cross. The Swiss consul made one visit to the internment camp during Mr. Butts' seven months internment, the one visit being after the men had gotten the camp working as smoothly as possible.

Only once in seven months were the men permitted visits from relatives. At the Pootung camp were 47 men with Asiatic wives and also 23 with wives of neutral nationality. "This lengthy separation of husbands and wives was another instance of Japanese cruelty," said Mr. Butts.

Born in Halton County, Ontario, Mr. Butts attended Albert College in Belleville back in 1909-12 and there met his future wife, Miss Ethel McCartney, who had returned to Canada from China to be educated. Later Mr. Butts took a general arts course at Toronto University and went to China 27 years ago as divisional manager of his firm.

Family Returned in 1941

"So you see", laughed Mr. Butts as he revealed that he met his wife in Belleville. "I really have a soft spot in my heart for Belleville". Allegiance to the Alma Mater was suggested as why their daughter, Mary, now 16, was attending Albert College. A son of Mr. and Mrs. Butts has just received his commission in a Canadian Army artillery unit and is in training at Petawawa. Both children were born in China.

Mrs. Butts and her daughter were sent back to Canada early in 1941 because it was seen by officialdom that war between Britain and Japan was inevitable. Many others should have left the Orient at the same time, it was stated.

Importers of industrial chemicals and allied products into China Imperial Chemical Industries (China) Ltd., the firm supplied residences for its officials. Following the internment of "foreigners" these dwellings were taken over by the Japanese as were the firms.

"The Japanese took over all business establishments owned by enemy nationals", stated Mr. Butts. They confiscated motor cars, and household effects. I lost my car, furniture and camera equipment. I doubt if we ever will be recompensed for our losses.

In the 72-day trip from China back to New York a great many of the passengers were able to regain much of their weight they had lost in the internment camp. Mr. Butts regained 12 of the 14 pounds lost while one passenger gained 40 pounds on the trip home. Their treatment aboard the "Gripsholm" left "nothing to be desired", while the Jap boat was much overcrowded.

"But then nobody cared about condition aboard the Japanese boat as long as we got away. The food was also bad, but again nobody cared".

Fine Treatment on Gripsholm

En route to Goa in Portuguese East Africa where the exchange of repatriates was made, the Japanese boat stopped at Hong Kong, in the Phillipine Islands at San Fernando, and at Saigon, French Indo China to take on additional refugees. A stop for supplies was made at Singapore, now called Shonan by the Japanese.

Although now war-torn and under the iron heel of the Japanese, China during the years of peace is a pleasant place to live, according to Mr. Butts. The climate at Shanghai in winters is a bit cold but the summers are delightfully warm. Shorts and shirt comprise a man's wearing apparel. The district in which Mr. Butts as divisional manager of his firm had charge over comprised the provinces of Kiangsu, Chekiang and Anhwei, with a population of 60 to 70 thousand persons.

Mr. Butts could not praise too highly the treatment received on at Gripsholm following the exchange of refugees. "The food was wonderful, and the Red Cross were right on hand with stores and supplies to outfit the refugees with new clothes."

Future plans were not mentioned, but for the time being Mr. and Mrs. Butts will reside in Toronto.

Early Voting

Indications of the municipal vote for this year in the Civic Election were evident when at 2.00 p.m., 19 out of 29 polls reported a total of 780 votes cast. In the 1943 elections there were no indications of the way the voters were exercising their franchise by early reports and at the end of the time of closing a total of 3,072 voters out of a possible 7,000 (approx.) had cast their votes. No election is complete until the final minute of the closing of the polls and, although the voting is fair during the early part of the day, a greater number than those cast in the 1943 elections is expected.

U.S. Army Planes Have Destroyed, Damaged 13,500 Axis Planes

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP)—The army air forces, now numbering more men than all United States brances were able to move into Europe in the First Great War, have destroyed or damaged 13,500 enemy planes since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor two years ago. The air arm has swelled to 2,300,000 men.

Gen. H. H. Arnold, Army Air Chief, disclosed the magnitude of the air operations in an article written for the Army and Navy journal issue dedicated to the second anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack.

McLean's Fan Mail Rivals Hollywood Stars'

Merrickville, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)— His distribution of largesse in Halifax, Toronto, and other centres has posed a problem for Harry McLean, wealthy construction man who lives in this village 45 miles south of Ottawa.

McLean has given money to war veterans, taxi drivers, bell boys and mothers he has met in his travels, now is receiving a "fan mail" rivalling that of Hollywood stars—and he said in a statement Sunday night that it must remain unanswered. He's unable to cope with it.

Newspaper readers from Mexico to the sub-Arctic, attracted by the publicity given McLean's openhandedness, have written him. Each day he receives nearly 1,000 letters, some of them with service discharge papers, military rejection certificates, national registration cards and personal photographs enclosed.

Letters with such enclosures will be returned McLean said, as soon as it's possible for him to "catch up" with the mail.

SMART WORK

London, Dec. 6 — (CP) — During two months of heavy raids in 1940 more than 3,000 water mains in London were damaged, but all were back in working order within a few weeks, Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, said at a Metropolitan Water Board meeting.

Wireless Trade Attracts Women At Air Schools

Twenty Girls Wear Coveted "Sparks" at R.C.A.F. Central Navigation School at Rivers, Man.

(By ENID V. NEMY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Rivers, Man. (CP) — Those coveted "sparks" on the sleeves of air force uniforms aren't limited to men any longer. The "Woggess'" are wearing them and they're mighty proud of them, too.

"Woggess" is air force slang for Wireless Operators (Ground), one of the newest trades for airwomen. The girls receive six months of intensive training at No. 1 Wireless School in Montreal and have an average speed of 22 words a minute in code before they are qualified to wear sparks.

I learned this on a 150-mile flight from Winnipeg to the RCAF Central Navigation School at Rivers, the largest of its kind in the British Empire. Air Vice-Marshal T. A. Lawrence, of No. 2 Training Command, pointed out the school when we were flying at 6,000 feet. Even at that height it was impressive.

As the giant Lockheed-Electra circled the field, methodically-planned outlines began to take shape. Green oblongs and squares became barracks, mess halls, and administrative buildings. Yellow forms were rows of Anson trainers. Tiny dots became figures in air force blue—the men and women of the R.C.A.F.

There are 20 girls doing wireless work here. They are employed in the central radio station located in the control tower. Their job is to maintain communication with all the aircraft of the school during each flight.

They work in eight-hour shifts around the clock—six to a shift with a spare operator handy. Four of the girls work the aircraft of the four flying squadron flights (A, B, C and D.) The fifth girl maintains a constant watch on the R.C.A.F. guard, and distress frequency for aircraft which might be force-landed or lost. A sixth girl on the shift checks air and ground operators' log sheets and reports. All use code instead of radio telephoney because it is faster and cuts through interference better.

Given Weather Reports

After the aircraft have taken off by radio airdrome control, the air operators start calling the girl operators on the ground. They send their positions and get weather reports from the weather bureau, also located in the control tower.

The 'Woggess' hail from all parts of Canada. Melba Sproule and Rita Andrews are from Ottawa. Melba was a metal analyst before she enlisted; Rita, a salesgirl.

Jean MacConnell of Winnipeg, studied theology at Wycliffe College in Toronto, and Margaret Crawford from Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, was taking a business course before she donned uniform.

Edith Sturgeon from Rimbey, Alta., and Eleanor Wood from Penticton, B.C., enlisted immediately after high school. All have one thing in common—"We're in the best trade in the air force."

Many of them are members of the "Bride's Group" with husbands overseas, and will set up housekeeping after the war. The others intend to keep their work in commercial aviation.

Their unit signals officer, FO. C. B. Marshall, of Winnipeg, says "the girls are particularly suited to this type of work. The only ground jobs they can't do are those at isolated stations."

Turkey's Role In War Subject To Speculation

London, Dec. 6 —Turkey's future role in the European war was the subject of anxious Axis speculation today following an assertion by a German news agency yesterday that Turkish President Ismet Inonu had conferred with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in Cairo Saturday.

The conference, about which a communique is expected Wednesday or Thursday "after the return of the Turkish statesman," followed the history-making Iran conference of the chiefs-of-state of Britain and the United States with Russian Premier Stalin, the Nazi news agency Transocean said, quoting Ankara dispatches.

The Germans said that Inonu was accompanied by Numan Menemencoglu, Turkish foreign minister, and the general secretary of the Turkish foreign ministry. They asserted also that Emir Mansur, son of King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, and Imir Fahad, nephew of the King, arrived in Cairo Saturday, presumably "to take part in some Cairo conference."

The German news agency DNB said no change in Turkish policy was expected as a result of the alleged conference, but the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio, significantly perhaps, quoted Franz von Papen, Nazi ambassador to Turkey, as saying on his arrival at Istanbul from Berlin that "Germany is anxious to continue its friendly collaboration with Turkey so that this country can be saved the horrors of war."

A Turkish declaration of war against the Axis, which would afford the Allies new air bases for operations in the Black Sea, the Balkans and the Mediterranean, has been believed by some to be increasingly possible since Menemencioglu conferred with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden after the Moscow conference.

ASSEMBLY

SANG SONG; SLEW SAME

Hon. Pearl Havour was repeated at the last Assembly, as the wicked Symphonettes lured the unsuspecting Quartet on the stage, and proceeded brutally to stab that organization in the back. The operation was carried out by asking them to sing "Pistol Packin' Momma," which, as you know, is (or was) a popular number. That would have been all right, but, by blowing fortissimo and altering the verses between a waltz and a fox-trot, they succeeded in somewhat hampering the usual smooth style (?) of the foursome. Perhaps some of the audience was in doubt as to whether it was the quartet or the Symphonettes who were committing "Hara Kiri" but it was all in good fun (we think) and now it's "Your move, Quartet!"

The Symphonettes had previously presented an arrangement of "Paper Doll," which was well received

It seems that the shopping centre of Belleville will be without the nimble fingers of Collegiate students for one day, Friday, Dec. 17, as pupils will not be allowed to leave school for Christmas employment until the twentieth. This may hinder a few whose exams are finished on Thursday and would like to be out fortifying their pockets for the December spending spree, but one day, more or less, should make little difference.

The B.C.I.V.S. Red Cross was presented a twenty-five dollar cheque by the Belleville Red Cross, in grateful appreciation of the student sale of tickets for the Lever Bros.-Red Cross show, "Lifebuoy Review."

Australian Victor In Private War With the Japanese

Seattle, Dec. 4 (AP)—A United States naval officer brought back from the Solomons today the story of a rugged Australian who recruited his own little private army on New Georgia—and won his private war with Japan.

"You'll run into a guy named Kennedy up there," Lt.-Cmdr. William Parker of the Seabees said he was told. "Captain Kennedy they call him; he doesn't say much, but he acts real nasty when there's a Jap in sight. If only half of what they tell about him is true, he's the greatest character to come out of this war yet."

So, sure enough, Parker met the legendary Captain Kennedy.

"I never did find out whether the Australians sent Kennedy up there or whether it was his own idea," Commander Parker said.

"But, anyway, he moved into a vacated plantation, took over the former occupant's store of spirits, and began to devote himself to serious drinking and to organizing a 10-man native army.

"The Japs from time to time sent in patrols to look over Segi Point. None ever reported back. As soon as Kennedy got word from his natives that the Japs were headed his way, he mobolized his army and waylaid them, picking them off one at a time.

"The Japs finally got to wondering why none of their patrols ever came back, so they sent out 40 infantrymen in a landing barge.

"Kennedy heard they were coming and put out in a 20-foot sloop. He lay behind a small island and let the Japs pass to the other side. Then he bore down on them, firing his machine-gun. He killed all 40 of them and got only a bullet through the leg in doing it. He was recovering from his wound when we got there.

"Kennedy was promoted to major and moved to another assignment. His army had deserted him anyway. He was paying each of his 10 soldiers a pound a month but after we went in a pound a month looked like small potatoes, and they all wanted to fight for us."

Slaughtering Regulations Are Clarified

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP)—The Prices Board's foods administration today issued an order, effective Dec. 6, clarifying livestock slaughtering regulations in several particulars.

The new order provides that no one may sell or buy carcasses, sides, quarters and certain wholesale cuts of meat unless they are stamped as required by a board regulation issued last July 6. This provision does not apply to sales of carcasses by a on-permit-holder to permit holder in cases where such sales are authorized, but the permit-holding purchaser must stamp such carcasses.

The requirement that an employee must slaughter only on the premises of his employer is removed under the new order, which provides that such killing may be done anywhere by the employee of a permit-holder, but the employee must not slaughter for anyone but his employer.

The ban is continued on the slaughtering during June, July and August of lambs weighing less than 75 pounds and, at any time, of hogs weighing less than 100 pounds. These minimum weights apply at places of slaughter, and the operator of an abattoir is made responsible for observing the weight limit.

The order requires every holder of a slaughtering permit to make such reports and furnish such information as are required periodically by the administrator or director of permits.

TURKISH PRESIDENT MEETS CHURCHILL, F.D.R.

ROAD TO ROME UNDER EYES OF 5TH ARMY

Conference May Concern Future Moves in War

Parley May Be As Important As the Inter-Allied Talks In Teheran, Cairo

NAZIS NERVOUS

London, Dec. 7 (CP)—A conference between Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey has been in progress in North Africa, it was learned today, and the results will concern Turkey's future position in relation to the Allies' war against the Axis.

The participation of the Turkish President in conferences with Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt apparently was based on the never-implemented British-Turkish pact of 1939 which pledged Turkey to aid Britain in the event of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean.

The diplomatic correspondent of Press Association wrote: "Churchill and Roosevelt are in conference with President Ismet Inonu of Turkey and their deliberations may in due course have almost as important an effect upon the course and conduct of the war as the great inter-Allied talks which already have taken place in Cairo and Teheran."

The Berlin radio said that the conference had been completed in Cairo and that Inonu had returned to Ankara, where the Turkish cabinet would meet in special session.

German spokesmen meanwhile told Swedish correspondents "the Allies are exerting heavy pressure to force Turkey to join the war."

(A Budapest broadcast heard by U.S. government Monitors said Bulgarian Premier Dobri Bojilov had conferred with the Turkish minister to Sofia after a meeting of the Bulgarian cabinet last night. It declared that "well-informed political circles in Sofia connect this cabinet meeting with the Turkish-Anglo-Saxon-Soviet conference.")

Franz Von Papen, the German Ambassador, talked for nearly an hour yesterday with Turkish Premier Sukru Saracoglu, Reuters News Agency reported today in a dispatch from Ankara.

There has been no Allied confirmation of such a conference.

Reports reaching Budapest from Sofia, however, indicated that the Nazis, preparing to meet any change in Turkey's status, were moving troops through Bulgaria in the direction of the Turkish border. Three motorized German divisions were said to have passed through the Bulgarian capital in recent days.

Such troop movements in Bulgaria—the first of the satellites to fall from the Kaiser's orbit in the First Great War—might be incidental, however, to reports of mounting tension within that country.

Taking a Turkish-British-American conference for granted, George Schroeder, political correspondent of the German Overseas News Agency, a Nazi propaganda organ, asserted the "Wilhelmstrasse does not think it fit to consider this Turkish-Allied meeting as just a routine trip of the Turkish President".

Campaign Discussed.

"Anglo-American sources", he declared, "hint at the possibility that the Balkans campaign was discussed in Teheran and if that was the case it would be imperative to know what Turkey's attitude would be".

In London there was little speculation on a Turkish change of status. Wilson Broadbent, Daily Mail correspondent, wrote, however, that "now that the climax seems to have arrived and the Germans are beginning to bluster and show their hand, I believe the Turkish government will not hesitate. They will declare themselves for the Allies and assume all the responsibility which that entails".

If Turkey should cast her lot with the Allies, she could play an important role in the offensive which Mr. Churchill, Stalin and Mr. Roosevelt plotted at Teheran to crush Germany from the east, west and south. Allied armies in Italy already are moving toward Germany from the south, but Turkish participation would open the way for a full-scale assault on the Balkans, also from the "South".

Influenza-Type Colds, Some Real Flu, Hitting Canadians Hard Across Canada

By JOHN DAUPINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 7—(CP)—Influenza-type colds—and some real flu—are hitting hard at Canadians from the Pacific Coast to Quebec; and health authorities are agreed there's not much anybody can do about it.

The maritimes seemed free of any serious problem, with medical authorities in Nova Scotia reporting there was "no epidemic, just seasonal colds," and Prince Edward Island's Deputy Minister of Health, Dr. B. C. Keeping, saying he knows of no influenza cases in his province.

"If you could shut yourself up in a glass case you could probably escape," Dr. J. J. Heagerty, Dominion Director of Public Health Services, said today. "But if you mix with people you may catch cold or flu at any time."

He did list, though, three ways to improve your chances of skipping sickness of this type:-

1. Keep warm; 2. Eat plenty of nourishing food; 3. Get as much rest as possible.

And he had this advice for the man, woman or child who catches cold:-

"Get to bed. You'll get better faster and avoid spreading it to others."

In 1918 influenza took heavy toll of life across Canada. The present semi-epidemic, apparently most severe in central Canada's isn't the same thing and deaths are not numerous.

"This is really an outbreak of colds of an influenza nature," said Dr. Heagerty. "The true influenza is caused by either an 'A' virus or 'B' virus and neither of these has appeared in this outbreak in any number of cases sufficient to indicate prevalence."

At Quebec, Dr. J. Forest of the Provincial Health Department in a statement said influenza is "very prevalent" in all districts. Most cases were too mild for doctors to be called regularly.

At Montreal one school was closed and two large hospitals—the central divisions of Montreal General and Royal Victoria—barred for two weeks all but emergency cases because of shortage of medical personnel due to illness.

Civic medical officials said colder weather is expected to bring relief.

Three deaths from flu have been reported in Winnipeg but the low mortality indicates the minor character of the type of influenza prevalent there.

In Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba, health officers reported many severe colds but flu cases generally were said to be of a mild type.

REDS DRIVE OVER BLEAK UKRAINE, CUT NAZI R.R. LINE

Offensive Aimed At Clearing Dnieper Bend—Threaten City Of Kirivograd

CLOSE TO SMELA

London, Dec. 7 (CP)—Driving across the bleak central Ukraine southwest of Kremenchug in an offensive apparently aimed at clearing the great Dnieper Bend, Red Army troops under Gen. Rodion Malinolvsky have severed the Germans' vital railway line between Smela and Znamenka to threaten the important stronghold of Kirivograd, 23 miles further west, a Russian communique said today.

A powerful Soviet artillery and air barrage crumbled German defences in front of the infantry and tank advance, which stormed into the town of Tsibulevo astride the 60-mile-along Znamenka-Smela rail division, 14 miles northwest of Znamenka.

Twenty other towns, including Alexandriya and Dikovka, east of Znamenka, were overrun.

Capture of Tsimulevo and Olumpiadovka, southwest of Alexandriya, placed Russian columns only 23 miles from Kirovograd and apparently sealed the fate of Znamenka, where Soviet advance units were reported battering the twons outer defences.

Other Soviet troops were less than six miles from Smela after an attack which had by-passed the Dnieper river city of Cherkasy. Juncture of these forces with those advancing on Kirivograd apparently was regarded as imminent.

The developing Red Army offensive, which has already split large German forces guarding their lateral rail and supply lines now threatens the security of all enemy positions in the lower Ukraine from the Black Sea to the Rumanian frontier, including the stoutly-defended Manganese centre of Kirvoi Rog, 60 miles below Znamenka.

Leningrad Shelled By Enemy 'Rascals' Venting Their Wrath

London, Dec. 7—(CP)— Moscow mentioned Leningrad in its midnight communique supplement last night saying "German and Finnish scoundrels are now venting their wrath" by shelling the city which they failed to capture.

"It is well known that there are no military objectives in Leningrad at the present time," the communique said. "It is clear therefore that this systematic shelling of the city has one object in view—destruction of dwelling houses and cultural monuments as well as the annihilation of peaceful inhabitants of Leningrad."

Germans Face Triple Assault Outclassed On Land, Sea and Air

By LEWIS HAWKINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 7 — (AP) — The Teheran promise of Allied drives from the East, West and South confronted Germany today with the problem of disposing her numerically inferior forces in an effort to avoid destruction by the mightiest military array the world has ever known.

Against the combined strength of Britain, the United States and Russia Hitler finds his once proud military forces completely outclassed by land, sea and air. Moreover, the Allied power on land, sea and air daily is growing.

Germany at the outside now is believed able to muster 320 divisions which with non-divisional combat troops, would mean a fighting force of around 5,500,000 plus 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 in the supply service and administrative jobs.

Almost certainly Russia alone can more than match this. Military observers here would be surprised if the Red Army numbered less than 350 divisions with a combat complement of more than 6,000,000.

The combined British and American ground strength in the Mediterranean and Britain is certainly in the neighborhood of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 and growing steadily.

Because of the weight, fierceness and skill of the Red Army, the German High Command seems committed inevitably to maintaining about two-thirds of its force on the eastern front.

40 Divisions in France

About 40 Nazi divisions are known to be deployed in France and the Low Countries, 12 in Norway, seven in Finland, 25 in Italy and 23 in the Balkans and Greece — leaving virtually no strategical reserve in the accepted sense of a reservoir of trained first rate troops to be thrown in on any front.

The German air force, once the most dread of Hitler's weapons, is an even weaker link.

Best estimates here are that the German air force can present a front line strength of no more than 1,200 to 1,500 bombers and 2,500 to 3,000 fighters.

Here again Russia alone may be able to match all the German power, and it is obvious from the scale of the present aerial offensive that the R.A.F. fleet of heavy bombers must total upwards of 2,000 while the U.S. Army Air Forces, by Gen. George C. Marshall's own testimony, had upwards of 1,000 in the United Kingdom in early autumn.

Figures on fighters and medium bombers which will play such a great role in any invasion are much less easy to estimate, but if the combined British-American fighter strength were less than twice the German air force total it would be a great surprise.

Aside from its beaten submarine fleet whittled down substantially from its peak of 500 craft, Hitler has only a handful of hiding war ships in the way of a naval arm.

The balance sheet shows that — given a continuation of the unity and determination so dramatically affirmed at Teheran — the defeat of Hitler is as inevitable as the tides along the French coast.

SEES WAR WON WITHIN A YEAR AGAINST GERMANY

U. S. Group With This View Sees at Least 2 Years' War With Japan

RESULTS OF PARLEYS

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Dec. 7 — (AP) — Belief the war against Germany will be won within a year was buttreased today by the High Command accord reached at Teheran.

But the military and naval officials who hold this belief foresee at least two more years of fighting before Japan can be forced into the unconditional surrender decided upon at the Pacific War Conference in Cairo.

Studying the effects of the Cairo meeting and the European war conference at Teheran, announced yesterday, strategists here predicted the 12 months now beginning will see the launching of unprecedented offensives against both Germany and Japan.

As a result of these milestone meetings the Allied groups ranged against both foes have perfected the over-all pattern of their victory strategies, determining the time and nature of the final three-pronged assault on Germany as well as the advances designed to bring the full power of Britain, America and China against Japan.

Profound Results of Conferences

Washington experts emphasize that this is an epochal accomplishment. Despite the long series of conferences between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and an increasingly free exchange of information with Russia and China, no such specific agreements on war plans and post-war objectives had ever before been achieved among the Allies.

Speculation is that the military actions to implement the Teheran decisions may start in the Balkans. For that reason officials here are awaiting further clues to Turkey's role with extreme interest.

The communique issued jointly by Mr. Churchill, Mr. Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin contained an indication of possible developments in the Balkans area by announcing "complete agreement as to the scope and timing of the operations to be undertaken from the east, west and south."

This statement was interpreted to mean that the time has been set for invasion of Europe across the Channel. The time undoubtedly was chosen with respect to the progress of Russian offensives on the eastern front and the development of an attack in the South of Europe.

POWERFUL BLOWS HINT AT INVASION OF THE MARSHALLS

Vital Link in Chain of Outpost Defences for Japan, Philippines

NEW BRITAIN HIT

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7 — (AP) — Two years after Japanese planes touched off the Pacific war at Pearl Harbor, the expanding air force of the United States is raining heavy offensive blows which hint at early invasion of the Marshalls and New Britain, two vital links in the enemy's chain of outpost defences for Japanese and the Philippines.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced that strong aircraft carrier task forces smashed hard Saturday at the Marshalls — the same type of attack which immediately preceded the successful conquest of the Gilberts only two weeks ago.

Enemy air and shipping bases in the Marshalls 2,000 miles southwest of Hawaii and about 300 miles northeast of the Gilberts, form stepping stones on what United States Navy Secretary Frank Knox has termed "the more direct route to Japan."

Nearly 2,000 miles to the southwest of this action, New Britain Island, whose capture would burst open the sea lanes to the Philippines, was blasted Saturday night and Sunday from the fortress of Rabaul on the east to the air base of Cape Gloucester on the west, Allied headquarters reported today.

The necessity for radio silence, in order to protect the movements of task forces, limited Admiral Nimitz' announcement on the Marshalls attack, one which followed a series of raids on bases there by any land-based heavy bombers.

Allied bombers struck their biggest blow, 155 tons of explosives, at Cape Gloucester but also hammered barges and ships along both the north and south coast and set fire to a 6,000-ton vessel at Rabaul.

The potential invasion springboards on New Guinea's Huon peninsula was expanded by Australians pushing, with the aid of tanks and planes along the coast north of Finschhafen.

POTASH FERTILIZER

Ottawa, Dec. 7. CP)—Potash available for fertilizer purposes in Canada in 1944 will not exceed 35,000 tons —about 80 per cent of the quantity used in 1943—and 1944 demand for fertilizer containing potash is expected to increase, G. S. Peart, fertilizer administrator of the Agricultural Supplies Board, said today. Rationing of potash for 1944 already is in effect, he stated.

MAYOR ROLLINS RE-ELECTED OVER G. E. THOMPSON

Four New Members Elected to City Council in Large Vote

WOTTEN COMMISSIONER

Demonstrating a vastly renewed interest in municipal elections, residents of Belleville, despite rather inclement weather, flocked to the polls on Monday to re-elect Mayor Harry Rollins to the chief magistrate's position in the city. Mr. Rollins piled up quite substantial majorities in practically every voting booth in the city with final returns giving him a majority of 548 votes over Ex-mayor Glencoe E. Thompson.

From the time when the first polling booth returns were turned in at the city hall shortly after eight o'clock until the final returns were counted sometime after the midnight hour, the issue for mayor never appeared much in doubt with Mayor Rollins' majority constantly increasing over that of his opponent. Final count showed Mr. Rollins polled a total of 2,257 against 1,709 for Mr. Thompson.

Although Mayor Rollins was returned to office by a substantial majority, the public utilities picture presented a rather different aspect with the present commissioner Geo. A. Reid going down to defeat at the hands of Alderman Russell Wotten by a majority of almost 600 votes. Final count for the utilities showed Mr. Wotten polled 2,217 with Mr. Reid getting 1,627 votes.

Four New Faces

Four new faces will be seen in city council as the result of the day's voting with Mr. Lorne McDougall, J. J. Trudeau, and Newton Wilbur being elected as aldermen in their first attempt, while Ex-alderman Bill Harvey was also elected after an absence of one year from the council chambers. Alderman Frank Potter, Chairman of Fire, was not re-elected.

Hiram B. Fetterly, well-known retired educationalist, was returned as a member of the board of education with B. C. Sisler, William Harrison and Carl Crosby being re-elected. George Wishart failed to make the grade by a slim minority. Election returns showed Mr. Sisler leading the polls for school trustees with 1,657; Fetterly with 1,491, Crosby, 1,464, Harrison 1,336 and Wishart 1,162 votes.

A Larger Vote.

One of the highlights of the election from an increased interest point of view was the fact that 894 more voters went to the polls this year. And as is usually the case the mayoralty race attracted slightly more voters than the election of commissioner. The additional mayoralty vote was approximately 22 per cent, the composite vote for mayor being 3,966 as compared

Most Important Heights Captured In Fierce Battle

On Adriatic Side 8th Army Crosses Moro River Ten Miles Above Sangro

HEAVY RAINS OCCUR

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Staff Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 7 (AP)—Fifth Army infantry has crashed through Nazi defences in bitter assaults to capture the most dominating positions in a 25-square-mile area overlooking the road to Rome, it was announced today, while on the east coast of Italy British tanks of the 8th Army rammed across the Moro River.

A headquarters officer, describing the battle in the vital Monte Camino and Monte Maggiore area on the western sector, declared, "we now hold the most important features in that area roughly five miles long and five miles wide."

On the Adriatic side of the German 10th Army line, Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's tanks and infantry drove across the Moro River, 10 miles above the Sangro, in a tank battle fought in a fog. Four German Mark IV tanks were wrecked.

American troops wading flooded areas, with water up to their necks at many places, marked the second anniversary of the United States entry into the war with bloody fighting.

Desperate Counter-Attacks

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, realizing the importance of the 1,500-foot and 2,800-foot peaks dominating the road to Rome running through Cassino, threw the full weight of his divisions into desperate counter-attacks.

But despite these heavy blows, U.S. troops captured a mountain point six miles west of Mignano overlooking the swollen Garigliano River, and farther inland plunged a mile west of Filignano, taking 40 prisoners in a localized assault.

South of the American positions on the ridges of Mount Maggiore, British forces were driven off a ridge by a furious Nazi assault, but in a nearby sector seized a German strongpoint.

South of the American positions on the ridges of Mount Maggiore, British forces were driven off a ridge by a furious Nazi assault, but in a nearby sector seized a German strongpoint.

The 8th Army punch across the Moro River met less difficulty than anticipated, but the tank action was one of the few fought in mountainous Italy. It occurred at San Leonardo, 2½ miles northwest of San Vito, and two miles inland.

North of the Moro, the Germans threw in two counter-attacks that were beaten off.

The fighting on the Adriatic flank now runs from the mouth of the Pilot of British Bomber Makes Suicide Crash-Dive on Deck of U-Boat

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The suicide crash-dive of a British bomber on the deck of a damaged German submarine to make sure the U-boat didn't escape was described last night by the Royal Canadian Navy.

This R.A.F. exploit — the Navy termed it "matchless" for heroism and daring — became an R. C. N. story when the sole survivor of the plane was picked up in the Bay of Biscay by the Canadian Tribal destroyed Iroquois.

Sgt. A. A. Turner, tail-gunner, had been floating several hours, wounded, in a rubber dinghy when rescued.

He told how his plane—a Wellington bomber — spotted a surfaced U-boat and dropped its bombs square on the target, but not before the submarine's anti-aircraft fire got in some telling shots.

"Finally, when our pilot realized we were going to crash in the sea, he decided the Nazis should go too. He manoeuvred his plane and crash-dived, right onto the U-boat.

"The U-boat and plane disappeared beneath the surface, locked in a death grip. I was the only survivor from our plane."

London, Dec. 7 — (CP) — British based coastal command aircraft, including a number of all-Canadian squadrons, have helped—as the King said in the Speech from the Throne—score important successes over U-boats in the Atlantic.

During the three-month period ended October Canadians have been responsible for the destruction of several of the 60 submarines sent to the bottom. And they have played a large part in dealing with hundreds of other U-boats known to have been damaged since war started.

The battle between aircraft and submarine is becoming more intense and bitter. Instead of submerging, U-boats nowadays generally remain on the surface to fight it out with attacking aircraft, Canadians often limp home with their bombers severely damaged and riddled by bullets. Sometimes, too, they don't come back.

Typical of the severity of the battle was the one waged in the Bay of Biscay when a coastal com-

Super Battleship Ready for Water

Philadelphia, Dec. 7—(AP)—The super battleship Wisconsin, 45,000 tons, is ready to slide down the ways at the Philadelphia United States Navy yard today.

The floating fortress will hit the waters of the Delaware River after being officially christened by Mrs. Walter S. Goodland, wife of the Governor of Wisconsin.

The Wisconsin, a sister ship of the New Jersey launched at the same yards a year ago, is listed by "Jane's fighting ships" as displacing 45,000 tons without crew and normal equipment. Loaded for sea duty she will displace 52,000 tons.

A ship of the Wisconsin type would normally carry nine 16-inch guns in her main battery, be approximately 880 feet in length and have a top speed of more than 30 knots, the publication states.

The suerp ship cost approximately $90,000,000 and was under production for more than two years.

Says Voroshilov May Go to Britain to Aid In Invasion Plan

London, Dec. 7 —(AP)— Afternoon newspapers in London today headlined a report from Washington that Russian Marshal Klementi Voroshilov may come to Britain shortly to assist British and United States staffs in planning an invasion of the continent.

If Voroshilov does come here, the Washington dispatch said, he is expected to co-ordinate the second front in the west with the Soviet offensive in the east.

Mussolini Reported Virtually Paralyzed

Berne, Dec. 7 —(AP)— Italian informants from Zurich said today that Benito Mussolini now is virtually paralyzed and his condition worsening steadily as the result of an outbreak of an old disease contracted in his youth.

The newspaper Le Democrate of Delemont, Switzerland, said Mussolini now is under the care of three German specialists at his villa on Lake Garda.

SAYS INJURED SOLDIERS "DUMPED-OFF AT LONDON"

Ridgetown, Ont., Dec. 7. (CP)—Ridgetown's Mayor Thomas More was on record today as charging that some distiriet soldiers returning from overseas, including some in an injured condition, had been "dumped-off at London" and had to hitch-hike home.

He made the charge to a meeting of the Town Council last night and declared "this council should go on record as protesting this action".

FAILED TO GIVE ADDRESS

Guelph, Dec. 7. (CP)—David Michae, who described himself as a "gospel reader", today was fined $100 or one month in jail when he was convicted of failing to report his change of address.

Michea's plea as a conscieutious objector recently was turned down at Brantford, Ont. The court ordered that he be escorted to the nearest military training centre.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

COUNTY COUNCIL STARTS FINAL SESSION

One week later than usual as the result of the first Tuesday of the month falling in the second week, members of Hastings county council convened this afternoon in the first session of what will be their final meeting of the year. Submitting of reports from the various committee chairmen in council will be the principal business of the session. Prior to the opening of the general session this afternoon, the Roads and Bridges Committee convened during the morning.

BOARD OF OFFICERS TO PRESIDE OVER RESERVE ARMY EXAMS.

Boards of officers will assemble at the various training centres in Military District No. 3 on Saturday evening for the purpose of presiding over written promotion examinations for Reserve Army officers, it has been announced from headquarters in Kingston. President of the local board is Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnan, commanding officer of the 1st Battalion Argyll Light Infantry (T), while members are Major R. N. Broad, M.C., 2nd (R) Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment; Major W. G. Grothier, 2nd, (R) Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

TWO TRENTON BOYS R.C.A.F. GRADUATES

Two Trenton young men have graduated from the Air Observers' School of the R.C.A.F. at London, Ontario, while two other district young men have received their commissions while stationed overseas, it is announced from Air Force headquarters.

Trenton men to graduate from the London school were Sgt. Charles Lafrance, 505 Front Street, who received his air bomber's wing, while Sgt. W. F. Moran, brother of Squadron Leader Cecil Moran, D. F. C. and Bar who recently returned from overseas, received his navigator's wing.

Receiving their commissions overseas were Warrant Officer Norman W. Maybee of Wellington and Flight Sergeant Albert G. McAuley of Marmora.

FEW 'FLU CASES GO TO HOSPITAL

Despite the prevalence of 'flu and common colds, among residents of all ages in the city, the inconvenience of much sniffling and coughing is not generally great enough to send those afflicted to the hospital, it was revealed today by officials of that institution.

"Yes, we're practically full up with all beds occupied," admitted the hospital official. "For the most part, however, patients are in for general sickness with very few 'flu cases being admitted so far."

SHANNONVILLE CAR REPORTED STOLEN

Provincial Police today are looking for two motor cars and the thieves responsible for stealing them on Monday. At Shannonville Alex Goodfellow's Chevrolet sedan bearing Ontario marker plate No. 7L302 was reported stolen. The other vehicle was also a Chevrolet sedan and was equipped with licence No. 969B1 when stolen at Cobourg at noon Monday.

QUICK CHANGE ARTIST ACTIVE IN CITY

A quick change artist was reported active in Belleville on Monday. The method employed was the same as is the usual practice of getting the clerk confused by making change for larger denomination bills in rapid succession.

Entering Mac's cigar store Monday a short dark man wearing a moustache tendered a $20 in payment for a package of cigarettes. After the clerk made change the man then asked her to change a ten dollar bill and kept a steady conversation in progress, while the girl again made change. After the man left the girl found she was ten dollars minus from the cash register. Police were then notified.

C.W.A.C.'s WANT USEFUL CHRISTMAS GIFTS

When Miss Canada in khaki hangs up her stocking this Christmas, whether it be at her own family fireside or in a distant barracks, she is hanging it with the hope that Santa will remember her with gifts which will prove useful in her Army career.

An Army girl has not much space for unessentials. She must conform to rigid regulations in the matter of dress, and must be prepared at any time to pack all her belongings into a kit bag and push off for new territory.

A recent questionnaire submitted to 100 girls in the Canadian Women's Army Corps revealed that lingerie—dainty, feminine and lace-trimmed—was the most "hoped for" gift this Christmas. Second choice was a gay color-splashed housecoat, this was followed by khaki shirts, handkerchiefs, cosmetic sets and leather-bound writing kits.

A further bracket contained such luxury items as a bedside radio, camera, cigarette case, identification bracelet, Athene-crested ring, feminine bedroom slippers, and sleeveless sweater.

In these days of rationing, requests for candy and cake are hard to fill, but a box of home-made fudge would elicit such howls of delight that it would be well worth that extra coupon.

Plea of all service girls is "pulease no stuffed pandas, umbrella stands or gaudy pieces of jewellery!"

MAYOR HARRY ROLLINS who was re-elected for another term, defeating Glencoe E. Thompson.

Candidates for Civic Honors Thank Electors for Support After Returns Are Tabulated

Mayor-Elect Rollins Thinks Council Elected Will Give Good Government

ALL SPOKE BRIEFLY

Following the final tabulations of the Civic Election in the office of the City Clerk, the successful candidates and one or two defeated candidates addressed an audience in the Assembly Room of the City Hall. Due to the lateness in the returns from three outstanding polls, the speaking did not take place until nearly 1.00 a.m. Mr. M. P. Duff presided as chairman and called the speakers in order of their majority, the first being the Mayor and followed by the defeated candidate, Ex-Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson.

His Worship, Mayor-Elect W. Harry Rollins, being the first speaker called addressed his first words to his opponent, Ex-Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson, and expressed his appreciation and thanks to the people of Belleville for their choice of himself as their Mayor for a second term. He said, that they must have enjoyed the record he set last year or they would not have endorsed that record this year. "I wish to say to my opponent, Mr. Thompson," said the Mayor, "that it was a clean fight last year, and it was a clean fight again this year. We went into it as friends and remained friends, and that is the way a fight should be, and two good fellows met and two good fellows ended."

Apologized For Delay

He apologized for the delay in the appearance of the newly elected and returned candidates and promised that arrangements would be made by the next City Elections to have a blackboard set up to tabulate the results of the polls for the information of the interested spectators in the City Hall. In conclusion he said: "I wish you all the compliments of the season, and may 1944 be a better year for the City of Belleville, and I know this will be so because I have a Board of Directors, that will back me up."

As the second speaker, Ex-Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson opened this speech by saying "it is a case of Rebecca going to the well once too often." He complimented the Mayor-Elect upon his victory and passed on his thanks to all those, who had worked for him and supported him. "I am a good loser," he said, and there are no hard feelings because I lost. I will be back again, and I may have another fight with the Mayor." Mr. Thompson pledged his support to Mayor-Elect Rollins throughout the year and gave his promise to help in every way possible. He thanked his supporters again for their support and loyalty and wished everyone in the city a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

Thanked Electors

Speaking very briefly, Commissioner-Elect of the Public Utilities Commission F. Russell Wotten, thanked the electors of the city for their magnificent support given him, and pledged himself to further the interests of all during 1944-45 to the best of his ability in every manner, shape and form. The defeated Commissioner, George A. Reid said that he, like the ex-mayor, had gone to the well once too often also. He stated, that he had no ill feelings against those who did not vote for him, stating that this would have been, had he been re-elected, the last time he would have stood for public office. He said, that he would be looking for great things from the new commissioner whom, he stated, had promised, that the Hydro rate would go down instead of up, and, he continued, I will do all I can to help keep the rates down. He said, that he had enjoyed his services on the Commission and said, that everyone knew where he stood, that he had never changed his policy for the sake of votes. I believe, he said, that a man should be able to stand before the public on his record alone, and I have never made a statement I had to retrace, nor made a promise I did not carry out. In conclusion, Mr. Reid stated decisively, that this was the end of his public life and wished everyone the compliments of the season.

Council Members Heard

When the four speakers reported above had concluded their speeches of appreciation and thanks, Chairman M. P. Duff called each Alderman by order of their majority, beginning with Ald. Frank S. Follwell, who referred to the past three elections, the first of which he ran third in the polling, second in second place, and third, this year, at the head of the list. He said that he appreciated the compliment very much and pledged his support to furthering the interests of the public in the Council. He congratulated the Mayor and new Commissioner and his fellow Alderman. He thanked everyone for their gratifying support and stated, that this was definitely not his last time in the race. He wished everyone a merry Christmas and a 1944 of Peace, and hoped for the return of all the men and women from overseas before the next Christmas.

Other members of the City Council, called in rotation, expressed their thanks and appreciation to the public from the platform. Ald. Harry J. Clarke especially thanked his supporters for the 200 votes over any year previously, Ald. Lorne McDougall stated, that his election to the Council was almost more than he had hoped for with such a majority. Ald. Harold G. Woodley thanked the public for the confidence they expressed in him and pledged himself to furthering the post-war plans he was working on. Ald. H. J. Armstrong thanked ladies especially for their support in view of the weather conditions existing throughout the time the polls were open yesterday.

Ald. Ormonde E. Butler thanked the public for retaining him in sixth place on the list and said that he thought the city would have a Council this year, that will get along and execute the public's business in good order. Ald. William Harvey spoke briefly, stating, that he expected 1944 would be a great year for the new Council. Ald. John J. Trudeau said, that he had nothing to say but thanks for the support he had been given and said he would do his utmost to merit the confidence. Ald. Charles L. Hyde said, that the tax rate was struck too soon but that this year it would be at a later time and, with the $35,000.00 surplus existing, the tax rate could be reduced. Ald. Fred G. Chamberlain expressed his thanks briefly and returned to his seat. Ald. Allin also was brief, congratulating the younger people of the city, who were showing such evident interest in the city's politics.

Ald. Newton Wilbur thanked the electors for their one-hundred percent support given him and pledged his one-hundred percent to the people for 1944. As the second last member of the City Council to speak, Ald. Clarence R. Clapp, referring to his position on the list, said that he could go to the well once too often, but was gratified by the fact, that he was still a member of the Council. Ald. Robert A. Pringle concluded the speaking for the members elected and expressed his appreciation to the voters for returning him to the Council to continue his work in furthering industrial interest in the city of Belleville.

Would Try Again

Mr. A. Gilbert Stackhouse was the sole representative of the defeated candidates for Aldermanic honors present. He said that, although he was practically a stranger in the city, he had lost out by a very close margin and believed, that when he became better known he would be returned as a member of another year's Council. Mr. Hiram B. Fetterly, the single representative of the Board of Education present on the platform, thanked his supporters and promised to handle the business of the city schools to the best of his ability with the help of the other members of the Board. He concluded the night's speeches by wishing a merry Christmas to all and a hope, that 1944 would see the world settled down and at peace once more.

with 3,844 for Hydro.

Judging from election results Alderman Frank Follwell gained slightly in popularity with the voters and headed the polls for aldermen with 2,038 votes, displacing Alderman H. J. Clarke, dean of city councillors, who came second with 1,851. Lorne McDougall, offering himself for election for the first time, made a splendid showing to finish in the third position with 1,618 while Harold "Twig" Woodley was fourth with 1,570. Harold Armstrong came in fifth with 1,492 and Ormonde Butler sixth with 1,423.

Six Closely Bunched.

The next six men elected for aldermen were rather closely bunched and their relative positions were not decided until the final ballots were counted. Alderman Charles Hyde totalled 1,273; J. J. Trudeau 1,264; Robert Pringle 1,240; Fred Chamberlain 1,235; Jack Allin 1,230 and Newton Wilbur 1,210 votes.

Two other aldermen elected were Bill Harvey with 1,195 votes and Alderman Clapp with 1,184.

Unsuccessful aldermanic candidates in the order in which they ran were: Frank Potter 1,056; Gilbert Stackhouse 934; Claude Tice 931; W. V. Fairbairn 925; Arthur Burke 655; Arthur Snare 596; A. J. Maguire 539; Isaac Stephenson 393 and Ray L. Vickers 386.

Many Await Returns.

Evident of the interest shown in the election results was the crowd of rate-payers who jammed their way into the city hall to learn at first hand of the returns as they came in. The city clerk's office, the committee rooms and the auditorium for most of the night were jammed practically to capacity.

City officials were kept busy tabulating the returns as they came in over the telephone and then re-checking the lists as the ballot boxes and reports were brought to the city hall.

But possibly the busiest army of workers whose purpose was in broadcasting the results of the elections were telephone operators and members of the Ontario Intelligencer staff who worked without pause from before eight o'clock until midnight answering calls from interested householders. Four telephones at the Ontario Intelligencer office were kept constantly busy.

Swiss Reports State 250,000 Killed In Allied Raids on Reich

Berne, Dec. 7 — (AP) — The Gazette de Lausanne, in a dispatch from base on the German border, asserted today that recent Allied bombings of Berlin had resulted in the deaths of 250,000 persons, the number of injured cannot be estimated, it was said.

Previous unconfirmed reports relayed through Sweden put the Berlin death toll at 25,000. Germany never has given any official figure.

Will Consider Question Of Desertion of Wives

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 7. (CP Cable)—After a conference with Senator Dorothy Tangney of Western Australia, Dr. H. V. Evatt, Minister for External Affairs, said Monday the Cabinet will consider the question of Australian wives deserted by their American soldier husbands.

Miss Tangney, Australia's only woman senator, told Dr. Evatt that these girls, as a consequence of domicile laws, were unable to obtain divorce or maintenance orders without going to the United States for them, trips that are impossible under wartime conditions.

No Criminal Cases on County Court Docket

Four Applications for Canadian Citizenship Recommended

CASE TRAVERSED

Traditional white gloves, indicating the absence of criminal cases on the docket, were presented to His Honor Judge Madden at the opening of the General Sessions of the Peace and Judge's Criminal Court at the Court House.

"It is very commendable to find there are no criminal counts listed for trial. Hastings County is a large county and you of this county enjoy a desirable reputation in this regard," commented Judge Madden as he accepted the gloves from Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn after Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., had announced there were no criminal charges on the docket. It was later revealed that the Grand Jury had been cancelled, thus saving the county added expense, as the result of no criminal cases.

During the course of panelling the petit jury, however, several persons called were excused from jury duty owing to essential wartime duties. One civil action, MacCammon vs. LaMorre, a non-jury action, was listed for trial and transferred to a later court. The case is one of an action for damages as the result of a two-car motor accident that occurred on August 25th., 1942. Milton R. MacCammon, Trenton, is the plaintiff, while Allan LaMorre and Chas. Patrick, also of Trenton, were named as co-defendants. At the request of Mr. Donnan, Robert Comerford, Madoc, was made county constable after being recommended by county officials.

Four applicants for Canadian naturalization were presented before the court by Mr. Donnan, His Honor indicating recommendations would be made in all cases.

However, in the case of Arthur Graf, of Detlor, Ont., His Honor made some pointed remarks. Mr. Graf is a farmer residing near Detlor, who came to Canada from Switzerland in 1928 and has been a continuous resident at Detlor for the past 15 years. He is a married man with five children. However, when he presented his credentials Mr. Graf was unable to understand English sufficiently to answer the necessary questions asked by Judge Madden and an interpreter was necessary to complete the hearing. "I might say he resides in a French settlement near Detlor where French is the predominating language," explained Crown Attorney Donnan.

"I feel when a man has been in this country as long as Mr. Graf he should have sufficient knowledge of the English language to carry on an average conversation. After all we are Canadians and residing in the great province of Ontario. However, I will recommend all applications today," commented Judge Madden.

Wearing the uniform of the R.C.A.F. L.A.C. Jacek Kenig (now known as Jack Kenny of No. 5 I.T.S.) entered a Declaration of Intention to become a British subject. As he is already in the armed services only the declaration was necessary. Kenny was born in Warsaw, Poland, in 1922 and came to Canada following the German occupation, arriving here in 1942. He immediately joined the armed services. His Honor commented favorably to Kenny when he appeared in uniform.

Allan Thos. Carswell, grocer residing at 66 St. Charles St., in the city of Belleville after having resided here for the past 12 years and is married. He was born in Talcville, N.Y., in the United States in December, 1896, and came to Canada in 1922.

Gregory Konstantine Vatsikas, chef residing at 289½ Front St., in Belleville, who was born in Greece. He is 48 years of age and was born in Pyrsoyanni, Greece, in 1895. He came to Canada from Greece by way of the United States in March of 1929 and previously resided in Kingston before coming to this city six years ago.

To the Citizens of Belleville:

I made a statement last night which I had considered for some time that I would retire from public life and that statement still stands. I have represented either the Council or Commission since 1928 to 1943 with the exception of three years.

I have never made a public statement that I could not prove nor a promise that I did not keep. I am leaving public life with a clear record which I hold more sacred than public office. I have never evaded a vote and the public always knew just where I stood.

My record is before you and I wish the incoming Council and Commission every success. To you citizens of Belleville I wish to thank for all the honors that you have conferred upon me and the votes that you gave me yesterday. Wishing you all the Compliments of the Season, I am,

Yours sincerely,

GEORGE A. REID

Obituary

MRS. WILLIAM JAMES

Consecon, Dec. 7 (Special)—Mrs. William James died at her home here on Monday, Dec. 6th, after an illness of five years' duration.

The late Mrs. James was born seventy years ago at Clarence in Russell County and prior to her marriage she was Miss Lillian Surtees, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Surtees. For a considerable time she lived in Ottawa and for the past twelve years she made her home in Consecon where her husband conducts the grist mill. When living in Ottawa Mrs. James was a member of the Baptist Church and at Consecon she was an associate of the United Church and took an active part in the work of the Women's Association. In the community she was highly esteemed.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. William James; four sons, Carmel of Ottawa; Elson of Consecon; Lloyd of Fort Erie and Roydon of Consecon; two brothers in British Columbia and one brother in Saskatchewan; one sister lives in Ottawa and is at present in Consecon.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

IN MEMORIAM

BELCH — In loving memory of our dear mother, Sarah Belch, who passed away December 7, 1934.

You can only have one mother,
Patient, kind and true,
No other friend in all the world
Will be as true to you.
For all her loving kindness
She asks nothing in return.
If all the world deserts you,
To your mother you can turn.
So all we can do, dear mother,
Is to go and tend your grave
And leave behind a token of love,
To the best mother God ever gave.

—Ever remembered by daughters Helen and Edna. D7

CANADIAN ARMY TOUGHENS MOTORCYCLE RIDERS AT CAMP BORDEN

Various details of the thorough training of the Canadian Army's "motorcycle commandos" at Camp Borden, Ont., are shown in this series of pictures. During the action-crammed course, the student riders, under the watchful eyes of veteran motorcyclists who act as instructors, experience thrills equalling those of stunt riders. The men are trained to travel on a motorcycle under the most adverse conditions and at the conclusion of the course assume responsible jobs with armoured units, the Provost Corps or as despatch riders. TOP LEFT—Pte. W. J. Austin of Cheltenham, Ont., jumps his motor-bike through a wall of flame and blasted earth. TOP CENTRE — Steam rises from a hot motor suddenly immersed in a pool as this rider negotiates a tough section of the test course, while in the next picture, a rider who has gained a hill-crest gets an additional journey through space. TOP RIGHT — An inclined ramp, hit at high speed, teaches control. LOWER LEFT — Brig. A. C. Spencer, E.D., Camp Commandant, Camp Borden, Ont., inspects the orderly rows of men and machines prior to the day's exercises. LOWER CENTRE — Typical of the men taking the training are Trooper John Buday of Toronto, and Trooper P. J. Stanowski of Prince Albert, Sask. LOWER RIGHT — An unusual scene is presented as a squadron of the "commandos" on wheels sweep down a paved highway, the motors of their machines roaring a deep-throated song of power. — (Canadian Army Photos).

ELDORADO

November Meeting Of Women's Institute

Eldorado.—The November meeting of the W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. O. Wannamaker with twenty members answering the Roll Call. The President, Mrs. H. Blakely opened the meeting. It was decided to send Christmas cards to all the parish boys in uniform. Mrs. Blakely gave an account of the boxes sent overseas. There were fifteen boxes sent valued at $4 each. Mrs. Albert Empey gave a very interesting report of the area convention held in Belleville. Mrs. Hugh Empey had charge of the program which was "Citizenship". The motto "The Horizon ever widens for forward looking folk", was very ably given by Mrs. Ed. Blakely. Mrs. K. Bateman gave a reading "Individual Attitude Toward Peace". Mrs. Frank Chambers gave a poem by Vera Whitten "Life's Best".

Mrs. H. Blakely read a paper "I Have Three Sons".

A quiz on "Citizenship" was given by Mrs. H. Empey and answered by Mrs. Chas. Carman. Mrs. Chas. Pigden then gave a detailed account of War Work including Russian Relief. It was decided to send more to Russia as it is urgently needed. A vote of thanks was moved to the hostess.

Search Pressed For Navy Officer

Halifax, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Spurred by a report that Cmdr. F. M. Johnson had been seen in midtown Halifax, police today pressed their "dead or alive" search for the vanished Royal Navy officer whom they believe to have slain his young daughter here last week.

One focus of the week-long manhunt moved to the downtown area about the little grocery store of Arthur C. Burke, who claimed he had talked yesterday with a civilian-clothed visitor he identified from newspaper photographs as the wanted officer.

The storekeeper quoted the man as saying, "I'm in very great trouble," as he asked for a drink of liquor.

The commander and his daughter — nine-year-old Nadia — vanished from their home together last Wednesday, after Johnson had written at least two notes indicating he planned to kill the girl and himself because of his grief over the condition of his wife, critically injured in a traffic accident in New York City.

Two days after the disappearance the girl's body, weighted with stones, was taken from the northwest arm of Halifax Harbor, near the Johnson home. She had been beaten over the head.

Last seen alive in a canoe on the arm, Johnson at first was supposed to have drowned himself, and the arm has been searched unsuccessfully by divers for his body since Wednesday.

1,000 Trucks Haul Supplies From India to Russia

By THOBURN WIANT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New Delhi, Dec. 5. (Delayed) (AP)—Approximately 1,000 trucks now are hauling military supplies from India into Russia over a new 800-mile East Persia (Iran) route which was entirely hand-made by pick and shovel by an army of 30,000 men, women and children supervised by a staff representing 15 nationalities.

The Indian representative of one supply organization said "The quantity of supplies—jute, rubber, Hessian copper, tin and mercury—which India can send to Russia is limited only by transport facilities available."

"We expect", he added, "a substantial increase in the number of trucks shortly".

The road, which is complementary to routes through central and western sections of Iran for British and American supplies, once was a rough track. Now a broad motor highway stretches along 600 of its 800 miles, bringing India's vast resources within a few days' journey of Russia's southern frontier.

The East Persia route was completed in three months. The rush job was necessitated by the German advance in the Caucasus. It was hand-made because no machinery was available.

Water and food for men and animals were carted hundreds of miles by camel as the road pushed forward.

One of the British officers who supervised the work said that "in spite of all the odd nationalities and widely differing engineering practices of the four foreign contracting firms, everyone got along fine".

The British officer said "we had Greeks Yugoslavs, Belgians, Russians, Turks, Italians, Bulgars and Rumanians, not to mention Persians, who did most of the laboring".

5 Apartment Tenants Have Narrow Escape From Coal Gas Fumes

Hamilton, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Five tenants of a Hamilton apartment block narrowly escaped asphyxiation early today when overcome by coal gas fumes from a furnace and two of them had to be revived by a fire department inhalator crew.

Those overcome included Daniel and Mrs. Regan, Miss Loretta O'Neil, Mrs. Marion Beckett and Mrs. Andrew Lendrum. In addition Mrs. Kenneth Millson was partly overcome while assisting victims from their apartments after making the discovery when answering a call for help from one of the apartments in the building.

Toronto Youths Given Year Each For Car Thefts

Ray Sullivan and Gerald Henning, two Toronto youths, were sentenced to one year in the Ontario Reformatory and a second term of one year to run concurrent when they appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd for sentence today after having pleaded guilty to two charges of car theft here last Friday.

The pair admitted stealing a motor car in Brockville recently and when the supply of gasoline became exhausted here they abandoned the vehicle and stole another off Front St. However, later the youths were apprehended by Provincial Police as they were driving into Trenton with the second stolen car. The boys, who are both 18 years of age, readily admitted their crimes and after Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., revealed to the court this was their first attempt at crime, Magistrate Lloyd imposed the year term on the one car count and added a year concurrent on the second.

Defective Brakes

Convicted of driving a motor car with defective brakes Harvey Reid of Holloway, was assessed ten dollars and costs, while LAC Frank Reid, of No. 5 ITS, paid $7.50 including costs after being convicted of disorderly conduct. The latter charge arose out of altercations that took place in a hallway adjacent to the Trianon ballroom Saturday night.

Motorists who continue to violate the one hour parking bylaw in the city's downtown area are still paying fines, when convicted in local court.

Canada's Fighting Men in Italy Are 'Tremendous Inspiration' —Col. Ralston

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press War Correspondent.)

With Canadian Forces in Italy, Nov. 24. (Delayed.) (CP Cable)—Canada's fighting men in Italy are "a tremendous inspiration and a tremendous challenge", Col. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Defence Minister, said today after a tour of infantry and artillery units. He said the men by their performances here and in Sicily "justified the confidence" placed in them.

(Since this dispatch was written Col. Ralston has arrived at Allied headquarters in Algiers, having concluded his visit to the troops in Italy and a base hospital in Sicily.)

The Minister came to the Canadian area after "a most helpful and cordial" meeting with Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander of the British 8th Army of which the Canadians form a part.

No Strings Attached to Canadian Army.

He said he had given Gen. Montgomery renewed assurances from the Dominion government that "there are no strings attached to the Canadian Army".

The 8th Army Commander had given him, he said, "the benefit of his wide, successful experience".

This was Col. Ralston's first visit to the Mediterranean theatre and he told this correspondent, whom he met after a long tour of the Canadian camps that he hoped he might return again if unable to see all the troops on this visit.

Some units were engaged in patrol activity along the Sangro River front and although Col. Ralston was anxious to see them before he left, so far he has had to bow to the divisional commander's request to stay away.

"They probably think a Minister's presence would take the men's mind off the battle", Col. Ralston said, laughingly.

Highest Praise for Troops.

Col. Ralston's meeting with the press was informal and dealt more with personal problems of the newspapermen than with war. But in talks with the troops the Minister paid the men the highest tribute for what they had done so far and for what he said they were going to do in the future.

"I, as an Old Sweat, have not gone through the things you have done and gone through," he said. "We at least had a dugout," referring to the fact the troops on the Italian front were living in vehicles or pup tents.

"The folks back home are proud of you and I will take back the knowledge that you will carry on," he said.

Another message Col. Ralston said he would carry back was word that the war is still far from won.

He had seen enough of the difficult country and conditions under which the troops are fighting to know this was a false dream.

"People are making the mistake of their lives in thinking that this war is about over," he said. "Many people in Canada and other countries have this opinion and are playing right into the enemy's hands. Hitler is keeping up the fight in order to force as good terms as he can, thinking we will tire.

"Don't Relax," Message to People.

"I shall take back your message to the people of Canada and it will be: 'Don't give up, don't relax, don't get tired.'"

Col. Ralston said the purpose of his visit was to confer with the commanders, see the troops and find out what Canada can do to help them. He instanced two minor points which he had discovered were troubling the men.

The first concerned mail and he promised "Herculean efforts" to get it here faster and in a steadier stream. He hoped this problem would be alleviated by addition of four planes to the T.C.A. Transatlantic Service, two in December and two in January.

The other problem was outdated movies being shown the troops and the minister said action had already been taken to try to provide more up-to-date films. Transport was the main hitch in both matters. No expense would be spared in overcoming it.
him.

The minister's first visit this morning was to the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and from there to another western Canadian unit, the Loyal Edmontons. He stopped at the roadside grave of a Lance Corporal of the 49th Highlanders, Toronto, killed in action Oct. 24. Col. Ralston took note of the name and raised his hat in silent homage before the simple, flower-covered grave.

A pipe band greeted the minister with "Blue Bonnets" when he arrived at the village camp of the Seaforth Highlanders, of Vancouver.

A visit to a field regiment in another town where Canadian Victory Loan statistics were painted on a church wall completed the morning tour

Troops Praised for Help to Loan

Col. Ralston thanked the troops for their "magnificent response" to the loan campaign, saying it was an inspiration to the people at home.

After lunch with senior Canadian officers who accompanied him on the tour, the minister drove over winding mountain roads to the camp of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, from Ontario, where the men were drawn up in front of a memorial to the last war. Officers and the Regimental Sergeant Major, Angus Duffy of Trenton, Ont., were introduced to

Many Ontario Mayors Given Acclamations

(By The Canadian Press)

Most cities and towns in Ontario held municipal elections yesterday. There were no elections in Toronto, where office holders will be voted New Year's Day, or in Ottawa, whose appointees were elected last year for two-year terms.

Windsor held elections for Board of Control, Council and Public Utilities Commission. Its mayor, Arthur Reaume, was elected last year for a two-year tenure of office. Mayors in several other centres were elected by acclamation when qualifications were held last week.

One of the score or more of mayors elected yesterday was Samuel Lawrence, who became Hamilton's first C.C.F.-Labor mayor by gaining a majority of approximately 1,700 votes over Controller Donald A. Clarke, his only opponent. Lawrence succeeds William Morrison, who did not seek re-election because of health reasons.

Mrs. Anne Shipley, one of the few women candidates for office, was re-elected reeve of Teck township.

Mayors Elected

Brockville—N. S. Cuthbertson; Cornwall—Aaron Horovitz; Kingston—C. L. Boyd; Hamilton—Samuel Lawrence; Cobourg—John Burnet.

Pt. Petre Man Shoots Wolf

Point Traverse, Special — The large wolf which has been running at large in the township of South Marysburgh and has destroyed great numbers of sheep in the area, extending from Point Petre to Point Traverse, was a victim of two gunshot wounds, when Mr. Alton Hineman of Point Petre, bagged the cunning animal during the weekend.

While crossing over the Collier pasture farm near Gull Pond, Mr. Hineman's dog took up the scent of the wolf's trail ad brought the animal within thirty paces of Mr. Hineman, when he fired the first discharge of gunshot at it. Mr. Hineman was able to reload his shotgun and fire the fatal shot, which dropped the wolf within fifteen paces of him.

It is the third wolf shot in Prince Edward County since 1922. In December 1922 one was killed at Consecon, and last winter another was shot at West Lake. It is the first wolf shot in South Marysburgh twp. in several decades.

Mr. Hineman will collect the Provincial wolf bounty of $15 and the township bounty of $50.

Losses of sheep in the township continue to mount, as sheep were killed at Point Traverse and Hill Top last week. It is the opinion of hunters and farmers that other wolves are roaming the area, and until these are wiped out, sheep losses will not be minimized, Mr. Hineman reports seeing a pair of wolves in the Point Petre vicinity some time ago.

Mr. Hineman's wolf measured four and a half feet in Length.

Public Interest Increases

About 894 more voters exercised their franchise in Belleville mayoralty elections on Monday than came to the polls one year ago. The preliminary figures for this contest showed 3966 ballots cast in this contest as against 3072 in the previous year. This is slightly over twenty-two per cent increase over the polling of 1942. In the contest for the utilities commissionership the increased polling showed increase of 934. Likewise in the contest for the fourteen council seats the evidences of the increased number of votes showed all along the line.

The improvement in the exercise of the franchise is to be commended for it meant a spirited contest and a more interested public. Early on election day there were the signs of this greater voting and there would in all probability have been a still considerably higher vote if the weather conditions had not interfered in the afternoon and evening.

Members of the present year council and the newly-elected council as well as the other civic bodies can feel a sense of satisfaction at the greater public interest.

It is evident that in future years there can well be a still greater percentage of the electors voting. The improvement is something of which the citizens of Belleville should be proud. They have the satisfaction of knowing that greater municipal interest stimulates the civic bodies and will reflect in ever growing public interest.

Mayor Rollins in his second candidature was returned on Monday by a good majority over Ex-Mayor G. E. Thompson and Ald. Wotten for the commissionership was successful in defeating Commissioner George A. Reid for the Public Utilities Board, who has been a commissioner for many years. In the aldermanic field, Ald. Follwell took premier honors with a large vote and Ald. Clarke followed in second place. Next in order came Mr. L. McDougall, the first of the new candidates, then followed Ald. H. Woodley who rose to fourth place. Ald. Armstrong and Ald. Butler were returned next in order and Ald. C. D. Hyde was returned in seventh place. Mr. J. J. Trudeau, in his first venture into the council contest, was successful for the next seat, followed by Ald. Pringle, Ald. Chamberlain and Ald. Allin. Another newcomer took twelfth place, Mr. Newton Wilbur; and the thirteenth and fourteenth positions were won by Ex-Ald. Harvey and Ald. Clarence D. Clapp.

In the Board of Education contests Trustee B. C. Sisler led the poll, followed by Mr. H. B. Fetterly and Trustees Crosby and Harrison in order.

Evidence of the keen interest in the results was in the steady flow of inquiries made to the city hall and over four telephones to the Ontario Intelligencer office which were kept busy for three hours and a half answering requests of interested citizens on the results of the polling.

The Teheran Declaration

"We have concerted our plans for the destruction of the German forces.

"We have reached complete agreement as to the scope and timing of operations which will be undertaken from the east, west and south.

"The common understanding which we have here reached guarantees that victory will be ours.

"As to the peace we are sure that our concord will make it an enduring peace.

"We shall seek the co-operation and active participation of all nations, large and small, whose peoples in heart and mind are dedicated, as our own peoples, to the elimination of tyranny and slavery, oppression and intolerance.

"No power on earth can prevent our destroying the German armies by land, their U-boats by sea and their war plants from the air. Our attacks will be relentless and increasing."

These are some of the outstanding statements in the declaration signed by the three representatives of the mighty powers, Britain, Russia and United States with respect to the crushing of Germany. At the bottom of their statement were the words, "We came here with hope and determination. We leave here friends in fact, in spirit and in purpose." These eighteen words stand in a position just above the signatures of the great triumvirate, Roosevelt, Stalin, Churchill, and they mean those words. The enemy in vain sought to sow discord. The enduring quality of the friendship of the three powers along with China whose leader, Chiang Kai-Shek, met with the British and American leaders a few days before, stands in wartime and in the victorious peace to come. This principle will be adhered to by the other smaller nations in the United Nations alliance and for the peace era. "A world family of democratic nations" based on the reaffirmed principles of the Atlantic Charter is foreseen.

The declaration of the outcome of the conference is clear and direct. Unanimity is stamped in every line. It is a united blow that the United Nations will direct against Hitler's Germany "for the destruction of the German forces."

One of the paragraphs starts with the assurance "no power on earth can prevent our destroying" the German forces. This is the confidence of victory that this great triumvirate felt because of the strength and spirit of the Allied Powers and their oneness of purpose for the war and for the era of enduring peace.

This declaration at Teheran will with that of the Cairo conference rank as a memorable document of strategy for victory and for peace. Never in history were there meetings of so great scope and of such vast importance to mankind. Four great leaders of nations have made decisions for removal of the scourge of war and the incoming of peace for the countless millions of earth's inhabitants.

The decisions of these two conferences and the declarations explaining their scope and the result of the parleys form a charter for humanity for ages to come.

Japan's Stolen Empire

(Ottawa Journal)

When the Cairo conference decided to disposess Japan of her stolen Empire—what the New York Times calls a "charter for the Pacific written in the Egyptian desert" — it put its finger on a lot of territory.

Most of us hardly realize what a tremendous thing this Japanese empire is; that it involves dominion over nearly a quarter of the human race. But consider this:

	Area square miles	Population
Manchuria	503,013	39,454,026
Korea	85,246	22,833,857
Kwantung	1,438	1,656,726
Formosa	13,880	5,212,000
Pescadores Islands ...	50	60,000
Mandated Islands ...	829	85,000
	604,456	69,102,594

So here, without the Japanese homeland, is 604,456 square miles of territory with a population of 69,000,000; this not counting the vast areas that Japan has brought under her sway since Pearl Harbor: Malaya, Burma, The Netherlands Indies, the large and small Melanesian Islands, the Philippines, the coasts of China.

Japan, we may feel certain, will fight to the death to retain such possessions; will not easily go back to her own 148,000 square miles supporting 75,000,000. That, however, is what fate decrees for her.

New Scottish Enterprises

(Glasgow Herald)

The new enterprises on which the country has embarked are of a kind that has forbidden publicity in present circumstances, yet no survey of the national resources which ignored them or tended to minimize their importance could have any practical value. For better or worse a complex of light industries has been added to the old basic trinity of coal, steel, and shipbuilding, and the effects will be lasting. They are already apparent in the west of Scotland.

There is no true and a biding morality that is not founded in religion. — H. W. Beecher.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Herbs were the "cure-all" in the earliest pioneer period. It was no use wishing the doctor would come with a case-full of medicines . . . there were none within calling distance. But some of the women settlers gained a great reputation for the medicinal herb teas they brewed. They kept a little iron pot expressly for the purpose, and thought nothing of travelling miles on foot or horseback with concoctions to heal the sick.

A newspaper in 1865 printed the following, with the foreword that no medical recipes were vouched for, but that there was no objection to giving a place to the contribution: "For erysipelas or croup—take the common yellow carrot, scrape or grate it fine, and apply as a poultice. Change the poultice when it becomes dryish".

Great - grandmother wouldn't have parted with her pet mortars for anything—for what she did chop in a bowl she crushed in these wooden utensils. Heavy mortars were used for pounding sugar, herbs, cornmeal and salt. Small ones made of birch did their duty by fragrant spices.

Pewter, too, had its day. Superseding wooden dishes, it retired in favour of crockery-ware and china. By dint of much rubbing and elbow grease, the pioneer's wife gave her pewter a lovely sheen. How proudly she looked at it shining in the soft light of tallow candles!. . .A good many fine pieces of old pewter disappeared into bullets— and we may well say what a shame!

Letters to the Editor

J. O. Herity Answers Wotten and Reid On Belleville Industries

Editor Ontario Intelligencer,—

In the addresses delivered by two of the candidates for municipal office at the public meeting at the City Hall on Friday night last, and as reported in your paper of Saturday, two erroneous statements appear which in my opinion should, in the public interest, be corrected.

Public Utilities' Commissioner George A. Reid is credited with the following assertion,—

"The fact that Trenton gets more industries than does Belleville was indicated by the speaker to be partly as the result of Hydro in that town costing 67 cents less per horsepower than it does in Belleville."

Alderman F. R. Wotten is also reported to have said,—"The statement by the former speaker that Trenton got more industries than Belleville because of its cheaper Hydro rate was attacked by Mr. Wotten. 'Take a look at the rates paid in Oshawa, in Peterboro and in Kingston' he said, 'They all pay more than does Belleville and they have anywhere from four to six times as many industries.' "

I desire to take exception to the statement attributed to Mr. Reid that "Trenton gets more industries than does Belleville", and also to the statement reported to have been made by Mr. Wotten that "Oshawa, Peterboro and Kingston have anywhere from four to six times as many industries" as are located in Belleville.

The most authoritative records in regard to the manufacturing industries of Canada are to be found in the Canada Year Book that is published each successive year by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa.

Statements appearing in the Year Book may be regarded as absolutely correct for they are made up from certified reports gathered individually from each industry across Canada.

From this unimpeachable authority let us examine the facts in regard to the industrial status of Belleville and of Trenton, and also of Oshawa, Peterboro and Kingston.

From the latest edition of the Year Book that is available to me I find that the Town of Trenton, so far from getting or having more industries than does Belleville, is credited with the possession of 21 while Belleville has more than twice as many, with a total of 44.

If we have regard to the number of hands employed and to the wages paid, the comparative ratio is about the same. But the total capital investment in the industries in each place is even more decisively favorable to Belleville, showing $3,436,990 for Trenton and more than three times that amount, or $11,353,480 for Belleville.

Let us now look into Ald. Wotten's reported statement that Oshawa, Peterboro and Kingston each have "anywhere from four to six times as many industries" as are to be found in Belleville.

As stated above, Belleville is credited by the Year Book with the possession of 44 manufacturing industries. If Oshawa or Peterboro or Kingston had four to six times as many industries as Belleville, each of those progressive centres would have a minimum of 176 or a maximum of 264 industrial corporation plants.

Unfortunately for their contention, the cold records of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics do not bear out any such optimistic statement.

The actual figures given in the Year Book show that Oshawa has 45 industries, Peterboro 76 and Kingston 56: That is a very creditable showing upon the part of those three excellent cities but very far from being four to six times better than our own.

It should also be borne in mind, when comparisons are drawn, that Oshawa, Peterborough and Kingston each has almost double Belleville's population and that each of those cities had the foresight and wisdom to enter upon campaigns of industrial expansion from forty to sixty years ago. Master builders such as Robert McLaughlin, Senator George A. Cox and William Harty, men of far vision, sound judgment and irrepressible enterprise, gave to their respective cities the distinguished industrial leadership that was needed in those days of pioneering and uncertainty. The results of that vision and leadership have been magnificent. Today we see at Oshawa, Peterborough and Kingston such enormous aggregations of capitalistic enterprise as General Motors, Canadian General Electric, Quaker Oats and the Kingston Locomotive Works.

In those faraway days, Belleville was languishing under the blight of three decades of declining population, of pioneer industries that were fast fading away and a citizenship that was drowsily indifferent to progress. The city was decidedly down at the heel.

Belleville was late in entering the field of industrial expansion. It was not until about twenty years ago that the movement was taken up in earnest. The results have been amazingly successful. Even the most optimistic could not have foreseen what has actually transpired. They had more of hope than of confidence when they began their work. A new Belleville has come into being where there is persistent progress with life at its best, where store and factory and happy homes are a reflection of the spirit that now dominates our policies and actions.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics lists 44 industries soundly established at Belleville. Let us remember that five of those industries are branches of the largest manufacturing corporations on earth in their particular lines of production. These 44 industries are extremely varied in character. They represent not luxuries but essentials and give employment every working day in the year. No one of them is large enough to dominate the local field. Nor is there erratic operation with frequent layoffs and the inconvenience and distress which follow as an inevitable consequence." Our industries are as regular and dependable as the rising of the sun.

With such huge corporations so long established in their respective municipalities as is the case at Oshawa, Peterborough and Kingston, it is naturally to be expected that their invested capital will be greater than at Belleville. Actually the total is greater in Oshawa and Peterborough but is less in Kingston. And even in Oshawa and Peterborough the total is not as much greater as might be at first surmised. The invested industrial capital in each city is as follows,—Oshawa $26,155,927; Peterborough $22,279,586; Kingston $8,611,220; Belleville $11,353,480. If such suburban industries as the Canadian Industrial Alcohol plant at Corbyville and the Canada Cement plant at Point Anne, with their millions of capitalization, were included in the Belleville total it is very possible that the figures for Belleville might exceed all the others.

And if our good neighbors in Oshawa and Peterborough and Kingston and Trenton should become industrially progressive and prosperous, why should that excite our envy or occasion disparaging remarks about what we have or have not done here at Belleville?

Trenton, for instance, was like Belleville, late in becoming industrially conscious. Let us admit without qualification or argument that Trenton has done exceedingly well this past few years. A number of their new industries are of a type and character of which any town or city might well be proud.

But let us at the same time bear in mind this unquestionable fact that every new industry that locates in Trenton will also help Belleville in many ways Principally it will help by attracting the attention of the industrial world to this area and district as a desirable field in which to establish factories. Industries naturally gravitate to those parts of the country where industries of a similar character have previously settled and found a congenial home.

In closing, permit me to assure Messrs. Reid and Wotten that I am well aware that anything they may have said at the public meeting was not spoken in deliberate belittlement of Belleville or of its industrial progress. Both these citizens are too well known for their public spirit and civic patriotism to be mistaken for mischievous knockers who are always trying to pull down what others are building up. They were probably speaking in the heat and hurry of debate when there was not time to verify the statements made. It is only because these statements were published in the newspaper and therefore went out to the general public that I have felt it necessary to depart from my usual practice of permitting such matters to pass unnoticed. I therefore send along this explanation in the hope that it will serve to correct any wrong impression which may have been formed in regard to the favorable position of our city in the industrial life of the province.

J. O. Herity,
Industrial Commissioner.

Says Britain Deserves Credit As Modern Savior of Society

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,

The stand that Russia has made against Germany is worthy of admiration. She has fought skilfully, magnificently. She has suffered much. Our attitude toward Russia should be generous. Let us beware, however, lest our sentimentality allow us to lose our sensibility. It is necessary that we should carefully review the facts before we make an over-generous, unqualified statement to the effect that "today Russia is the modern savior of society".

What are the facts?

Was it apparent that Russia was destined to be the savior of society when she attacked little Finland? I think not. We called her a lot of nasty names and sent munitions to help Finland. This unprovoked assault resulted in Finland becoming Germany's ally later on . She would rather have been on our side.

In the days of Munich Russia had a glorious opportunity to become the savior of society. She chose not to earn that title during the rape of Czecho-Slovakia. Owing to her geographical position she could have brought aid to the threatened little country. It was geographically impossible for Britain to do so. If Russia had stated her intention of becoming the savior of society it is doubtful if Hitler would have marched.

When Hitler invaded Poland did Russia become the savior of Poland? She did not. Rather, to the world's astonishment she made a non-aggression pact with Germany and herself invaded and occupied half of Poland. Who can forget the picture of Molotov and Von Ribbentrop, signing their friendship pact, with Joseph Stalin smiling his approval.

If Russia had any intention of becoming the savior of society she carefully hid such intention.

During the dark days after Dunkirk and the Battle of Britain, Russia did not come forward to save the world.

The plain, cold fact is that Russia, became our ally, not because she chose to be, nor because she respected our form of society, but for the simple reason that Germany attacked her. And, it is doubtful if Russia could have survived, had not Britain endangered her own fronts by diverting huge quantities of war material to the Soviet, convoyed by the British Navy.

True, every blow directed at Germany is a boost for us. The question is, has Russia accomplished all this because of her consuming desire to save the world, or to protect her own interests.

With all due respect to Russia's contribution in resisting Hitler, let us not blind ourselves to the facts. And the facts are that had Britain gone under in 1940 the whole world would have gone under, including Canada and the United States. I think you will agree that if any nation under the sun deserves the title of "the modern savior of society" it is Great Britain, and none other.

I have no fault to find with the generous intention of adopting a Russian town. I presume that all the blitzed towns of our blood-brothers in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland have already been adopted by somebody else.

Yours truly,
100% British and Proud of it.

The Whig party was composed of so many different factions and stood for so little that its national convention in 1848 could not draft a platform. The convention, however, did pass a resolution endorsing the principles of the constitution, declaring its presidential nominee, General Zachary Taylor, a Whig at heart, assuring peace, prosperity and union to the country, pointing to Washington's administration as a model, lauding Taylor's military career, and promising everybody everything. Needless to say, the Whig party was successful at the polls that time.

Before the introduction of adhesive postage stamps in the United States postage rates were much higher than they are now. In 1836 it cost twenty-five cents to send a one-sheet letter to the most distant postal zone, fifty cents to send a two-sheet letter, and so on. These high rates and the charges on extra sheets caused many people in those days to write in a very small hand.

The provision in the constitution giving the federal government, but denying the various states, the power to grant "letters of marque and reprisal" is now a dead letter.

BRIDGE STREET AUXILIARY OF W.M.S.

The meeting of the Bridge Street Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary of the United Church was held on December 3, and was largely choral, centred around the story of the Nativity.

The service was introduced by a sing-song led by Mrs. Houston and Mrs. Semple using some of the beautiful Christmas hymns.

In the absence of Miss Brown, Mrs. Baker presided.

Reports were received from the recording secretary, the treasurer, corresponding secretary, temperance and supply secretaries.

Mrs. Semple asked for cooperation in providing refreshments for the Friendship Group on Sunday evening, December 5.

Mention was made of the recent passing of one of the long and faithful church officials and sympathy expressed to the members of the Deacon family.

The report of the Nominating Committee for officers for 1944 was presented by Mrs. Schryver and is as follows:

Hon. Presidents—Mrs. O'Flynn and Mrs. Geo. Stewart.

Past President —Miss Lazelle Brown.

President—Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson.

1st Vice President—Mrs. E. N. Baker.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. J. Semple.

3rd Vice President—Mrs. W. Holmes.

4th Vice President—Mrs. F. Houston.

Rec. Secretary— Mrs. G. S. Cronk.

Cor. Secretary—Mrs. C. B. Hamm.

Treasurer—Mrs. E. Dixon.

The following secretaries of Departments:—

Christian Stewardship and Finance—Miss Brown, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Ackerman and Mrs. Dixon.

Community Friendship—Mrs. C. Hyde, Mrs. Semple, Mrs. Ackerman, Mrs. Truesdale, Mrs. A. E. Gilbert.

Press—Mrs. A. May.

Flower Com.—Mrs. F. Adams.

Mission Circle—Miss K. McPherson, Miss Young, Miss Arkles.

Mission Band—To be filled.

Nominating Committee for 1944—Mrs. J. Cook, Mrs. Gerrie, Miss L. Brown.

In moving the adoption of this report Mrs. Schryver expressed the thanks of the Auxiliary to Miss Brown for her valuable contribution to the work of the Society during her term of office and the regret that illness prevented her from being present at the meeting. She also welcomed Mrs. Davidson as Miss Brown's successor in office for 1944 and expressed the pleasure of the nominating committee in securing such a promising new president.

At this time the lighting of Christmas tapers added to the Christmas atmosphere of the meeting.

The advent story as reported by Matthew and Luke was read by Mrs. Truesdale and Mrs. Geo. Cole respectively.

The beauty of the Christmas season and its thrill which one never outgrows was again experienced as all joined in singing the hymn—"O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing", and listened to two Slumber songs rendered by Miss Doris Thrasher and Miss Margaret Houston and a Polish carol by Mrs. Houston.

The story of the origin of the carol, "Silent Night", was read by Mrs. Schryver after which the hymn was sung.

Shower for Newlyweds

Union Vale.—Mr. and Mrs. Leland Pearsall (nee Barbara Collier) were tendered a shower on Friday night, when about one hundred neighbours and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pearsall to present their gifts and best wishes.

Mrs. C. A. Vincent invited the bride and groom to be seated in two prettily decorated chairs in pink and white, beneath a pink and white parasol before a lace covered table centred with bronze and yellow 'mums.

Mr. D. O. Reynolds read the address and the Misses Karen Tubbs and Marian Crowe carried, in several baskets of gifts.

After the bride and groom opened the many gifts of china, linens, etc., they thanked every one and invited all to visit them in their new home.

A delicious lunch of sandwiches, cake, cookies and tea was served.

Canadian Ships Play Big Part In Foiling U-Boats in Bay of Biscay

Ottawa, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Canadian destroyers and corvettes helped the Royal Navy and R. A. F. blockade the enemy's main submarine fleet in the Bay of Biscay just before Britain's acquisition of new bases in the Azores — a blockade so successful that the modest Allied losses in the North Atlantic were "more than balanced by the heavy toll taken on U-boats in the Bay of Biscay alone."

This announcement was made last night by Navy Minister Macdonald. He announced that the Canadian ships in these offensive sweeps, included the Tribal destroyers Iroquois and Athabaskan and the corvettes Edmunston, Snowberry and Calgary.

"The losses inflicted on the U-boats this summer were so great that on some occasions the sea seemed literally alive with submarine survivors, some of which eventually found sanctuary on Iroquois and Athabaskan," said the minister's statement.

"Many of these submarines had been destroyed by aircraft, among the crews of which were several Canadians."

During one sweep the two Canadian patrols chased three enemy destroyers sighted at a distance but the enemy fled to the French coast.

The corvettes dropped depth charges "wherever U-boat contacts were obtained," but "no concrete evidence has been obtained of U-boats destroyed by the corvettes."

It was while engaged in the Biscay patrols that Athabaskan was hit by one of the new German glider bombs. All the other Canadian ships escaped damage. "The fact Canadian corvettes now are engaged in offensive action against U-boats is one indication that something went amiss recently in Hitler's undersea warfare plans," said Mr. Macdonald.

He quoted one corvette captain as saying:—

"Hitherto we had always been on the defensive, protecting the convoys along the North Atlantic routes and, sometimes I almost despaired of seeing the day when we would assume the offensive against U-boats.

"That day seems to have arrived now and, here we are, hemming the Nazis in, right on their own doorstep."

Early in the blockade Iroquois was commanded by Cmdr. W. L. Holmes of Victoria, and Athabaskan by Cmdr. G. R. Miles of Rothesay N. B. Both now have returned to Canada to new appointments. Iroquois was commanded for a short time later by Lieut. Madgwick, her first lieutenant, of Ottawa, and she now is under command of Cmdr. J. C. Hibbard, D.S.C., of Halifax. Athabaskan now is commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. J. C. Stubbs, D.S.C., of Kaslo, B.C.

Edmunston is commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. H. K. Hill of Kingston, Ont., and Snowberry by John E. O'Brien, Ottawa.

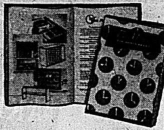
HOW TO SIMPLIFY YOUR HOUSEKEEPING



New book full of ideas to help homemakers in wartime

HERE'S a book for every woman who wants to make her housekeeping these days as simple as possible. You may be working in a war plant and have to take care of your home nights and mornings. You may want to cut your housekeeping hours in order to give more of your time to bond sales, the Red Cross or other war work. Perhaps you want to do more for the war effort than you are now doing but you don't see how you can add anything to your already well filled days.

Have more time for war work

In "Time Management" you will find scores of ways to save time and energy in the home in order to have more for war activities. "Practice intelligent neglect . . . stop doing unnecessary things and simplify the rest," counsels the booklet. To help you simplify your work it suggests a work calendar—"the most helpful tool you can have for saving time." The booklet tells how to make a calendar that will fit your home and your habits—and how to make your calendar work for you.

100 ways to save housekeeping time

Do you know the simplest way to do each housekeeping job? How to make a bed, for instance, so that the covers will seldom need more than spreading up between changes? Do you know how to work rhythmically in order to make many household tasks easier? "Time Management for Homemakers" is full of such practical pointers. It also brings you a check list of over one hundred "time saving practices."

These guides help stretch family income

"Time Management" is only one of Household's twenty-nine booklets on buying and budgeting. These are filled with practical suggestions for sound management of family funds and for smarter shopping for the home. They have already helped thousands of families to make their incomes go farther. The booklets were first prepared as a service to Household Finance customers. But so many other families have found them helpful in meeting wartime problems that we have decided to make them available to Canadians everywhere. You may obtain any or all for 2½ cents each in stamps to cover mailing costs. With your copy of "Time Management" you will receive a list of all the titles in the series. Why don't you send the coupon now?

CHRISTMAS SPENDING CAN BE PATRIOTIC

We all like to remember our friends at Christmas. But if we spend too much money buying gifts, we risk making scarce things scarcer and perhaps even depriving people who really need them. By putting a lot of our gift money into War Saving Stamps we make sure our friends will be able to get just what they want after the war when goods are plentiful again.

WEDDINGS

HOCKIN—MURPHY

At St. Cecilia's rectory, Toronto, on Saturday, November 27, Frances Anne, daughter of Mrs. Murphy, and the late John Murphy, of Lonsdale, Ontario, became the bride of Harry Leslie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hockin of Kelstern, Saskatchewan. Rev. Father Hendricks officiated at the ceremony. The attendants were Miss Nora Currie and Mr. Raymond Murphy, brother of the bride.

The bride was becomingly attired in a street length two-piece dress of Heaven blue wool crepe, the jacket of which was embroidered with eyelets of gold. Her off-the-face hat of brown felt had petals of the same shade forming a halo from which fell a shoulder length veil. Brown accessories and a corsage of deep pink roses and maiden hair fern completed her costume.

The bridesmaid's two-piece wool crepe dress was a cinnamon shade with touches of colored embroidery on the jacket. She wore a corsage of red roses and bronze 'mums and her accessories were dark brown.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mrs. and Mr. Leslie Robinson, Annette Street, after which the bridal party had dinner at the Savarin, Bay Street, Toronto.

Later in the evening amid showers of confetti and good wishes from their friends, the young couple left for a short honeymoon and on their return will reside in Toronto.

CLELAND—TUFTS

Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, was the scene of a lovely wedding on Saturday, December, 4, at seven o'clock in the evening, when Margaret Augusta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William James Tufts, of Holloway, Ontario, was united in marriage to Flying Officer Charles Coburn Elliott Cleland, D.F.M., Royal Air Force, son of Mrs. Carlos Vidler of Montreal, and the late Mr. Cleland. Reverend Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride was charming in a two-piece afternoon gown of white Algiers crepe and small white feather hat with bridal veiling. She wore a corsage of mauve orchids. Miss Dorothy Croft of Belleville, was bridesmaid, wearing a dress of Alice blue wool jersey, with matching accessories and corsage of white carnations. Flying Officer Cleland was attended by Mr. Lester Stauffer, R.C.A.F., of Montreal.

At 7.30 o'clock a large reception was held at the Quinte Hotel, Belleville. The reception room was artistically decorated with bouquets of white and bronze 'mums. The bride's mother received in a gown of gold wool with matching hat and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses and baby 'mums. Mrs. Vidler, mother of the groom, was attired in a gown of blue, with rose and small blue hat and corsage of Talisman roses.

Out of town guests included Miss Verna Cleland and Miss Dorothy Cleland, sisters of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stauffer of Montreal. On their return from their wedding trip, Flying Officer and Mrs. Cleland will reside in Belleville.

SMILEY—BENNETT

An air force wedding of wide-felt interest was solemnized on Friday afternoon, December 3, at three o'clock in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, when the Rev. Mr. Inman, padre at the R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, united in marriage Cpl. Frances Elaine Bennett, R.C.A.F., (W.D.), Trenton, daughter of the Rev. Mr. Bennett and Mrs. Bennett, of Vancouver, B.C., to LAC. Glen Gilbert Smiley, R.C.A.F., Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Smiley of Levoy, Alberta.

Ferns formed the setting in the church for the occasion. Mr. D. Houston presided at the console of the organ, and Miss Muriel Jobson delightfully rendered "Because".

Given in marriage by the Rev. H. O. Eastman, minister of the church, the bride was gowned in a lovely long white sheer dress, fashioned with sweetheart neckline, bishop sleeves, shirring at waist with girdle of brilliants and full sweeping skirt. Her chapel veil of bridal tulle illusion was caught to her hair in a halo headdress effect and her only ornament was a rose Zircon pendant, gift of the groom. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Edna Jobson, as bridesmaid, was wearing a floor length gown of turquoise blue crepe, fashioned with a bolero, white bodice, full skirt, round neckline and long tight fitting sleeves. Atop her head she wore a white velvet Juliet cap adorned with brilliants and she carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses.

The groomsman was AC1 Glenville Hoskyn, and the ushers were LAC. Harold Richards and Cpl. Bert Atchison, all stationed with the R.C.A.F. at Trenton.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jobson, Bridge St.

The bride's table was centred with the three tiered wedding cake and flanked with tall white tapers in silver candelabra. Pouring tea were Mrs. H. O. Eastman and Mrs. Bert Orr.

On their return from a wedding trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and London, LAC. and Mrs. Smiley will reside in Trenton.

What to Do When Invited to Be Guest of Boy Friend's Family

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

About a year and a half ago I met a sergeant who is attached to an Army camp quite near my home. We became very good friends and ever since we met we have been going out together whenever he has time off. Several months ago his mother and sister came from their home (quite far from here) to visit a relative of theirs and twice during their visit they dined at my home. Now his mother has invited me to visit them at Christmas-time when, we hope, my boy friend will also be able to be at his home.

When I go for this visit, do you think I should take gifts only to his mother and sister, whom I have met? Or do you think that I should also take a gift to the other members of his family, his father, another sister, and a brother? If you think I should take gifts, would you be so kind as to make suggestions as to appropriate ones?

N.S.

Since this is such an especially friendly and important gesture of hospitality to you, and since your visit is to be at Christmas-time, I do think that you should take a gift to every member of the family. They'll probably each have a gift for you on Christmas-day and you will want to be prepared with your gifts to them.

I'd like to have you give gifts that not expensive .

you can "personalise" by having them marked. For example, you might take the mother a handsome purse, marked with her initials. For the sisters, sheer white handkerchiefs, embroidered either with their first names or with their initials, or monogrammed. Or take one a compact, the other a piece of costume jewelry. For the father, perhaps a pen and pencil set, or a wallet stamped with his initials, or better, his full name. For the brother perhaps a gold or silver bill clip, or initialed handkerchiefs. If, in your chats with your sergeant friend, he has said something about the interests or hobbies of members of his family, this would perhaps give you a better cue for your choices.

Choosing Gift For Boy Friend.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a girl in my teens, and for quite a long time I have gone to the movies, football games and so forth with a boy whose parents are very good friends of my parents. My birthday is soon, and I know that he is going to give me a gift. I'm also quite sure that he is going to give me a Christmas present. Would it be proper for me to give him a Christmas present.

L.C.

Yes indeed it will be proper. . . friendly too. He's a good friend of long standing. And he's the first "gift-giving gesture". Give him something carefully chosen to his taste. . .but not too personal, and

Soldier Wants Girl to Come to Post to Marry Him; Family Object

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl and I have been engaged for three years and we'd have been married long ago, only she always put it off because she wanted the bungalow we had in mind paid for in full. I've been in the service a year and a half, and am likely to be sent overseas the next few weeks.

Martha is willing to come here and marry me, but her family objects. They think it wouldn't be proper for her to come alone, and say they can't afford the railroad fare. The Captain's wife is a grand lady, and has offered to look after Martha until the ceremony is performed.

I think her family is just plain selfish and they want to keep her at home because she's useful there. Martha has plenty of money for the trip. I just don't know what to do.

W. L. B.

I wish this Martha of yours had a little more independence of character and would muster up courage enough to say to her family: "I intend to go to Bill's post and marry him before he's sent overseas. We might have been married long ago if I hadn't wanted the house to be paid for, before we signed up for the wedding".

There could be no possible objection to Martha's going to the post to marry you, as long as your Captain's wife has promised to look out for her.

Her Mother Allows Her No Privileges.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm in my early teens, and my mother just doesn't try to understand me. She doesn't allow me any privileges, and I can't do anything without her permission and even then she won't give her consent to most favors I ask.

I've never given her reason to mistrust me, yet if she sees me even speak to a boy, I am called in immediately. I don't mean any harm, and have never gone out with a boy. But if she keeps on mistrusting me, I will give her something to worry about. I don't want to disobey her, but she was young herself, and surely spoke to boys or how could she have met father?

Tell me what to do, please. I will be watching for my answer in the paper, and the answer might help my mother too.

A.M.G.

I wish you had told me how "early" these teens are through which you are now passing. If you are thirteen or fourteen, your mother's attitude is more understandable than if you're fifteen or sixteen.

I don't like your implied threat that you'll give your mother "something to worry about" if she does not become less strict. Girls who give their mothers "something to worry about" usually assume considerable worry themselves in the long run. If you're fifteen or sixteen, why not have a reasonable talk with her about letting you have a little more freedom?

Undecided Whether to Take Defense Job or Nurse's Aid Training.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I, am 30 years old, my mother is 50 and my husband has taken care of her for the five years we've been married. She's a widow and refuses to take a defence job, although she is in perfect health.

Here's my question—do you think I ought to get a defence job and leave my three children, ages 1, 2, and 3, with my mother? I'd be helping my husband and also my country, which my mother refuses to do.

Or, would you advise me to take up training as nurse's aide and help in that way?

(Mrs.) J. R.

It always seems a better arrangement to me if the mother of children, one, two and three years of age, took personal charge of them. If your mother, at fifty years of age, is in perfect health, declines to take a job, would she be any better taking care of children as young as yours are? You, being on the spot, are in a position to decide this matter yourself.

The work of a nurse's aid is certainly very valuable to the country, and has the advantage of not taking you away from home the entire day. You know, of course, the work of a nurse's aid is gratuitous.

Shall She Continue to Write or Drop These Soldiers?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I recently visited my brother in the Army, and became acquainted with two boys who live in a town about fifty miles from here. I had been writing to them before I met them. Since I've come home I've written, but neither of them has answered my letter. One said he would come to visit me on his next furlough, and promised to let me know when.

Do you think it would be all right to keep on writing to them, without waiting for their answers, or shall I drop them? I would like to keep their friendship, although it isn't a matter of love.

Y.

As these young men have not answered your letters and one of them has not fulfilled his promise of visiting you during his furlough, don't you think it would look more independent if you did not follow up this correspondence until you heard from them further?

Immersion Foot One of New Disorders Brought by War.

The war has brought many new disorders. Among these is a condition of the hands and feet, known as immersion hand or immersion foot, the result of keeping the extremities in cold water for periods ranging from several hours to many days. The condition is similar to trench foot and to ordinary frostbite. During cold weather, when frostbite is frequent, many cases develop.

The first stage of immersion foot or immersion hand due to exposure to cold sea water, causes loss of sensation in the hands and feet, as well as swelling and discoloration of the skin, which becomes red or pale yellow in color. The skin may become blue or even black, depending upon how much the circulation has been disturbed, and, within several hours, may become bluish-red and hot.

There is a loss of activity in the sweat glands of the affected skin. There are tingling, aching, throbbing, and shooting pains, which grow worse when the hands or legs become warm, or have been exercised. In severe cases, blisters, ulcers, or sores may form. After some time, the skin regains its normal temperature.

When the patient begins to be up and about, blisters and swelling of the feet or hands may occur. It is thought that the damage in these cases results from the fact that the nerves have been injured by the cold. This injury to the nerves causes the arteries to contract, and thus shut off the blood flow. In frostbite there is also a disturbance of the circulation, but this is brought about by actual freezing of the tissues.

Recovery from immersion hand or immersion foot depends, of course, upon how much damage to the tissues takes place. In many cases, tingling, pain and swelling may develop as late as two years after the original injury has occurred, especially when the patient is subjected to further exposure to cold or wetness.

In treating the condition, further injury to the damaged tissues must be avoided. The patient is advised to wear warm stockings and warm gloves. Massage should not be permitted, as it may cause further damage to the tissues. Any type of activity which interferes with the circulation is also dangerous. The patient should be kept warm, and the legs and hands kept cool, dry, and raised on pillows. Rest in bed is important to the treatment. If any blisters or sores have formed, sulfanilamide powder may be applied. This will help prevent infection.

Patients who have had this condition should be warned of the importance of keeping the feet and hands warm at all times.

PLAINFIELD W.I.

Plainfield Women's Institute was held on December 2 at the home of Mrs. Clarence Hall with thirty ladies present and four children. Mrs. E. Denyes led in community singing. Quilt blocks were sewn throughout the meeting by the ladies and a committee appointed for sending gifts to the Plainfield Service boys who are still in Canada. A quilt was donated by Mrs. Wesley Parks for War Work. Mrs. Fred Hall and Mrs. E. Denyes reported on the War Work for the month. Knitting and sewing were handed in and more given out. Mrs. F. Prindle reported $12.50 collection for November and it was decided to send $25 to "Jim Hunter Christmas Cheer" Fund. Current Events were given by Mrs. Edna Sullivan and a piano solo by Miss Olive Hall. Mrs. W. Simmons reported on the Area Convention and closed with "The Women's Institute is meeting the challenge of the times". Mrs. C. Platt gave a very interesting Christmas story on "Silent Night, Holy Night".

A presentation was then made to Mrs. W. Simmons, who is leaving the community. Mrs. Fred Hall on behalf of the members spoke a few words of appreciation for her excellent help in the Institute and Mrs. E. Denyes presented Mrs. Simmons with a silver dish. In a few well chosen remarks, Mrs. Simmons expressed her thanks for the gift.

Fashion Flashes

An asset to any blouse wardrobe is a shirtwaist of narrow striped black and white satin. The stripes are used in horizontal treatment to simulate a tucked bosom. Bow tied neckline and tiny pearl studs. Long sleeves with pearl links.

There's nothing like a pretty hat to give feminine spirits a lift. A new hat for after dark is a Spanish sailor of pink faille trimmed on crown and brim with short lengths of black jet ball fringe.

No need for glitter on a dressy frock if you don't like it. A very smart model of black crepe uses black and white satin ribbon laced through the bodice in checkerboard style and forming a deep U shaped yoke. The ribbons end with long-ended bows.

Very good for either afternoon or after-dark wear is a bow-tied neckline blouse of pink crepe with big coin dots of gold plastic spattered all over.

Sure demand always appears for the well-done bolero suit. Fine, tiny checked woollen in brown and white is used for a smart bolero suit, the skirt made with a wide self belt fastening at the side with an amber composition button.

Going on top of the black wool dress is the fur-lined short topper, judging from consumer interest. Deep purple woollen is used for a neat coat lined with black Persian lamb with notched fur collar.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The first Allied move, now that the Teheran conference is out of the way, naturally will also implement the announced agreement for concerted action against Hitler from east, west and south.

What is the most expeditious way of administering the coup de grace to the Nazi Fuehrer? We can't get at him the way the Hitlerites reportedly have done in the case of Count Ciano, Mussolini's turn-coat son-in-law, who is said to have been shot in the back by a firing squad.

There probably are numerous ways Hitler could be defeated — if we are prepared to drag the war out, or one thing, it likely could be done by air, provided the Red land forces could keep the German armies engaged in fierce and bloody combat over the long period necessary to destroy the resources of the Reich by bombing. Of course, you could gamble that the bombardment would break German civilian morale — and admittedly it might — but it nevertheless would be a gamble and should be supplemented by other more certain measures.

The experts generally are agreed that there's only one quick way to do the job with certainty, and that is the opening of a second land front in France, across the English Channel. Since Stalin is essentially a man of tremendous action, and since he apparently is satisfied with the outcome of the Teheran parley, we may take it for granted that his persistent demand for the early opening of a second front in France has been satisfied.

Therefore, one would expect to see the western Allies achieve this with the greatest possible speed. And speed is essential if we are to save lives and conserve our national resources which now are being poured into the bottomless hopper of war.

It's essential for another thing, too, and that is to get this European upheaval over so that we can tackle the Japanese. Every moment of respite we allow the little men of Nippon gives them just so much more chance to dig-in and get established in conquered territories. Every moment of delay increases the risk of China being knocked out.

Controversy Over Bacon Supply To Britain Is Still Unsettled

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 7 —(CP)— The pig that went to Britain but more particularly the pig that won't—are basking in the Ottawa limelight.

The fuss started Oct. 22 when Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced a new agreement with the United Kingdom under which Canada will ship a minimum of 900,000,000 pounds of bacon in the next two years, compared with 675,000,000 pounds in 1943.

The reduction said Mr. Gardiner, was caused by feed conditions and by better prices for grain in the West which caused some farmers to sell grain rather than feed it.

Effects of the reduction on the Canadian farmer and on the British consumer have been matters of speculation for some weeks, with the suggestion Britain would like to have assurance of more than 450,000,000 pounds a year.

Nov. 30 Mr. Gardiner said at Regina that, on the basis of advice from British Ministry of Agriculture representatives, "we would not be justified in asking farmers to continue to produce (hogs) to the level of last year, until the end of the war."

Bracken Cries "Shame."

Next day John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, said the Canadian people faced "shame" by forcing the United Kingdom into a reduction of their bacon ration, from four to three ounces weekly. Mr. Bracken said the Federal Agriculture Department had encouraged farmers to expand production of hogs to fill the contract with Britain without giving proper consideration to quality.

In Washington, meantime, Dr. J. A. Scott Wilson, agricultural adviser to the British embassy, said he feared Britain would lack Canadian exchange for purchase of bacon after the war, even though sentiment was in favor of buying from Canada.

Earlier in an address to Saskatchewan wheat pool at Regina he had said he had feared that after Britain had bought Canadian wheat and cheese in the post-war period she would be hard up for Canadian exchange to buy bacon. If Britain bought Danish bacon she would be able to exchange coal, bicycles and the like.

Calls Attention to Statement

Dec. 2 Mr. Gardiner—then at Winnipeg—said he had considered it his duty to call attention to Dr. Watson's statement in Regina so farmers might not be misled by those, "including the leader of the Federal Progressive Conservative party, who are suggesting that the Canadian government has not been giving due consideration to British requirements during the war while at the same time keeping in mind the quality of our bacon product and the long-time welfare of our Canadian farmer."

He had to brand Mr. Bracken, he said, as "the chief advocate of lower-quality bacon for Britain during the war as a means to provide quantity."

Mr. Bracken replied next day that the minister's statement "glosses over the government's error" and leaves the producer just where he was. The government had brought the "hog muddle" on itself and the producer remained uncertain of the future, confused by the recent change in policy and steadily reducing the number of his breeding hogs.

The Progressive Conservative leader said he did not favor low-quality bacon or any other food produce either in peace or war. But the question had been whether Britain preferred to have her contract filled with some lower quality bacon, or not filled.

Could Market Larger Hogs

Mr. Gardiner replied last Saturday that if Mr. Bracken wanted Britain to obtain her bacon requirements this year he would stop advocating the feeding of heavier hogs and stating that hogs could not be fed profitably at present grain prices. Mr. Bracken could not be blaming the government for lowering the quality of bacon shipped to the United Kingdom when he himself urged that quality should be still further lowered, the minister said.

Then, in a statement to the Dominion - Provincial Agriculture Conference here yesterday, Mr. Gardiner said 1944 production objectives should include the largest production of meat products possible, without too greatly endangering the future activities of Canadian farmers in finding markets for their products.

Ottawa observers said they believe the bacon contract will cause lively discussion in the House of Commons when sittings resume next month.

One question left unanswered in the various statements was the amount actually being paid by the United Kingdom for bacon from Canada.

It was known, however, that a substantial part of the price of bacon shipped from Canada is covered by the $1,000,000,000 Mutual Aid bill passed by the parliament last summer.

King Stricken With Influenza

London, Dec. 7 (CP)—The King has been stricken with influenza and will be confined to his room for several days, Buckingham Palace announced today. However, it was thought that the attack was not serious.

Thus the King joined the growing list of those suffering from the malady which is spreading through Britain. Latest figures showed that 375 deaths due to influenza had occurred in London and other big cities in Britain up to the week ended Nov. 27.

Thinking of you. Don't worry. Everything in perfect shape." The origin of the cablegram was not disclosed.

Arthur Duncan Addresses Rotary

A touch of droll English humor, of laugh-provoking Irish wit and Scotch repartee, together with a generous measure of more serious note, was interjected into the regular Rotary luncheon program Monday noon with Mr. Arthur Duncan, editor of Batawa publications, being the guest speaker and delighting his listeners with his own particular rendition of witty stories and more serious Edgar Guest poetry.

"This man Edgar Guest really has something for the people" indicated Mr. Duncan prior to his reciting some of the famed poet's masterpieces. "He seems to snatch a worldly philosophy from the everyday events of life and then succeeds in impressive fashion to bring out the point in appealing verse."

Terming what he was about to give Rotarians as "Things Worth Remembering", because in such a time of world stress the more humorous incidents of life must be remembered if morale is to be prevented from cracking, Mr. Duncan brought peals of sudden laughter from club members as they listened to a series of witty stories, given with characteristic voice mimicry. Then in more sober note Mr. Duncan recited Guest's Christmas poem and his "What makes a Soldier Brave?"

Introduced by Rotarian Arthur Bateman, the guest artist was thanked by Charles Dolan who assured Mr. Duncan that the role of a humorist is a really serious business and one which is playing an important role in present day life.

Business of the meeting was brief with President Jack Deacon expressing the welcome of the club to Rotary members from the Picton club. Visitors were introduced to the club by Harry Ackerman while he also expressing the club welcome. Rotarians were reminded of the joint service club meeting of Friday night at which Bert Trestrail of Toronto will be the guest speaker, while volunteers were asked to assist in entertaining district servicemen at the next open house day at the Y.M.C.A. Alec Gordon acted as pianist with Jamieson Bone as songleader.

ONLY STUMP LEFT

Denver, Dec. 7 — (AP)—Christmas trees being scarce, R. M. Sealock thoughtfully eyed the blue spruce he had planted in his back yard. Finally, though, he bought a tree, much smaller and scragglier. He went out again to admire the one growing in his yard. All he found was a stump.

Industrial Accidents Will Show Decrease

Toronto, Dec. 7 — Industrial accidents in Canada will drop ten percent this year over last year.

This is the estimate made by R. B. Morley, general manager of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, who based his calculations on the figures from eight provincial Compensation Boards across Canada. The only province without a Compensation Act is Prince Edward Island.

The figures for industrial accidents from the eight provinces for 1941-42 and up to October 31st 1943 are as follows:

In 1941, there were 314,514 accidents, including 1,217 fatal cases. In 1942, there were 373,126 cases, including 1,211 fatalities, an increase of nearly 20 percent in the overall figures, but a decrease in the fatal cases. During the first ten months of 1943, there were 307,088 accidents, including 1,058 fatal cases.

With these figures in mind, Mr. Morley said, "If the same ratio in 1943 is continued for the months of November and December, the total number of accidents reported to the Canadian Boards for the year will be 337,796, including 1,161 fatalities. This, roughly, is a reduction of ten percent from 1942."

Greenford, Middlesex, England — (CP) — Dorothy Leonard, 18, and her mother are bus conductors on a local district route.

No Celebration Of Day Marking 2nd Anniversary

Washington, Dec. 7 — (AP) — While President Roosevelt has set his face against any celebration of the day marking the second anniversary of the surprise blow struck by the Japanese at Pearl Harbor that forced the United States into the war, Americans could, however, today look back on their two years of warfare with considerable pride.

The United States Army has grown from 1,500,000 to five times that size, with 2,300,000 men in the air force. The Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard have reached a strength of nearly 3,000,000. The United States fleet is twice the size it was just before the war.

To arm and equip these mighty forces the industries, clerks and workers and management of the United States have performed industrial miracles.

All this began to happen immediately after the blow at Pearl Harbor, and it gathered momentum during the interval provided by the desperate resistance of men, too few in numbers and with too little equipment, who fought until they dropped, and delayed the aggressor, upset his timing, ruined his chance for a quick victory, and therefore his hope for any victory at all.

Slowly at first, then with increasing momentum, the Allies began counter-attacking.

Significantly, the last day of the second year at war for the United States brought the official announcement of the Teheran conference of Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin.

The third year begins with their promise that the master plan is completed for crushing Germany, that "our attacks will be relentless and increasing."

TO ISSUE DEBENTURES

Arnprior, Ont., Dec. 7 (CP)—A by-law authorizing council to issue $50,000 of debentures with which to take over the former McLachlin property on John St. here and convert it into a community hospital was passed by property owners yesterday.

The vote was 562 for and 44 against the proposal.

IN EVERY TYPE OF ALLIED FIGHTING PLANE

SUNOCO

DYNAFUEL

IS HELPING TO WIN DECISIVE AIR BATTLES

Plane for plane, Allied aircraft are better-built, better-armed and better-manned than anything the Axis can send against them.

Yes, and they're better-fueled, too! The world's finest aviation gasoline is fighting on our side—and Sunoco is making millions of gallons of it every week to highest U. S. Army specifications.

Both the high quality and huge quantity of our output are due largely to Dynafuel—an exclusive development of Sun Oil Company engineers and chemists.

50% More Powerful Than U.S. Standard 100-Octane Test Fuel

Dynafuel is far more than a gasoline. It's a super aviation fuel concentrate, so loaded with dynamic energy that it actually tests 50% higher in power than U. S. standard 100-octane test fuel! It isn't used undiluted but is blended with gasolines made by other methods, in order to step-up their quality.

The Sunoco Dynafuel Process also increases quantity—because it utilizes even those portions of the crude which formerly went only into low-grade fuels.

For Better Motoring—After the War

Dynafuel is not now available for civilians. Every drop is reserved for military needs. But when peace comes, the advanced Sunoco processes and equipment which are contributing so greatly to the war will bring to motorists a new, more powerful fuel for their automobiles.

Industry's Initiative Serves Well

Dynafuel was developed by Sunoco without government aid or subsidy. We risked our own capital, our own credit, in order to pay the huge costs of building the plants for its production.

This is another example of how individual initiative is helping to win the greatest war of all time—and will inevitably lead the way to better transportation, better living, after the war.

PRICES OF RACE HORSES BOOM IN GREAT BRITAIN

Many New Buyers in Field at Several Sales Throughout Country

WOMEN IN FIELD

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 7—(CP)— Britain's 1943 racing season—shortest of the war—hit the finish line in a whirl of booming bloodstock prices that coincided with fears this home of the thoroughbred would face the competitive post-war period short of quality stock. At the same time, the buying crowds at racing sales mirrored optimism concerning an Allied victory in 1944.

Generally, it was a better season than most turf followers expected. In thrills, to say nothing of attendance and wagering, it exceeded other wartime years, with each of the five classic races, including the world-famed derby, providing a terrific finish.

Women, making heavy inroads on yet another industry, fared so well on the track that two of them may be principal rivals for the 1944 classics. They were the Hon. Dorothy Paget, who has poured more money into racing than any other person on record, and Mrs. Betty Lavington, a comparative newcomer.

Miss Paget, whose American grandfather, William C. Whitney, raced horses here, realized two of her greatest ambitions this season. She headed the list of winning owners and breeders and also won the derby.

Running 16 horses, Miss Paget won 26 races that enriched her stud and training stables at Elsenham, Essex, by $59,152.

Many two-year-olds were included among her winners, and her colt Orestes is favorite to win next season's derby. Straight Deal gave Miss Paget her first derby triumph this season.

Mrs. Lavington finished her first season as an owner by winning nearly $14,000.

Runner-up to Miss Paget was Lord Derby with winnings of $31,700 from 11 first-placers. The Aga Khan, resident in Switzerland, took third position on the list with seven winners and $27,000 in purses.

The King, with four horses carrying his silks, won six races and poured $10,000 into the Royal Coffers.

Gordon Richards, 39-year-old Perennial Evergreen, emerged as champion jockey for the 16th time. He had 65 winners.

Compared with 1942, Britain had 67 racing programs as against 80, and 471 races compared with 540.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Dec. 7 — (AP) — Supporters of American League baseball are starting a move to get Clark Griffith voted into baseball's hall of fame on the next poll ... this dept. (with no vote) heartily supports the idea...Griff was one of the game's great pitchers in his younger days, a good manager, one of the main reasons why the American League successfully bucked the National some 40 years ago and the man who made a big success of the Washington club even though he operated on a badly worn shoestring...what more could you ask?

Shorts and Shells:

Word from the west coast brackets the Southern California-U.C.L.A.A. football game, in which there were 14 fumbles and the Manuel Ortiz-Benny Goldberg fight—which gives you an idea of what the fight fans got for their $27,500 ... Billy Herman and Branch Rickey did some lengthy huddling over contract matters last week but the results, if any, apparently are being saved for Rickey's next press conference.

Hitting the Pace:

When Staff Sgt. P. R. Anderson, former Wisconsin runner now a glider student at the South Plains, Tex., Army air field, decided to add a new field record to the four he already held, he dropped into the Athletic office and asked another pilot to pace him in the 300-yard shuttle run...the pacemaker, Staff Sgt. Lowell Gamblin, not only did the job but broke the record himself by beating out Anderson in 46.6 seconds. He's a former Texas Tech sprinter who had held the old record...the next day, when Gamblin wasn't around, Anderson went out and busted the mark by three seconds.

Philadelphia, Dec. 7 — (AP) — Joseph F. Reardon, 38-year-old general manager of the Scranton, Pa., baseball club of the Eastern League has been named head of the farm system of the Philadelphia Phillies and will assume his new duties today.

Reardon's appointment was announced yesterday by Herb Pennock in his first official act since he was selected general manager of the Phillies.

BOSTON BRUINS CAN MOVE UP

By the Canadian Press

Six weeks ago few fans would predicted that Boston Bruins and Detroit Red Wings would be struggling to keep out of fifth place in the National Hockey League standing, but that's how matters stand today.

Detroit so far has failed to show the consistency which marked its parade to the Stanley Cup finals last season and a subsequent four-game sweep over Bruins, while Boston still has failed to strike the stride, which kept it at or near the top of the standings after the first month of play last season.

But the club which Art Ross guided to a world's championship in 1940-41 has shown signs of life recently—Bruins are the only team in the league to have defeated Montreal Canadiens—and now hold a two-point lead over the fifth-place Red Wings.

By defeating Detroit in the only N. H. L. game scheduled tonight, Boston could move into a second-place tie with Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks. The game will mark Detroit's first visit to Boston ice. In the first meeting of the clubs this season, Detroit prevailed 6-4 on home ice.

What's Doing in Sport

Providence—(AP)— Referee Tim Ferrick stopped a scheduled 10-round bout here last night in the sixth round and awarded the decision to Tona Costa of Woonsocket, R. I., after ruling Jackie Wilson, former N. B. A. Featherweight champion of Pittsburgh, was "pulling his punches."

Rochester, N. H.—(AP)—Former player for American and National Baseball League teams, George H. Magoon, 70, died at his home yesterday following a heart attack. He had performed for the Chicago White Sox and Cubs and Cincinnati Reds.

Philadelphia —(AP)— A twirler for the Philadelphia Athletics in 1942, Lieut. Bob Savage of the U. C. forces in Italy was wounded Nov. 5 and has been awarded the Order of the Purple Heart, it was announced yesterday by Connie Mack.

Bunker Hill, Ind.—(AP)— Cadet Theodore Samuel Williams, better known as outfielder "Ted" Williams of the Boston Red Sox with a five-figure salary, graduated yesterday from the U. S. Naval Air Station as a step toward becoming a Navy flier.

New Orleans —(AP)— Marriage, Texas-owned winner of the $25,000 New Orleans handicap last winter, was yesterday assigned top weight of 124 pounds for the $15,000 Louisiana handicap to be run at Fair Grounds Dec. 18. Alsab, another prominent entry, was weighted at 122 pounds.

Haselmere, Surrey, England—(CP) —Vice Admiral Sir Raymond Fitzmaurice, 65, commodore of convoys, died here.

President American League Issues Ultimatum to Managers

By The Canadian Press

President Maurice Podoloff of the American Hockey League yesterday took off his official gloves in a showdown with general manager Eddie Shore of the Buffalo Bisons in which he issued an ultimatum the next manager to step out on the ice to abuse a game official would be automatically and indefinitely suspended. The circuit prexy pointed out Shore had already been fined $250 for a clash with the referee of the Buffalo-Cleveland fixture Oct. 30 and $100 for a similar offence at a Hershey-Buffalo game Nov. 28.

In a quieter moment at his office in New Haven, Conn., Podoloff released the league statistics yesterday which showed Wally Kilrea of Hershey to be well out in front in the individual points standing with 25 for 11 goals and 14 assists, followed by Gaston Gauthier of the same club with 21 and Burlington of Cleveland third with 20 points. The bad man of the American loop is Bob Dill of Buffalo with 30 minutes in penalties, plus a major, with team-mate Paul Waldner of the Bisons second with 23 minutes in time off.

The Crescent Club of Brooklyn, N.Y., yesterday was named to replace the New Haven Eagles in the Eastern United States Hockey League, president Tom Lockhart announced at New York. The Eagles had lost 11 of 12 games before withdrawing. The Crescents, once famous in New York hockey, make the fourth club in the loop.

Mr. Justice P. M. Anderson, chairman of the Saskatchewan Mobilization Board at Regina, declared yesterday he had been in error when he stated last week Doug Bentley of the Chicago Black Hawks had been granted a permit to go to the United States last year by the late Mr. Justice J. F. L. Embury, former chairman. He added Bentley had not become eligible for military call until a few months ago because of his age and married status.

The Lakehead Senior Hockey League will operate with two clubs, it was announced yesterday at Port Arthur. The teams will represent the Port Arthur Shipbuilding Company and the Canadian Car and Foundry Limited. The Port Arthur Bear Cats have dropped from active competition.

Officers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will meet in Toronto Dec. 28 and 29, it was announced last night by President Frank Sargent at Port Arthur. The business of the meeting will be the drawing up of tentative schedules for the Allan and Memorial Cup playdowns next spring.

Chairman Lou Little of the U. S. football coaches rules committee yesterday recommended at New York that forward passing be permitted anywhere behind the line of scrimmage in the college grid game and that a tee be adopted as a rest for the ball in kickoffs instead of being held placement-style by another player.

After a long illness, Charlie Hall, 58, pitcher of the Boston Red Sox who won the 1912 world series, died at his home at Ventura, Calif., yesterday. His greatest feat was striking out Ty Cobb, Sam Crawford and Jim Delhaney of the Detroit Tigers in one inning.

Earle Brucker, veteran coach and catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, was given his unconditional release yesterday and appears to be in line for manager of the Oakland Club in the Pacific Coast League.

Toronto, Dec. 7. (CP)—Men with foresight in many Canadian cities are urging increased sports facilities as an antidote to juvenile delinquency. For example, Tony Allan of the Winnipeg Tribune suggests the ideal set-up is a community sports fund raised and administered in the same fashion as the Community Chest, a fund for charities. . . .In Vancouver the British Columbia branch, Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, has been responsible for a series of meetings to study the problem of juvenile delinquency. Eighty representatives of leading Vancouver organizations are studying possibility of establishing a recreation council whose objective would be erection of a stadium and auditorium for sports. The proposal for community houses is being studied. Vancouver is without natural ice most of the winter and there isn't the same opportunity for hockey as in other parts of Canada. When J. Clark, former New York Rangers goalie, called for prospective players for his Juvenile Hockey League, 221 lads turned up. Owing to lack of ice, there can be only a four-team league.

Harry (Calgary Albertan) Scott recalls Red Dutton, managing director of the National Hockey League, played with Calgary Tigers of 1922-23 in the Old Western Canada League. Charlie Reid and Bill Binney were in goal; Dutton and Bobby Benson on defence, Ernie Anderson, Harry Oliver, Foley Marton, Jimmy Gibson, Al Fisher, George Carey and Bill Speck on the forward lines.

Vancouver skiers will have an electrically-operated tow on Grouse Mountain this winter. Only other tow in operation in B.C. is at Princeton. . . .Tommy (Hamilton Spectator) Moore says Joe Krol still has a yen for professional football and will likely accept if he gets an offer next season. Krol had a bid for Detroit Lions this year. . .Reg Threfall says Art Stevenson, Nebraskan who played with Winnipeg Bombers, is the best football player he has seen in Canada. "He could do just about everything well—run, pass, kick, block and tackle. And on top of all that he had a great competitive spirit. He was a coach's idea of a football player". . . More than 12,000 German prisoners of war are reported to have taken part in a mammoth sports meet at a southern Alberta prisoner-of-war camp.

Squadron Passes 200 Mark in Axis Planes Shot Down

Algiers, Dec. 7. (CP Cable)—The R.A.F. announced today that a squadron formed at Malta two years ago had passed the rare 200 mark in the number of enemy aircraft shot down.

Wing Cmdr. Eric Norman Woods, D.F.C., made it 200 1-4 by shooting down a Junkers over Albania Saturday.

Woods, born in Argentina, lived in Vancouver for some years.

On the day before Woods got his victim, FO. Ben Clark of Edmonton got a Junkers transport to aid the squadron's score. Other Canadians in the outfit are FOs. Douglas Bullock of Montreal, and James Borbay of Hamilton, Ont.

BAN VISITORS FROM HAMILTON HOSPITALS

Hamilton, Dec. 7. (CP)— Visitors were banned Monday from five local hospitals until further notice as a result of an outbreak of influenza in the city.

The order affected the General Hospital, Mount Hamilton, Maternity Hospital, St. Joseph's, The Mountain Sanatorium and The Ontario Hospital. Medical wards of the General and St. Joseph's are taxed to capacity.

Reports Monday indicated an increase in number of cases and in severity of the disease. Officials said it was the same type as the disease which took a heavy toll in an outbreak in 1918.

KATAN ONCE HELD EMPIRE CROWN

When seeking opponents for ring champions Promoters are faced with the problem of having to satisfy the patrons of the game and that's exactly what Headman Frank Tunney waited for when he signed John (The Assassin) Katan, the Palermo ring villain, to meet "Whipper" Watson in a British Empire championship bout at the Hume Arena Thursday night.

"Katan once held the Empire crown and he has been chasing Watson all over the Dominion ever since he had it knocked off his noggin. Actually Katan even went so far as to move his wife and family all of the way from Calgary to Palermo so he could camp on Watson's front doorstep until he regained his loss championship," revealed Promoter Tunney today.

"Last week we matched this pair in the Maple Leaf gardens and everybody knows by now that the match ended in a most unsatisfactory manner when bedlam broke loose and even patrons had their clothing torn in the following melee. However, we are engaging additional police protection for the rematch in Belleville Thursday night and personally myself I feel this will be the greatest wrestling match yet," stated Mr. Tunney, and why shouldn't he, after all he's the promoter.

For good measure The CZAR will tangle with "hard-boiled" Hannigan in the semi-final and here should be a natural. Then a preliminary will start the night off.

RALSTON PROUD OF ARMY

Algiers, Dec. 7 — (CP Cable) — Col. Ralston, Canadian Defence Minister, told correspondents here yesterday: "I have always been proud of our army but was never more proud than today after having seen them on the firing line." Col. Ralston made this statement to correspondents as he ended a tour of Canadian troops in the Mediterranean theatre.

Elham, Kent, England — (CP) — Sunday being a day of rest the local council turned down a scheme for men to work on the Sabbath to finish cottages to house agricultural workers.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

A country boy took his girl for a buggy ride and nine miles out in the country the horse dropped dead:

Girl (sighing)—Oh, dear, and I'm so tired!

Country Boy—Suppose I give you a nice kiss. That will put life into you.

Girl—In that case, you'd better kiss the horse.

(Soldiers want sports.)

Soldiers apparently are more sports-minded and more in favor of the continuation of sports in war-time than civilians. This is indicated in the all-soldier sports poll conducted by Esquire Magazine.

Asked whether they wanted sports to continue during the war, 96.5 percent of the soldiers polled at the military camps voted "yes." Previously this question when put to civilians ran 10 to 15 per cent lower.

Softball led the field as the sport providing the most relaxation and entertainment during the soldiers leisure time with 12.81 percent of the total vote. Altogether sports drew 44.77 percent of the vote, movies polling 18.88 percent, dancing 6.4 percent, theatrical shows 6.57 percent, radio shows 1.81 percent, concerts 1.64 percent and reading 8.37 percent.

Asked whether they missed participation in sports while in the service, 57.49 percent of the men said yes. A total of 70.84 percent said they missed watching sports. A count of 53.12 percent said they did not miss reading, talking and hearing about sports, while 84.21 percent said they did not forget about sports while under arms.

(Boom after war.)

The high percentage of 91.43 percent thought sports would boom after the war. The World Series led the Rose Bowl game as the event the boys would most like to attend by a count of 31.76 percent to 26.05 percent, a heavyweight championship fight running third with 11.66 percent. Football led with a vote of 45.77 percent as the sport that gives a man the best kind of experience and conditioning for handling himself to advantage in combat.

A strong majority of the soldiers, 85.33 percent, hoped that after the war there would be a better organized sports program for their children. That sports helped the men who took part in them is indicated by the fact that of the 49.12 percent who said they entered basic training in good physical shape, 78.31 percent of these said that participation in some sport helped them get into that good condition. In reply to the question: "If you had it to do over would you engage in sports to get into shape before entering the service?", 89.71 percent of the army men answered "yes."

Asked whether they intended to keep in condition after getting out of the army, 83.92 percent said "yes." Engaging in various sports was given as the intended program of 30.17 percent. Swimming was the highest single sport named, being specified in 12.29 percent of the replies.

Asked what they liked best to hear over the radio, the service man gave music 38.42 percent, current news 29.88 percent and sports 28.56 percent. Dramatic offerings drew a 3.15 percent vote. The music liked best was swing with 33.80 percent of the total. Classical music drew 13.73 percent.

(Remember when—)

The Ottawa Roughriders led by Sammy Sward defeated Toronto Balmy Beach in Ottawa, 12 to 5, three years ago today for Canadian Rugby Union recognition as Dominion champions. There was no East-West final that year and to the Capital City Roughriders went the Grey trophy.

(Tunney means business.)

Not only has Promoter Tunney lined up John Katan and "Whipper Billie" Watson in a British Empire championship bout at the Hume Arena Thursday, but he has added a semi-final go that should pack 'em in.—Tunney signed the "thick-skulled" Russian, the Czar to meet "Hard-boiled" Hannigan, one of the roughest and most unorthodox grapplers ever to grace the local palace de sport. Hannigan had it easy against Christie last week, but he'll find the bemasked Czar a different customer. Along with a preliminary of importance here looks like Tunney's masterpiece of matchmaking, that may ring down the curtain for 1943.

(Santa comes early.)

Official figures on the 1943 World's Series, issued by Commissioner K. M. Landis, covering the distribution of the money received, show total receipts of $1,205,784, including $100,000 from radio, and attendance of 277,312. The largest amount, $488,005.74, went to the players.

Of the remainder, $308,373.48 represented the share of the War Relief & Service Fund, Inc., $131,990.32 from the third game, $76,383.16 from the fourth game and all the radio money. The Commissioner's office collected $102,079 and each league and each competing club $76,831.24.

The Yankee players split $204,962.41; the Cardinals, $136,641.61; Senators and Reds, second-place teams, $36,600.43 each; Indians and Dodgers, third-place teams, $24,400.29 each, and the White Sox and Pirates, fourth-place teams, $12,200.14 each

Approximately ten per cent of each share was paid in War Bonds, the balance in checks—minus advance payments on income taxes—mailed out from the Commissioner's office. Each full share of the Yankees was worth $6,139.46; that of the Cardinals, $4,321.96; Senators, $1,220.02; Reds, $1,356.58; Indians $779.05; Dodgers, $756.60; White Sox, $352.95, and Pirates, $400.01.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 246

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In the spring, a young man's fancy lightly turns to love. In the fall, a hostess thinks seriously of progressive party bridge.

At parties of two or more tables, the usual procedure is to progress. That's where players move from table to table after each set of deals.

The laws of progressive bridge gather moss as time goes on. Here and there, through ignorance or design, hostesses add methods that seem best adapted to palooka play.

One inexpert practice has become the custom from frequent usage. It's the changing of partners after a pair from one table progresses to the next table.

Three tables away is that snippy Mrs. Tite girdle. No matter what you do as her partner, she is bound to criticize. And sooner or later, she may be your partner. The very anticipation ruins your day.

If you are a capable player, changing partners will kill your game. By the time you find out how punk or clever she is, you lose your partner. And there you are with another enigma on your hands.

Where better and more enjoyable bridge is desired, the most modern policy of progressive is to keep the same partner. When you progress from table to table, you do so as a pair without changing.

After all, bridge is a partnership game. A mutual understanding of the same signals is necessary for the best results. Only by keeping the same partner do you get to apply your best combined knowledge.

Or if Mamie keeps Susie as her partner, they have fun. They are not nervous with each other. If either makes an error, the other is too dumb to see it. Or too considerate to mention it.

This method also makes parties more popular where husbands are included. The men get to play as partners with each other. And they do not have to keep their ideas or feelings bottled up.

At such a party, a pair of husbands were partners in the south and north when this deal came up:

NORTH
♠ 8 5 3
♥ 6 4 2
♦ A K Q J 5 3
♣ 9

WEST	EAST
♠ K 7 6	♠ A Q J 10
♥ K Q J 10	♥ 9 8 7
♦ 10 7	♦ 9 8 4 2
♣ 10 8 7 6 2	♣ 5 3

SOUTH
♠ 9 4 2
♥ A 5 3
♦ 6
♣ A K Q J 7 4

South started with an atrocious opening bid of three no-trump. North jumped to seven no-trump. Unfortunately for west she led a heart and south rolled in 13 tricks.

With his wife for a partner, south would not have dared such a bid. If it had failed, he would never have heard the last of it. But this partner would only have bawled the dickens out of him. Some fun.

CANADIANS DESTROY NINE NAZIS IN ONE DOGFIGHT

Every one of these Canadian fighter pilots destroyed at least one German aircraft on the day this picture was taken after their return to base in England. They belong to a Spitfire wing led by Wing Commander Lloyd Chadburn, D.S.O., D.F.C., of Oshawa and Aurora, Ont. The 24-year-old leader himself shot two Nazis in the encounter, and the whole wing destroyed nine enemy planes for the loss of one pilot. Left to right, the victorious pilots are: Flight Lieut. D. E. "Danny" Noonan of Kingston, Ont.; Flight Lieut. R. D. Booth, Vancouver; Squadron Leader F. E. Green, D.F.C., Toronto; Flight Lieut. Art Sager, Vancouver; Flight Lieut. J. D. Mitchener, D.F.C., of Saskatoon; Squadron Leader Geoffrey Northcott, D.F.C., Minnedosa, Man.; and Wing Commander Chadburn. — (R.C.A.F. Photo.)

AT THE BELLE — Marriage was never like this! So thinks Robt. Young in "Claudia", the entertaining picture now delighting large audiences at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL — Lily Pons, the magnificent soprano who plays the title role in "The Girl from Paris," new R.K.O. Radio musical comedy delight. Here she is with Gene Raymond and Lucille Ball. Now showing at the Capitol with the added hit "The Great Victor Herbert."

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Great Victor Herbert"

The spirit of the gay, romantic, colorful era when Victor Herbert ruled the show world and his melodies were on everyone's lips has been completely captured by the first motion picture based on the personality of the great Irish-American composer. The film, "The Great Victor Herbert", which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, is a spectacular tribute to a man who has a place in every American heart.

Victor Herbert himself — who knew how to pick many a star in his day—could not have chosen a cast better suited to bring his story to the screen than the one Paramount presents in "The Great Victor Herbert". The performances of Allan Jones, Mary Martin and Walter Connolly, in the leading roles, are as noteworthy as the immortal songs that pace the picture.

But first and foremost, music's the thing that counts in dealing with Victor Herbert, and the picture presents no less than two score of the composer's best-loved songs. With Miss Martin and Jones rendering most of them, such outstanding favorites as "Kiss Me Again", "I'm Falling in Love With Someone", "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life" and "A Kiss in the Dark" are brought back to delight all Herbert fans.

The supporting players fit as easily into their roles as the brilliant leading three. Lee Bowman, as Miss Martin's unlucky hometown suitor, Judith Barrett, as a Broadway showgirl of the day, and Susanna Foster, as a juvenile operetta singer, all deserve credit for their performances.

"Lily Pons"

When Lily Pons' uncle tries to force her to wed her wealthy impresario in "That Girl From Paris" the added big musical at the Capitol, the diminutive opera star leaves them standing dumfounded at the altar and flees in pursuit of the real romance which had been a void in her life.

One of the greatest varieties of musical offerings ever recorded for a film is presented in the little prima donna's current screen vehicle. Her renditions vary from "swing" tunes to operatic arias. Leigh Jason directed "That Girl from Paris" for RKO Radio, starring Gene Raymond and featuring Jack Oakie, Herman Bing, Lucille Ball, Frank Jenks and Mischa Auer.

The Canadian Universal News completes the big bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Juke Box Jenny"

A bright tuneful tonic for these times in Universal's bright new film "Juke Box Jenny", showing today only at the McCarthy Theatre.

It's a cute story about the juke box craze that has swept the country wild-there are now more than half-a-million of them-and it's a script cleverly played by a young cast of favorites, including Ken Murray, Harriet Hilliard, Don Douglas, Iris Adrian and Marjorie Gateson.

In addition there is a rare treat for the swing addicts in the music of Charles Barnet and his orchestra, and Wingy Manone and his band, hot from New Orleans, and the Milt Herth trio, the newest sensation of the five-cent machines.

Among the ten musical numbers are three new songs by Milton Rosen and Everett Carter. They are "Give Out", "Swing It, Mother Goose" and "Macumba" and all are good.

The second feature attraction on the McCarthy screen is the surprise-package mystery "The Falcon In Danger," which brings Tom Conway to the screen for the third consecutive time as the lady-killer sleuth who always gets his man-and his woman.

The hunt for the criminal, who sent two men to their deaths from a speeding airliner and stole $100,000 in securities, provides the basis for the thrilling action which is highlighted with sparkling comedy.

An excellent cast includes Jean Brooks, Elaine Shepard, Amelita Ward, Clarence Kolb, Robert Emmett Keane, Cliff Clark and many others.

AT THE BELLE

"Claudia"

Laughable, lovable "Claudia" who charmed millions in Redbook Magazine, on the stage and on the air, is now delighting large audiences at the Belle Theatre....Dorothy McGuire, Robert Young and Ina Claire are featured in this 20th Century-Fox film directed by Edmund Goulding and produced by William Perlberg.

That "Claudia" was a natural for the screen was apparent early in her memorable career. Her first appearance on the stage in New York was the signal for her critical praise that predicted a long run on Broadway—and the extended run vindicated these prophesies. "Claudia" had those qualities which appealed to Canadians of all kinds, and they are saying that she is even better as a motion picture—if that could be.

The Canadian Movietone News described by Lowell Thomas and a new edition of the March of Time "Inside Fascist Spain" complete the program.

George Formby in "No Limit"

Fun, thrills and spills abound in George Formby's funniest comedy, "No Limit," featuring Florence Desmond, coming next to the Belle theatre, with the breath-taking adventure story, "Squadron Leader X" co-starring Eric Portman and Ann Dvorak.

600 QTS. TROUT SPAWN

Meaford, Ont., Dec. 7 — (CP) — Nearly 600 quarts of spawn — each containing approximately 7,000 trout eggs — have been gathered this year at Meaford and Thornbury and sent to government agencies for restocking purposes. The eggs will mature into trout fingerlings at the Wiarton government hatchery, then placed back into Georgian Bay or other fresh water lakes.

MOVIE TOWNERS FLEE

Hollywood, Dec. 7 — (AP)—Movie towners fled in any direction last night — just so it was away from their most famed intersection, Hollywood and Vine. For a skunk wandered down from Hollywood hills, and became a traffic casualty there.

Several Belleville Railroaders Train Under War Conditions in England

Operation of the Collective Training (Transportation) Wing with its maze of railway equipment for the training of soldier-railwaymen of the Allied forces is told in detail in the following story which appeared in an English newspaper. Collective Training Wing was inaugurated for the purpose of training personnel in the operating of railway and bridges and in the overhaul and repair of engines used in army communication lines.

Quite a number of former Belleville railroaders are training in the Wing, and include Mac Bonter, former C. N. R. firemen, residing at 25 East Moira Street; Carl Gathangue, Sid. Robinson and Gregory Haight. They enlisted in the No. 1 Railroad Battalion R. C. E. The story follows:

If ever there should be written a manual of the various roles played by the Corps of Royal Engineers in the war, writes a "Telegraph" representative, a special chapter should be assigned to the work carried out by the Collective Training (Transportation) Wing, which has been operating at a North Midlands camp since November, 1939.

Here sappers are, trained in two of the most important branches of lines of communication work—the operating of railways and bridging.

Only One Like This

One could spend a whole day in the railway siding alone.

This railway is the only one of its kind in the country, running traffic solely for the training of military personnel.

The total rail mileage, with sidings is just over 40. There are single and double tracks, and steep gradients; indeed every kind of problem that a railwayman can be expected to run up against in England or abroad.

Men come as novices and they leave as fully-fledged rail operators.

They overhaul and repair their own engines, they even assemble, test, and run-in the new "austerity" engines which are now arriving in large numbers from the U. S. A.

4,600 Wagons Weekly

A large proportion of the daily traffic comes from nearby collieries, from which more than 200 wagons of coal are taken daily, with a corresponding number of empty wagons requiring to be worked back to the pits.

A stone quarry, whose stone is used in the manufacture of steel and munitions, adds an average of another 70 trucks, with the same number of "empties" returnable.

All this is in addition to the transporting of military stores, the heaviest comprising tanks and motor lorries.

Actually these soldier-railwaymen have exchanged as many as 800 wagons—laden and unladen—daily with the railway company, and the average weekly number is estimated at 4,600.

As a "side-line" they run a "leave special" into the nearest town on four days a week, the soldier-passengers paying the ordinary privilege ticket fares for Servicemen.

The loco, sheds and workshops are a hive of industry. I saw boilers being washed out and scraped; repairs big and small being executed, cranes lifting engines on and off the track (one had turned over the previous day and was being set up on its feet again); fitters, turners, and other mechanics at work in the various shops.

A Model Model

The biggest thrill was provided by the Railway Signal School—the pride of the transportation section.

Here was indeed a schoolboy's veritable paradise—a complete electrified model railway, with electrically-operated signal boxes perfect in detail, and every other kind of signalling device in use on the large civilian rail undertakings at home and abroad.

Officers of high rank who have visited the school have been fascinated by this model of models, and it would indeed be hard to resist the temptation to "play" for hours with this amazingly complete railway.

But it is used for sterner purposes, and every man who passes through the school can rightfully claim to be the complete railway signalman, or blockman to use a preferred term.

Started With $300

Its history bears narration. When the camp came into being there were no facilities for training in this branch of railway work. But the instructional staff made light of this problem.

With the aid of a training grant, $300 was expended on materials—and these were not easy to buy—and within a few weeks, entirely by their own labour, the school was built and the railway and its signal apparatus installed.

One other feature of this transportation section siding, which by the way was just open quarry land when the sappers entered into possession: Four trucks coupled together and standing aloof from their fellows invited inspection. They proved to be a complete mobile workshop, as used on active service operations, and employed here for training purposes.

Built Desert Railway

The first contained stores—metal, tools, and spare parts of every description; the second a welding van in which either acetylene or electrical welding can be done; the third, the workshop, containing lathes, power saw, a small crane and machinery of other varied types, all power driven by current generated in the fourth wagon.

A crew of 50 men comprises the workshop team, and it is hardly necessary to dwell on the service to which it can be put in the field of operations.

United States and Canadian troops have been trained at the school as well as British sappers, and many of the companies are known to be now putting into execution in the Mediterranean war theatre the lessons they learned at this North Midlands training camp.

The extension of the desert railway from Mersa Matruh in the Libyan campaign owes much to this camp.

SHOWGIRLS TO PAY CUSTOMS ON COATS

Toronto, Dec. 7—(CP)—Six American showgirls who were given mink, beaver and otter coats by the millionaire money-giver, Harry F. McLean of Merrickville, Ont., a few weeks ago during a visit here have decided to raise the $4,000 necessary to get the coats through United States customs. The girls are assistants of the magician Dante, who has returned here for its second engagement of the season. The coats are held in Buffalo pending payment of duty.

RR. FIRE FIGHTING EQUIPMENT INSTALLED

St. Thomas, Ont., Dec. 7—(CP)—First railroad fire-fighting equipment in this district, and possibly the first in Ontario, has been installed here as a precaution against oil fires. At a demonstration yesterday, flames from roaring fires built in pits were extinguished with both water sprays and liquid snow.

Paisley, Scotland — (CP) — A boy of 14 was sent to an approved school —correctional institution — after confessing to setting fire to four schools, including the Paisley Grammar School where damage was estimated at £60,000 ($270,000).

The Ageing Year

The year is growing old, he's weary now,
His face is furrowed with deep lines of care.
The dead leaves crown his cold, impassive brow.
His step is slow, as if in deep despair.

He once was young and bright and happy-eyed,
He woke the flowers in glad and glorious Spring.
The trees waved banners green on every side,
He called the birds and they came back to sing.

He waved his wand o'er all the countryside,
The wheat fields rippled in the Summer sun,
And then in Autumn, soft and dreamy-eyed,
The painted leaves proclaimed his work well done.

And now the wind moans as the year grows old,
The rain drips down, and all the day is drear,
The shivering sheep crowd to the sheltered fold
As nature grieves for the old dying year.

PILOT OF BRITISH

mand Wellington crew, including PO. John M. Bezer, New Westminster, B. C., sighted and attacked a U-boat. It was a fierce battle, with the U-boat's guns blazing away at the Wellington until they were silenced by a stick of depth charges which straddled the conning tower.

But before the battle ended the Wellington had its gas tanks riddled, its hydraulics shot away, one engine gone and Bezer was slightly injured. His right cheek had been grazed by a flying splinter of perspex when tracer tore through the windshield two inches above the copilot's head.

This attack was made six days after the same aircraft attacked another submarine in the Bay of Biscay. This time, however, there was no opposition.

The crew was not able to observe the results because no trace of the U-boat could be seen after they had circled and returned to the position. Consequently, they did not claim a definite kill.

Other Canadians who have made U-boat attacks recently include PO. A. C. Wauthier, Caledonia, Ont., and WO2 J. W. Carter, London, Ont.

Note Book Little Benny's

Ma was doing the bridge problem after supper and pop was taking a nap in his private chair, and I had an idea and started to tickle the end of his nose with the end of a piece of string, and pop wrinkeled his nose in his sleep and tried to hit the piece of string with his hand and ma said, Benny, do you think that's nice?

Well anyways, ma, it's funny, I said, and ma said, He does look comical, I must admit. It just goes to prove how much our lives are influenced by imagination, she said.

Well jimminy, ma, if he really knew it was nothing but a piece of string do you mean he wouldn't mind? I said, and ma said, Well I'd hardly say that. If he knew what was really happening I think he'd mind even more, she said.

Meaning he would really know what to be mad at, and I said, Well why dont you try it, ma, it makes it seem even funnier if you do it yourself.

I'll try it just once, it's really not a good thing for him to go to sleep after his dinner anyway, it cuts into his night's rest, ma said.

And she took the string and started to try it, only pop woke up with a jump before she had a chance, saying, For Peet sake so this is what's been going on, is it? Horse blanket to blazes you're the last person in the world I'd of suspected of being a confounded practical joker, he said.

Now William I'm nothing of the kind, so please dont go leeping at unseen conclusions, ma said. I never touched you with the string. It was Benny if you must know, she said, and pop said, Who? Why, the boy isn't even in the room. Yee gods you'll be telling me it was one of the naybors next, he said.

Which by that time I was half ways up to my room, the last thing I heard being ma making pop still madder by claiming it was a bad habit to go to sleep after dinner.

HAD LOOSE COUPONS

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Donald War and Dorothy Eismer of Toronto were taken into custody by R.C.M.P. officers last night following a raid on an Isabella street address in which thousands of loose gasoline coupons, a number of liquor and beer permits and several bottles of whiskey and beer were confiscated. The two were held without bail, charged with having the gasoline coupons in their possession.

SUGGEST BUILDING 50,000 HOUSES

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— A proposal that the construction industry build 50,000 houses a year after the war as part of private enterprise's contribution to postwar reconstruction is a suggestion of the National House Builder's Association in planning for peace, it was revealed last night in a pamphlet distributed at a dinner meeting of the association's Toronto chapter.

Bedford, England — (CP) — Ringing of village school bells, banned three years ago, has been resumed in Bedfordshire.

The Marry-Go-Round

Why I Wish I Were a Blonde.

I like Joan Crawford's new blonde hair. From the few newspaper cuts I have seen of her, I think it becomes her immensely. It is just the right shade; And she was already pretty nearly a blonde.

I was born a brunette myself, and have always envied and admired blondes. In fact, I once tried to be one; but it didn't "take". I couldn't blondine my temperament.

In general (not always) brunettes are inclined to be more emotional, even more temperamental than genuine blondes, says a psychologist. That is why men fall for blondes; although I have known some blondes who could make a man run for a bomb-shelter, when they let go.

But, theoretically a blonde is easy on the nerves and soothing to the spirit. Brunettes are stimulating and exciting—but blondes are COMFORTABLE! It is not the yellow hair, but the blonde disposition, that appeals to men. Lots of men admire flashing dark eyes and midnight hair. But, if a brunette wants to be loved, she must blondine her temperament down to the roots.

Next to freedom, the things a man values most in this world, are his peace of mind, and his comfort. A man who is married to a brunette temperament can't be sure whether he'll be met with a warm kiss or a shower of tears. But a blonde is like nice May weather—just comfortably tepid, most of the time.

Most blondes are tender and cool headed; most brunettes are intense and warm-hearted. Most blondes like to pet and be petted; most brunettes want to adore and be adored. A brunette sometimes smothers a man with her devotion. But a blonde is content to "let George" do most of the romancing.

Another thing. A brunette (or a red-head) loves to dramatize things and is fond of staging a scene. She is high-strung and sensitive. But a blonde can curl up and BE STILL. As long as she is made comfortable, she prefers to shut her eyes and go on placidly purring like a pet kitten.

Some brunettes are born with a blonde temperament — and some blondes are born with a brunette temperament; but no golden-blonde ever had a red-headed temperament.

Nevertheless, it is man's primitive conviction that all blondes are angelic, which makes him always picture the angels on the Christmas cards with long golden hair. Whereas all the guileful women of history, from Cleopatra and Salome down, are supposed to have been either brunettes or red-headed.

Many, many girls are neither blonde nor very dark. If you are one of those you may be a man's ideal woman. For a man's ideal would be a girl with a brunette personality and a blonde temperament and disposition.

The most vibrant and brilliant woman in America is a blonde—Clare Boothe Luce. So is Greta Garbo. But Katharine Cornell, Ilka Chase and Dorothy Parker are brunettes. Proving that the color of your hair has nothing to do with your brains, or your talents. Still I'd like to have been born a blonde—even though I might die red-headed.

High Chiefs Hold Party After Conference At King David Hotel

Jerusalem, Dec. 2 (Delayed) — (AP)—High chiefs of the combined British and American general staffs, after drafting war plans during nearly two weeks of tense conferences at Cairo and Teheran, finally took a day off and "really had themselves a time".

The entire King David Hotel here was taken over. Choice food and liquors were brought up from Cairo and the generals and admirals who spearhead the entire war effort spent a day and night relaxing, dancing and sightseeing.

The party was pleasant and quiet, lasting until 2 a.m., said a spokesman.

SHOT FIRED THROUGH GROCERY STORE WINDOW

Hamilton, Dec. 7. (CP) —Police are searching for the person or persons who fired a shot through a window of a grocery store conducted by James B. Brown on Cheever Street Monday night, the bullet narrowly missing the proprietor's sister, Mrs. Jessie Stewart. She was showered with broken glass. Investigating officers said they believed the shot might have been fired accidentally by some young men in the vicinity of the store.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Her features were delicately formed, almost doll-like, with the exception of the nose, which was long, thin and sharp. Exquisitely gowned, completely mistress of herself, she made Dorothy feel very young indeed.

"Sit down, my dear," she smiled. "It's nice to see you".

"Thank you", said Dorothy nervously.

"You take sugar and cream, I think? Lucky girl. I dare not touch either. I envy you young things who don't have to worry about your figures. White bread or brown?"

"Neither, thank you. I'm not hungry".

"Oh, but you must eat something. Some of these little cakes? I assure you they are delicious. I'd simply wolf them myself if I dared".

"No really".

"A cigarette, then?" Mrs. Fleming opened a silver box and extended it to Dorothy.

"No thanks".

"I think I shall." Mrs. Fleming tapped a cigarette in a lacquered fingernail and lit it at the tapering flame of an enamelled lighter. "I seem to live on cigarettes and tea".

They regarded each other over the teacups. Dorothy began to feel limp and weak. How could she hope to be a match for this keen, calm matron?

"Oh, by the way", said Mrs. Fleming, as casually as though the matter had only that instant occurred to her. "I have a message for you from Edward. He asked me to say goodbye to you for him and make his apologies for not saying it in person. He wanted to come and see you before you went, but the poor boy was in such a rush that he had hardly time to say goodbye to me".

"Goodbye!", echoed Dorothy white to the lips. "I—I don't understand".

"No, you'd hardly have heard, would you? It was all so sudden. You see, Mr. Fleming's firm is carrying through some delicate negotiations in Washington on behalf of a Bradbury manufacturer and, since Edward joined the firm recently, his father thought it would be good experience for him to assist in the negotiations".

"Oh!" Crushed and subdued, that murmured "Oh!"

"He left right after lunch and is on his way to Washington now".

"It's terribly sudden".

"Sudden? Well yes".

"How long will he be gone?"

"I really don't know, my dear. Six months or a year at least, perhaps more. There is a possibility that when he leaves Washington he will go into the office of a New York law firm for a few years, for the sake of experience".

"I see".

Mrs. Fleming leaned forward and placed a cool hand on the girl's arm.

"I know it must be a shock to you, my dear, to find that your childhood playmate has grown up and gone away, but none of us stay children forever, you know, and men have work in the world to do. I shall always be grateful to you and your family for taking him into your home as a child and making him one of you. I know he regards you all almost as brothers and sisters. An only child can be very lonely, and you have done more for him than I can say—but he is not a child any longer and his world has grown far beyond the limits of this little village".

"Why do you emphasize the word 'child'?" asked Dorothy unsteadily. "Ted is twenty-five and I am twenty-three. Neither of us have been children for quite a long time".

Before replying, Mrs. Fleming took time to pour fresh tea.

"You are both very young and inexperienced", she said at last. "Charmingly young and inexperienced. You are a nice girl and Edward is a nice boy. You are fond of each other. If you have imagined that your feelings were deeper, that is not surprising. You have spent a great deal of time in each other's company and it is only natural that love should enter into the relationship. But young love is calf love and, although calf love is very charming and delightful, it seldom endures. I expect you will both fall in and out of love many times before either of you chooses a permanent mate. That is half the charm of youth: the inconsequence with which it passes from one love affair to another like a butterfly flitting from flower to flower".

With heavy heart, Dorothy put a hand inside the neck of her dress and drew up a thin gold chain. She detached from it a gold seal ring which she placed on the table.

"Ted gave me this", she said, dryly, lifelessly. "He asked me to keep it until he could replace it with a proper engagement ring. Will you please give it back to him"?

"Don't think too harshly of me, my dear. Edward is my only child and his well-being is very dear to me. Please don't misunderstand me: I have nothing against you personally. You are a sweet girl; the kind of girl, indeed, I have always hoped Edward would marry. But don't you see—"

"Yes", said Dorothy, "I see. Yesterday my aunt was murdered in my father's house and today the papers are full of it. Today I'm one of a notorious family. You don't care about my feelings as long as your son is freed from what I suppose you'd call an entanglement".

"I am his mother. My son must come first with me. This is a matter that concerns his whole future".

"And mine", murmured Dorothy, with a sob in her voice.

"I know, my dear; and, believe me, I am sorry for you. I am afraid you are in for a terrible time. There will be a great deal of mud thrown and some if it is bound to stick. Life will be made unbearable for you. I have an idea. An old friend of mine winters every year in Florida and she writes me that she's looking for a companion for her daughter, who is a little younger than you. I'm sure if I suggested it, she'd be only too glad to take you. You would be away from all the unpleasantness which is sure to surround your family. Down there, with my friend, no one would dream of connecting you with this terrible affair."

"You are very kind", said Dorothy; "but —no, thanks. Just now you said that it was your duty to think of your son. It is equally my duty to think of my family. At a time of trouble my place is with them".

"I feel quite sure your mother would rather you were out of it all".

"I know she would. But that is not the point. If my father and mother, my brother and sisters, are to suffer, I shall suffer with them".

In the stress of her emotion, Dorothy forgot the sensation-seeking pack outside her home. Her eyes misty with tears, she came out of the Flemings' gate, turned right along the road, and ran straight into it. She almost had to fight her way through the surging mob which shoved and scrambled for a glimpse of her.

"Look! There she is".

"That's the oldest girl".

"It was her scarf the murder was done with—"

"Look! She's crying!"

Blinded by tears, Dorothy stumbled into the house. She went into the dining room, collapsing on an old leather couch in a corner. There Ann and Michael found her, quivering with pain, torn from head to foot by great shuddering sobs.

"Dorothy!" cried Ann, panic-stricken. "Dorothy, darling!"

"What is it?" grasped Michael. "The crowd outside, I suppose? Gee, I'd like to shoot 'em all!"

"It isn't only them", wept Dorothy. "It's Ted as well".

"Ted"? frowned Michael. "What's he done?"

"He's gone away".

"The worm!" declared Ann, with vitriol in her tone.

"Don't say that. It isn't true".

"Only a worm would wriggle away at a time like this".

"His parents made him".

"The snobs!" cried Ann.

"No, they're not snobs", said Dorothy, more calmly. "They aren't deliberately doing this to hurt me. It's only that they've got to think of their son; he comes first".

"If Ted were half a man he'd have told them to go to blazes", growled Michael. "Ditching you because they're afraid of the scandal! Oh, it's all so unfair. It isn't as though you'd done anything. It isn't as though any of us had done anything".

"Isn't it" asked Ann quietly.

They stared at her.

"What do you mean?"

"You don't think an outsider killed Aunt Octavia, do you?" Ann asked coolly.

"Ann, how can you talk like that!"

"Use your heads, my children. No one had an opportunity of killing her except us Osbornes, Hannah Gale and Miss Mimms. You don't think Mimms would kill her and throw away five thousand a year for life, do you—even if she had the nerve, which she hasn't? That leaves us Osbornes— and Hannah, and she's one of the family.

"The police are playing a game of 'Who's Got the Button?' with us. They know one of us did it and they're going to move heaven and earth to find out which. Are we going to help them? I wonder—"

"But, Ann—" interrupted Dorothy.

"It's a question of someone's life" continued Ann. "The life of one of us. Father, Mother, Marjory, Peter, Hannah; you, Dorothy; you, Michael —and me. Do we care which of us did it? Do we? Are we going to help hang the guilty one?"

"Lord, no!" shuddered Michael. "very well, then; what should we say or do?"

"Ann!" gasped Dorothy suddenly. "It wasn't— You didn't—"

"That", said Ann very earnestly, "is a question none of us must ask of another".

Monday morning.

A bell clanged in the grim old room of county police headquarters situated in a town eight miles from Lakelawn and roughly the same distance from Bradbury. It sounded again.

"Two rings", said Sergeant Feathers, looking up from his desk. "That's you, Inspector".

"I've got ears, my boy".

Inspector Burrows rose ponderously and left the room. He plodded along a whitewashed passage and pushed open a door.

The Sheriff's room was more like a study than an office. The floor was covered by a fawn carpet, tailored to fit snugly the angles and eccentricities of the base-boards. Beneath the window lay a magnificent Alsatian dog which pricked its ears, half rose, and growled softly at the Inspector's entrance. Sheriff Black spoke to it sharply and it lay down again, stretching full-length, its black eyes fixed unblinkingly on Inspector Burrows' face. Round the walls, which were papered in dark green, hung a collection of sporting prints; and in a corner stood a cigar cabinet. In the centre of the room stood a walnut desk, on which a morning newspaper was spread out. Inspector Burrows flinched slightly as his eyes lighted on it.

"Mornin', Burrows", said Sheriff Black coldly. He was standing straddle-legged beside the desk.

"Good mornin', Sheriff".

"Seen the papers?"

"One or two of 'em."

"Well?"

"Well"—the Inspector shifted uncomfortably—"they seem to agree pretty well with my——with our theory".

"And what is our theory?"

"Well, Sheriff, we know almost to a certainty that one of the family committed the murder".

"We know that one of the family committed the crime, do we? And how do you suppose the papers came to know as much as we do?" asked Sheriff Black.

"I told them," replied Burrows, squaring his shoulders.

"Took them completely into your confidence, didn't you? What was the idea of that? Why didn't you consult me first?" pressed the Sheriff.

"The idea didn't occur to me while I was in your company."

"Laying our whole hand on the table for the benefit of everybody isn't our customary policy."

"Maybe not. But this case is different. We've got to pick our man—or woman—out of a field of seven or eight and the only way to do it is to scare 'em all, in the hope that the guilty one will make some move that will give him away."

"And supposing the murderer lies low and says nothing?"

"In that event, I'm afraid the case will never be settled. We can't put eight people on trial and we can't choose one by lot. There's another advantage to giving full publicity to all the known facts of the case. It stimulates gossip and when folks gossip, things often crop out. It told you yesterday what I got from that ol' gal with the spy-glass."

"Then you want to go on feeding these sensational stories to the press?"

"Sure I do. And they'll get more and more sensational when I get into stride."

"I don't like it, Inspector. It's pretty tough on the innocent members of that family. Still, I suppose you know what you're doing. What luck with the fingerprints?"

"We found ten different sets in the room and checked them with those we had taken from the family and the servant. Nine of them agreed with those of the parents, the five children, Miss Mimms and Hannah Gale. The tenth, which was taken from the frame of the French windows, were those of an outsider."

"Ah!" said Sheriff Black.

"I had a hunch about the tenth set, so I had Sergeant Feathers call at a certain house in the village and take fingerprints from the handle of a tennis racquet which he found there. The racquet belongs to Mr. Edward Fleming —and the prints on it matched the tenth set!"

"They did?"

"Sure! What's more, Feathers has been making a study of fingerprints, and he assures me that those on the frame of the French windows had been made not later than the afternoon of the murder."

"Fleming was seen in the garden about three o'clock . . . Have you interviewed him?"

"I called at his house twice yesterday but he wasn't at home. On my second visit I left a summons for him to attend the inquest this morning. We have made another important fingerprint discovery. A thumbprint on the scorched draft of the will is that of Hannah Gale."

"Then Hannah was the one who attempted to burn it? Have you talked to her about this?"

"No. I thought it better to spring it on her at the inquest."

"Psychological effect?"

"Something like that."

Inspector Burrows coughed and glanced at the sheriff.

"Got anything you want to tell the coroner privately before the inquest starts?"

"I don't think so. Why?"

"I'd suggest giving him his head. When he gets going, Doctor Heffers can be a regular terror. He may worry something out of the Osbornes if he goes the limit."

"Poor devil, he'll tear 'em to pieces! Well, better him than me."

All Lakelawn and most of the surrounding district turned out for the inquest on Octavia Osborne. It was the greatest free show in years and nobody wanted to miss it. Loungers forsook their street corners; tradesmen left their shops in charge of grumbling assistants; schoolboys played hookey; housewives stacked their unwashed breakfast dishes in their kitchen sinks, took their little ones by the hand, and went to see the fun.

An hour before the inquest was to begin, the coroner's court was packed to suffocation and the overflow—several thousand strong —jammed the street outside from end to end, surging to and fro like an ocean gone mad.

It was every man for himself. A murmur arose: "There they are! Look! That's Stephen Osborne, that tall man trying to push his way to the door. That's his wife, close behind." And the rabble pressed forward like sheep, thrusting and shoving for a glimpse of the relatives suspected of having strangled their own kin for her money. In the crazy scramble several women fainted.

"I couldn't see 'em!" wailed a voice. "Did you see 'em, Nellie? What did they look like?" "Twain't them. They ain't showed up yet". "Late, ain't them?" "Maybe they beat it." "I don't blame them if they have. I'd beat it, too, if the cops were after me for murder!"

Shortly after ten, word that the Osbornes had been smuggled into court by a back door spread thru' the crowd and many angry voices were raised in disgruntled protests. It was, they all agreed, a dirty trick. "After us waiting all this time."

• •

The coroner, Dr. Nicholas Heffers, was a twisted little man with a curved back and hunched shoulders, which, together with his bald head and hooked nose, gave him a remarkable resemblance to an old parrot. Inspector Burrows had warned him that the majority of the witnesses were likely to be stubborn; and he was ready for them. It was his boast that he could take the starch out of the most stubborn witness in two minutes flat.

Why VICKS VapoRub Is So Good
For Relieving Miseries of Childrens Colds

More than two generations ago—in grandmother's day—mothers first discovered Vicks VapoRub. Today it is the most widely used home-remedy for relieving miseries of children's colds. And here is the reason . . .

The moment you rub VapoRub on the throat, chest and back at bedtime it starts to work two ways at once—and keeps on working for hours—to ease coughing spasms, help clear congestion in cold-clogged upper breathing passages, relieve muscular soreness or tightness. It promotes restful sleep. Often most of the misery of the cold is gone by morning! That's why VapoRub is so good to use when colds strike. Try it!

Women's Aux. Of R.C.A.F. Holds Annual Meeting

Trenton —(Special)— The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the R.C.A.F. was held in the work rooms on King St. on Monday afternoon and a resume of the year's work given by the various committees in charge, as well as the financial report read.

An election of officers for the ensuing year was held with the retiring president, Mrs. Stephenson, in the chair. The following were elected to office: Honorary President, Mrs. Bell-Irving; President, Mrs. Weese; 1st Vice President, Mrs. Mackell; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. Wilcocks; Secretary, Mrs. Holden; Treasurer, Mrs. MacDonald.

Mrs. W. Staveley was re-elected convener of the Dance Committee; Mrs. W. E. Baker re-elected convener of the Hospital Work Committee; Mrs. Bartlett re-elected to Red Cross Committee, and Mrs. Pafford elected to Rooms Committee. Others elected as conveners were Mrs. Mills to Hospital Visiting, Mrs. Shelley to Magazine, Mrs. Lowenstein to Social, Mrs. Hinton to Social Welfare, and Mrs. Grossmith to Welcoming and Membership.

Mrs. Bell-Irving, wife of the recently arrived Commanding Officer, was introduced by Mrs. Stephenson who welcomed her to the Auxiliary.

The regret of the Auxiliary was extended to Mrs. Stephenson on her leaving Trenton and the ladies tendered her a vote of thanks for her untiring efforts on behalf of the Auxiliary during her term of president.

Mrs. Baker, Convener of Hospital, read her report showing work done during the year: 36 gowns mended, 66 sheets mended, 115 rolls gauze cut and rolled into bandages, 121 towels mended, 9 doz. flannelette bandages made, 2 doz. small operating sheets made, 7 special operating sheets made, 8 doz. T. binders, 8 doz. Mayo binders, 6 doz. straight binders, 178 face cloths, 5 laundry bags, 12 doz. glove cases, 2 doz. bed pan covers, 8 doz. wrappers, 15 bags, 12 special slings, 2 doz. squared bandages, 1 doz. hot water bottle covers, 12 basket arm slings, and 53 squares made.

In addition various articles of clothing were mended.

Mrs. Bartlett, convener of Red Cross work, showed 12 pairs of 8-year-old panties, 2 8-year-old dresses, 2 14-year-old skirts, 19 men's vests, 31 pairs men's shorts and 34 6-year-old blouses were made for Greek relief as well as 4 4-year-old suits and 3 4-year-old sweaters knitted.

Mrs. Staveley, convener of dances, reported 19 dances had been held at the station during the year with an average attendance of 275 men and 175 girls.

Following the financial report it was announced $110 was the gross proceeds of the last rummage sale.

It was decided by the Auxiliary to hold a Christmas party for the hospital at the main station with gifts for each patient. $50 was voted for that purpose.

$100 was also voted to the Airmen's Mess for their Christmas celebration and $50 set aside for Social Welfare when it might be needed.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. O. G. Alyea for a ton of coal donated to the Auxiliary and to Mrs. Pafford for the gift of a stove for the work rooms.

Melrose

The Victory Supper and Country Fair, sponsored by the Melrose W.I. and held in the church hall on Friday evening, was a decided success, the proceeds of which will go a long way toward defraying the expenses of the Christmas boxes sent to the local boys overseas.

Mr. Russell Macfarlane has returned from Toronto, where he attended the funeral of his niece, Mrs. Frances Huffman Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton English have been visiting Mr. George English.

Misses Marion English and Ferne Snider who are attending school in Napanee, spent the weekend at their homes in Melrose.

Misses Mildred Hunt and Jean McLaren, who are attending O.B.C. in Belleville, spent the weekend in Melrose, the former at the home of her sister, Mrs. Don McLaren, the latter at the home of her parents.

Rev. and Mrs. Lougheed attended the annual meeting of the W.M.S. held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Badgley and spent the tea hour with them.

Visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Macfarlane on Sunday last were Mr. and Mrs. A. Newton of Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. John Beatty and Miss Frances Macfarlane and several friends from Belleville.

Mr. Edwin Snider who has been spending some time in Toronto, has returned home.

Melrose school was closed for the past week owing to illness of their teacher, Miss Jessie Whiteman.

Friends will be glad to hear Miss Helen McAvoy who has been confined to her bed with mumps, is on the road to recovery.

The people of the community gathered at the home of Mr. John Weese on Tuesday evening last and presented Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hubble (nee Lillie Weese) with a miscellaneous shower.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Horrigan had dinner on Sunday last with Mr. and Mrs. Don McLaren.

The following young people spent the weekend at their respective homes in Melrose, Misses Marjorie McMechan, Keitha Weese, Jean and Marie Badgley, Messrs. Kenneth McMechan, —Jack Mcfarlane, Eugene Pascoe and Morley Pascoe.

The Misses McLaren spent Sunday tea hour with Mr. and Mrs. G. McLaren. Mr. and Mrs. George Badgley were also their guests.

Mr. Lougheed had dinner on Sunday last at the Hines home.

HOW TO RELIEVE
PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money

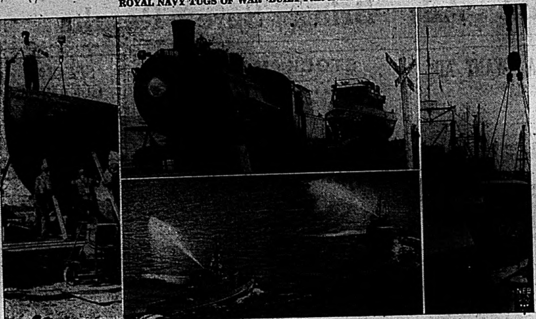
ROYAL NAVY TUGS OF WAR BUILT FAR INLAND IN CANADA



War has brought many startling changes to Canada but none more amazing than the construction of salt water tug boats at Trenton, Ontario, far inland from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The Central Bridge Construction Company's 200 employees in Trenton turn out an average of one tug a week for the Royal Navy. Left, a tug under construction. Top centre, a completed tug is hauled away from the Trenton yards by a locomotive. Bottom centre, these tugs can double as fire fighters if necessary. Right, at an east coast port, one of the Trenton tugs is loaded onto a freighter for shipment to Britain. — (National Film Board Photos).

C. H. ROOKE

H. L. CAMPBELL

The Canada Life Assurance Company announces the appointment of H. L. Campbell as associate manager of its Kingston branch. This appointment has been made necessary by reason of the enlargement of the branch territory, which now embraces the major part of Eastern Ontario, from Trenton to the Quebec border, including Lanark County.

Mr. Campbell will assist C. H. Rooke, Kingston branch manager, with the duties resulting from the enlarged territory, from his headquarters in Brockville. Mr. Rooke's headquarters will continue to be in Kingston.

The Canada Life's district representative in Belleville is Ralph B. Morden.

Australian Letter

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 7.—(CP Cable)—Australians are naving a good laugh about a federal government department and its Christmas war bond advertising campaign.

Regulations last year forbade publication of normal shop advertisements referring to effects to Christmas, New Year and Easter gifts. Now a series of government loan department advertisements, prepared for "Christmas Savings Campaign" and advocating giving loan bonds or loan savings stamps instead of Christmas gifts has been withdrawn. A substitute will be issued.

The Sydney Morning Herald said they were recalled "because they contained a portrait of Santa Claus as an opponent of thrift and the war effort".

The Sydney Sun said "the hurried withdrawal of the advertisements is the final touch of absurdity in the Father Christmas embargo. Instead of making the time-honored Saint work for us he is being frantically pushed behind the bars of a concentration camp".

Wartime shortages will interfere with Christmas. It is impossible to buy currants and raisins in this country, an exporter of dried fruits, for Christmas puddings and pies which are normal fare even if Christmas occurs in the midsummer here. Poultrymen say it will be almost impossible to obtain fowl for civilians although army camps will have it. Even Christmas cheer will be scarce, although Australia makes large quantities of beer and spirits.

These shortages are due to lack of manpower for production and transport. The press points out, however, how much better off Australians are than the people in tightly-rationed Britain.

The coal situation also is difficult as a result of stoppages at individual mines. Householders have been asked to cut consumption of gas and electricity by one-fifth and railway services have been reduced

Canada to Wipe Out Venereal Plague

Greatest Single Public Health Problem in Canada

By DARCY O'CONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 7. (CP)—Pensions Minister Mackenzie said Monday at the opening meeting of a four-day international conference on venereal diseases that Canada is determined to wipe out the plague of gonorrhoea and syphilis.

"Gonorrhoea and syphilis present the greatest single public health problem in the country. . .and war must be waged on them", said the Minister.

Mr. Mackenzie was kept from the conference by illness and his address was read by Dr. R. E. Wodehouse, Deputy Pensions Minister.

Air Minister Power and Navy Minister Macdonald pledged the support of the armed services in the fight against the diseases; and Assistant Surgeon-General J. R. Heller of the American Public Health Service told of venereal disease control in the United States.

Mr. Mackenzie expressed hope the conference, attended by representatives of the United Kingdom, United States, Australia and Canada, will lay the basis "for an all-out attack".

6 Specific Objectives.

Physicians and Public Health Administrators should nave six specific objectives, said the Minister:—

1.—Wholesome, dignified health education concerning gonorrhoea and syphilis;

2.—Adequate diagnostic and treatment facilities for all persons suffering from venereal disease;

3.—Early adequate prenatal care, including blood tests for expectant mothers to remove once and for all the tragedy of congenital syphilis;

4.—The suppression of quackery and charlatanry in the treatment of the venereal diseases;

5.—General health examinations, including blood tests for syphilis, before marriage;

6.—Effective measures to deal with persons and community conditions associated with the deliberate spreading of venereal disease.

Air Minister Power said venereal diseases cause the loss of more time in the armed forces than any other kind.

"The fact that this meeting is possible shows that the Department of Pensions and Health and others realize that the plague must be combatted", said Maj. Power.

Group of Deposed German Officers Makes Peace Move

London, Dec. 7—(AP)—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Zurich quoted "reliable circles" in Berne today as saying that a group of deposed German army officers of high rank had recently made peace overtures to the Allies.

The officers, it was said, were acting in close collaboration with a number of leading German industrialists.

The dispatch recalled other recent reports from various sources, including London, that certain elements within Germany — convinced that defeat is inevitable—had made tentative approaches to the Allies with the hope of obtaining less drastic peace terms than might be expected later. Such reports never have been confirmed.

Premier Stalin Back in Moscow

Moscow, Dec. 7 (AP)—Premier Stalin was safely back in Moscow from the Heheran three-power conference today after a hazardous round trip of 1,700 miles during which his plane braved snow and zero temperatures.

The agreement on concerted action was viewed here as the most important result of the historic parley, since, from the Soviet viewpoint, it stilled the biggest question of the war—the 'second front," or invasion of Europe from the west.

The Churchill-Roosevelt Stalin communique was broadcast yesterday by the Moscow radio. Crowds standing in the snow-covered streets and squares listened to the public loudspeakers without cheering, but with evident relief.

Must Increase Tempo Of War on Japan

Canberra, Dec. 7. (CP)— The fanatical fighting of the Japanese soldier lends credence to the theory that Japan is prepared to sacrifice 5,000,000 men in a war of attrition against the democracies, Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia declared Monday.

In a war review statement calling for greater attention to the Pacific front, he noted one estimate which placed five years as the period Japan would need to become the world's most powerful military nation if allowed to develop its vast resources and slave labor.

"That is why the offensive against Japan must not only be maintanied but increased in tempo", he added.

HELP SHORTAGE IN SOCIAL WORK FIELD

Ottawa, Dec. 7. (CP)—Serious shortages of trained personnel in the social work field were reported here Monday at a Dominion-wide conference on Social Service problems.

Representatives of the Federal Pensions Department, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., Provincial Social Agencies and the Canadian Welfare Council reported need for five times the present number of workers in some regions.

PATIENCE, PLEASE . . .

Under new regulations issued by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, a greater supply of beer for home consumption is being made available.

Due to the necessity of each brewer having to restrict sales to 90% of the year ending October 31st, 1942, under the Dominion Wartime Alcoholic Beverages Order, we must maintain daily quotas. During the month of December the breweries selling in Ontario will attempt to supply, through Brewers' Retail Stores, a case of beer to each holder of a beer ration coupon book.

In view of the obvious difficulties with which the Industry is faced, it hopes that consumers will understand if supplies are not immediately available to fill all demands each day.

Three-Day Parley At Cairo Carries Possibilities of Vast Importance

FORESHADOWINGS

By JOHN F. CHESTER

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Dec. 8 —(AP)—The three-day conference which Prime Minister Churchill, President Ismet Inonu, and President Roosevelt concluded Monday was viewed here today as foreshadowing events of far reaching significance in the Middle East and Mediterranean areas.

Conclusion of the parley was announced last night in a communique which stated that the three government chiefs had studied the general political situation, "examined at length the policy to be followed" and found that their nations are bound "by the closest unity." The conference was held in Cairo Dec. 4, 5 and 6.

The somewhat vague declarations of friendship and "closest unity" were desired by the Turks, it was understood, but the fact that the statement went this far was regarded as highly significant.

Possibilities Seen.

Behind it lay possibilities ranging from complete abandonment of Turkish neutrality to cession of air or other bases or less active help.

The best guess in Cairo — and it was a guess based on some supporting information — was that Turkey would not actively enter the war in the near future, unless a direct cause was given by Germany.

Few here believed that the three days of conferences — at least one of which was attended by the British - American general staffs— were an empty-handed gesture or that the three government heads did not have something definite in mind in placing the following words in the communique:

"The study of all our problems in a spirit of understanding and loyalty showed that the closest unity existed between the United States of America, Turkey and Great Britain in their attitude toward the world situation. The conversations in Cairo have consequently been most useful and most fruitful for future relations between the four countries concerned."

Russian and Turkish Friendship

The Soviet Ambassador to Turkey, Sergei A. Vinogradov, joined most of the sessions, but, while the communique asserted that the "traditional relations of friendship" between the Turks and the Russians were reaffirmed there was no mention of Russia in that part of the communique which declared the existence of "closest unity."

Among the significant events of the conference were two last-minute meetings of Inonu and Turkish Foreign Secretary Numan Menemencioglu with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and the British Ambassador to Ankara, Hughe Knatchbull-Hugesson.

These sessions apparently drew Inonu in on the same subjects discussed by Eden and Menemencioglu in Cairo when the foreign secretary was returning from the October tripartite conference in Moscow. There was wide speculation at that time that possible cession of Turkish bases to Britain on roughly the same basis as use of the Azores was acquired from Portugal had been under discussion.

Speculation

The prevailing opinion on the just-concluded conference seems to be that although immediate developments will not necessarily follow, Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt would hardly have invited Inonu to Cairo unless they had something definite in mind. And the Turkish president would not have accepted unless he had something to ask and give.

Informed Observers Believe Turkey Will Enter War When Help Needed Most

MAY GIVE BASES

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER AND WILLIAM FRYE

Associated Press Staff Writers

Washington, Dec. 8—(AP)—Deeds, rather than words, are expected by informed observers here to bring out the full significance of Turkey's newly defined role as an associate of the Allies fighting Germany.

The impression gained from the latest Cairo communique is strong, that this role is to be one of great importance. At the strategic moment when help will count most Turkey probably will enter the war.

Whether that moment is close at hand or in the indefinite future is a question that can be answered only by Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt, President Ismet Inonu of Turkey or their ranking advisers and Russian associates.

That her destiny eventually will lead Turkey into military partnership with the Allies is regarded as probable for two reasons — her strategic position in relation to the Balkans and her desire for a full voice in the peace councils.

The machinery for action is present in the Anglo-Turkish alliance, and the significance of the Cairo meeting, announced last night, may lie in the reaffirmation of this alliance by the Turkish government not only to Britain but to America and Russia as well.

Broadly speaking there are three main avenues of military approach to Germany: (1) Across the English Channel and through Belgium and Northern France; (2) Across the Adriatic and through Northern Yugoslavia; (3) Through the Aegean Sea and the Balkans.

French Army Units Ready for Action

By JOSEPH DYNAN

Somewhere in North Africa, Dec. 4.—(Delayed.) (AP) —Units of the reborn and re-equipped French army may soon help to claw a hole in the underbelly of Hitler's fortress Europe.

Members of the French expeditionary force, who have been training for weeks on the edge of the desert hope they will have a chance to shove back the Nazis and clear a pathway into their homeland.

This fight, a struggle on more or less equal terms, is what most of them have been awaiting for more than three years.

"Just give us a chance of equal terms", a young Poilu said.

For him, as with most of his comrades, it's been a long time since he last saw home. He was in service in 1939 and was shipped to North Africa after the armistice. He hailed the landings of the allies in 1942 and almost happily went back into war, fighting doggedly and well against the Germans with antiquated rifles and horse-drawn field guns.

Since then he has been receiving large quantities of uniforms, guns, transport and machinery from the Allies.

RUSSIANS FORCED TO RETIRE FROM SEVERAL TOWNS

Troops, However, Score Important Gains in Area Southwest of Kremenchug

FIERCE TANK BATTLES

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Dec. 8 — (AP) — One of the most desperate German tank and infantry assaults launched during the seven-weeks' battle for the Kiev Bulge has forced the Red Army to retire from several towns in the Chernyakhov—Zorosten area, but Soviet troops have scored important gains southwest of Kremenchug and almost completely enveloped Znamenka, vital rail junction in the Dnieper Bend, a Russian communique said today.

Russian advices said that approximately 1,700 tanks had been hurled into a narrow sector west of Kiev by Field Marshal Fritz Von Mannstein.

The Nazi gains in the Kiev Bulge, however, were offset by Russian gains to the south. Here three Red Army columns were driving on Znamenka from separate directions and one already was within four miles of the town's gates, the communique indicated. Fall of this strategic rail junction, which front dispatches said was apparently inevitable, would tend to disrupt the whole German communications and supply system in the vast area below Kiev, and would undoubtedly help to relieve enemy pressure on the Kiev salient.

Sixteen German strongholds fell before the Soviet advance below Kremenchug, the communique reported. One of them was the railroad station of Pantayevka, 10 miles southeast of Znamenka, marking a 12-mile gain along the railroad from Alexandriya.

16 Strongholds Fall

With the battle for Znamenka reaching a decision, front dispatches pointed out that the Soviet armies under Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky now were less than 140 miles from the Odessa-Lwow railway to the west, key to all German communications in the Ukraine. Krivoi Rog, enemy-held Manganese centre southeast of Znamenka, loomed as an early objective on the Red Army schedule.

Adverse weather in White Russia, where Soviet advance columns are converging on the rail centres of Zhlobin and Rogachev, northwest of Gomel, has temporarily prevented them from taking advantage of the favorable conditions created in this and other sectors by recent Russian successes.

The Germans piled up a considerable superiority in tanks west of Kiev. Front dispatches said the Russians were battling against great odds but holding on. Russian artillery was striking the heaviest blows at the onrushing foe. The Soviet 152-millimetre mobile guns were said to be taking a deadly toll of German tanks.

BRITISH DESTROYER LOST

London, Dec. 8 —(CP)— The Admiralty announced the loss of the destroyer Dulverton, commanded by Cmdr. S. A. Buss.

No details were issued. The Dulverton was a new destroyer built under the war program, and her size, armament and number of crew have not been made public.

U. S. Bombers' Blows at Andamans Part of Continuing Attack on S. Burma

New Delhi, Dec. 8—(CP)— U. S. heavy bombers have made a raid on the strategically-important Andaman islands in the Bay of Bengal as part of continuing day and night Allied air attacks on Southern Burma, it was announced today.

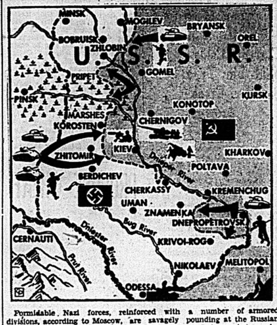
Four-engined bombers pounded Japanese installations on Chatham in the Andaman group on Monday, a communique from the Southeast Asia headquarters of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten said, and during the attack shot down one of a group of enemy fighters which attempted to intercept them.

The Andaman islands, British owned, lie off the lower tip of Burma where they would of necessity figure in any Allied offensive plans against the Malay peninsula or Sumatra. They are the westernmost points occupied by Japan in the Indian Ocean.

The communique, covering action for the last eight days, told of repeated raids by both the R. A. F. and U. S. planes on Rangoon, Mandalay, Akyab, Prome, Heho and other Japanese strongholds in Burma. Targets were mainly road, rail and river communications and airports.

Twelve Allied planes are missing and 18 of the Japanese have been knocked down.

CRITICAL BATTLE RAGES FOR KIEV



Formidable Nazi forces, reinforced with a number of armored divisions, according to Moscow, are savagely pounding at the Russian line in the Kiev sector. To the north, Red Gen. Rokossovsky's armies are driving in on Zhlobin in a two-pronged offensive, while his most southerly units are moving closer to Mozyr. West and south of Dnepropetrovsk Soviet tank forces have cut the railway between the important junctions of Smela and Znamenka inside the Dnieper river bend in a swift lunge which overran 22 towns and rail stations.

RABAUL BECOMES TOO HOT FOR JAPS TO HANDLE

Naval Traffic Shows Noticeable Drop and Nearly Untenable

JAPS' BEST BASE

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Dec. 8 — (AP) — A slackening in naval activity observed at Rabaul lent emphasis today to the official assertion that the Japanese are finding their once-proud New Britain island air and sea base too hot to handle.

While Allied bombers poured loads of explosives on the invasion-threatened island with incessant fury, a spokesman for Allied headquarters said aerial observation had shown a noticeable drop in naval traffic at Rabaul.

This tied in with the recent declaration of Rear Admiral Robert Carney, Chief-of-Staff for Admiral William F. Halsey, the United States South Pacific fleet commander, that Rabaul, on the northeast coast of the island, is untenable to the Japanese and "we have complete control in the waters."

Rabaul, with its excellent deep-water harbor and six airdromes, is Japan's best base south of Truk, which is in the Caroline Islands 800 miles away. Pounded repeatedly by bombers, its neutralization would constitute a major victory.

On New Guinea itself the sharp ground fighting for Wareo on the Huon Peninsula remained static as to position but Allied bombers raked enemy concentrations.

Eight large enemy rafts loaded with supplies were destroyed by light naval craft in New Guinea coastal waters, and a cargo ship loaded with fuel was hit and seen to explode off Kaimana, Dutch New Guinea.

Russian Officers Visit Camp Borden

Camp Borden, Ont., Dec. 8.—(CP)—Three officials of the Russian Legation in Ottawa who took part in fighting in Russia visited Camp Borden yesterday to inspect training facilities at Canada's largest military camp.

Col. Nikolai Zabotin, military attache, and two aides saw a battle scheme in which infantrymen captured a village. Col. Zabotin fired Sten and Bren guns at the ranges.

Lt.-Col. Motinov (initials unavailable), assistant military attache, remarked on the similarity of the Camp Borden terrain to that around Orel. He commanded an infantry group at Stalingrad. Third member of the party was Lt.-Col. Timchenko, tank expert.

PROPOSE WHEAT ACREAGE IN 1944 ON PAR WITH 1943

Agriculture Conference in Ottawa Sets Acreage for Other Crops

CUT FLAXSEED

Ottawa, Dec. 8 —(CP)— A. M. Shaw of the Federal Agricultural Department, announced today at the Dominion-Provincial agriculture conference that it has been decided to recommend that the Canadian wheat acreage in 1944 be kept at the same level as in 1943. The 1943 acreage was 17,488,000.

An increase of four per cent in 1944 oats acreage from 1943 had been suggested, but the conference had agreed to make the increase six per cent, Mr. Shaw said. Last year's oats acreage was 15,407,000.

The preliminary suggestion placed before the conference was that barley be left at the 8,397,000 acres of 1943, but the conference had agreed to a one-per cent increase for 1944.

Mr. Shaw said corn for husking was urgently needed and an increase of 56 per cent in the 1943 acreage of 257,000 acres had been suggested but the conference had felt an increase of 53 per cent was all that could be assured.

It was agreed hay and clover acreage should be held at the 1943 level — 9,815,000.

The alfalfa acreage of 1,544,000 also was unchanged.

Mr. Shaw said 95 per cent of 1943 acreage in flaxseed had been suggested but conference delegates had indicated only 64 per cent could be assured. This indicated there might be a decline of 1,000,000 acres in the area set aside for this crop.

Largest Production Desired

The estimate of production hoped for would have to be revised down in light of what delegates had said, but the largest possible production was desired.

The Federal government might have to take action to encourage output.

The conference had been asked to approve an increase of 78 per cent in soybean production but it appeared delegates thought no more than a nine-per-cent increase could be attained, said Mr. Shaw.

Seed supplies were such that rapeseed acreage in 1944 should reach 10,000 acres as desired, and sunflower seed should reach 50,000 acres, said Mr. Shaw.

In dried beans, an increase of 76 per cent had been sought but only a 10-per-cent rise was considered possible by delegates.

Beans, urgently needed, could be grown in provinces other than Ontario, and Mr. Shaw said every ef-

CHINESE LOSS OF CHANGTEH ECONOMIC BLOW

Victory Gives Japs Control of Rice Bowl One of Main Sources Of Army Supply

BOTH SIDES SUFFER

Chungking, Dec. 8. (AP)—Fall of the ancient city of Changteh after bitter fighting in which both sides by the Chinese High Command suffered heavy losses was announced by the Chinese High Command yesterday, and it was acknowledged here today that the setback represented a severe economic and military blow to China.

Loss of the city opened the prospect of a new Japanese drive on Changsha, capital of Hunan province, which the invaders thrice before have tried unsuccessfully to take. At the same time the victory gave the Japanese control of the "Rice Bowl" region and cut the Hunan-Szechwan supply line, thus depriving the Chinese army of one of its principal sources of supply.

The Chinese communique announcing the fall of the Changteh said that little more than 300 men of the Chinese 57th Division had survived the bloody battle, which ended December 3.

The Chinese High Command estimated Japanese losses up to December 2, at 10,200 killed and wounded.

Things Shaping For Victory But Great War Ahead

Cairo, Dec. 8 — (AP) — Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, told a press conference today that "things are shaping for victory but a great war is still in front of us."

"I find everywhere the feeling that things are on the march," the Prime Minister said. "I sensed it in England. Something is taking shape before us that is still dim. But we have seen what happened in Russia. We have seen what is stirring in the Far East, where things have been asleep for thousands of years.

"The elements are on the march, gentlemen."

Field Marshal Smuts addressed a group of 70 war correspondents in the press room of the Cairo conferences, in which he was a participant.

He told the correspondents that after the war newspapers would have to play an important role "in seeing that there is no repetition of this disaster — that we forge something more firm than the old order."

"The old world is dead and the significance of this war is that it is the first step to new opportunities in which the press must play a great part," he said.

Field Marshal Smuts declared that the three great Allied conferences had "achieved unanimity far exceeding our expectations. Everything is in order and moving to the greatest conclusion for the century of centuries."

"Heavy fighting lies ahead of us," he said.

"The danger that Russia, Britain and the United States might win the war but not achieve absolute co-operation needed for winning the peace has been averted."

He advised newsmen not to pry into the secrets, saying "You are on a knife edge. A word dropped on the wrong side might cause great harm. By your silence you are helping to victory."

Report Many Expect Bulgaria Will Follow Italy and Break With Germany

Stockholm, Dec. 8 — (AP)—Many persons in Sofia expect Bulgaria will follow Italy's example and break with the Germans, the newspaper Allehanda said today in a dispatch from Istanbul.

The dispatch said if there is an invasion of the Balkans Bulgarians generally want to be on the side of the Allies.

It added great nervousness persists in Sofia, heightened by the fact that the Bulgarian ministers in Berlin, Moscow and Ankara now are home for conferences and a Russian military mission is visiting the Bulgarian capital.

Take Mt. Camino And 3 Villages In Mignano Sector

Every Foot Gained Only After Costly Defence by Enemy Forces

8TH ARMY HOLDS GAINS

By NOLAND NORGAARD

Associated Press War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 8 (AP)—The Allied Fifth Army has captured the summit of lofty Mt. Camino, routed the Nazis from three villages southwest of Mignano, and recaptured Monastery Ridge in bitter fighting to win heights overlooking the road to Cassino and Rome, it was announced today.

Official reports from Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's headquarters said the enemy had been shoved back to the fringe of ridges on the northern and western edges of Mt. Camino and Mt. Maggiore by the steady, savage thrusts of British and American troops.

The 5th Army's blows into the deep German winter line toward Cassino were accompanied by fresh gains on the 8th Army's Adriatic coastal sector.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's forces crushed repeated Nazi counter-attacks, and reported limited advances in the area of the Moro River, where British tanks and infantry have crossed the stream.

Evidence of severe German casualties in defence of this coastal sector came with discovery that Field Marshal Albert Kesselring had thrown the 90th armored Grenadier Division into line there to relieve the 65th Infantry Division. The 65th was so badly smashed that one of its battalions lost all its officers, emerging with only a sergeant-major left to command.

Rain Continues.

Continued rain and fierce enemy defence slowed the British advance, and the Germans threw a heavy artillery bombardment at Allied-held Lanciano, key highway junction on the inland road leading toward Chieti.

Every foot gained in the 5th Army's newest advance was yielded only after desperate and costly defence by the Germans. When British troops in sharp battle ousted the Nazis from the summit of Monastery Ridge—which the Germans had retaken in a counter-attack the day before—they found it littered with German dead. Monastery Ridge is one of the foothills leading to the top of Mount Camino from the south.

From positions on all the dominating heights of both Mount Camino and Mount Maggiore, 5th Army guns now command the southern part of the road and valley between Mignano and Cassino, in which the Liri river flows into the upper Garigliano.

The three fortified villages from which British units knocked the enemy were Camino, Acquapendole, and Cocuruzza, three to five miles southwest of Mignano.

Near Camino Plain.

(An NBC broadcast, from Algiers said advanced U.S. units of the 5th Army now were 1 1-2 miles from the Camino Plain, where tanks can be used.)

Frantic and repeated German counter-attacks against 5th Army positions in the Mount Maggiore and Mount Camino areas were repelled, and foot-slogging soldiers forged through rain, mud, minefields and barbed wire entanglements to consolidate their positions on these two strategic heights.

The exact value of these drives could not be evaluated properly, but an Allied headquarters spokesman said British and American troops had taken "the most important features in that area, roughly five miles wide and five miles long".

Equally bitter fighting was being met by Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's troops along the Moro River, where the enemy was apparently out to stop the advance at any cost.

The thrust that carried the 8th Army across the swollen Moro touched off a tank battle, one of the few to be fought in the rugged Italian countryside, that cost the Germans four tanks.

Extent of this thrust was not known, but apparently it placed the 8th Army within 13 to 14 miles of the Adriatic port of Pescara, terminus of a major highway to Rome.

The drive, however, was being held up beyond the strong point of Orsogna, about ten miles from the Adriatic, and around Guardiagriele, 3 1-2 miles southwest of Orsogna.

Sign Explains

Winnipeg, Dec. 8 —(CP)— The staff of a downtown restaurant took a holiday today. A sign, in big block letters, explained why. It read:

Closed from 9 to 9
So we all can make
The liquor store line.

Previously, the restaurant's chief advertisement was "We Never Close."

U.S. Army Cook Held for Murder

Denver, Dec. 8 (AP)—A United States army cook insisted today he was drunk and remembered nothing about a three-year-old girl whose ravished body was found under the kitchen sink of his suburban apartment.

The soldier, Sgt. Frank Martz, 33, of Port Logan, is charged with murdering Kathleen Ann Geist after luring her from a tavern Monday night with soft drinks and the promise of a fluffy, stuffed toy rabbit.

District Attorney Richard Simon, in a statement to newsmen, related:

While Kathleen's mother, Mrs. Ann Geist, 27, played a mechanical game with friends in a tavern, Martz enticed the little girl to his apartment.

There "Martz struck Kathleen on her head with a blunt instrument ....Some time thereafter he took a stout cord...wrapped it around the little girl's neck, choking her. He thereafter ravished and raped the little girl, evidence by many scratches, teeth marks and other wounds on the body."

HARRY GRILLS HEADS TOMATO GROWERS

Harry Grills, R. R. 6 Belleville, was elected president of the Hastings County Tomato Growers' Association on Monday evening as the organization members met in their annual meeting at Shire Hall. Secretary treasurer of the Association is Mr. Fred Mitchell, also of R.R. 6 Belleville.

Mr. Thomas Strett of Brighton, district representative, addressed the meeting on matters of interest to the group with questions being very ably discussed by the speaker. Mr. William Davis of Maple Leaf, President of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture spoke to the meeting on the purpose and aims of the organization.

Directors appointed included Fred Haight and Harry Grills for Thurlow; Frank Woods, R.R. 5 and Clarence Holmes, R.R. 3 Belleville, for Sidney township. Sherman Lazier of Corbyville and Wilmot Embury of Shannonville were appointed to the county committee while the president and secretary were named as representatives to the Federation of Agriculture.

JAMES H. SPRACKETT HAS LONG RECORD IN MUNICIPAL LIFE

Reeve of his municipality, with the exception of one year, since 1930, and member of the township council since 1912, with the exception of three years, Reeve James H. Sprackett of Tudor and Cashel townships has again been elected to head the municipal council for another year. At the municipal elections held on Monday Mr. Sprackett defeated his opponent, Mr. E. N. Cleveland by a majority of 86 votes. Ballots cast were 159 for Mr. Sprackett to 73 votes for Mr. Cleveland.

Councillors elected were Adam Chisholm, Bert Dafoe, M. B. Stewart and G. Davidson, while Thomas Birrell, J. R. Wilson and Wallace Gunter were defeated at the polls.

NO PERMIT NEEDED FOR TEMPORARY WORK

Provisions of the National Selective Service Civilian regulations with respect to the employment of labor have been amended so as not to apply to temporary seasonal employment in retail trade or by the Post Office Department, during the period from December 13th to January 5th, it has been pointed out by Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local branch of the Selective Service.

Under the amendment to the Order-in-Council students and teachers, as well as women over 44 years of age and men over 59 years of age can be employed without having to secure a permit for temporary work between the above-mentioned dates. It was pointed out, however, that no person thus taken on for the Christmas trade may be carried on the payroll of the firm after January 5th, 1944 without securing a permit from the local National Selective Service Office.

ADDRESSES COBOURG KIWANIS CLUB

"Aims and Ideals of Kiwanis" was the subject chosen by Cliff Baragar when he addressed the newly-formed Kiwanis Club of Cobourg on Tuesday night in the Hotel Baltimore. The meeting was the second of the club and members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club were invited to be guests. Messrs. Cliff Baragar, Gordon Barclay, Jack Trudeau, Dick Kuntze, president-elect for 1944 Jack McVeigh were the Belleville Kiwanians and were accompanied by Mr. Harry Trepanier of this city. Thirty members were in attendance at the meeting and were led in singing by Jack McVeigh and Dick Kuntze.

RADIO INSPECTORS MAKING CHECK-UP

Inspectors of the Department of Marine and Transportation (Radio Telegraph Branch) are in the city checking on all delinquents who have failed to obtain their 1943 radio licence contrary to the Dominion regulations. Government officials revealed today that radio licences can now be obtained at the Post Office.

ABANDONED CAR TOWED TO GARAGE

After having been left abandoned on Hillcrest Avenue for the past four days the safety for the tires of a parked automobile was brought to the attention of police by Jack Frost, who resides nearby. Police were told that an effort to remove the tube from the spare tire of the vehicle had already been attempted. The vehicle was ordered towed away.

POLICE INTERRUPT APARTMENT PARTY

Disturbances in an apartment at 95 Station Street took police to the scene post haste late Tuesday night. Investigations revealed that a belated party was in progress in an upstairs apartment with the result that dancing being indulged in was making the dishes bounce about in the apartment below. The occupants were warned to curtail their exuberance and refrain from disturbing other people's slumbers.

Road Machinery Totally Destroyed In Wallbridge Fire

Expectancy of an almost one hundred percent loss in the fire which early Monday morning totally destroyed Sidney township townhall and damaged quantities of expensive road machinery, is felt by township officials. Stored in the machine shed which was swept by the fire was a crawler tractor, snowplow, graders stone crusher and other road equipment.

Speaking with the Ontario Intelligencer Tuesday afternoon Reeve J. Fred Wilson and Deputy Reeve Sam Nicholson valued the machinery at between ten and twelve thousand dollars with little possibility of replacing it this season. Although stored in a comparatively light frame structure, the heat of the fire was so intense that heavy angle steel on the equipment was warped like pretzels. Glass in the crawler tractor was melted.

Equipment was covered by insurance but up until yesterday the loss had not been adjusted, it was stated. The heavy steel safe in which were stored the township records has been opened with contents reported as undamaged.

Township officials are undecided about rebuilding the townhall immediately and have been offered the use of the Orange Hall at Wallbridge for temporary township use. Nothing will be done toward preparing possible plans for a new structure until the new council is elected, it was intimated.

MACHINE TO CLOSE DOWN

Fort Frances, Ont., Dec. 8 —(CP)—A newsprint machine, capable of producing 21,000 tons of paper annually, will be shut down in the Fort Frances mill of the Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Company, Limited, Jan. 1.

Mill officials said a shortage of pulpwood supply was responsible. A larger machine, with a yearly output of 36,000 tons, will continue operation.

Mayor Authorized to Declare 'Boxing Day' Holiday If Any Recognized Bodies Request It

Council Decides to Close Part of Lingham Street and Sell Land

BY-LAWS PASSED

If requests of recognized bodies are made Mayor Rollins is authorized to declare Boxing Day, December 27th of this year, a public holiday the city council decided at their initial meeting following the municipal elections Tuesday night.

Otherwise general business and an enquiries constituted the labors of the council, aside from the post-election felicitations made His Worship Mayor Rollins upon his re-election. Those members present, who were returned to office extended their personal congratulations and pledged their support for 1944. "I wish to thank all of the members of council for 1943 for their loyal support," added His Worship.

The council passed recommendations to close Lingham St. from Bridge St. to Victoria Ave. and that part of Lingham St. between Bridge and Queen Sts. to be left as part of the East Belleville playgrounds. Under the street closing program the full width of the street, from Queen St. to Victoria Ave, was sold part and parcel, part to John Exley for $25.00, part to L. R. Findlayson for the same amount and the remainder to David Wardle for $100. Also the comptroller was authorized to advertise for tenders covering city market tolls for 1944 and the City Treasurer was instructed to take proceedings to collect all outstanding business taxes as of this date. A protest signed, by a large number of poultry vendors at the city market pertaining to the method of new regulations pertaining to the sale of dressed poultry was filed.

Any Replies Received?

"Were there any replies to the newspaper advertisement inserted regarding the Housing Committee?" asked Alderman Pringle in a question, that was productive of some considerable subsequent discussion.

"Yes, there has been already and the need for additional housing is great. Why families are living in car trailers," replied Alderman Allin, chairman of the committee.

"What I want to know is—who's going to pay for that newspaper advertisement as it was sanctioned by the committee?" asked Alderman Potter.

"If the council hasn't the confidence in the committee, I'll pay for it myself," replied Mr. Allin.

"It was done entirely for political purposes," interrupted Alderman Potter.

"That's out of order," warned Mayor Rollins.

"I think that should be stricken from the records. I talked this over with Alderman Follwell and Pringle," added Mr. Allin. "Consider the thing closed," suggested Alderman Pringle.

"I would like to know if the tree cutting in the city has stopped and how many cords of wood have we?" asked Alderman Frank Follwell.

125 Cords Hard Wood

"We have about 125 cords of hard wood. The tree cutting has been curtailed until January when it will be resumed," explained His Worship.

"There are some dangerous trees on the west side of the city and we hope to eliminate this problem as soon as possible," assured Alderman Armstrong.

"What about that tree in front of Mr. Shiels' on Queen St.?" asked Alderman Clapp and there was no reply before Alderman Allin enquired as to the condition of the water in the Moira River.

Alderman Clarke asked if there were, any arrangements for reimbursement to the city, when our fire department leaves the city to assist in rural fires. "We didn't get any financial returns, when the department went to Picton some years ago," stated Alderman Clapp.

"This is getting pretty small. We might need the help of outside fire departments ourselves some time. And by the way, did the city pay the Air Force department when they came to our assistance?" interrupted Alderman Chamberlain.

"They're a Government department," stated Ald. Clapp.

"I personally granted the Fire Chief permission to go to Shannonville recently and Alderman Potter for them to go to Wallbridge. Both times there were from 10 to 12 firemen left in the city and only one pumper left," explained Mayor Rollins.

By-laws Passed

The introduction of by-laws saw several land deeds transferred and also the snow contract for the clearing of city streets in 1944 awarded to Morley Smith of this city.

Alderman Pringle made reference to a letter published in last night's Ontario Intelligencer by Mr. J. O. Herity, Industrial Commissioner for the city. "That is a splendid report and shows there is a definite uptrend of industry in the city and I recommend all read it," stated Mr. Pringle.

The council closed with short discussion regarding the proposed esplanade, Alderman Clapp suggesting options on property be procured at once. "That's not necessary, but it is a good thing to come under the heading of Post-War Planning, concluded Alderman Butler.

Current Colds Mild Flu Type Says Dr. Cronk

The current prevalence of colds which has stricken both young and old in the city during the past week or so has been designated by Dr. G. S. Cronk, medical health officer, as being a mild type of 'flu which has failed to attain the seriousness of the epidemics reported in many other centres.

"It seems to be a mild type of 'flu and so far has not appeared to be serious," commented Dr. Cronk. "There is plenty of it, however, and it seems to have to run its course before those contracting fully recover."

Very few persons contracting the colds have as yet been hospital cases, it was intimated. When symptoms first appear it was advised for persons to go to bed and combat the cold with hot drinks. Ordinarily it takes a week or more to get entirely rid of the cold, it was stated.

Icy Pavements Greet Pedestrians

Icy pavements and streets made progress equally as dangerous for motorists as pedestrians in Belleville today as the season's initial ice-covered streets welcomed citizens.

Pedestrian progress was even more retarded than was that by motor vehicles but regardless early-morning workers and business men found difficulty travelling to work in safety. Much caution was being exercised by all citizens alike with the result police had not investigated a serious accident of any description up until the noon hour.

A light early-morning rain with the temperature rising caused dampness on top of the ice-covered frozen streets, that made progress exceedingly dangerous.

Under the direction of the Public Works Department workmen were out in full force sanding the more dangerous hills and street intersections, which kept accidents at a minimum. Especially noticeable were the skidding and slithering antics of pedestrians endeavoring to keep their balance while travelling to their various points of employment.

Hunger Ends Boys' Desire To See World

Join the navy and see the world—has long been the enlistment motto that intrigues sailors the world over.

On Tuesday two local 16-year-old lads, Don Allen, West Bridge St. and Gerald Smith, Yeomans St., decided to join the Royal Canadian Navy and without revealing their intention to their parents commenced the long trek to Toronto and the navy recruiting office via the hitch hiking route.

However, the lads found that thumbing their way 113 miles wasn't exactly as easy as seen in the movies. Also there was the matter of hunger and by the time the lads reached Cobourg their naval aspirations had apparently dwindled.

In the meantime anxious parents notified police headquarters, but before a search posse could be organized it was learned from Cobourg the lads were on their way home, a tired pair and satisfied to return to school and see the world in a geography text book until they became of enlistment age.

Stores Open Evenings During Christmas Week

Will Close Christmas Eve at Six O'Clock; Boxing Day to be Observed

OTHER BUSINESS

With the exception of only a very few store owners, Belleville merchants voted almost unanimously on Tuesday evening to remain open in the evenings during Christmas week. Starting Monday December 20th stores will remain open after the conventional closing hour of six o'clock and will remain open in the evening until Friday, when they will close at six.

The matter was decided at a special meeting of the Retail Merchants division of the Chamber of Commerce with merchants in the city being well represented. After discussion of the matter from various angles the motion calling for stores to remain open during Christmas week was passed. Boxing Day will also be observed the Monday following Christmas, it was decided.

The meeting was called to decide whether or not stores would remain open in the evening during Christmas week and had no bearing on a previous agreement, that merchants would keep their stores open on Wednesday afternoons during the two weeks prior to Christmas. The Wednesday afternoon holiday will therefore not be observed on December 15th and 22nd.

MARMORA

H. R. Pearce Donates Woodlot To Kinsmen Club

Marmora, Dec. 8—Recently, Mr. H. R. Pearce of Marmora made a bequest of a 200-acre woodlot to the Kinsmen Club of Marmora, the money received from the sale of the lot to be applied to the local fund for "Milk for Britain." This lot is situated on Beaver Creek, ten miles north of Marmora and, since the situation is in the centre of the deer country and is close to exceptionally good fishing grounds, it is expected that a sale would be made to persons interested in the building of a hunting and fishing lodge.

It is estimated that the lot contains 1000 cords of wood of which 80% is soft wood and the remaining 20% is hard wood. The lot is accessible for the cutting and drawing out of wood.

Mr. Pearce is to be complimented on the very fine offer he has made and the Kinsmen Club are hoping to realize at least two hundred dollars for their Milk-for Britain Fund from the sale of this lot.

fort should be made to enlarge output.

A 92-per-cent increase in dried peas had been sought but the conference felt only a 10-per-cent gain was possible.

Mr. Shaw said he felt acreages given to peas and beans could well be increased in the west. It might be necessary to give farmers assurance of a floor price on these products.

Tobacco Acreage Increased

An increase in tobacco acreage was indicated, said Mr. Shaw. Reserves had declined under increased wartime consumption. It might be impossible to attain the increase desired. A "very big increase" was required in burley tobacco production.

All possible fruit would be required and the crop should have the best possible care.

For potatoes a production of 105 per cent of 1943 was indicated but, Mr. Shaw said a production of 110 per cent would be preferred. It was better to face up to a surplus than to err on the side of scarcity with such an essential food.

Agricultural Minister A. C. Taylor of New Brunswick said he "feared very greatly for the potato grower" if a 10-per-cent increase in objective were fixed on top of the increase attained last year.

Had Small Crop

Premier Walter Jones of Prince Edward Island said his province had a small crop this year but had this crop been good it would have been useless "because it is impossible to ship the small crop we have, owing to a shortage of cars."

The potato objective was left at 105 per cent after this discussion.

The tomato objective was not settled, as further information was required on the amount of canned tomatoes likely to be needed.

Maple syrup and honey objectives were both up and this was "all to the good," said Mr. Shaw.

Dairy Production

He said the provinces mainly interested in cheese production—Ontario and Quebec — should seek to slow up the reduction in cheese production. Those studying the situation believed inducements to production in the form of bonuses and the like would have to be continued, either in their present or in a modified form, for the duration of the war.

The butter production objective for 1944 had been set at 97 per cent of the 313,724,000 pounds produced in 1943, although it had been hoped production would be 316,000,000 pounds.

A cheese production objective of 167,800,000 pounds had been suggested for 1944, an increase of 5.8 per cent from 1943; but the conference had felt production could only be 93 per cent of this year's output.

The evaporated whole milk objective for 1944 was 178,000,000 pounds, the same as in 1943. A small decrease in the 1943 condensed whole milk production of 24,000,000 pounds was considered probable.

Whole-milk powder and skim-milk powder objectives for 1944 were the same as in 1943 — 116,800,000 pounds and 24,000,000 pounds respectively.

The production objective for eggs in 1944 was 367,500,000 dozen, an increase of 10 per cent over 1943.

A gain of 14 per cent in production of poultry meats, to 33,000,000 pounds, was desired in 1944.

Mr. Shaw said an increase of nine per cent in honey production was sought in 1944, in addition to the 33,520 pounds produced in 1943.

A 34-per-cent increase in maple syrup production was sought, the 1943 production was 2,299,800 gallons.

Forage crop seeds acreage probably would e increased, Mr. Shaw said.

Obituary

JOSEPH COURTENAY
(Gananoque)

Mr. Joseph Courtenay, Princess Street, Gananoque, died early this Wednesday morning, according to information received in the city. Mrs. Percy Ford, niece, 106 1-2 Station Street, and Marjorie Courtenay, granddaughter, reside in this city.

WALTER H. BOOTH
(Consecon.)

Consecon, Dec. 8. (Special)—Walter H. Booth died at his home here on Monday, December 6, after an illness of two months' duration.

The late Mr. Booth, who was in his 75th year, was born in Consecon and all his life was passed here. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Booth and he died in the house in which he was born. In religion he was a member of the United Church and in the community he was highly esteemed.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Gertrude Young; two children, LaRue—Anona; one sister, Mrs. Maggie Hutchison, Oshawa.

The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon.

MRS. ESTELLA D. WILSON
(Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Estella Densy Wilson, widow of the Rev. W. D. P. Wilson and formerly of Belleville, died at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. G. Harold Holton, Toronto, on Tuesday, Dec. 7th.

The late Mrs. Wilson, who had reached the advanced age of eighty one years, was a daughter of the Rev. Daniel and Mrs. Brown. During her early years she lived in numerous places in the Bay of Quinte conference of the Methodist Church where her father was engaged in pastoral work. She was truly a daughter of the parsonage and upon her marriage to the Rev. W. D. P. Wilson, she continued to make her home in many parsonages and was of great assistance to her husband in his work upon many circuits. She came from a family which gave numerous ministers to the work of the Methodist Church and she was a devoted and efficient bible class teacher. She served her church well and was a true friend to many.

When her late husband retired from the active ministry he took up residence in Belleville and Mrs. Wilson lived here for a considerable time. Five years ago she went to make her home with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. G. Harold Holton, in Toronto. Many old friends in Belleville will regret to learn of Mrs. Wilson's death.

Surviving her are four sons, Dr. J. M. Wilson, Trenton; Dr. D. D. Wilson, Ottawa; Col. H. R. Wilson and Mr. Harold R. Wilson, Belleville; one daughter, Mrs. G. Harold Holton, Toronto; one sister, Mrs. Robert Metzler. Her husband died in 1933.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

SAYS HE BROKE JAIL TO GET JOB

Toronto Man is Sentenced in Cobourg Police Court

Cobourg, Dec. 8 — (CP) — Testifying that he broke out of jail here, on July 24, in order to obtain work for a year or two to build up a stake for his wife and child, Bernard W. Martin, of Toronto said in police court yesterday that he had intended to give himself up.

Martin was sentenced to two years on a charge of housebreaking in Port Hope, July 13, and for his escape from Cobourg jail, he was given a one-year term. The three-year term is to run consecutively with a three-and-a-half month sentence handed him in Toronto several weeks ago.

"I wasn't thinking of my own freedom," Martin told the court. "I was thinking of my wife and child. My parents are so fond of the child that I was afraid they might take him from my wife if I was unable to provide for her. My idea in breaking out of jail was to return to my wife and child and work for a year or two until I had enough money for them to get along, while I was back serving my jail term. I had every intention of giving myself up," he said.

"You should have thought of your wife and family before you got into more trouble," stated the Magistrate in passing sentence.

Anglo-American Understanding Praised by Knox

Chicago, Dec. 8 — (AP) — The "spirit of understanding" between Britain and the United States "has produced magnificent rewards, not only for the contracting parties but for the world's welfare," in the view of United States Navy Secretary Frank Knox, and should be continued into the post-war world.

In an address to the English-speaking union last night, Knox asserted as his "studied opinion" that "the security of the world depends in very large measure upon Anglo-American leadership."

"It is the very fact," he said, "that the British and the American Commonwealths have had their vigorous disputes and for more than a century have settled them without recourse to arms that gives substance to the hope that Anglo-American leadership provides for the rest of the world..."

U.S. Guns Rain Shells on Nazis' Escape Route

By DON WHITEHEAD
Associated Press War Correspondent

With the 5th Army in Italy, Dec. 6 — (Delayed) — (AP) — With excellent observation from towering Mount Maggiore, American artillery rained shells today on one — if not the only — escape route for the Germans on the south side of the Garigliano River.

From their hard-won heights the troops looked down on a bridge across which the enemy troops must withdraw with their equipment to escape the closing grip of Allied troops wiping out resistance in the dent driven into the German winter line.

On Mount Carmino British troops have practically surrounded one group of Germans holding out on a pinnacle above "Monastery Ridge," so-called because of an old monastery on its barren slope.

British infantry took the ridge in the first assault, but were driven back by heavy mortar fire. They won back the ridge, on which cover was provided by the walls of the monastery but enemy mortar and shell fire set the monastery afire and the British had to withdraw from it again.

They then worked their way around the ridge to bypass the strongpoint. The manoeuvre left the Germans strangled, but still holding the position even though their supply lines were cut.

The first surge of the new 5th Army attack put the Allied troops in a strong position along the west side of the Mignano-Cassino road.

Compulsory Blood Tests Are Urged To Wipe Out Disease

Ottawa, Dec. 8 (CP)—Compulsory blood tests for couples planning marriage, for pregnant women and for men and women entering employment were advanced today at an international conference here as means of wiping out venereal diseases in Canada.

The compulsory tests were urged by Dr. E. Lalande of Quebec and by Dr. Gordon Bates, general director of the Health League of Canada, in addresses to delegates who opened a four-day meeting yesterday.

Dr. Lalande said the tests, coupled with a move to educate the public and the medical profession on venereal diseases and with attempts to rehabilitate prrostitutes, would do a great deal to prevent spread of the diseases.

Most of the speakers urged that more wholesome recreation be provided for men and women of the forces on weekend leave.

Lieut. H. G. Baker, control officer for the Royal Canadian navy, said that if the millions the Canadian public pays out annually for care of venereal disease cases in and out of the armed forces were spent on building new recreational centres, the spread of venereal diseases would drop considerably.

'Flu' Increase Is Called 'Normal Seasonal Increase'

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—A rising rate of influenza cases in various parts of the country was described by a United States Public Health Service spokesman today as a "normal seasonal increase."

After studying the latest figures available, those for the week ending Nov. 7, he pointed out that the number of cases during the same period in 1941 was five times greater yet no serious epidemic occurred then.

"There is no evidence now that we are coming into anything like we had in 1918," he asserted. The world-wide epidemic of that year caused more than 20,000,000 deaths.

Bankers On Transition From War To Peace

Vital National Problems Discussed by Bank of Montreal President

George W. Spinney Gives "the Frank and Considered Opinion of a Banker" on Nationalization of Banking

126th ANNUAL MEETING

Strongly Emphasizes Value of Victory Bonds Both During War and After

Problems of vital interest to Canadians in the transition from war to peace were discussed at the 126th annual meeting of Bank of Montreal shareholders yesterday by George W. Spinney, C.M.G., president of the institution. Among the subjects he dealt with were nationalization of banking on which he gave what he described as 'the frank and considered opinion of a banker,' the value of Victory Bonds in the war and after, and the need for a healthy, vigorous and flexible economy in attaining a high and increasing productivity essential for full employment and decent living standards.

GEORGE W. SPINNEY, C.M.G.
President

Following a presentation of the profit and loss statement of the bank, as already published, Mr. Spinney spoke as follows:

"On the battle lines throughout the world, the past year has given us much cause for profound thankfulness. On the home front too the year has been one of achievement. But I think that any realistic view of the local scene must lead to the conclusion that the threat of inflation with all its attendant dislocation and hardship has in no way diminished in the past twelve months but has, if anything, increased. Moreover, I do not think it too much to say that by reason of the very successes of the Allied forces, we in Canada are peculiarly vulnerable to the dangers of complacency with a consequent relaxation of our energies at a time when our full efforts should be sustained. In brief, I think we have a situation in which it is necessary for Canadians to draw upon their reserves of sound common sense and their capacity for clear thinking and self discipline. For it is at a time such as the present that these qualities, displayed by those at home, can have a telling effect on the duration of the struggle and on our ultimate ability to meet and to solve the problems of transition from war to peace.

"Much has been said, and rightly so, concerning the spectacular war-time achievements of Canadian industry—achievements which would not have been possible but for the co-operation and untiring efforts of millions of Canadian workers who have brought to the task of war production the fullest measure of their energies and skill. I should also like to pay tribute to those responsible for no less remarkable accomplishments in two other fields—agriculture and transportation. At no time in the war has food occupied so vitally important a place in the armoury of the United Nations as it does at present. The manner in which Canadian farmers have met, and are continuing to meet, the challenge of vastly increased demands upon them, under extreme handicaps of shortage of help and scarcity of machinery, is deserving of the praise and gratitude of the entire nation. I should like also to say a word concerning the services rendered by our two great railroad systems. Despite scarcity of equipment and manpower, the railways are handling freight and passenger traffic in all-time record volume. The performance of such a task, under trying conditions of operation, and with relatively little inconvenience to shippers of freight and to the travelling public, is an accomplishment of which the management and operating personnel of the railway systems may well be proud.

THE WARTIME WORK OF THE BANK

"I think it would be quite in order for me now to draw attention to the manner in which your Bank has endeavoured in a spirit of service to meet the changing needs of a nation at war. There has been little change in the volume of loans of both commercial and financial character, but in other directions the work has vastly expanded. Transactions in cheques and deposits, Victory Bonds and relative coupons, pouring through our hands, have been immeasurably heavier than before the war. Our safekeeping facilities have been under a severe strain. We have already opened thousands of ration coupon accounts and handled coupons running literally into hundreds of millions. The ramifications of Foreign Exchange control also have added to our responsibilities. It has been necessary to cope with these situations with a staff which, by reason of heavy enlistments, is seriously depleted in its experienced ranks. Of their diligence and loyalty the General Manager will have something to say later on in this meeting.

"In the year just closed, our acquisitions of Government securities were on a reduced scale as compared with the preceding year, notwithstanding a substantial increase in the Government debt. You will, I am sure, appreciate my point when I say this is a development we welcome, since it is a direct reflection of the national effort to control inflation by financing the war to the greatest possible extent by taxation and the sale of bonds to individuals and other non-bank investors. While the continued purchase of short term Government securities is a wartime duty which the Bank is glad to assume to the extent required, we are at one with the Minister of Finance in his desire to see that the necessity for this expansionary type of financing is kept to the practical minimum.

"Nor has our attitude in this regard been merely one of passive agreement. For our whole organization has focussed very special attention upon the matter of aiding in the sale of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. I am proud of our record in these great national undertakings. By written word and oral persuasion we have done everything within our power to encourage depositors in this Bank to use their funds to the utmost limit of their ability in the purchase of Government securities and to pledge their incomes to the same end. But that is not all. We have established low rates and special arrangements designed to direct these securities into our hands for safekeeping. The significance of this service goes beyond the elimination of the obvious risks in keeping securities in one's own home, for we know from experience that the investor who lodges his bonds at the bank for safe-keeping is thereby helped and encouraged to perpetuate his savings.

VICTORY BONDS IN THE WAR AND AFTER

"You probably have read public statements recently that would imply that the banks and other large institutions have an interest in depriving the individual of his Victory Bonds in accordance with some deep-laid and sinister scheme of concentration of wealth. Such statements, it seems to me, cannot be the result of a thoroughly informed and unbiased appraisal of the facts. First hand knowledge enables me to speak on this point with some authority. As Dominion Chairman of our Victory Loan organization for a period of two and a half years, I was able to observe at close range the thoughtful planning and tireless energy which the Banks, Trust and Loan companies, Insurance companies, Investment houses, together with all other responsible groups in the community, brought to bear in distributing Victory Bonds into the hands of small buyers and in endeavouring to have them kept there. The success which these efforts have attained can in some degree be measured by the increasing number of individual sales which have been made in Victory Loan campaigns. In the First Loan of June, 1941, here were 968,259 subscriptions. In the Loan just closed, there were over 3,000,000 sales, or say one sale for every four persons in the Dominion.

"In my view the widest possible distribution of Victory Bonds in public hands, apart from its necessity under present conditions, has tremendous post-war significance. For if the national debt is distributed among all sections of the community, the processes of repayment will be eased and facilitated. Moreover, the reserve of purchasing power, built up today by hundreds of thousands of Canadians through the purchase of Victory Bonds, can play a very real and important part in stabilizing the post-war economy and maintaining employment.

"I know there have been some fears expressed that there will be a rush on the part of individuals to cash their bonds at the end of the war and that the impact of this spending power on goods, which for some time will be limited in supply, will give rise to an even greater danger of inflation than now exists. This is a possibility I am not inclined to accept without reservation, for the desire to save and to provide for the future is a basic human instinct, and a habit which quickly takes root. It is true that in the pre-war years many people were either denied the opportunity, or lost the habit, of saving. During the war, saving has again become possible, and is now not only considered respectable but has been elevated to the position of a patriotic duty. Many people are enjoying for the first time the feeling of independence which only a reserve of savings can bring. I suggest that the will to save can, in large measure, be projected into the post-war years if Canadians see to it that the act of saving continues to be respectable and that the savings of the individual will be respected.

THE INDIVIDUAL AND GOVERNMENTAL CONTROL

"At this point I think it would be quite in order to make some reference to the much discussed subject of nationalization of banking. For it seems to me that the frank and considered opinion of a banker, who like most other Canadian bankers has come up "the hard way", is at least as worthy of a hearing as the views of ardent exponents of theories of state ownership. Let me say, therefore, as a banker, and as a Canadian who has the interests of his country at heart, that I am at a loss to understand what good object nationalization of banking would achieve. Indeed I am convinced that such a move would be productive of consequences gravely detrimental to the community at large.

"To be more specific, I cannot see that under nationalization the many and varied banking services on which the entire business and commercial organization depends, and which everyone is inclined to take for granted, would be performed with greater efficiency and despatch than they are now. I find it difficult to believe that the individual in his dealings with a Government-owned bank would have a greater assurance of privacy or personal attention to his particular problems than he has at present. May I say too that I can find no need for nationalization in order to place the nation's supply of money under governmental regulation, since the regulation of the money supply is a function already performed by the Government-owned central bank.

"Our position today is that there are ten banks actively competing with each other for business; and I can assure you that this competition is real and intensive. Under these circumstances if an individual has reason to believe that he is not being adequately served or that his proposals have not received due consideration by any one bank, there is nothing to prevent him from going to another. I think it is safe to say that under our competitive system a refusal of business by several banks would probably be sufficient evidence that the proposal was not one which, by any stretch of the imagination, could conform to good banking principles.

"The alternative which the proponents of nationalization offer in exchange for the present system of competitive banking is a banking monopoly under governmental control. Under such circumstances once the borrowing requirements of a customer were denied, for any reason whatever, he would have no recourse except through the channels of special pleading or political influence.

"One of the most prominent proponents of nationalized banking recently stated, as one of the points in its favour, that control of finance is a most essential step to control of the whole economy. With the truth of this statement as applied to nationalization of the banks I would most definitely agree. Set up a government monopoly of banking in Canada and the socialization of the rest of the economy would scarcely be more than a "mopping-up operation." For if a governmental bureau becomes the only source of day-to-day credit accommodation for Canadian industry and agriculture, the Canadian economy will have already lost its independence regardless of the extent to which any field of endeavour may continue to retain the outward appearance of free enterprise. This, I suggest, is a point that employees, as well as owners and management, may ponder. For if the Government, directly or indirectly, is to attain control of the entire productive facilities of the country, such an important element in production as labour cannot possibly hope that the vast regimentation involved would apply to everyone else and pass the workingman by.

"In its primary aspects the matter of nationalized banking is one of monopoly versus competition in the field of credit; and even within these limits it concerns everyone owning or dependent upon a Canadian enterprise that may have need of day-to-day or seasonal credit accommodation. In its broader implications the issue is that of individual liberty of action as opposed to the concept of a central Government supreme not only in the field of legislative powers and responsibilities, but in the spheres of business, industry and finance as well. This would inevitably mean the domination by the central authority of all bodies whether public or private which must have recourse to credit facilities.

THE BANK IN THE POST-WAR YEARS

"For 126 years this Bank has played an important part in the commercial and industrial development of the Dominion. In all that time our facilities have been freely available to the Canadian people in the exercise of banking functions, conducted in all their aspects, without bias or political prejudice, and in accordance with principles which experience has proven to be sound. In this, we have I think played a not unfitting part as the oldest representative of the Canadian banking system. Long traditions of soundness, sane and experienced management, fair and confidential dealing, plus the competitive spur to progressive outlook and efficiency, have all combined to build this system that is serving the public well. I am confident that your Bank is well equipped to do its important part towards meeting the problems and opportunities of the post-war years in a continued spirit of enterprise and helpfulness to the whole community."

Strong Financial Statement Showing Record Resources Presented by B. C. Gardner, General Manager

BANK SERVING 1,200,000 CUSTOMERS

Staff Now 58% Women — Relieving Many Men for Military Duty

With resources at the highest figure in the bank's history, the financial statement presented to Bank of Montreal shareholders yesterday by B. C. Gardner, general manager, reflected unprecedented strength and indicated the extent to which the institution was participating in the nation's war effort.

B. C. GARDNER
General Manager

In submitting the 126th. annual statement of the bank, Mr. Gardner commented briefly as follows:

"Our total assets now aggregate $1,313,065,000, as compared with $1,175,319,000 a year ago. Quick assets aggregate $1,036,610,000, or 83.81% of all liabilities to the public.

"Notes of and deposits with the Bank of Canada amount to $119,856,000 representing approximately 11.39% of all deposit liabilities in Canadian dollars.

"Investments, not exceeding market value, carried at $799,848,000 show an increase during the year of $115,701,000. This increase was mainly in our holdings of Dominion of Canada Deposit Certificates and other short-term obligations of the Dominion Government. Our holdings of Provincial and Municipal securities show some further contraction reflecting the lower borrowing requirements of these bodies.

"Current Loans and Discounts are little changed from the previous year-end figures. Our Commercial Loans continue to reflect the reduction in inventories, the shortening of credit terms, the reduced activities of companies engaged in the financing of durable consumer goods, such as motor cars, the inactivity of financial markets and the reduction of private debt.

"In valuing our assets, ample provision has been made for all bad and doubtful debts and for depreciation of securities.

BANK SERVICES

"The services of the Bank have been maintained at a high level of efficiency in spite of the greatly increased volume of routine resulting from wartime conditions. The rise in bank deposits has been accompanied by a growth in the number of Current and Savings Account and we now provide banking facilities for about 1,200,000 customers under these headings. This increase has been accompanied by an even greater growth in the volume of transactions handled at our branches.

"In the loaning field the Bank has supplied, with Government co-operation, the necessary funds to finance operations of a character that would normally hardly qualify for banking assistance.

"In all of these operations we have little or no criticism from those who use our services and I should like to pay a tribute to our customers and to the public generally for their cheerful co-operation in these difficult times.

BUSINESS ACTIVITY

"The volume of Canadian business activity reached new peaks in the twelve months just closed. During the past five or six months, however, production has remained steady at a high level and it seems reasonable to expect that the index of general business in Canada will not show any sharp increase in the immediate future. Basically, this reflects the fact that we have reached, for all practical purposes, a condition of full employment of human and material resources. This does not mean that more intensive use of existing resources could not result in some additions to our aggregate output. It does, however, suggest that for the duration of the war at least, any very marked advance in one branch of industrial production is likely to be at the expense of some other department of the economy. Already lack of manpower has affected the output of Canadian industries, such as gold mining, lumbering and newsprint.

"The period of huge additions to wartime manufacturng plants appears to be past, with consequent reduction in the level of construction activity and the use of construction materials. On the other hand, the demand for raw materials for the new productive facilities brought into being has increased. Moreover, as the war progresses it brings changes in the requirements of the fighting forces which necessitate re-adjustment in the employment of our industrial facilities.

"With production and employment at a high level, retail trade has been very active but some signs of a moderate tapering off are in evidence. This is in part a consequence of curtailed inventories of consumers' goods, particularly in the durable goods categories, and is also the result of restraining influences of taxation and the voluntary savings effort undertaken by the Canadian people.

STAFF

"Of our male staff, 62% of those of military age have volunteered for and are now on active service. This total includes a large number not subject to military call-up because of their marital status, while a number of others have volunteered but have been unable to qualify on medical grounds. In August, 1939, 64% of our staff were officers, 30% stenographers and women clerks and 6% messengers. Today the figures are 37% officers, 58% stenographers and women clerks and 5% messengers. I think you will agree that this is an important change in the composition of our staff.

"We have been asked for and have loaned additional officers to the Government and we are glad to know they are acquitting themselves well in their new duties.

"It is a source of keen satisfaction to us that a number of our men now serving their King and Country have won distinction and decorations on the field of battle. Ten members of our staff are listed as prisoners of war and ten are reported as missing. Our thoughts are with their relatives and friends and it is our earnest hope that the day is not far distant when they will be returned safely to their families. I have to record with deep regret that thirty-six of our men have paid the supreme sacrifice. Their memory will enrich the traditions of our service and our deepest sympathy goes out to their relatives and friends."

"I should mention that already we have given a great deal of thought and study to the question of reabsorbing our men now on Military Service and plans have been prepared to enable us to fit them into their rightful places in our organization when they return. It is our expectation that because of the duration of hostilities and their long absence from civilian life, members of our staff on active service may require assistance in re-establishing themselves in civilian life and we are, therefore, prepared to provide financial help where the need is clearly indicated. They may be assured of a warm welcome back to our service.

CALLS FOR CLEAR THINKING ON POST-WAR PLANNING

"Underlying all the talking and thinking about post-war planning which we hear so much of today is the determination that out of this war there must come a better Canada; and that those who have fought and worked for victory must be assured of an opportunity as free and independent citizens to obtain and enjoy for themselves and their children the material benefits of the freedom they have helped to defend. No one will deny that in the accomplishment of these purposes there will be a place for governmental measures wisely conceived and administered. But I suggest that the real basis for full employment and decent living standards is a high and increasing productivity that will be possible only in a healthy, vigorous and flexible economy. We shall be in great need of initiative, imagination and inventive genius. And as we value our political freedom and our economic future, we must guard against the doctrine that the way to achieve the post-war objectives we seek is to confined the Canadian economy within the strait-jacket of governmental regulation, ownership and control. Such a doctrine ignores political and economic realities as well as some of the persistent frailties of human nature, and rests upon the assumption that government ownership and control are inherently 'right' and individual ownership and enterprise inherently 'wrong.' My hope would be that Canadians will never, thru' indifference or lack of clear thinking, acquiesce in the creation of an economic order in which enterprise and initiative, and the spur of competition, are regarded as of little value and low reputation.

"The whole subject is one of vital national importance and I am confident that you, as proprietors of the Bank, would feel that it would have been remiss on my part if at the proper time and place, I had failed to state my views. This seems to me to be a proper time and a proper place."

—George W. Spinney at Bank of Montreal Annual Meeting.

STAFF UNDER HEAVY WARTIME PRESSURE

"By all standards the past year has not been an easy one for the Staff, who have worked long hours and have performed their many and varied duties with courtesy, efficiency and despatch. I cannot speak too highly of their loyal services. The increased volume of routine plus special wartime duties have entailed many extra hours of work. Especially are we mindful of the heavy pressure upon our Managers, Accountants and other senior officers who have had to train inexperienced employees in the handling of relatively senior posts, very often on short notice. We have been impressed with the way in which our women clerks, both permanent and temporary, have risen to the occasion. They are doing splendid work and, without them, either we could not have carried on our full banking services or we would have been forced to ask for the deferment from military duty of some of our experienced personnel."

—B. C. Gardner at Bank of Montreal Annual Meeting.

Churchill Hopes 'We Will Finally Get Enemy at Bay 'in '44

London, Dec. 8 (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill, in an informal speech to the old regiment of Fourth Queens Hussars, said "the war is going well, but we must not underrate the tenacity of the enemy who fights with his usual veteran skill," CBS commentator James Fleming reported in a Cairo broadcast heard here today.

"And of course," Mr. Churchill added, "he will not have a good time of it so he'll be tenacious to the end. But I hope that during 1944 we will finally get him at bay."

Holiday Season Near

Only fourteen business days or little more than two weeks remain before Christmas. Holiday buying has started as anyone can see who is on the business streets on an afternoon when buyers are entering to buy or are leaving the shops with their purchases of gifts for children or adults and their other parcels of necessities for the Christmas festival.

In the brief spell yet remaining a vast amount of business is to be done and wise buyers are making use of their time before the last minute rush to get in their purchases.

The ingenuity and thoughtfulness of the manufacturers of goods and the preparedness of the merchants have made possible a beautiful and ample provision for the midwinter festival with every sort of toy for children possible under the restrictions on metals and other gifts. They help to make a Christmas what it is and what will not be forgotten.

Leaders Give Much for Cause

Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek have given the world many examples of surrender of their own pleasures, convenience and rest for the sake of the United Nations they represent. The war has called Mr. Churchill to many conferences, across the oceans and continents, every one entailing a long journey. President Roosevelt, at great sacrifice has gone abroad on long journeys for freedom's sake and for the sake of the world. Chiang Kai-Shek came from faraway China, across the continent of Asia to North Africa. Marshal Stalin journeyed into what was the land of the Persians of old and what is now known as Iran, leaving the multiplicity of his duties at home for a brief space of time to join in Allied counsels.

The United Nations and their leaders have all undergone great strain, and the four above-mentioned have borne the full share of the anxieties and difficulties. These men are directing the war against the worst menace that humanity has known, the tyranny of Germany. Theirs is a load which few can know and they have borne it for years before and during the war. To the Allied leaders a debt which can never be fully paid is owing for their devotion to the cause they have taken up for mankind.

Their satisfaction will be what they have struggled for and what they have led their nations for will come to pass, a peace of security that will benefit the world and will not enforce on other such leaders in the future burdens only men of great gifts and strength and heart could bear.

A Birthday Banquet

What man in the world would not have given much to have been able to sit in on that St. Andrew's Day banquet given on his birthday by Prime Minister Churchill who had among his guests the two great figures, President Roosevelt and Premier Joseph Stalin and others. Accounts of the party were published throughout the world.

This gathering was one of the most delightful for spontaniety and good fellowship. Mr. Churchill, the master of many arts and one of the world's greatest men, was the master host and with his charm were combined the good cheer and the affability of Mr. Stalin and Mr. Roosevelt. Men who are carrying the burden of the world here met in lighter vein, ideal host and ideal guests. These official leaders have the outstanding quality of being men. In any company they would impress men and women, for they are great as individuals and great in their office. It was therefore a happy occasion for this most genial host, for jovial Stalin who is portrayed as setting the key to the informality and hospitality, as he breezed into the British legation, talking freely through an interpreter, taking off his great coat and lifting a glass to the host, and the kindly and genial Roosevelt. When Mr. Churchill announced that he was going to follow Russian custom with toasts in French and Persian wine, Mr. Stalin must have felt happy in this setting. It is said he walked over to the side of everyone of the 34 toasted and clinked his glass before each drinking. Mr. Churchill toasted "Stalin the Great," and Stalin toasted "My Fighting Friend Churchill," and "My Fighting Friend Roosevelt."

The gathering was not one only of leaders for Mr. Churchill pledged Mr. Roosevelt's health with two toasts to the president and man.

It was a happy event and symbolic of the union of aims of the three powers.

It was a happy event in Iran, the old Persia of history, one of the oldest of empires, where great banquets were not unknown in days when Europe was beginning her development. It marked a happy time for the Iran of today linked as an ally in the great civilizing task of the United Nations to restore liberty to overrun nations, to overthrow and crush the tyranny of Germany and abolish aggression forever.

No wonder these men could enjoy this little relaxation, a few hours of delightful hospitality at the close of a world-famous meeting of statesmen and their staffs.

The Role of Canada

(London Spectator)

Nothing could be more amazing or more gratifying than the energy and ability with which Canada has assumed a leading position through her contributions to the war and the part she has taken in world affairs. . . .

It must be remembered that Canada is relatively only at the beginning of her history as a nation. She has vast spaces and enormous undeveloped resources. Her population is likely to grow very swiftly in the next few decades and the time may come when it will be greater than that of Britain.

It is natural that in many respects her ways of life should be assimilated more to those of the United States than to those of this country. But there is nothing disturbing in that, specially in view of the fact that we ourselves and the Americans are seeking closer contacts. Just as we want closer association with the Dominions, so it is highly desirable that they and we should cultivate more intimate relations with the United States.

International Cuisine

(Boston Herald)

Although it may be a bit too early for gourmets to stage an appropriate celebration, all indications point to a notable reciprocity program in national cuisines after the war. Service men and women now overseas may be expected to return with more than a few favorite dishes, while people with whom they have been consorting will have learned much about Yankee cooking.

India's notable range of curried dainties, Austria's stuffed cabbage leaves, Norway's meat and fish puddings, Holland's bounteous rice and meat spread, called ripsttaffel, France's economical pot-au-feu stew, Spain's rice, fish and meat paella may, conceivably be placed on post-war menus here at home.

Foreign folks, by reason of economic conditions, have trained themselves to thrift and the avoidance of waste in foodstuffs. In this connection, a government announcement that Americans waste nearly as much food each year as goes into lend-lease shipments has its moral.

The latest Gospel in this world is, know thy work and do it. "Know thyself!" long enough has had that poor "self" of thine tormented thee; thou wilt never forget to "know" it! Think it not thy business, this of knowing thyself; know what thou canst work at and work at it like a Hercules! That will be thy better plan. — Carlyle.

SCOUT LEADERS' WIVES

Hers is the sacrificial life
Who is the Boy Scout leader's wife,
For all alone at home she stays
While he is tramping woodland ways.
While she sits waiting for her squire
He teaches boys the art of fire;
And while the hours go dragging by
He teaches boys how knots to tie,
And while for him she burns a lamp
He spends six weeks or more in camp.

The Boy Scout leader's wife must be
As wise in many arts as he;
Must learn to stretch a meal for four—
At times for eight or nine or more—
When friends of his drop into town;
And never scold and never frown
At midnight when he brings them back
And asks for coffee and a snack;
And never sigh, when on the phone
He tells her she must dine alone.

The Boy Scout leader's wife must be
As fond of boyhood as is he,
And see the far off future when
Our country will have need of men,
Good men, intelligent and true,
And able men, its tasks to do,
And honest men, and clean and strong,
And men too big to stoop to wrong,
Or never she'd consent to be
The wife of such an absentee.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 8th., 1923.

Tom Collister, President of the Kiwanis Club will leave shortly to reside in Watford, Ontario, and at this week's luncheon he was presented with a silver-headed cane by his fellow members of the club. The presentation was made by Vice President Charles Hanna.

Mr. T. E. Ketcheson has been appointed to the position of City Assessor at a salary of $1500. a year to succeed Mr. J. A. Kerr who resigned to accept another position.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Fitchett and family of Eldorado are spending a few days with the former's sister, Mrs. W. J. Logue.

Mrs. C. J. Millan of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. J. P. MacDonald.

Mr. Clifford Ostrom, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ostrom of this city, has been transferred from a branch of the Bank of Montreal, Toronto, to the Kitchener branch of the same bank.

Mr. Arthur Herity spent yesterday in Oshawa.

30 YEARS AGO

DEC. 8th., 1913.

The annual meeting of the Thurlow Township Conservative Association was held in the Conservative Club rooms here and the chair was occupied by G. P. Reid. The following officers were elected: Hon. Presidents, H. K. Denyes and R. Sullivan; President, G. P. Reid; Vice President, W. J. Hall; Secretary-Treasurer, W. J. Cole. The following were appointed chairmen of the various polling sub-divisions: J. McDonald, H. Redner, C. Weese, A. Horne, L. Jolins, K. Brown, F. York, H. Windover, J. Ray and J. Sherman.

Mr. W. E. Tummon, Reeve of Huntingdon Township, was in town to day.

Mr. T. H. Thompson, Reeve of Madoc Village and Warden of the County, was in town to day.

Mr. E. Guss Porter has been elected a member of the executive committee of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Mr. W. W. Power, who has been with the Walter Main Circus for some time, is home on a short visit.

The Rev. Dr. Crothers, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, is attending committee meetings of the church in Toronto.

70 YEARS AGO

DEC. 8th., 1873.

It is with feelings of the deepest regret that we to day announce the death of our old friend Robert M. Roy, Esq. Though the fact that for some weeks the sad event has been inevitably drawing nearer, had prepared us to receive the announcement, and has somewhat mitigated its effect, yet the reflection that an old valued friend has passed away, occasions sincere regret. Mr. Roy came to Belleville about thirty years ago, and after a few years residence here was appointed a Returning Officer, at our municipal elections, which office he held up to the time of his death, being then the oldest Returning Officer in the Province. In 1849 he was appointed Town Clerk, which position he resigned a few weeks ago after nearly twenty five years of faithful and efficient service. Mr. Roy was, we believe, a native of the south of Scotland — Roxboroughshire, if we mistake not, in which country his connections are amongst the most noted and respected residents, Capt. Maitland of H.M.S. Bellerophon, which conveyed the first Napoleon to St. Helena, having been his maternal uncle. We feel quite sure that all who knew Mr. Roy will join in these expressions of regret hastily penned, to the memory of a man whom everyone respected.

APPLICATION REFUSED

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 8 — (CP) — Application for a change of venue in the cases of five Windsor and district men charged with armed robbery of the Wheatley, Ont., branch, Royal Bank of Canada, was refused by Judge Henry E. Grosch as their trial opened yesterday. Application was made on the grounds of widespread newspaper publicity given the arrest of the accused, Allan M. Baldwin, Franklin E. Smith, Vernard Gates, Leo Dubroy and Peter Devlin.

Planes Collide, 2 Airmen Killed

Simcoe, Ont., Dec. 8 — (CP) — Two students from No. 16 Service Flying Training School at Hagersville were killed Tuesday when their plane crashed on the farm of Dudley Snively, one mile northeast of Waterford.

The crash occurred after two planes collided in the air. The other plane, however, was able to keep altitude following the collision and was successful in getting back to the air school with a hole torn in the fuselage.

Russell Lampkin, Waterford storekeeper, who was an eye witness to the collision in the air, saw a piece drop off one plane and a few seconds later it plummeted to earth.

The Townsend township fire department was notified and a number of firemen responding under Fire Chief Clare Tench of Waterford. Fortunately the wreckage did not catch fire.

When the plane crashed one student was thrown clear of the aircraft, the other being found in the wreckage.

Next of kin have been notified and names will be released shortly.

Norwegian Coast Scene of Battle

London, Dec 8 (CP Cable) — R.C.A.F. Beaufighters flew through a hail of anti-aircraft fire from ships and shore guns Tuesday to attack an enemy convoy off the Norwegian coast. The raid left a coastal ship and escort vessel in smoke, the Air Ministry said. All the Canadian planes returned.

The anti-aircraft fire was described by PO. K. S. Miller of Montreal as "the heaviest we ever experienced."

Other Canadians in the attack included FO. F. A. Fair, Kingston, Ont.; and Flt. Sgt. D. R. Andrew, Gananoque, Ont.

One German plane appeared while the attack was in progress but left after a few futile bursts of cannon and machine-gun fire.

TURKISH, BRITISH

Only in the Aegean area have the Allies had little hope of successful attack without the co-operation of still another country. For with the Germans entrenched in Greece and in the Aegean Islands, Turkey holds the key to a drive in this area.

Possibility of Airfields.

Airfields on the western rim of Turkey would outflank and make possible the quick conquest of such islands as would have to be taken if a thrust into the Balkans were planned. Turkey itself, in fact, is a bridge from Asia to southeastern Europe, and the European section of the country, across the Dardenelles, Sea of Marmora and Bosphorus, is a ready-made bridgehead in the Balkans.

Britain all along has followed a policy of not requesting Turkey to act until they were prepared to give her every assistance with arms and especially air forces. It seems doubtful that the Cairo conference would have resulted in a public announcement of Turkey's political solidarity with the Allies unless Britain now feels confident of her strength in that area.

The greatest contribution Turkey could make to the Allies, however, would be the cession of airbases and permission to use the Sea of Marmora and its excellent ports, including Istanbul, to land Anglo-American forces for an offensive through the Merich Valley into Bulgaria.

Opening the Aegean and the use of the Dardanelles-Marmora-Bosphorus area, would clear the most favorable invasion route into the Balkans, the Merich Valley, which leads past Adrianople into the heart of Bulgaria, almost to Sofia. A simultaneous large-scale attack on Salonika probably would have a good chance of success, permitting a second drive up the Vardar Valley toward Yugoslavia.

The vital strategic value of these valleys is as well known to Nazi as to Allied commanders, and they are strongly defended.

The strength of Allied forces available to launch a Balkan invasion, assuming Turkish co-operation, is a secret known only to the High Command.

LONDON LETTER

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 8 — (CP) — This London of 1943 is the sort of place where commodores ride bicycles and excite not the least attention unless the bicycle has new tires.

It is the sort of place where the word foreigner is on the way out.

It is the sort of place where there are seven European governments and as many or more colonies of their exiled people; the sort of place where a young Netherlander marries the girl who escaped their native land three years before he did, and has waited for him since.

It is the sort of place where hundreds still take their tattered possessions and their shabby selves and sleep in the tube stations night upon blitzless night.

It is the sort of place where 10 thousand lonely soldiers roll like a wave to the sinful beaches of Piccadilly where they stand four deep sometimes before the bar and drink the weak beer of wartime Britain; and talk and sing and get high.

London is the sort of place where you can tell how long a Canadian soldier has been overseas by the way he looks at the direction signs on the underground.

It is the sort of place where young German refugees sing the songs of the fathers they probably left behind in a concentration camp, where they dance an Alpine dance or tell a Bavarian joke and enjoy an evening together so much it makes you happy just watching them.

It is the sort of place where you may find yourself telling the bus conductor the names of the stops because the conductor may be a girl handed the job under the latest Bevin decree and you know the route far better than she does.

London is a place where the queue is becoming a public failing, where they can't find enough homes to go around but there are hundreds of houses with "to let" signs out, where people bet on anything from the dog races to the probability of an air raid alert.

London of 1943 is the sort of a place that isn't like any other sort of a place.

VETO OF AMENDMENTS

The President of the United States has nothing to do with the proposing and adopting of amendments to the federal constitution.

He has neither the power nor the opportunity to veto a resolution passed by Congress proposing such amendments.

This point, however, was not at first clear and as early as 1798 the Supreme Court decided that amendments to the constitution need not be presented to the President for his approval.

Article V of the constitution provides in part that, "The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this constitution."

In 1794, when Washington was still President, after the Supreme Court had held in "Chisholm versus Georgia" that a state could not be sued by a citizen of another state, Congress passed a resolution proposing the following amendment to the constitution: "The judical power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state."

Four years later, January 8, 1798, President Adams informed Congress that the proposed eleventh amendment had been adopted by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states and therefore was part of the constitution.

In "Hollingsworth versus Virginia," decided the same year, the question was raised whether the amendment had been proposed in the form prescribed by the constitution inasmuch as it had not been submitted to the President for his approbation and since Article I, Section 7 of the constitution provides that, "Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the senate and the house of representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States.

The court unanimously held that the eleventh amendment, like the ten preceding amendments, had been proposed in due form and had been constitutionally adopted. It was held that the adoption of amendments to the constitution was clearly a substantive act, unconnected with the ordinary business of legislation, and not within the terms of the provisions giving the President a qualified negative on acts of Congress.

Prisoners-of-War Receiving Fags Sent by Kinsmen

The second assurance that cigarettes are getting through to Canadian prisoners of war in Germany was received by Chairman Matt Currie of the Kinsmen Fag Fund this week when an acknowledgment card was received from D. J. Dell of this city who is a prisoner at Stalag VIII B in Germany. Twice previous replies have been received from Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt V.C. indicating he had received cigarettes through the Kinsmen Fag Fund.

With the shipment of 300 cigarettes to over 70 Belleville boys this week it brings the total of fags sent overseas to 1,600,000, which is a lot of smokes, if placed end to end.

The list of Belleville boys sent individual shipments of three hundred cigarettes by the Kinsmen this week included:

D. C. Alexander, C. Allen, P. P. Archer, R. F. Arnott, Geo. Baldwin, F. G. Barlow, D. H. Barnhart, J. Bey, A. G. Bone, R. Bradford, G. W. Buker, N. P. Burshaw, Ken A. White's District

White's District—Mrs. Wm. Yateman opened her home on Tuesday for a W. A. quilting, the Star of the East.

A number from this district attended the sale at Mr. Wm. Yateman's of Thurlow on Wednesday.

Women's Missionary Society for December was held at the home of Mrs. W. Jones on Wednesday, with the President, Mrs. R. Jeffery, in charge.

Mrs. Ray Pillow and daughter, Thelma have returned to Ottawa after visiting the former's parents, Col. D. Green and Mrs. Green.

Quite a number in this vicinity are suffering from influenza.

Mrs. Charlie Aitkens of Belleville was a visitor last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery.

Miss Helen Ketcheson has returned home after spending nearly a week with her aunt, Mrs. Don. Garrison, of Simcoe.

Mrs. Sarah Acker is spending a week with her daughter in Oshawa.

A number of farmers have been busy for the past week finishing their threshing for this season.

Picton and District

Picton Merchants Report Earlier Christmas Buying

Picton, Dec. 8—Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Hudgin received a message yesterday officially advising them that their son Pte. Vernon Hudgin is making satisfactory progress and has been removed from the dangerously ill list. He was wounded in four places during the Sicilian campaign and is now back in England.

When thieves broke into Howard Wood's service station over the weekend and stole six newly retreaded tires, they left a number of new tires behind. In fact, police state, it was necessary to move the unused tires to get at the retreads. Entrance was gained by forcing a window. No trace of the tires or thieves has been found.

Local merchants report that Christmas shopping is being done much earlier this year. Reversing the usual procedure, many city folks are coming to town to shop, hoping to find articles sold out in city stores.

An aircraft from Uplands station made a forced landing on the Blake Conley farm near Wellington last weekend. The occupants escaped injury and the plane was only slightly damaged.

Week's Winners

This week's winners in the Dimes for Victory draw held to promote the sale of War Saving Stamps were $20 certificate, Francis Goodwin, Point Petre; $5 certificate, Miss Daisy Noble, Miss Lola Lehigh, Miss Marguerite McNally, Joe Lemieux of Picton; Vanley Kennedy, Solmesville; Bobby Brown, Ottawa, G. Frost, Point Petre.

Guest of Honor

Previous to leaving for Kingston where he has joined the R.C.A.M.C., Dr. S. W. D. Hart was guest of honor at a dinner at the Globe Hotel arranged by Dr. C. A. Brownson, Miss Margaret McNeill, superintendent of Prince Edward County Hospital and the supervisors, Misses Jean Young, Elinor Smith and Irene Gazley. The party was later entertained at the home of Dr. Brownson where a gift was presented Dr. Hart.

Parcels For Sailors

Parcels for twenty town boys in the navy were mailed this week by the Legion ladies of Picton Post Canadian Legion. Earlier, they sent 100 boxes to local men overseas. They are also sending large quantities of cigarettes to the officer commanding each company of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Italy.

Town Council

At the final meeting of 1943 town council Monday night, the W.P.T.B. advised that 500 cords of slabwood is available for the town, to be shipped from northern Ontario. This is softwood and will cost $7 per cord. Three carloads a week were ordered by council. Councillor R. Warren stated that deaf students who formerly resided in the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville, now live in rooms which he said were very unsatisfactory. He requested that council petition the government to return the school to its original use, suggesting that the R.C.A.F. Initial Training School now housed there be moved to one of the stations being closed or moved.

The relief report showed 37 aided during November at a cost of $452. This compares with 23 aided in November of last year at a cost of $238.

Work Described.

Work of the Selective Service office was described by A. W. Hegsman, local manager, at Rotary Club yesterday. Plans were discussed concerning the Christmas jamboree. A party for children in Rotarians' families is to be held, each child to bring a gift which will be placed in the hampers to be distributed to needy families at Christmas.

Souvenir From Italy.

As a souvenir from Italy Mr. and Mrs. Claud Brown have received an Italian 100 lire note from their son, Sgt. Ted Brown. It bears the autographs of a number of men in his unit, including Fred Goodmurphy of Wellington, Pte. E. Brooks of Trenton, Joe Fuller of Belleville, G. T. Cook of Stirling, Pte. N. Shannick of Musclow and Huck Maunder of Lindsay.

Cronk-Strong Wedding.

The marriage took place in Kingston on Dec. 1st, Rev. W. T. G. Brown officiating, of Shirley Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Strong, Portsmouth, to Staff Sergeant H. Leighton Cronk, son of Mrs. and the late Mr. John D. Cronk, of Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hicks received a cable announcing the safe arrival overseas of their son, Murray. Their daughter, Ruth, is with the C.W.A.C., stationed at Kingston.

Writing from a German prison camp, Sgt. Walter N. Hogg advises his mother, Mrs. E. L. Hogg, that he is well and that letters were being received. His pal, Fred Hayman, had received his commission and was moved to an officers' camp. From his letter it is judged that clothing is none too plentiful and that time passes slowly. He was taken prisoner a year ago when his aircraft was shot down.

Member Caterpillar Club.

Word has been received that Flying Officer Steve Dempsey has become a member of the Caterpillar Club by virtue of having to bail out of his aircraft. He is a bomb aimer and has taken part in numerous raids. The plane had taken off from a British base for Germany when the controls became useless. The pilot managed to reach 5,000 feet before the crew bailed out, the Lancaster crashed down on farm buildings, setting them afire. Dempsey is the son of Mrs. Charles Wood, R. 1, Consecon.

The boy pleaded guilty to second degree murder. His attorney, Alexander Dow, stands with him.

Continued British Demand Assured For Bacon in Wartime

British Minister Will Ask Conference to Maintain Present Bacon Ration

Ottawa, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Col. J. J. Llewellin, newly-appointed British food minister, today assured Canadian producers of continued British demand for their bacon in wartime when he spoke briefly at the Dominion-Provincial Agriculture conference in session here.

"No one here need have any fear that by going extensively into hog production now that their market will slip away from them," Col. Llewellin said.

"But when the war is finished it will be well to look around to see if the time has not come to grade bacon more carefully and not to send overseas excessively fat hogs."

Col. Llewellin said he would ask the conference to make a "real drive to maintain the present British bacon ration."

"Otherwise, if we cannot get more than 450,000,000 pounds of bacon from Canada next year I may be put in the position where I have got to cut the (weekly) ration from four to three ounces," he said.

(Under an agreement announced in October, Canada undertook to ship the United Kingdom not less than 450,000,000 pounds of bacon a year for the next two years, compared with 675,000,000 pounds it is proposed to ship this year. In addition to the 450,000,000 pounds annually, Canada will ship whatever further supplies of bacon can be provided.)

Note Book Little Benny's

Pop was looking at his paper and ma was looking at hers, saying, Really, William, I mean really, there must of been some way they could of avoided this awful war.

It probably could of been avoided much easier than it can be stopped, pop said. A lot of nuisances are like that, including the common cold, he said, and ma said, It's terrible, it's gastly, it has just litterly changed everything.

It sure has, that's the ironic part of it, pop said. A couple of dictaters got together and rolled up the biggest fighting machine in the history of the world with the idea that they could turn it loose and then just walk in and pick up the marbles and announce that the game was all over, and now their own countries are in ruins and all over the rest of the globe the political, financial and educational sistems are being turned inside out and there's hardly a man, woman or child alive who isn't feeling the effect of the upheaval somehow or other in his own personal life. You can safely say the war has changed everything, my dear, without running much risk of exaggerating, he said.

I know it, it's almost rediculous in a way, ma said. Now for instants take this Hollister divorce case. It involves millions of dollars and dozens of socially prominent people that nobody would of dreamed would ever be caught in the breath of scandal, not to mention half the leading lights of Hollywood, and what happens for land sakes? Here it is ruthlessly tucked away in a few shrrunken paragraffs with practically all the most exciting details omitted, and in peace time it would be raging merily all over every front page in the country, she said.

By gollies there are certain philosophers who claim war is a good thing, pop said. I never used to take any stock in their ravings but now I believe they've got something on their side, he said.

And he got in back of the sporting page and stayed there.

RUSSIANS FORCED

Izvestia reported the Red Army had taken up strong positions in a new defence line in the Chernyakhove area, 80 miles west of Kiev.

There was no note of alarm in dispatches from the front. Correspondents said the Germans appeared to be throwing everything they could spare into the Kiev battle, and consequently were running into trouble further south around Znomenka.

Communications favor the Germans. They are supplying the Kiev front over excellent highways and two railroads from Germany thru Poland. The Russians are unable to use any railroad west of Kiev.

South of Kiev in the Znamenka area, the Red Army was exploiting its big breakthrough southwest of Kremenchug. The Soviet wedge was being driven deeper every day between two German army groups.

Have a "Coke" = All the best

. . . or how to win people in the West Indies

All the best, says the friendly Britisher in the West Indies to wish you well. A gracious greeting—but no more cordial than the way the Canadian soldier says it. Have a "Coke", says he, and he's as quickly understood in Jamaica as in Alberta. 'Round the globe, Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the high-sign of friendliness.

"Coke" = Coca-Cola
It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

The presentation was made by Mrs. Fred Denyes and the address read by Mrs. J. W. Hodgson. Heartfelt thanks for the greatly appreciated remembrance was expressed by Roy to each and everyone present. The evening was spent in the playing of cards followed by a delicious lunch which brought the party to a close. At the conclusion of Roy's leave, he will leave for Manitoba for further training.

WEDDINGS

STORMS—HOWARD

Grace Anglican Church, Hamilton, was the scene of a pretty wedding on November 20, when Tpr. C.A.C.T.E. Lawrence Clifford Storms, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Storms, Picton, and Marion Winnifred Howard, were united in marriage. The bride was becomingly attired in white taffeta with raised cutwork effect and carrying a bouquet of Ophelia roses and fern. Miss Mildred Storms, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, her flowers being 'mums and gladioli. Cousins of the bride were bridesmaids and flower girls. A reception was held at 18 Morris Ave., the bride and groom receiving many lovely presents. Mr. and Mrs. Storms left for a trip to Toronto, and western points.

LAWRENCE—NOAH

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage, Bloomfield, Ontario, on December third, at four o'clock, when Ruth Emma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Noah, Bloomfield, became the bride of Ray Arnold, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lawrence, Picton, R.R. 1. Rev. M. Buttars performed the ceremony.

The bride was charmingly gowned in a street-length dress of azure blue crepe with navy blue accessories. She wore a corsage of sweet peas and baby's breath. Miss Phyllis Lawrence attended the bride, wearing a dress of turquoise blue with brown accessories, and corsage of white and mauve sweet peas and baby's breath. The groom was attended by Mr. Robert Young.

Following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at the home of the groom's parents. The groom's mother received the guests, wearing a dress of forest green crepe. Her corsage was mauve and yellow baby 'mums. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Edith Mainprize.

The table was beautifully decorated with mauve and yellow 'mums and was centred by the wedding cake.

After a short honeymoon, the happy couple will reside near Bloomfield.

LANE—ROYLE

The Rev. G. G. Wright officiated at the marriage ceremony of Phyllis Louise Royle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Royle to Flight Sergeant Pilot Robert George Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Lane of East Sussex, England, on Thursday evening, December second, in Church Church. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Grace Calvert, and Ronald Elmly sang "I Love You Truly".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, dressed in her long white sheer chiffon wedding gown, with shoulder length veil and carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Irene Royle, her sister's bridesmaid, was wearing a frock of pink sheer chiffon with matching turban as a headdress, and carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mr. Jack Royle, brother of the bride, was groomsman and the ushers were Mac Royle, brother of the bride and George Wallace.

For the wedding reception at the home of the bride's parents, following the ceremony, the bride's mother was attired in an ensemble of deep violet hue with corsage of pink carnations.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and western points, the bride selected a dress of robin's egg blue and navy accessories. On their return they will reside at 212 Coleman St.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Toronto, Newburgh, Trenton and Picton.

The regular meeting of the W.M.S. Auxiliary was held on December 1, at the home of Mrs. E. Badgley with a good attendance. The President, Mrs. F. Bennett conducted the devotional period. Rev. Lougheed conducted the election of officers for the ensuing year, the slate being as follows:

President—Mrs. Eugeue Badgley.

1st Vice President — Mrs. Chas. McFarlane.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. J. McFarlane.

Secretary—Mrs. Agnes Cole.

Treasurer—Miss Mary McLaren.

Supply Secretary—Mrs. F. Bennett.

Christian Stewardship of Finance Mrs. Fred Davis.

Community Friendship —Mrs. A. Cole.

Sec. Temperance, Christian Citizenship —Mrs. F. Bennett.

Literature Secretary— Mrs. J. Hines.

Associate Helper—Mrs. W. Snider

Missionary Monthly—Mrs. J. Weese.

Press Secretary—Mrs. A. Cole.

Pianist—Mrs. (Rev.) Lougheed.

Annual financial report was given by Miss Mary McLaren. A vote of appreciation to the retiring President was unanimously approved. The President then led in the beautiful candle lighting ceremony as outlined in the "Missionary Monthly", during which many Christmas carols were sung. The hostess served candies during which a social half-hour was enjoyed.

Gideons Present Testaments To Hospital, Home

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Christian Association who own and operate the Belleville General Hospital and the Belleville Home for the Aged, was held in the Board Room of the Hospital on Tuesday afternoon.

The highlight of the meeting was the presentation of beautiful new testaments from Mr. Stewart, of the Gideon Knights, to the Hospital and to the Home. Mrs. Reg. Abrams, president of the Association, accepted and most graciously acknowledged the very generous donation. Present for the impressive ceremony was the nursing staff of the Hospital.

Donations for the month of November are as follows:

Cheque of $50 from the Kiwanis; cheque of $150 from Mr. P. H. Wills; Clothing, Miss Seeley; Six potted plants, Miss Irma Parter; Fish dinner, Mr. Glen; Deacon family, flowers; Cut flowers, Mrs. W. G. Black; Sandwiches, cake and pie, Argyll Chapter; Grapes and grapefruit, Mrs. Gribble; Jam, Mrs. McLean; scalloped potatoes, St. Andrew's.

Weekly services were conducted by Major Marsh of the Salvation Army. Lady on duty at the Home for the month of December is Mrs. Thompson.

Engagement Announcement at Tea

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am announcing my engagement at a tea on a Sunday afternoon soon, from four to seven o'clock. Will you help me, please, with a few problems?

1.—My fiance's mother is dead, and his father has remarried. What would be the correct way to introduce his stepmother to my friends at the tea?

2.—Who should send out the invitations? My mother is dead, and I live with a married sister. Would informal notes be proper, and if so, how should they be worded?

3.—I would like to use the word "Tea" in the invitations. If I do, would it be proper to serve punch and sandwiches first, and later serve tea and cake?

F. E.

1.—If you just say the name of your fiance's stepmother in your introductions, it will be enough; "Mrs. Robinson, may I present Mr. Well", or "Mrs. Robinson, this is my aunt, Mrs. Allen". Since she has the same surname as your fiance, this will identify her without using the word "stepmother". However, if your fiance calls her "Mother", you, too, can use that word in your introductions if you wish: for example, "Mary, I want you to meet Bob's mother".

2.—Your sister is the one who should "sponsor" the invitations. Yes, notes of invitation are proper and graceful for these invitations. Your sister might write something like this (I'm taking for granted that you don't want the notes to carry the news of your engagement):

Dear Joan:

Fredricka and I are asking some friends to come in to tea on Sunday, December fifth, and we do hope that you and Tom will drop in sometime between four and seven. Do say "Yes, we'll be there"!

Cordially,

(I would like to suggest that, because of the important announcement to be made at your tea-party, it might be nicer to have more guests arrive at about the same time for the announcement. If you like this idea, you might write, "And we do hope that you and Tom will drop in around five o'clock".)

3.—I'm glad you're going to use the pleasant word "Tea" in your invitations. It's just the word to use. . . it means practically every kind of late-afternoon party. Yes, it will be proper to serve the punch first. . . for those so-important toasts! . . . and then serve tea with sandwiches, and then the cake.

ON MAKING A MISTAKE

If you make a mistake. . .in speaking or in some other social procedure. . . acknowledge it and laugh at it. Then people will laugh with you . . .and you've been smart enough not to give them the opportunity to laugh at you. This is an excellent recipe to defeat self-consciousness.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Taxicabs Bring Together Amusing Pickups.

"Lady! Lady! Are you going downtown? There's plenty of room in my cab".

The cab already had three passengers—a pretty dark-eyed woman, her little daughter aged six and a sailor on the front seat with the driver. The little girl was a charming chatterbox.

"Sailor", she addressed the young man on the front seat, "My father's an officer. I'll get him to make you one too". The gob grinned from ear to ear. "Thank you, miss, that will be fine".

"We want to go to the Navy Building", the mother said.

"My Daddy works there; where are you going, Sailor?" the chatterbox inquired.

"I'm going home and then—. Gee, it sure will be good to get back home and see my folks and my girl. I'm going to have ten days' leave".

Chatterbox's mother said: "That will be splendid: to see your family and your sweetheart. Perhaps you're going to be married".

"No, ma'am", the Sailor said, "I want to help wipe up the Japs first, before I get married, and Sadie feels just the same way's I do. Some guys want to get married first, and that's all right if they see it that way. But I want to come back just as good a man as when I went away, before I get married. I don't want Sadie to have any half-casualty on her hands".

"Good luck, Sailor", said the little girl as we neared the Navy Department. "I'll tell my papa about you; he'l make you an officer".

The child's mother smiled and echoed good luck wishes, as they left the cab.

The sailor again resumed his talk with the taxicab driver and me about Sadie his girl. Suddenly his speech cam to a halt. He sat up straight as an exclamation point. An imposing figure in blue with plenty of gold braid was signalling the cab. A closer view revealed an Admiral's insignia. The sailor said: "Gee, folks, here's where I shut up".

The Marry-Go-Round

A Man's Christmas

Just about now, the girl whose sweetheart or husband or boy friend is coming home on furlough for the holidays is beginning to sparkle with excitement and anticipation. She's the lucky girl!

She is going to make this Christmas a gala occasion, that he will never forget! She is going to have a fresh permanent and a brand new hairdo that will stun him and a bright new evening dress that will make his eyes pop and a cocky new hat that will stop him, like a red light!

And there is the problem of what sort of present to give him, that will please and surprise him. She has been worrying about that for some time, while her less fortunate friends were mailing their tiny packages to their men in Africa or Italy or Iceland.

All of which is false feminine psychology. A man doesn't WANT to be startled or stunned or "surprised"! His reactions to such things are totally opposite to a woman's. He doesn't WANT to be amazed or dazzled or electrified. It's women who yearn for novelty and a change and are thrilled by surprises. It's women who must have new fashions every year and long for new scenes and places and adventures.

What a serviceman dreams of, is to come back HOME—and find the same old things in the same old places just as he left them. His faded old overstuffed armchair in the same spot by the reading lamp. His old dog lying in the same place before the fire. His girl or his wife looking just exactly as she looked before he went away— and wearing the same old colors if not the same dress.

As for what to get him for Christmas—that's easy! Give him something exactly like something he already HAS. Another tie-clasp just like the one he had for years, and lost. A bath-robe or slippers the exact replica of the ragged old ones you gave away to charity when he went away. Cigars or cigarettes or neckties or socks. or shaving cream or liquor or hair tonic of the same old brand.

Don't you know that the only thing about a man that ever changes, is his heart? His tastes and notions and habits are as set as two china vases on a mantelpiece. If he goes in for plain white handkerchiefs, don't give him any fancy colored ones, however beautiful and expensive.

And don't strain your imagination, trying to think up new and fancy dishes or menus for him. Just give him the old cakes and puddings and pies he always liked. Remember you can't compete with the Army food, anyhow. But maybe you can make better pancakes than an Army cook—who knows?

Years ago, a man gave me this pointer on how to make a man happy at Christmas, by not "SURPRISING" him. Let HIM do the "surprising"—it's HIS prerogative to play Santa Clause, said the oracle. And I guess he knows his own mind.

HEALTH CHATS

Aspirin Safe Remedy For Simple Pain.

Almost everybody takes aspirin at some time or another. It is important to know whether or not it may be harmful at times. Doctors occasionally receive complaints from persons who claim that aspirin causes disturbance within the stomach.

Doctor William D. Paul, of the University of Iowa has made studies to determine just what effect aspirin may have on the stomach. In more than 100 patients whose stomachs were normal ,the aspirin did not cause any inflammation of the stomach, any swelling of the tissues, or bleeding. Doctor Paul determined this, after the patients had taken the aspirin, by looking into the stomach with an instrument known as the gastroscope, which is made up of a tube with lights and mirrors. It was found that in some of the patients the aspirin would break up rapidly in the stomach, while in others it would remain unbroken for from five to ten minutes.

In patients who had gastritis or stomach inflammation it was difficult for Doctor Paul to decide whether or not the inflammation of the lining membrane of the stomach was the result of having taken the aspirin. It was found that colored spots occurred in the lining membrane of the stomach near where the aspirin was located, but it could not be decided whether these spots were there already, or whether they had developed because of some reaction of the aspirin on the stomach.

A number of patients who had symptoms of dyspepsia, that is, sickness to the stomach, discomfort in the abdomen, and attacks of vomiting, were carefully examined. These patients were given as many as ten to sixteen aspirin tablets over a twenty-four hour period before the stomach was examined with the gastroscope. In none of them was there any sign of inflammation of the stomach.

Two patients were examined who definitely stated that after taking aspirin they had suffered abdominal discomfort. In these cases an examination also showed no changes in the stomach's lining membrane.

Doctor Paul does not deny that there may be persons who have discomfort in the abdomen after taking aspirin, but he does not believe that this is due to any effect of the drug on the stomach itself. It may be possible that the aspirin causes more than the usual amount of acid to be formed by the stomach, which, in turn, may produce a spasm of the muscle between the stomach and intestine. There is evidence to support this belief. The increased acid and spasm could cause the feeling discomfort.

Of course, no person should get into the habit of taking aspirin for any and all types of pain. When a person suffers a painful disorder, the proper thing to do is to have an examination made by a physician to determine its cause. However, for simple types of pain for which the cause is known, aspirin may be safely used.

ARCH OF SWORDS FOR RUDY

Fashion Flashes

IVY COVERED walls offer the inspiration for a charming hat, a draped pillbox of soft green crepe made with drapery and a bevy of tiny gilded birds nesting in front.

A good way to beat the very slim silhouette is through the offices of a long wide scarf of lace jersey, chiffon, or tulle or just good old wool, according to the type of dress.

Well worth the precious shoe coupon is a beautifully handled step-in pump of very light weight dark blue lizard made with medium heel that should be right with almost anything but black or really dressy clothes.

An easy method of smartening up a simple black dress is by the route of a pair of long black gloves, and instead of wearing clips at the neckline, place a clip at the end of each glove.

An old conceit comes back with the revival of the ribbon choker. Narrow black velvet ribbon, worn high on the neck, and tied in front with a little bow with a teardrop clear crystal pendant, is demure and charming. Nice, too, with matching ribbon and crystal earrings

Best of all is the hand-sewn simple slip-on glove fashioned of good leather that is washable. Rather one pair of really fine gloves of this type than two cheap pairs. Today is the time to learn to buy carefully and to refrain from so-called "bargains".

2 WAYS TO MAKE PRECIOUS JELL-O and JELL-O PUDDINGS Go Farther

UNFORTUNATELY, due to wartime conditions, no housewife is getting all the Jell-O and Jell-O Puddings she would like to get. But when you are able to get either, you are sure of satisfaction. Use them carefully and make them go as far as possible. Here are two ideas to help you.

JELL-O CUBES WITH CUSTARD

2 cups hot water
1 cup custard sauce
1 package JELL-O (Strawberry, Raspberry or Cherry)

Dissolve Jell-O in hot water. Turn into shallow pan. Chill until firm. Cut in cubes. Pile cubes lightly in sherbert or parfait glasses. Pour custard sauce over the cubes of shimmering Jell-O. Serves 6 to 8.

Easy, isn't it? And here's an idea for Jell-O Puddings:

JELL-O TRIFLE

1 package JELL-O PUDDING
(any flavor, but vanilla is specially good)
6 or 7 squares plain cake
Home-made jam

Prepare Jell-O Pudding as directed on the package. Spread top of each square of cake with jam. Place squares of cake in individual dessert dishes. When pudding is cool, pour over cake and chill.

This recipe gives 6 or 7 servings of as delightful a dessert as you ever tasted. You can thank the unvarying quality of Jell-O Puddings for that full, rich flavor—that smooth, creamy consistency.

TWO GRAND DESSERTS—limited in supply just now, but unchanged in quality.

Warden Criticizes Inequality Of Prices Compared to Cost Of Labor in County Council

Floor Price for Farm Products Praised by the Speaker

MEMBERS WELCOMED

Inequality of the price which farmers receive for their products as compared with the rising cost of labor was criticized by Warden Dr. S. S. Lumb of Bancroft as he addressed county council members at the opening session of Hastings County Council Tuesday afternoon.

"Canadian coal miners have recently received a dollar per day increase in their wages, while the basic wage in many industries is from 50 cents to $1 per hour," stated the Warden. "Against this is the stationary price of butter fat of cheese. Butter fat today is the same price as it was back in 1937."

Dr. Lumb declared, that the price of livestock was none too good and grain, which this year farmers had to buy was higher in price. The price of pork was not high enough to compensate the farmers for the additional expense.

He referred to the talk of government leaders of a floor price for farm products and declared this to be an excellent thing, as it would help compensate farmers for the noticeable increase in the cost of living.

Warden Extends Welcome

The Warden extended his welcome to members of the council and referred to the fact, that it happened to be the second anniversary of the dastardly Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. "That indeed was a black day for the Allies," he said, "but recent turn of events has made conditions on all war fronts much better now than on Dec. 7th two years ago. Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has assisted in turning the tide and was now winning glory for itself on the battlefields in Italy."

Turning to matters of municipal interest Dr. Lumb congratulated Reeve Roscoe Robson of Thurlow township upon his success in being elected to the Legislative Assembly during the provincial election last August. He also expressed his appreciation to council members for the excellent co-operation shown during his term as Warden, and congratulated the council members, who had survived the early elections.

All Debts Paid.

Referring to the fact that the county was now out of debt, Dr. Lumb jocularly intimated the incoming warden would have an easy time. "We have everything greased and all debts paid off," he said. "Almost anyone could handle the Warden's job another year."

Reading of correspondence with a recommendation on the part of Reeve John A. Bell of Marmora township that the rehabilitation committee of the council meet during the session to inaugurate plans for the coming year, concluded the afternoon's business. Action toward naming a date for meeting of the rehabilitation committee was promised by the Warden.

In the reading of correspondence it was revealed a meeting of the county Federation of Agriculture was scheduled for Wednesday evening, while County Clerk Denyes read a lengthy report of the Toronto meeting of the county agricultural committees. Warden Lumb intimated he had been at the meeting and reported the plans discussed included reforestation, soil conservation, animal health, together with better markets and the provision of cold storage facilities for storage of farm produce.

Kiwanis Sponsor Drive to Sell Savings Stamps

The Kiwanis organization in Ontario has been asked on extremely short notice to take over an urgent war job this month, and, with the co-ordination of all Ontario Kiwanis Clubs, the job has been accepted. The Kiwanis Clubs of Canada are co-operating with the National War Finance Committee to sell $1,000,000 worth of War Savings Stamps this month. One method is to encourage people to place War Savings Stamps on their Christmas cards, and to make use of the free Christmas cards given away in the stationery, book and gift stores throughout Canada with each purchase of stamps.

Publicity Tour.

To publicize this effort of the campaign, a giant Christmas card is now making a whirlwind tour of Ontario cities. The card carries the picture of an aerial bomb headed towards a frightened Hitler, and the words "Merry Christmas to Adolf from Ontario, Canada."

A ceremony of considerable proportions will be held at the Four Corners on Thursday morning at 10. a.m., when Mayor Rollins will affix the first stamp to the bomb. The citizens of the city are urged to co-operate in this venture and be present at the ceremony.

The bomb started this tour in Toronto on Saturday, was in Ottawa Monday and in Brockville, Cornwall and Kingston Tuesday, and will arrive this afternoon in Belleville. It will go from here to every other large city in the Province. In each city the Mayor will affix the first stamp, and as many other people as possible will be encouraged to buy stamps and affix them to the bomb and sign their names on the other part of the card.

For R.C.A.F. Benevolent Fund.

About three days before Christmas the card is to be flown to England and delivered to Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Commander-in-Chief of the R.C.A.F. Overseas, with the request that a real bomb be dropped as close to Adolf's head as possible, and the directions that the card and stamps be turned over to the R.C.A.F. Benevolent Fund.

The "Bomb" will go to Oshawa following its visit to Belleville and, as the card was made on a few hours' notice, and there are only two weeks for it to cover 22 cities, the Kiwanis Club of Belleville urges as many people as possible to help blast Hitler for Christmas.

The War Today—

Winning of Turkey Into Allied Camp Major Allied Victory

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

The winning of ultra-conservative Turkey into "closest unity" and complete "identity of interest" with Britain, the United States and Russia, represents one of the major bloodless victories of the war, for there are few places of greater strategical importance than the territory and waters under Turkish control.

There's a double significance in this event, which was the outcome of a meeting between Turkey's President Ismet Inonu and Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt in Cairo. Apart from the moral and perhaps material strength acquired by the Allies, this agreement seems to me to mean that there must have been an ironing-out of long-standing and dangerous suspicions by the fact that while Marshal Stalin himself couldn't be present, he joined in inviting Inonu to the parley, and thus gave the session his official blessings.

The handshaking between the Muscovites and the Turks is a matter of greater moment even than the further cementing of the Anglo-American and Turkish friendship. That's so because the hard-eyed way the Russians and the Turks have watched each other play their cards has made other nations uneasy.

The point has been, of course, that the Turks control the Dardanelles—the strait which provides the only gateway the Russians have between the Black Sea and outside waters.

Naturally Moscow has wanted to ensure her perpetual use of this waterway.

So it's good to see the Turks and Muscovites smiling at each other. The pot of gold at the end of that rainbow will be a friendly adjustment of the status of the Dardanelles.

Does this Turko-Allied agreement mean that the Ottomans are going to join us in the war?

The Turks appear to have given their outright allegiance to the United Nations. The indications are that Ankara is prepared to get into the war with both feet, if the Allies really need this additional military aid. Such a situation might arise from the projected all-out offensive against Hitler, and a call from the Allies likely would set the Turkish armies marching.

However, while the Turks have been modernizing and re-equipping their forces with the aid of Britain and the United States, they still lack the equipment they would like to have for war against the Hitlerites. Also, Turkey's territory in Europe, north of the Dardnelles, is vulnerable to heavy assault for the Germans occupying the neighboring Balkan areas. Furthermore, the Nazis hold the Aegean islands off the Turkish coast, and the great, straggling city of Istanbul (Constantinople) lies wide open to attack by German bombers.

So I think we can say that the Turks probably are on call for active service, if and when needed. Meantime one would expect that they at least would grant the Allies valuable bases and free passage through Turkish territory if we should need it.

Chinaman Given Seven Year Term On Eight Charges

Trenton (Special)—Harry Lowe, a Chinaman, was sentenced in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday by Magistrate John L. Lloyd to seven years in the Kingston penitentiary on eight different charges of theft, fraud, forgery and false pretences. County Crown Attorney Col. R. C. Donnan K.C. prosecuted.

Lowe was brought back from Kingston by Trenton police a week ago after being wanted since last February on a charge of stealing a car from his employer. Other charges included obtaining $550 at the village of Chippawa, Welland County. Theft of six watches from the town of New Liskeard obtaining the sum of $157 at Geraldton, Ont.; theft of an automobile from Toronto; false pretences (obtaining goods to the value of $86.45 at Trenton) also obtaining $15 falsely at Trenton and a charge of forgery at Toronto.

Magistrate Lloyd commented with words to the effect that this man was preying on society and was therefore a menace.

Earl Elliott on a breach of the Liquor Control Act was assessed $12.75 and on a breach of the Highway Traffic Act $13.

Six other breaches of the Highway traffic brought down $4.50 or $7.50 each.

A charge of assault against Helen Hearns brought a fine of $2.00 and two months suspended sentence, while a similar charge against John Tompkins was dismissed on payment of $3.25 costs.

Three breaches of the parking bylaw were each assessed the usual $1.00.

A charge of incest was enlarged for one week, while John Dainard on an assault charge was assessed $19.75 or fifteen days in jail.

Two were charged with disorderly conduct and paid $7.50 each.

Three other cases under the Liquor Control Act each paid $10 and costs.

Red Cross

Red Cross workers were few at the work rooms on Tuesday afternoon no doubt due to the busy season of the year, however, it was felt by those present that the rooms should remain open next Tuesday and then close for the holiday season. The first meeting of the new year will be held on January the Fourth. It is hoped a considerable amount of work will be taken home by the ladies next Tuesday to be finished up during the holiday season as the quotas are large and much help is needed in order to get the goods on its way to the fighting forces on scheduled time.

Three donations of money were received from the school children; $1.00 from Miss Walker's class at College Street School, $2.00 from Miss E. Fowler's class at College Street and $2.00 from Miss Sweetman's at Dufferin. In addition a beautiful quilt top, the work of girls of Miss Walker's group of College Street School girls, was presented to the Red Cross. This quilt represented many hours of fine work by the girls and was greatly appreciated.

No War Criminal Can Evade Justice By Flouting Law

London Dec. 8. (CP)—Viscount Simon, chairman of the United Nations Commission for investigation of war crimes, told the House of Lords yesterday that no criminal who takes refuge in a neutral state will have any legal right to say: "Here I am and here I stay".

"There is no such thing in international law as a right of asylum attaching to an individual", he declared. "It is part undoubtedly of the sovereignty of any state to admit such foreigners, but the state is at perfect liberty to eject them again".

Simon disclosed that the United Nations Commission had been set up in London and that meetings already had been held at the foreign office.

His pronouncement followed a denunciation by the Archbishop of York of the horrors he said he had seen while in Russia.

"We want to get at the men who have corrupted and perverted the youth and manhood of Germany and who are responsible for these crimes", the Archbishop said. "If Hitler managed to escape it would be a monstrous outrage against justice".

Says Husband Has Right to Decide Who Enters His House

London, Dec. 8 — (CP)—British courts, which recently ruled that money saved by a wife in her housekeeping accounts belongs not to her but to her husband dealt wives another jolt today.

A magistrate in Tonbridge, market-town southeast of London, ruled that a husband has the right to decide who is to enter his home, including in-laws. The case before the bench involved a wife seeking a separation from her husband who was employed out of town. Coming home for occasional week-ends, she charged, he objected to finding her sister there as an overnight guest.

The chairman of the bench dismissed her application, ruling that a "wife must realize that a husband is the master in his own house," and is entitled to rule on those who cross his threshhold.

Do What Your Doctor Does If Child Is Listless

Because the tongue is the upper end of the stomach and bowels, it is usually the first thing a doctor looks at when he examines a sick child. He knows that a coated tongue and bad breath is a danger signal—a warning of an upset condition below, which may lead to real illness.

DISTRICT DEALERS OF OIL COMPANY HOLD SUPPER PARTY

District dealers of McColl Frontenac Products held their annual supper party at the Y.M.C.A., Tuesday evening when approximately sixty dealers in the area ranging from Trenton to Napanee and from Picton to Madoc convened as guests of the firm. Presentation of dealership charts and signet rings for five, ten and fifteen years' association with the firm were officially presented to a number of district men by a representative from the Toronto office. Brief addresses were heard while educational and news films were shown. Members of the Y.M.C.A. Women's Auxiliary catered to the supper.

RATIONING TO BE TIGHTER

Toronto, Dec. 8 —(CP)— Rationing in Canada is likely to become tighter, John O'Neill of the Prices Board said last night in an address to the Weston Business Men's Association. He stressed that approximately 750,000 of Canada's 12,000,000 population had been taken from production jobs to serve in the armed forces.

MRS. P. D. ROSS OF OTTAWA DIES

Ottawa, Dec. 8 (CP)—Mrs. Mary Ross, wife of P. D. Ross, publisher of the Ottawa Journal, died early today. A semi-invalid for some years, she was in her 70's.

The former Mary Littlejohn of Toronto, Mrs. Ross was married in 1891, the year her husband purchased the Ottawa Journal.

For many years she was prominent in activities of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, Canadian Red Cross Society and Ottawa Women's Canadian Club.

WINDSOR PAYS BONUS

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 8 — (CP) — City council decided last night to pay bonuses to Windsor's municipay employees out of $35,000 in surplus funds. Employees receiving up to $1,500 a year will be paid $80; those receiving $1,500 to $2,100 will receive a $40 bonus.

Mexico Authorizes Legation

Mexico City, Dec. 8—(AP)—A bill authorizing establishment of a Mexican Diplomatic Legation in Canada was introduced yesterday in the Senate.

The bill sets out that the move would help promote hemispheric solidarity.

NAVY SUPPLIES MOST OF ALL-STAR FOOTBALL TEAM

White and Miller of Notre Dame Only Two Not Training for Navy

SMART COLLECTION

New York, Dec. 8 —(AP)— The Navy took over United States College football this year. The Army didn't encourage football among its men taking special courses in many schools or there might have been a struggle.

The Annual Associated Press all-America team announced today includes nine Navy students, one West Point (Army) star and a running back who was discharged from the Army just before the season opened.

This is the team:

Ends, Joe Parker, Texas and Ralph A. Heywood, Southern California; tackles, Jim White, Notre Dame, and Pat Preston, Duke; guards, John Steber, Georgia Tech, and George Brown Jr., Navy; centre, Casimir Myslinski, Army; backs, Bob Odell, Pennsylvania; Creighton Miller, Notre Dame; Otto Graham, Northwestern; Bill Daley, Michigan.

Myslinski and Miller, a Notre Dame Senior, are the only two not training for the United States Navy.

If there was any surprise in the selection it was the absence of Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame's great passing quarterback. Bertelli was unable to finish out the season, having been called into the Navy.

Notre Dame, voted the top college team in the country, placed two-all-Americans—White and Miller—and would have had Bertelli on top for certain had he finished the season.

THE CHAMPION

DEFENDS TITLE

Showing that he does get his curly locks mussed up once in a while, here you see "Whipper Billie" Watson, British Empire heavyweight wrestling champion, who defends his crown against John Katan, the Palermo challenger at the Hume Arena Thursday night in a Commission-sanctioned bout.

Katan established himself strongly here in Belleville last summer when he wrestled "Wild Bill" Longson, the world champion, to a full hour draw match in a world title bout. Last week in Toronto Katan was disqualified in an Empire title bout with Watson that ended in a turmoil when fans swarmed the ringside in protest. The return engagement was transferred to the Hume Arena in Belleville.

In addition Promoter Tunney signed the mad Russian — THE CZAR — to meet "Hard-boiled" Hannigan in the semi-final and to round off his greatest show he added Mike Demitre, of Montreal, to clash with Pierre DeGlane in the curtain-raiser.

ONE JUNIOR O.H.A. TEAM TO OPERATE IN BELLEVILLE

Squad Will be Known as Belleville Juniors and Will be Entered in Junior "B" Series

OFFICERS ELECTED

Belleville is to have but one junior O. H. A. team for the season of 1943-44 and that team is to be known only as the Belleville Juniors, it was decided at a collective meeting of representative hockey interests at the Hume Arena.

The election of officers for the newly organized club resulted as follows:-

Hon. Pres.-Mayor Rollins.
President-Thos. J. Fleury.
Vice.-Pres.-William Dennis.
Executive committee-Ken Watt, Jack Doran, A. R. "Toots" Holway.
Secretary-Treasurer-Wally Berry.
Club physician-Dr. F. R. Ross.
Trainer-William Britton.

The clubs convening at the meeting included the Belleville Redmen, represented by Ken Watt and Speedy St. Louis, Belleville Arenas by A. R. Holway and Wally Berry, St. Michael's Academy by T. J. Fleury and J. Doran. It was the unanimous decision of the meeting to operate one junior team and two juvenile clubs, thus giving boys under 18 years of age an opportunity to play and learn the rudiments of Canada's national winter sport. The latter winners will be entered in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association.

The first practice of the Belleville Juniors will be held shortly after the opening of the Hume Arena for the winter season.

The Belleville juniors will be grouped with the Trenton R. C. A. F. Manning Depot team, Trenton Juniors, Stirling "Bombers", Marmora and possibly Tweed may yet affiliate in the junior O. H. A. ranks. A. G. Meagher of Belleville was named assistant convener to S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, O. H. A. executive member.

The team will be entered in the junior "B" series of the O. H. A.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON

London, Dec. 8— (CP) — Back from several years of soldiering, Bob Brown wondered how much of his old skill remained as he walked on the professional rugby field.

The crowd wondered, too. Especially when Brown, ace Batley Rugby League goal-getter of pre-war days, missed a penalty kick by the proverbial mile. Then a second chance came—a much more difficult one. A penalty from half-way, near the touchline, it appeared an impossible possible. But Brown scored.

Four more times that afternoon he drove the ball square between the posts. The fans stood up to cheer him. He had made a come-back in a big way.

There was more to it than that, though. Something the crowd didn't know.

Brown had come back from the army with only one eye.

Two well-known rugby players have had miraculous escapes—one from captivity, the other from death.

A. D. Roncoroni, English International Rugby Union forward, rejoined the British forces in Italy after a 400-mile hike through enemy-occupied territory. He was captured in North Africa and was interned in Milan where he found himself in the same camp as the Test cricketeers, Bill Bowes of Yorkshire and F. R. Brown of Surrey.

One of the first men Roncoroni met after reaching safety was his brother, J. A. Roncoroni, himself an outstanding rugby player.

The player who beat death is Gwyn Williams, Welsh Rugby League and Services International forward. During the fighting in Tunisia a bullet passed through his head. Williams now is recuperating at a hospital here and complete recovery is expected.

Sport crept into the grim business of sea war when in a recent naval operation in the Mediterranean the password was "Alex James" and the reply "Arensal."

Everyone over here, of course, knows that Alex James was an outstanding performer with football's mighty Arsenal Gunners. Anyone who replied "Preston North End" to the password no doubt would have been regarded as a fifth columnist—or just a jerk who didn't know soccer.

Three policemen who visited the bowling green of a Blackpool hotel saw a row of bookmakers shouting odds on lawn bowling matches and made bets with them.

Later, in what was described as a "test case" to determine if a bowling green was a track within the meaning of the Betting and Lotteries Act, the hotel licencee was fined $90 for permitting bookmaking on the green.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

Grandpappy Morgan, a hillbilly of the Ozarks, had wandered off into the hills and when supper time came and he failed to return, young Jake was sent out to search for him and bring him in. Jake located Grandpappy standing quietly in a clump of bushes.

"Gittin' dark, Grandpap," said Jake.
"Yep," said Grandpappy.
"Supper's ready."
"Yep."
"Ain't ye hungry, Grandpap?"
"Yep."
"Wal, ain't ye comin' home?"
"Nope.'
"Why not?"
"Caint."
"Why cain't ye?"
"Standin' in a b'ar trap."

(Sounds logical).

Junior hockey was given the green light at an organization meeting held at the Hume arena Monday when Tom Fluery was named president and Wally Berry secretary and treasurer of the Belleville Juniors. Wiser heads saw the folly of attempting to operate more than one junior hockey team in Belleville, but in an effort to assure the teen aged lads desirous of playing the game a couple of juvenile teams will be organized for the under-18-years group who fail to obtain berths on the local Junior "B" team.

Representation from three different groups attended the meeting that lasted well over three hours, Belleville Redmen, Belleville Arenas and St. Mikes A.C. were on hand seeking to sponsor junior teams here. However, only the names of 23 teen-aged hockey players could be arrived at, so the question of three local teams are definitely out and later one team was agreed upon.

(Tweed warms up).

Reports from Sam Curry's village indicate Tweed may be seeking admission into the local junior O.H.A. group after affiliating with the parent body. Regardless, the district is assured of the largest junior O.H.A. grouping in many years. Besides Trenton, Belleville and Stirling from the 1942-'43 loop, FL. "Buff" Horton has entered a junior "Flyer" squad from the No. 8 Manning Pool Depot at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base and Marmora is also a new starter, so with Tweed in the fold a six-teamed group will operate.

FL. Horton's junior Flyers will be a strong outfit with players representing all parts of Canada. No doubt a goodly number of Air Force enlistments will be arriving at the Trenton Manning Pool depot directly after the New Year, which would give the Junior Flyers additional playing strength just when needed.

(Minor loop teams).

Another wise move on the part of the junior hockey interests was their decision to foster a couple of juvenile hockey teams in Belleville in 1944. About six years ago Juvenile hockey flourished in Belleville with four teams and was just beginning to show the results of player dividends when war was foisted upon us.

However, here's an opportunity to revive the sponsorship of Juvenile hockey and lay a solid foundation for hockey in the post war period. The Belleville Hockey Club has a strong executive headed by Tom Fluery and there is no reason now why the teen-aged kids shouldn't be given a chance to learn the game. Players failing to catch berths with the junior squad and who are under 18 years of age will now be taken care of in the operation of a couple of juvenile teams.

The weather may have moved more towards winter-like, but Promoter Frank Tunney is apparently going to keep things hot at the Hume arena tomorrow night. At least it would appear that way judging from his complete wrestling card.

Here it is as given by Mr. Tunney today—opener—Mike Demitre vs. Pierre DeGlane; semi-final—"Hard-Boiled" Hannigan vs. The Czar and of course the main morsel of the meal—the Empire title go between Billie Watson and John Katan. If that isn't a torrid wrestling dish, well, name your own folks.

(Remember when—)

Warren Wright's long-tailed Whirlaway, two years ago today, was voted in the Turf and Sports Digest's annual poll as the horse of the year over Mrs. Al Sabath's $700. yearling bargain, Alsab. Whirlaway went on to become the greatest money-maker of the American turf, before he was retired to the stud.

BUDDY O'CONNOR ALONE ON TOP SCORING RACE

Canadiens' Centre Star Adds Seven Points During Last Week

3 TIED FOR SECOND

Montreal, Dec. 8 — (CP) — Canadiens' Buddy O'Connor is back alone at the top of the National Hockey League scoring race, thanks to another of those spurts that have twice brought him to the top in the official weekly figures.

O'Connor added two goals and seven assists during the last week to shoot to the head of the pack after going pointless and dropping to seventh place the week before. His 26-point total put him one up on Doug Bentley and Bill Mosienko of Chicago and Bill Cowley of Boston.

Mosienko and Bentley each picked up five points during the week to remain tied for second place, with Cowley dropping back to join them after leading the race a week ago.

Cowley gained three assists to maintain leadership in that department despite the big climb of O'Connor. The Boston playmaker shot his assist total to 20, one more than O'Connor and four more than Elmer Lach of Canadiens.

Mud Bruneteau of Detroit still led the goal-getters although he went pointless in the week's official figures, which do not include last night's Detroit-Boston game. His 15 goals gave him a single goal margin over Boston's Herbie Cain, who in turn was two up on Gerry Heffernan of Canadiens.

Heffernan was the week's greatest gainer in the goal division, boosting his total by five — four of them in one game when Canadiens whipped Detroit 8-2. Greatest threats to the goal leaders were Bentley with 11, Mosienko and rookie Fern Majeau of Canadiens with 10 each.

Mike McMahon of Canadiens and Pat Egan of Detroit split the penalty "honors," each with 32 minutes.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 8 — (CP) — Red Dutton can't get over the wonder of it. Six weeks ago the National Hockey League was just a headache to its managing director. Club managers were combing the country for military-exempt players and still couldn't find sufficient talent to operate. Life for Dutton was a jumble of jangling telephones, wailing managers, selective service forms, border-crossing permits, a critical press. The fact Red survived is proof of his executive talent and his physical resiliency. All of a sudden the jig-saw fell together and what a pretty picture it now makes. N.H.L. gate receipts are up 11 per cent and attendance is up seven per cent over last year, the record season.

No wonder Dutton believes in Santa Claus. A couple of days ago in his comfortable Montreal office Red leaned back in a chair and fairly barked with optimism. He figures the record attendance all around the circuit is proof war-time operation is justified. Now he's looking toward the war's end and a mighty expansion of hockey. Plane travel will eliminate distance and cities all over the continent will have major hockey. Trans-oceanic plane travel for hockey is also likely. Clubs will have their own transport planes.

Professional hockey will reach previously untouched fields in United States. Already there is an application for a franchise from Los Angeles. Other central and far-western United States cities are interested. But Red doesn't think the United States will take major hockey entirely away from Canada. Montreal and Toronto will remain important centres and air travel may make it possible for other Canadian cities to enter.

Dutton envisions clubs playing every night in the N.H.L. with as many games in the season as in the major baseball leagues. Clubs would carry two complete teams, one playing one night, the other the next.

Dutton didn't like some of this column's comments on professional hockey and said so. Dutton is pretty frank and undoubtedly honest in all his conversation. It's a relief to a newspaperman to find a sports executive who talks from the shoulder without figuring the angles first.

As we finished our talk, Red's third and youngest son came in—an 18-year-old in Navy uniform, heading east in hopes he'll soon see active duty. Dutton was mighty proud of the boy but there was pain in his eyes as the youngster said good-bye and hurried to a train. Red's other two sons, Flt. Sgt. Joe, 23, and Sgt. Alex, 20, both are missing in action with the R. C. A. F. overseas.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 147

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You generally say of a genius that he must be slightly nuts. But don't speak slightly of bridge experts. They do too many screwy things.

Take the case of a jump rebid in the same suit. There are experts who try to tell you that such a bid is not forcing to game. The advice is positively revolting.

A one-jump bid is the universal signal for keeping the bidding alive until a game is reached. Such a one-jump should never be made unless the jumper can see enough tricks to make a game.

What difference does it make whether the one-jump is in a new suit or in the same suit? If the jumper says he can see a game, partner must be a fool to stop at less.

What difference does it make whether the one-jump is on the first round or on a later round? If the jumper says he can see a game, partner must be a chump to stop at less.

What difference does it make if partner has nothing more to show? If the one-jumper says he can already see enough for game, only an ox would stop at less.

You have this hand:

♠ A Q 7
♥ A K Q 10 8 6
♦ K 7 4
♣ 6

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. Your hand contains eight tricks; two aces, two kings, two queens and two short cards in clubs.

Suppose your partner responded with one no-trump. He admits having three tricks. Even if he stretched a trick, you can see enough for a game in hearts.

So, your second round bid is three hearts; a one-jump rebid in your own suit. The fact that you rebid your suit shows it is rebiddable. The fact that you one-jumped ordered the bidding to continue to game.

Can you imagine a partner passing three hearts? Two more lessons and such a partner would graduate into a first class moron.

"Claudia"

"Claudia" the Rose Franken comedy drama that was such a smash Broadway hit has been translated to the screen with Dorothy McGuire in her original role. The 20th Century-Fox tender comedy romance, which also features Robert Young and Ina Claire, is now in its final day at the Belle Theatre.

The Canadian Movietone News and a very interesting and timely March of Time Subject "America's Food Crisis" precede the feature offering.

George Formby, "No Limit"

Fun, spills, thrills and romance abound in George Formby's funniest feature comedy "No Limit," featuring Florence Desmond, announced as one of two features coming next to the Belle Theatre.

"Squadron Leader X"

The desperate intrigues of an arrogant Nazi aviator to avoid detection by the British Intelligence service when he is unwittingly brought to Britain by Belgian patriots who believe him to be a British airman, provide thrilling action for RKO Radio's "Squadron Leader X," announced as the worthy co-feature attraction.

Co-starring Eric Portman and Ann Dvorak, the new film is based on an original story by Emeric Pressburger, famed author of "The Invaders" and "One Of Our Aircraft is Missing."

The story, briefly, revolves around Eric Kohler, a Nazi fighter pilot, who takes part in a German scheme to offset pro-British sentiment in Belgium. The activities which necessitate his wearing a British uniform, lead to his being transported to Britain. Making his way to London, he endeavors to get help, under threat of blackmail, from a young girl of German extraction, who was once in love with him.

Complications come about when the Nazis, fearing Kohler may disclose vital secrets, order his death. He also finds himself hunted by the shrewd officers of Britain's M. I. 5. How he almost defeats his enemies, meeting his doom in a way that comes as a complete surprise to himself as well as the audience, makes for a series of stirring episodes, leading to the powerful conclusion.

Developing the dramatic aspects of the film rather than the war angle and disclosing the methods used by the Germans in manufacturing and publicising synthetic flying "aces", "Squadron Leader X" also reveals the functions and operations of the powerful British Intelligence Department known as M. I. 5.

As the German Pilot, Eric Portman gives a convincing and dramatic performance matched by the unusual and suspense-laden portrayal of Ann Dvorak, who plays the German girl.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Wagons Roll at Night"

A four star cast heads the new Warner Bros. picture, "The Wagons Roll at Night" which comes next to the McCarthy theatre. The headliners are Humphrey Bogart, Joan Leslie, Eddie Albert and Sylvia Sidney and the picture is a powerfully dramatic story of nomads of the road, living, loving and hating by a code of their own. Made by the same studio which gave us the thrill-packed excitement of "They Drive by Night," "The Wagons Roll at Night" is a mile-a-minute action drama from fade-in to fade-out.

Bogart follows up his recent smash success in "High Sierra" with the role of a hard and cynical owner of a carnival company, which he rules with a rod of iron. He has, however, like most hard guys, a soft spot. His is reserved exclusively for his kid sister, played by Joan Leslie, for whom he maintains a country home. One jump ahead of the sheriff, as usual, the carnival rolls into Hentyville—and trouble. The lion tamer gets drunk and lets one of the lions escape. The beast roams into a local grocery store, and the grocery clerk, Eddie Albert, corners him with a pitchfork. Even hard-boiled Bogart is impressed by this, and in order to jack up box-office receipts he invites Albert to make guest appearances with the carnival that week. He is a sensational success, and thrilled with the new, strange life, Albert moves on with the show. Eventually the drunken lion tamer is fired, and Albert gets the job. The pseudo gypsy fortune teller played by Sylvia Sidney, teaches him the ropes of carnival life.

The old lion-tamer comes back one night while Bogart is away and tries to start trouble. He picks a fight with Eddie and while they are fighting one of the lions gets out and mangles the old man with almost fatal results. Albert, too, has been hurt, and to avoid trouble should the old man die, Sylvia drives him up to the farm, although she knows that Bogart has expressly forbidden any of the carnival troupe to go there.

At the farm Albert recovers rapidly, and he and Joan fall in love. They have an idyllic week, until Bogart learns what is going on, comes up and takes Albert back to the carnival. Furious because his sister seems smitten with the boy, Bogart plans to end the romance once and for all. The unique revenge which he plans, and its unexpected results bring the dramatic story to a thrilling climax.

"Follow the Fleet"—the second great feature on the screen of the McCarthy—Music, romance, drama and thrills combine to make this one of the most entertaining pictures of the year. RKO radio's "Follow the Fleet" has a star-rating that includes Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Randolph Scott, Harriet Hilliard, Astrid Allwyn and scores of girls and go-get 'em gobs hitting the high spots afloat and ashore. Lyrics and music by that master artist of rhythm, Irving Berlin, and the story is directed by Mark Sandrich.

The latest world news completes three hours of top-notch entertainment.

To Ann Dvorak and Eric Portman fall fat roles in what probably is the year's most exciting picture, RKO Radio's "Squadron Leader X", the unusual story of a Nazi pilot trapped in London. On the same program coming to the Belle is George Formby and Florence Desmond in "No Limit," big fun and spill feature.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Frontier Fury"

"Frontier Fury" Columbia's newest outdoor adventure yarn, is scheduled to make its local bow when it opens next at the Capitol theatre. Husky two-fisted Charles Starrett is to be seen in the leading role, while the supporting cast includes Roma Aldrich, Arthur "Arkansas" Hunnicutt and Jimmie Davis and his Singing Buckaroos.

"King of the Lumberjacks"

The added action packed thriller "King of the Lumberjacks" opening next at the Capitol theatre stars John Payne with Gloria Dickson, Stanley fields. Directed by William Clemen, a Warner Brothers First National picture.

A Three Stooges comedy entitled "Matriphony" and the 14th chapter of "G-Men vs. The Black Dragon" complete a swell doubleheader for the weekend.

AT THE CAPITOL — A tense scene in "King of the Lumberjacks," starring John Payne with Gloria Dickson and Stanley Fields, the timber-topping thriller, starting next at the Capitol with the added western "Frontier Fury," featuring Charles Starrett.

What's Doing in Sport

Montreal—(CP)— The Montreal Athletic Commission yesterday sanctioned a bout for the Canadian Flyweight title here Dec. 15 between Lulu O'Connor and Florian Bibeau.

Calgary —(CP)— The Navy and Air Force teams in the Albert Services Senior Hockey League were amalgamated yesterday to operate under the name Tecumseh-Mustangs. FO. Tiny Thompson was appointed coach of the new team, with Marty Burke assisting.

Montreal—(CP)— Hockey-player John Mahaffy, property of the Canadiens in the N. H. L. and formerly with the Montreal Royals, has been discharged from the Army, it was announced last night. There is a possibility he may be turned over to a war-weakened pro club.

Toronto, Dec. 8 — (CP) — The Toronto Hockey League at its annual meeting last night announced total revenue from all sources last year was $7,127. Expenditures were $5,643, leaving a balance of $1,484.

Ottawa, Dec. 8—(CP)—Hull Volants suffered their first defeat in four starts last night when Petawada Grenades nosed them out 5-4 in the first game of an Ottawa Senior Hockey League doubleheader. In the second game Arnprior R. C. A. F. played to a 3-3 tie with Montagnards. An overtime session was scoreless.

Hockey's Big Seven

Major Loop Baseball Clubs Will Not Train in Florida

By The Canadian Press

Florida will not see major league baseball squads next February for the second year in succession but sufficient players have migrated to the Orange state to spend the winter that it would not require many more to re-establish the pre-season training camps.

Johnny Nee, veteran scout of the New York Yankees, cannot keep away, seemingly, from the peacetime camp of the Yanks at St. Petersburg. Among other arrivals are pitcher Paul Derring of Cincinnati Reds and Paul Waner and Johnny Cooper of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Truett (Rip) Sewell, who displayed the "blooper" ball with Pittsburgh Pirates last season, and outfielder Gerald Walker of the same club are wintering among the Everglades.

The Florida baseball colony also boasts owner Donie Bush of the Indianapolis club, umpire Bill Klem of the National League and umpire Butch Henline of the International loop. Dazzy Vance, former Brooklyn hurler, and Joe Stripp have also been noticed.

Norwegian-born Flt. Sgt. Ole Bakkelund, who won the Dominion ski championship at Fort William in 1939, now is with a Canadian Mosquito squadron overseas, it was reported from London last night. He has joined the ski club of Great Britain and hopes to complete in Scotland this winter. Prior to enlistment, he was employed at Timiskaming, Que.

Pitcher Morton Cooper of the St. Louis Cardinals, who had been reclassified 1A in the draft, yesterday was ordered to report at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., Monday for medical examination. His brother, catcher Walker Cooper of the Cards, was accepted for army service Nov. 17 but is awaiting induction.

Howard Moss, outfielder of the New York Giants who played for Jersey City during last season, yesterday was traded to the Baltimore Orioles of the International League for catcher Joseph Becker, no cash being involved.

Playing Coach Kingston Team Leading Scorer

Toronto, Dec. 8 —(CP)— Robert (Red) Hamill, playing coach of Kingston Frontenac Army, has regained the scoring leadership of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" circuit, it was announced today. Hamill has 10 goals and 10 assists for 20 points, four more than Johnny Conick, last week's leader, and Doug Runions, both of Hamilton Majors, who are tied for second place with 16.

Dillon Brady, Major forward, holds fourth spot with a 14-point total, while a three-way deadlock exists for fifth place, with Blink Bellinger of St. Catharines, Giesebrecht and Gar Peters of Kingston Army all even at 12 points each. Joe Klukay of Toronto Navy and Red Doran of Kingston divide eighth place with 11 counters and Norm Tustin of Toronto R. C. A. F. has 10.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Herb Cain, Boston, who collected one goal and two assists when his team held Detroit to a 6-6 draw on home ice.

Carl Liscombe, Detroit, who led the Red Wings' attack by scoring two goals and one assist.

N. H. L. Leaders

(By The Canadian Press.)

Standing: Canadiens, won 11, lost 1, tied 3, points 25.

Points: Cowley, Boston, 7 goals, 20 assists, 27 points.

Goals: H. Cain, Boston 15; Bruneteau, Detroit, 15.

Assists: Cowley, Boston 20.

Penalties: McMahon, Canadiens, 32 minutes; Egan, Detroit 32 minutes.

Shutouts: Durnan, Canadiens, 1.

BRUINS UNBEATEN IN SIX GAMES ON HOME ICE

Hold Detroit Red Wings to 6-6 Tie After Being Down Four Goals

COWLEY STARS

(By The Canadian Press.)

Two "streaks" which will be claimed as records if they last long enough remained intact today in the wake of a 6-6 stalemate between Red Wings and Boston Bruins.

The deadlock, achieved last night before 7,500 fans in Boston garden, left Bruins undefeated in six games on home ice this season while also protecting Detroit's undefeated string against Boston. Red Wings had defeated Boston in five previous clashes, once this year and four straight in the 1942-43 Stanley Cup finals.

Six consecutive goals sent Detroit into a 6-2 lead after they spotted Boston the first two counters, but Bruins came bouncing back to tie the score with four quick tallies starting at 7:06 of the third period.

The uprising was set off by rookie Russ Kopak, and concluded at 17:27 by playmaking Bill Cowley, who scored one other goal for Boston but failed to get an assist. The two points he picked up boosted him into first place in the individual scoring race, one point ahead of Buddy O'Connor.

Other Boston goals went to Don Gallinger, Herb Cain and Johnny Crawford. Carl Liscombe connected twice for Detroit and the other Red Wings to beat Bert Gardiner in the Boston net were Adam Brown, Pat Egan, Carl (Winky) Smith and Syd Howe.

The result failed to affect the National Hockey League standings, Boston remained in fourth place, one point behind Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks, who are tied for second, and one point ahead of fifth-place Detroit.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER TWELVE

It took him no more than that to reduce Stephen to pulp; but in Ann and Hannah Gale he found foemen worthy of his steel. He had one passage-at-arms with Ann which almost took the starch out of him; and several of Hannah's tart replies evoked appreciative chuckles from the audience.

The day wore on while he dealt with the Osbornes, one by one. He ranted, berated, sneered; going over the same point time and again, hammering at every answer until it was battered out of shape. There was a short break for lunch, and then he started on them again. It was four o'clock in the afternoon before Peter, the last of the family to testify, was allowed to stand down, in a flood of tears. Doctor Heffers leaned back with a fixed scowl at the bench on which the Osbornes were seated and wiped beads of perspiration from his narrow brow.

Coroner Heffers dealt more gently with the dead woman's former companion, but poor Miss Mimms was in a state of panic before she started to give evidence.

Then came an electric thrill when the coroner ordered: 'Call Agnes Alicia Whipple."

Miss Whipple rose with alacrity and came forward, clasping her handbag and umbrella with one hand and adjusting her glasses with the other. There was on her pinched face an eager, avid look and in her peering eyes a glint of jubilation. She bore herself with an air which made it quite clear that she did not doubt the importance of the role she was about to play.

"On Saturday last between half past two and four o'clock in the afternoon, you were seated at your bedroom window, looking out?"

Miss Whipple inclined her head gravely.

"I was".

Doctor Heffers fumbled with the papers on his desk, selected one, and glanced at it.

'You were examining the surrounding countryside through a telescope?"

A half-suppressed gust of laughter caused Miss Whipple to redden.

"That is so", she said stiffly.

"Did you at any time have the house of Stephen Osborne under observation?"

"I did. Practically all of the time. Not"—she added hastily—"not that I was in any sense of the word spying on the Osbornes. Inquisitiveness. I am happy to say, is not one of my failings. But across the road from where the Osbornes live is a birch grove in which lives a large colony of birds and it is my delight on bright, sunny days to watch the comings and goings of our little feathered friends through my telescope. I am also interested in astronomy; that is my principal reason for owning the instrument".

"And quite frequently the Osborne house came into the range of your lens"?

"Quite frequently, yes".

"Did you see any stranger approaching the house?"

"I did".

"Whom did you see"?

Miss Whipple straightened her shoulders and glanced meaningly at the jury.

"I saw Mr. Edward Fleming, Junior. It was about three o'clock. He pushed open the garden gate and went up the path. In his hand" —her voice rose dramatically—"was a colored silk scarf".

A hush so pregnant that it was almost audible fell upon the crowded courtroom.

"He was carrying a colored silk scarf"? the coroner repeated with emphasis.

"He was", said the spinister firmly.

"Did you see it clearly enough to be able to recognize it again?"

"I did."

"Is this it?" Doctor Heffers held up the scarf with which Octavia Osborne had been murdered.

"It is", replied Miss Whipple clearly.

The coroner paused with dramatic emphasis; then pressed on his inquisition with: "Did this young man go to the front door of the house"?

"He did not. In what I can only describe as—as a furtive manner —he went stealthily 'round the side of the house".

"Did you see him again?"

"Yes. I had been struck by the oddness of his manner and I kept the house under observation until he reappeared".

"When was that?"

"In about five minutes. He returned the way he had come, but this time he was hurrying almost running".

"And then?"

"I saw nothing more", said the spinster regretfully, "until one of the Osborne children came running out of the house and darted down the road to Doctor Denham's residence".

"Thank you, Miss Whipple. May I commend you for the clear and straightforward manner in which you have given your testimony? That will be all".

Miss Whipple sailed back to her place, her head held high.

"Call Edward Fleming, Junior".

There was an expectant murmuring, much turnings of heads and craning of necks.

"Call Edward Fleming, Junior!"

A rustle of whispers ran through the court like wind through a field of standing corn. A grey-haired man rose with dignity and faced the coroner.

"I am Edward Fleming Senior, of the law firm of Harden and Fleming, of Bradbury", he said in a dry, precise tone. "I am here to represent my son who is unable to attend in person".

Coroner Heffers put on a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles and scowled through them at the lawyer.

"Your son has been summoned to attend this hearing. Where is he?"

"In Washington, on business".

"When did he leave?"

"Early yesterday afternoon".

The coroner squinted in the direction of Inspector Burrows.

"Was not a summons to attend served at the young man's home yesterday morning?"

Inspector Burrows stood up. "It was, Sir".

"Then why is he not here?" Doctor Heffers's scathing gaze shifted to Mr. Fleming.

"It was necessary for my son to be in Washington for a conference this morning. All arrangements had been made—"

"This won't do", snapped the coroner, shaking his head. "It won't do at all. Your son is gravely in error if he imagines that he can flout this court with impunity. A lawyer of your standing in the community ought to know better than be a party to contempt of court".

"At the time my son left", replied the lawyer soberly, "it was my understanding that he had no evidence to give which would be of material assistance to this inquiry. The testimony of the previous witness has made it clear that I was wrong. I shall get in touch with him to return at once for the purpose of testifying".

Inspector Burrows weaved his way to the coroner's side and whispered urgently in his ear. Dr. Heffers nodded.

"It is imperative that he return at once", he said aloud. "He may make his statement to the police officials in charge of the case since it is doubtful when the next hearing of this inquest will be held. I intend to adjourn it indefinitely to give the police an opportunity of pursuing a certain line of inquiry. If your son has not returned within twenty-four hours, a warrant will be issued for his arrest".

Clearing his throat self-importantly, the coroner turned to the jury.

"At this time I consider it my duty to say that never in all my experience have I known a case in which the majority of the witnesses were so unsatisfactory as they are in this one. You have listened today to a succession of evasions, almost deliberate prevarications, as one member of the dead woman's family after another has been brought forward to testify. You will have noticed with what reluctance they permitted the smallest admission to be drawn out of them. You will have marked the long pauses between questions and answers; pauses which would not have been necessary, you will doubtless feel, if a desire to tell the truth had been all that inspired the witnesses. Perhaps you have come to the conclusion which I, myself, have reached, that there is here a strong presumption of deliberate conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice by the withholding of vital information."

A solemn young assistant district attorney collected numerous notes made during the inquest.

When the end of the hearing came at last it was found to be utterly impossible for the Osbornes to leave the way they had come. The crowd at the rear of the building was even more closely packed than that at the front. A cordon of burly policemen drove a flying wedge through the mob at the front and the Osbornes, their heads down, their faces averted, were rushed through the middle of the yelling mob.

Mrs. Osborne had pressed Miss Mimms to stay with them until she found a new post, but she had pleaded that a change of environment was her only chance of forgetting her terrible experience, and Edith could not help agreeing with her. That evening she departed for a hotel in the Adirondacks which Edith recommended as quiet and inexpensive. She had enough money, she assured them, to last her for months to come. Stephen made her promise to write him if she needed more.

"Whatever happens", he told her at parting, "I am going to do my utmost to see that you receive the legacy my sister intended you to have".

At half past seven the following morning, a young man in a battered felt hat and brown raincoat walked steathily up the garden path to the back door of the Osbornes' house. He looked through a window and saw on the kitchen table an array of silver. Hannah Gale, in a blue print dress and white apron, with her sleeves rolled above the elbows, was vigorously polishing it. The young man tapped on the window and Hannah looked up. He beckoned and she opened the door, regarding him dourly.

"And who might you be?"

"I might be anyone, Hannah," he answered cheerily, "but, for your private information, I'm a reporter from the Morning Globe".

"And by what right do you use my Christian name? I'm Miss Gale to you, you fresh young cub. Be off with you; we want no reporters here!"

"Don't be like that", he smiled. "That's no way to talk to a man who only wants a few words with you".

"Any words you get from me will be short and sharp. I've nothing to say to you or the likes of you, young man!"

"That's only your modesty, Miss Gale. I'm sure there are a lot of interesting things you could tell me if—"

"Well, I don't intend to, so take yourself off before I take my broom to you!"

"I'll give you fifty dollars for an exclusive interview. Fifty bucks, Miss Gale! All you need do is tell me your own personal story of the murder. You'll never earn money easier if you live to be—Hey! Look out! What the blazes do you think you're doing"?

"You young blackguard!"

The chilly contents of a bucket of water with which Hannah had lately washed the front steps drenched him from head to foot. Hannah slammed the door in his spluttering face.

Edith came downstairs a little later and found the mail-box crammed with correspondence. Frowning, she took out the thick wad of letters and skimmed through them glancing at the envelopes. Some of them were typewritten and the rest were addressed in unfamiliar hands. She went into the dining-room and sat by the fire with the letters on her lap. The topmost one was addressed to: "The Osborne Family". Her face turned very pale and her lips tightened when she read the opening lines:

"You are a lot of cowardly rats you ought to be hanged every one of you killing an old woman for her money..... "

The vindictive scrawl was unsigned. Without reading further, Edith threw it into the fire. She opened another at random. It, too, was anonymous:

"I read about your case in the paper and I thought I'd just write and tell you I don't blame you for what you done, no matter what the world may say. I have a rich old aunt too and the same thing ought to..... "

It, too, went in the fire. With trembling hands Edith opened another and glanced at it briefly. It was in the same heartlessly abusive tone as the first. She could bear no more. She tore up the remaining envelopes unopened and consigned them to the flames.

"How beastly!" she exclaimed bitterly. "How incredibly vile!"

Breakfast was a silent meal. No one ate much. It was as though the dead aunt were seated at the table with them. Stephen glanced at the morning paper and his face clouded. A sprawling headline ran across the top of the front page: CORONER LASHES INQUEST WITNESSES; and almost an entire page was devoted to an account of the evidence given the previous day. In the centre of the page was a photograph of the Osborne family, huddled together like sheep, passing through the crowd of gaping spectators outside the court.

Stephen quietly folded the paper and did not look at it again. After breakfast, Edith burned it. She gave Hannah orders that in future the morning paper must be submitted to her for inspection before her husband saw it.

At about ten Ann was going upstairs to make the beds when she heard the doorbell ring. She turned to come down but, when a few steps from the bottom, Marjory opened the door. Miss Whipple glided over the threshold and sailed into the hall.

"Is your mother in" ? she asked brighty.

Marjory hesitated but, before she could reply, Ann came running down.

"I'm afraid Mother cannot see you, Miss Whipple", she said icily. "She isn't at all well. She isn't seeing anyone".

'Poor dear, I can quite understand that. She has my sympathy. This awful business must be a sore trial to her. You looked quite upset yourself, my child, and no wonder; it must have been a terrible shock to look up from your book and see your poor aunt sitting there, dead! I should simply have expired on the spot, I know I should. You must forgive me for running in on you so early in the day, but I wanted to lose no time in expressing to your mother my deep sorrow over the whole sad affair. Perhaps you will be so good as to convey to her—"

While she was talking, Miss Whipple gradually edged her way along the hall and through the door of the living-room. She stared about her in ghoulish fascination as though she had never seen the room before. Behind her rimless glasses, her myopic eyes shone with excitement. On tiptoe she crossed the room to the chair in which Octavia Osborne had been murdered. She eyed it with a shiver of delicious horror.

"The poor thing was actually sitting in this chair when it happened, wasn't she?" she asked in a sepulchral whisper.

Before Ann could stop her, Miss Whipple sat down in the chair and rose again quickly with a squeal of mock-terror. Ann clenched her fists and started forward.

"You ghoul!" she cried. "You disgusting, prying wretch! Get out of this house before I throw you out!"

"Oh!" gasped Miss Whipple. In her agitation her glasses fell off and hung suspended like some grotesque ear-rnament from a thin gold chain attached to her ear. "How dare you? How dare you speak to me like that? I—I—"

"Get out!'

She sidled out with Ann close behind her. The spinster, red to the ears, hurried down the garden path, consoling herself with the thought that at least she had a story to tell which would make her welcome in the homes of the village gossips for days to come. She sat in the very chair in which the poor dead woman had been brutally murdered! The very self-same chair!

At the garden gate she paused eagerly to pose for a press photographer. The following morning her sharp features and meagre figure appeared in several newspapers over the caption: "An old friend leaves after condoling with the bereaved family. ... "

Hardly had she gone, than a telegram came for Stephen. Edith took it to her husband and he tore open the buff envelope.

"It's from Octavia's lawyer. The police have given permission for the funeral and she's to be buried at Bradbury this afternoon. He wants to know if I care to attend".

"You won't go, of course".

He bit his lip.

"I ought to".

"In other circumstances, certainly; but there is sure to be a crowd. They'd stare at you; you'd hate it".

"Lord, yes! You're right, Edith. I'll wire him that I shan't attend."

Stephen's haggard face and pitiful eyes touched Edith's heart. She put a hand on his arm.

"Stephen".

"My dear?"

"Stephen—"

Edith struggled to find words.

"Stephen, you—you would never feel that there was anything—anything, Stephen—that you could not tell me?"

He stared at her in horror.

"Good heavens! Edith!" he exclaimed.

"I'm sorry, Stephen. Forgive me," she said gently, and turned away.

"All right, Hannah, I'll answer it".

Ann went to the front door, her face set in hard, uncompromising lines. The door bell had been ringing at intervals all morning and most of the callers had been unwelcome. Half of them had been reporters, prodigies of persistence. Ann opened the door, prepared to be brusque.

Mrs. Fleming was standing on the steps.

County Council Concurs in Several Resolutions Asked by Other Counties

Request from a Toronto individual asking for the names of owners of mineral-bearing lands within the county was read before members of the Hastings county council when they convened for the morning session on Wednesday. The request particularly referred to certain lands in Marmora township upon which there were claimed to be deposits of iron ore, while interest was also evidenced in the old Richardson Gold Mine of Eldorado and the disused iron mine at Coe Hill.

County Clerk Erle Denyes intimated to council members that he would endeavor to trace the ownership of the properties in question and forward the names to the interested firm.

Ex-Warden Rush Presides

In a rather quiet session during which Ex-Warden Charles Rush assumed duties in the Warden's chair when Dr. S. S. Lumb was called away on business, council concurred in several resolutions asked by other Ontario counties.

Simcoe county asked concurrence in a resolution protesting against the unfair and unsatisfactory conditions regarding the sale and purchase of grass seed, claiming that dealers were informing farmers they were compelled through government restrictions from exceeding certain rates when purchasing alsike and red clover seed. Actually, it was pointed out, no such government regulations existed, but the condition permitted dealers an exorbitant mark-up in prices.

Motion Carries

J. L. Churcher intimated to council he thought the matter was purely a question of educating the farmers to the regulations and stated he thought the matter was very well taken care of through radio announcements and other publicity. Reeve Roscoe Robson declared he saw no reason for dealers being permitted a mark-up of up to seven dollars per bushel on such seed and moved concurrence in the motion, which was carried.

Other resolutions concurred in included one from Waterloo County asking for speedier shipments of grain from the Western provinces, and one from Wentworth County asking that the rate of bank interest to county municipalities be reduced from the present four and one half per cent.

Reeve J. A. Bell of Marmora Township indicated that he was informed by the county banker that rates of bank interest to counties were set by government regulation and could not be changed. D'Arcy Ketcheson of Frankford, however, thought if sufficient pressure was brought to bear the regulation might be changed.

Vote of Thanks to J. O. Herity.

Council moved a vote of thanks to J. Owen Herity of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce for his assistance and co-operation in providing commando labor to assist county farmers in harvesting operations during the past summer. A report from Mr. Herity on the season's activity regarding commando labor was read before council indicating that district airmen had greatly assisted in harvesting hay and grain crop, while civilian part time labor from the city had also been used to advantage.

Contrary to the custom during the previous season, farmers obtaining assistance from airmen, paid a specified rate directly to the airmen, they doing with the money what they chose, it was stated.

The matter of a request from Mr. W. H. Nobes, clerk of Sidney Township, asking that the township bridge leading to Anderson's Island be taken over by the county was laid on the table for further discussion on the request of Deputy Reeve Sam Nicolson. Mr. Denyes pointed out that regulations did not state township bridges over certain dimensions must be taken over by the county but that they "may" be taken over.

Letter of Appreciation.

A letter of appreciation from Mrs. (Dr.) S. S. Lumb of Bancroft for the candelabra and silver service set presented to her by the council at the occasion of the Warden's Banquet was read before the members. The only other business of the morning session was the reading of several applications for auditing of the county books for the current year. The applications were referred to the committee of the whole on by-laws.

RICH FOOD HAUL

London, Ont., Dec. 8.—(CP)—Thieves left the scene of a Thorndale crime with great care during the night. They carried 95 dozen Grade A eggs taken from Ken Ward's egg grading station, 75 dressed ducks, one radio and a cash register containing $8 to $10. The cash register, empty, was found in a ditch outside the village, 12 miles northeast of London.

CHINESE FORCES RECAPTURE CITY OF CHANGTEH
NAZIS, TURKS STATION TROOPS ALONG BORDER

Prospect of Enemy Drive on Changsha Now Frustrated

Troops Cross Yuan River and Aided by U. S. Planes Drive Japs From Changteh

OTHER TOWNS RETAKEN

Chungking, Dec. 9 —(AP)— The Chinese High Command announced today that Chinese forces had recaptured the strategically important city of Changteh in Hunan province, which fell to the Japanese Dec. 3 after many days of bloody fighting.

The victorious Chinese stroke provided another decisive turn in the fortunes of war in the bitter battles in which China's vast and important "rice bowl" area is a major prize. Loss of Changteh last week had opened the prospect of an enemy drive on Changsha, capital of the province.

A special Chinese communique this morning announced recapture of the city.

"News has just been received," it said, "that Chinese troops in Northern Hunan re-occupied Changteh at 4 o'clock this morning. They crossed the Yuan River last evening and broke into the city through its east and west gates early this morning."

U. S. Aircraft Assist

United States aircraft, which played a part in the defence of the city were said to have had a hand in its recapture.

Only a few hours before the special communique announcing the Changteh success, the Chinese High Command had reported recapture of the town of Tehshan, a few miles to the south on the railway linking Changteh and Changsha.

A communique said Tehshan was taken by the Japanese Dec. 6. An immediate counter-attack by reinforced Chinese forces regained the town.

Chinese troops swept back the enemy on still other fronts, breaking into the important Japanese base of Sinyang in Southern Hunan province and entering the suburbs of Suihsien in Hupeh province.

German Actions In Italy Reveal Fear and Failure

Naples, Dec. 9. —(AP)—German actions in Italy are a confession of fear and failure in the opinion of Andrei J. Vishinsky, Soviet delegate to the Allied Advisory Council for Italy, who said the Germans were duplicating the tactics they have employed in Russia.

Vishinsky, during a two-day visit here, expressed particular interest in the type of demolition work and destruction carried out by the German army as it was forced northward on the peninsula and also inquired about atrocities against Italian civilians.

"It is the same policy they are pursuing in Russia", he said.

"We can tell from studying their demolitions as they lose towns and cities whether they expect to be able to retake those places. When they simply run amok dynamiting and burning everything, we know they don't expect to come back".

Flames Are Spread By 60 Mile Gale In Northeast Oakland

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 9 (AP) — Whipped by 60-mile-an-hour gusts of wind, flames crackled through brush and trees in a spaarsely-populated district of fine homes in Northeast Oakland today.

Fire and smoke covered an area of several square miles, and the extent of the damage could not be determined immediately.

Several other fires also were reported in the San Francisco Bay district, and in Oakland alone 68 alarms were turned in between midnight and 6 a.m.

FLYING FORTRESS CARRIES ONE TON MORE EXPLOSIVES

More Defensive Guns Have Been Added to Liberators and to Flying Fortresses

DEADLIER WEAPONS

By HUGH MOORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 9 — (AP) — The deadly punch of the already-formidable Flying Fortress has been increased by 2,000 pounds of high explosives, while both Fortresses and the Liberators now bristle with additional defensive guns.

In announcing the improvements today, the 8th U. S. Air Force said its heavy bombers are far deadlier weapons with addition of the external bomb racks which increase the Fortresses' bomb load to four tons, together with chin turrets on the Fortresses and two new power turrets on the Liberators.

Possibilities

The new bomb racks mean some sacrifice in range and speed, but these possibilities suggest themselves:—

1. Short range, pre-invasion assaults with great loads of explosives, carried out under the protection of fighter escort for approximately 350 miles inland.

2. Mass night saturation raiding with the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F.

Speed and defensive armament are less important factors in either type of operation, particularly in the heavy night assaults by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. similar to those which have been carried out recently against Berlin and Leipzig.

Saturation Attacks

In recent weeks the German radio has referred to night raids of "British-American bombers," indicating that American Fortresses may have participated in the saturation attacks, but there has been no official statement from London to bear out the German statements.

Wage Control Order Combines Living Bonus and Basic Wage

Ottawa, Dec. 9 —(CP)— Labor Minister Mitchell today made public a revised wage-control order, providing for incorporation of the cost-of-living bonus in basic wages, and altering the method of handling wage adjustments with a view to tighter stabilization of the cost of living.

Employers are requested to have rates of pay adjusted in accordance with the new order from the first payroll period commencing on or after Feb. 15, 1944.

As forecast by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in his radio address last Saturday night, the order bases future upward wage adjustments on rectification of "gross inequality or gross injustice." Coupled with that is the ability of the employer to pay an increase without raising prices.

"Similar provisions are made with regard to wage decreases," the Labor Minister's statement said.

Previously wages might be increased if they were found to be low as compared with those "generally prevailing for the same or substantially similar jobs" in the same or a comparable locality. That procedure no longer is necessary.

Mr. Mitchell said the National War Labor Board, now comprising three members, will become a six-member board. One shall be chairman and one vice-chairman. The other members are to be "representative of (though not officially representing) the general public (two members), employers and employees respectively."

Secure Uniformity

"In order to secure uniformity of practice, the National Board is given closer supervision over the Regional War Labor Boards, which are required to report all their decisions and directions to the National Board for review."

The order provides that every employer is required to establish basic wage rates for his employees by including in existing authorized wage rates the amount of the existing authorized cost-of-living bonus.

In the case of hourly-rated employees, the amount to be added to the basic wage rates will be arrived at by dividing the amount of the authorized bonus by the number of normal working hours in each week.

When payment is on the daily rate the increase will be made by adding the proportion of the daily amount of the bonus; and if a weekly rate by adding the amount of bonus.

If payment is on a monthly rate, the increase will be on the basis of multiplying the amount of the weekly bonus by 4 1-3.

Must Review Decisions

The National Board is required to review decisions and directions of Regional Boards and may "of its own initiative," vary or revoke such decisions or directions.

Any person interested in any decision or direction of a regional board may appeal to the National Board, if leave is granted by the Regional or National Board.

The National Board may authrize or direct an employer to increase a wage rate established under the new order only "if and to the extent that the National Board finds that such increased rate or range is necessary to rectify a gross inequality or a gross injustice and is almost consistent with the ability of the employer to pay the increase in cost to which such increase may give rise in the business or industry in which the rate or range is to be paid, without increasing the price of the product therefrom or of the services renered therein."

The National Board may direct an employer to decrease a single rate or the rates within a range established by him under the order only "if and to the extent that the National Board finds that the rate or range is so high that it is unsound or causes gross inequalites.

Incentive-Wage System

The National Board may direct an employer to introduce or extend an incentive-wage system in the place of or to be paid in conjunction with a time-wage system for any occupational classification where the board considers that such action is practicable and that it will increase the volume or quality of production without increasing the employer's cost of produc-

TURKEY CLOSER TO ALLIED CAMP THROUGH PARLEY

Premier Inonu Given Enthusiastic Welcome On His Arrival At Ankara From Cairo

CONFERS WITH OFFICIALS

By WILLIAM B. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Dec. 9 — (AP) — Foreign Minister Numan Menemencioglu said yesterday that President Ismet Inonu's conferences in Cairo with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt had led Turkey closer to the Allied camp.

But he avoided the natural inference that this meant Turkey was nearer to participation in the war.

The foreign minister made the first authoritative statement since Inonu's return from Cairo. It had been eagerly awaited in the hope it would shed new light on just where Turkey stands in the war.

Relations Very Close

While he told Allied and Turkish newspapermen that Turkey's foreign policy remained unchanged following the Cairo conference, Menemencioglu added:

"Our conference was so intimate and friendly that we can say our relations today with America and Russia are almost the same as with England," with which Turkey has an alliance.

"Our alliance with England emerged from the conference considerably strengthened," the foreign minister continued, laying great stress on the word "considerably."

He said that five minutes after they met President Roosevelt and President Inonu were like friends of 40-years standing.

"We have come back from Cairo very content and satisfied. The conference was one of the most important events of this phase of the war."

The Turkish president arrived in Ankara yesterday to find an enthusiastic welcome awaiting him.

I have seen the president several times at public functions but never have I seen such a broad smile on his face.

The president was expected to devote a full day to conferences with his cabinet ministers and party leaders — and perhaps the military as well — in order to give them a first hand account of what occurred and what decisions were reached at Cairo. It was expected any official announcement would be delayed until after these talks.

State of Emergency Declared, Traffic Halted Says Report

German Invasion Of European Turkey To Seal Dardanelles Not Overlooked

TENSE EXPECTANCY

Stockholm, Dec. 9 (AP) — Turkey and Germany have stationed troops along the opposite sides of the Turkish border facing Bulgaria and Greece, a state of emergency has been declared along the boundary and all traffic has been halted, reports from Berne, Switzerland, and Sofia, Bulgaria, said today.

Dispatches said the border measures had been ordered as nervousness over a possible Allied invasion mounted throughout the Balkans.

The newspaper Svenska Dagbladet's Berne correspondent said that the possibility was not being overlooked of a German invasion of European Turkey to reach the Dardanelles, especially in view of reports that the Allies have promised increased assistance to Russia by way of the Dardanelles.

He quoted reports from Ankara and a Sofia dispatch from the Southeastern Europe information bureau that the state of emergency had been declared along the border.

Detachments in Position

The Svenska Dagbladet correspondent said a strong detachment of Turkish troops had taken up positions along the entire border, and that two German divisions had been moved up to the Bulgarian border against any attempted Allied invasion through Turkey.

Other Berne reports said there was tense expectancy throughout southeastern Europe that Turkey would take a more active part in the war.

Large supplies of weapons and hundreds of planes were reported to have reached Turkey recently.

Reports from Berlin said some sources there expressed the belief that the talk of a Balkan invasion might be part of an Allied nerve war to screen even more important operations in other theatres.

Disturbances Reported

Disturbances within Bulgaria and roundups of hundreds of persons by the German Gestapo and Bulgarian army police were reported also, and a Budapest dispatch to the Stockholm newspaper Social Demokraten said many arrests had been made following demonstrations at Sofia.

The newspaper said it had learned from private sources that the situation was desperate in the Bulgarian army, with many soldiers deserting to the Greek and Yugoslav guerilla forces.

Swedish correspondents in Berlin quoted a foreign office spokesman as saying that Germany still has a non-aggression pact with Turkey and expected to make no comment on the Inonu-Churchill-Roosevelt talks until the Turks made some move or decalaration.

ALLIES PRESS AHEAD TOWARD GARIGLIANO RIVER

British Troops Capture Rridge Near Mt. Camino on East Coast

WEATHER IMPROVES

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 9 — (AP) — British troops have stormed and taken a ridge near captured Mount San Croce, 2½ miles southwest of the summit of Mount Camino, and are pressing on toward the Garigliano River a mile beyond, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark's 5th Army troops, pushing down the western slopes of Mount Maggiore and Mt. Camino, where they have breached the mountain walls to the valley leading to Rome, wiped out all bypassed enemy pockets except on the northwestern tip of the Maggiore incline and the village of Rocca d'Evandro, nestled against Camino, it was stated.

Farther to the northeast, American troops attacked and captured high ground west of Venafro, despite fierce resistance supported by heavy German artillery fire, and still farther north wiped out lines of Nazi pillboxes west of Filignano, in the westward push across the mountain backbone flanking Cassino.

Improved weather and subsiding floods favored the fighting on the 5th Army front where it was disclosed the village of Calabritto on the northwestern slopes of St. San Croce had changed hands several times in recent days before finally falling into firm Allied possession.

In the Venafro area the Germans launched several sharp counter-attacks, but the Americans prevented them from having conclusive results.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army fought through downpours to improve its positions in the Orsogna area, 10 miles inland from the Adriatic, where both sides used tanks in clashes throughout yesterday. Prisoners were captured from a German Alpine unit operating in the mountain areas.

4,500 Individual Bomber Flights During November

London, Dec. 9 —(CP)— The increase in intensity of the Bomber Command's offensive against Europe in the last year was sharply outlined yesterday by an R.A.F. commentator who disclosed that the R.A.F. sent up 4,500 individual night bomber flights in November as compared with 1,600 both day and night for the same month a year ago.

These flights loosed 14,500 tons of bombs. In addition medium and fighter-bombers, in greatly expanded Fighter Command operations, dropped 1,000 tons last month. This compared with a total of 2,400 tons dropped by the R.A.F. day and night in November a year ago.

The Germans hit England with 120 tons in November.

Canadians Eat More Under Stress Of War Than in 1935 - 1939 Period

Ottawa, Dec. 9 (CP)—While other nations have eaten less under the stress of war, fortunate Canada has eaten more.

In a summary of per capita supplies of food moving into civilian consumption, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics today compared the 1943 consumption of primary foods, estimated from preliminary figures, with that in the 1935-39 pre-war period.

On the basis of 1935-39 equalling 100, the 1943 consumption of milk and milk products, excluding butter, was 118; meats, including cured and canned, 112; poultry, game and fish, 112; eggs, 124; oils and fats, 106; potatoes, 107; tomatoes and citrus fruits, 120; grain products 104.

The wartime pinch was felt in only a few products. The civilian consumption of sugars and syrups in 1943 was 82 per cent of the pre-war use; pulses and nuts, 93; fruits and fruit products apart from oranges, 91; leafy, green and yellow vegetables, 98; other vegetables 96; and beverages—tea, coffee and cocoa—97.

Supplies Increase

"Supplies of food moving into civilian consumption in Canada throughout the war period have, with relatively few exceptions, increased over pre-war," said the Bureau.

Despite increased exports of a number of important agricultural commodities and substantial demands for military services, the production of most foodstuffs has been adequate to meet these demands and to leave increased quantities available for the civilian population.

"Steady increases in employment and payrolls have increased the demand for food generally and periodic shortages have occurred in certain areas despite the increase in the national average figures.

"Transportation difficulties also have been a factor in the development of regional shortages of individual foods."

Consumption of milk and milk products has increased substantially in the war period, particularly in the case of fluid milk. Cheese consumption has remained constant despite a sharp increase in production. All the additional supplies have been shipped to the United Kingdom.

Effects Not Reflected

Total supplies of meats have risen materially with the main increase occurring in beef. As meat rationing did not come into effect until May, 1943, and as consumption was heavy during the early months of the year, the effects of rationing are not reflected in the 1943 annual average figures.

The consumption of pork in 1943 was approximately the same as in the post-war period, and additional supplies provided by a spectacular gain in hog production all were made available to the United Kingdom.

Increased slaughterings of hogs has resulted in a substantial increase in available supplies of lard throughout the war period. After substantial increases in 1940 and 1941, the figures for sugar show the effect of rationing in 1942 and consumption has been further reduced in 1943.

Calculated at Retail Stage

The civilian per capita supply figures were calculated after adjusting the total production figures for imports, exports, changes in stocks, marketing losses, seed, feed, non-food industrial uses, and supplies going to the armed forces. The final figures of civilian supplies then were divided by the total civilian population.

All amounts were calculated at the retail stage of distribution except for meats which were at the wholesale stage. Food actually eaten would be somewhat lower because of losses and wastes occurring after the products reached the hands of consumers.

With other sweet products in short supply, the consumption of corn and other syrups in 1943 was 140 of the pre-war period. The use of tomatoes rose to 250 per cent of pre-war and fresh citrus fruits to 150 per cent.

JAPANESE LOSE SIX MORE SHIPS AND 72 PLANES

Two Light Cruisers Sunk Along With Tanker and Three Cargo Ships

U. S. TASK FORCE USED

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 9 —(AP)— Japan's hard hit navy and air force, trying to bolster the Marshall Islands against possible invasion by Allied forces on the adjacent Gilbert Islands, have lost six more ships and 72 more planes.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced U. S. carrier task forces raked the enemy-held island group last Saturday in a moonlight attack, sank two light cruisers, one oil tanker and three cargo transports, downed 72 Japanese planes which rose to intercept the attackers and then beat off a seven and one-half hour assault by heavy torpedo bombers as the task forces left the scene.

One United States ship was slightly damaged, Nimitz said, and "light" aircraft losses were sustained.

In addition to the six Japanese ships sunk, Nimitz said a troop transport and two cargo ships were damaged. Presence of the troop ship indicated the enemy may be attempting to reinforce the Japanese garrisons on the islands. Nimitz did not say, however, whether the troop ship was loaded or empty.

Wotje, principal Japanese base in the Marshalls, and Kwajalein Atoll were the main targets of the raiders.

Of the 72 planes shot down, 64 were destroyed in combat with United States carrier aircraft.

After the raid, Japanese airmen made nuisance raids on forces in the Gilberts.

Commander of the raiding force on the Marshalls was Rear Admiral Charles A. Pownal, who also headed the raid on Marcus Island, to the northwest, last Aug. 30.

BALKAN INVASION MAY DEVELOP FROM CONFERENCE

Troops From Central Mediterranean, Including Canadians, Could be Used

LANDING CRAFT READY

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Dec. 9 — (CP Cable) — Allied invasion of the Balkans, which may be one dramatic development of the Cairo conference between Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and President Inonu of Turkey, could involve troops from the Central Mediterranean force including Canadians now in Italy in considerable strength.

Even if Turkey would not enter the war, one phase of a Balkan attack could be made from Italy because it is only about 100 miles across the Adriatic to the Yugoslav coast. This would be a feasible night run for invasion craft.

Practically all the Canadian forces in Italy are highly trained in invasion operations and there are several British divisions in the Central Mediterranean skilled in assault from the sea.

Concentrate Landing Craft

During September large fleets of landing craft were concentrated in the Central Mediterranean for the Allied landings at Reggio Calabria and Salerno and these craft have not been used since except for the comparatively small landing by British forces at Termoli on the Adriatic in the early stages of the Italian campaign.

The fleet might now be embarked for operations against the Balkan coast.

British naval craft have been up and down the coast unmolested for the last few months. British Army liaison officers now are established with the Partisan Army of Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) in the Yugoslav mountains and islands along the coast.

For some time Allied aircraft from bases in Italy and the Middle East

'Tojo the Lamplighter' Sets Flares But Task Force Knocks Planes Down

By EUGENE BURNS
Associated Press War Correspondent

Aboard an Aircraft Carrier Off Wotje in the Marshalls, Dec. 5 — (Delayed) — (AP) — This large carrier force, whose planes sank two Japanese cruisers and four other vessels yesterday in a big raid on the enemy's mid-Pacific Marshalls, has just finished beating off an attack of 7½ hours by between 45 and 50 heavy torpedo-carrying bombers.

We had knifed into the Marshalls and struck Kwajalein atoll where Roi airdrome is located. We hit Kwajalein hard, setting four Japanese cargo ships and two cruisers afire and leaving them sinking.

The dozen enemy planes which took to the air promptly were shot down.

Two minutes past noon, low-flying torpedo planes case within gun fire range and dropped their torpedoes. They were shot down by our anti-aircraft batteries. One. Two. Three. All exploded and burned.

As the sun was sinking our "squawkbox" sounded, "Jap snooper is closing."

One cruiser opened fire with two destroyers joining.

The squawkbox said at 9:50 p.m. "A group of planes is closing. They are dropping float lights. Another group is off our starboard bow, now closing."

In the darkness we strained to see the swift low-flying, death-dealing planes which carried enough dynamite to blow our formation sky high.

Ships began firing first to our port beam, to our starboard, aft and dead ahead. They fired almost simultaneously and then the Japanese seemed to withdraw.

Time for the dropped torpedoes to make their runs passed. Nothing happened.

Soon the Japanese organizer who had been nicknamed "Tojo, the Lamplighter" dropped some flares as he circled us.

He was outlining our formation for the boys on high.

For another three hours, until midnight, the planes made their runs at us and retired while Tojo kept lighting up the street lights.

Plane Makes Beacon

You caught the enormity of our task force as the firing commenced on both sides. Suddenly to the starboard a cruiser brought down a Mitsubishi in flames. It burned on the water, lighting the sky.

That made it a flaming beacon for marauding Japanese torpedo planes.

For a few minutes, the attack has ceased. Then it is on again. Our 11th warning tonight is sounded.

The Japanese retire but other planes come in and circle our formation, waiting for a chance to come in. Now they're getting ready to close in from all sides. We could not keep track of them any longer.

One drops its fish. We manoeuvre, wait and again are safe.

Finally the moon dips below the horizon and it becomes darker.

Eventually, exhausted men fall into their sacks after nearly 24 hours of continuous duty.

Tea, Coffee Ration To Be Unchanged

Ottawa, Dec. 9 (CP)—The Prices Board announced last night there is no "early prospect" of suspending or increasing the tea and coffee ration.

Rations of tea and coffee were increased one-third Sept. 2, bringing them to 1 1-3 ounces of tea and 5 1-3 ounces of coffee weekly per person after that date. Previously they stood at one ounce of tea and four ounces of coffee weekly per person.

The board said the ration will remain at the higher level, which has fully absorbed the larger supply that it has been able to arrange for.

"No increase in stocks on hand has been possible and these are below the normal level of prewar days," the announcement said.

FLYING FORTRESS

Another recent innovation in the American aerial assault against Germany is the dive-bombing tactics employed by bomb-carrying Thunderbolts (P-47s.)

These powerful, single-engined fighters have been used to attack objectives by diving from high to medium altitudes before releasing the bombs.

The attack is a variation of the old-style dive-bombing practised by the Junkers-87 Stukas, in which the bomber dived to within a short distance of the target before releasing its load. Improved defences have made this type of attack extremely hazardous for the Germans.

The new wing racks carried by the Fortresses weigh roughly 150 pounds and are of the simplest steel construction. Their bombs can be released electrically or manually, and in sequence or in salvo with the bomb bay load. They reduce the big bombers' range because they occupy space ordinarily given over to extra gasoline, and their wind resistance necessarily reduces speed. Through their use, however, the Fortresses gain a much heavier punch.

WAGE CONTROL

tion per unit.

Without direction from the National Board, an employer may increase a wage rate paid to an employee to the minimum wage rate for such employee established at any time by powers conferred under Provincial Minimum-wage legislation, if such minimum rate is not more than 35 cents an hour, or such higher rate per hour established for such an employee under the legislation of November 15th., 1941.

The order provides "more rigid" penalties for both employers and employees for violation or evasion of its provisions, Mr. Mitchell said.

Any employer who causes a lockout of his employees to deter or prevent employees making an application to a War Labor Board constituted under the order, or who fails to comply with directions given under the order, is liable to a fine of not less than $100 and not more than $5,000, or to imprisonment for not less than one month or more than one year, or to both fine and imprisonment. Each payment of wages to an employee in contravention of the order will constitute a separate offence.

Burden of Proof Set.

In any prosecution under the order concerning the payment of wages by an employer, the burden of proof that the payment was in accordance with the order will be on the accused.

Every employer who discharges, threatens to discharge or discriminates against an employee who has given any information to a War Labor Board on wages or rates, or has taken part in an application to a Board, is liable to similar penalties, provided it will be a good defence if it proved the actions complained of were not concerned with any application to a board.

Every employee who strikes to obtain an increase in wage rates established under the order, to secure an alteration in employment terms which would increase the rate or for the purpose of obtaining a direction from a War Labor Board or influencing its decision will be liable to a fine of not less than $25 and not more than $100, or to imprisonment for not less than one month and more than three months, or both such fine and imprisonment, in respect of each day in which he participates in a strike. No fine of more than $1,000 or imprisonment for a term of more than one year may be imposed.

Employee Not Deprived

When an employee is prosecuted under the strike clause, the burden of proof, that such strike was not in contravention of the order's provision will be on him. This provision will not deprive the employee of the benefit of any reasonable doubt which may exist after all the evidence has been heard.

The provisions apply to an employee who goes on strike or takes part in any strike notwithstanding that an industrial disputes inquiry commission or a board of conciliation has been established to inquire into the dispute and irrespective of whether such commission or board has made a report.

Fines For Inciting Strikes

The order said that any person who incites, encourages or aids any employer to omit any requirements of the order, or incites, encourages or aids any employee to go on or continue on strike in contravention of the order, will be liable to a fine of not more than $2,000 or to imprisonment for not more than one year, or both fine and imprisonment.

No prosecution may be commenced except with the consent in writing of the Labor Minister.

The order provides that the Minister of National Revenue may disallow as an abnormal expense the amount of any wages found to have been paid in contravention of the new wage order.

Robt. Templeton Observes His 90th Birthday

Mr. Robert Templeton, well known resident of this city is today observing the 90th anniversary of his birth and many old friends will be pleased to extend to him good wishes and congratulations upon attaining this advanced age.

Mr. Templeton was born in Perth, Ontario, and at an early age he entered the employ of a druggist in his native place for the purpose of learning the business. Later he went to visit relatives in Glasgow, Scotland, and while there he accepted employment with a leading drug firm and continued his studies of the business. Upon returning to Canada Mr. Templeton obtained a position with Canniff & Company, druggists in Belleville, whose place of business was located at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets, where the Bank of Montreal is now situated. This was seventy years ago and at that time the building of the city hall was just completed and the clock in the tower installed. Mr. Templeton states that the workmen who installed the clock here went directly to his native town of Perth to install a similar clock, which is still in good order.

Mr. Templeton remained with the Canniff Company for a time, then entered the employ of the late L. W. Yeomans who for years conducted a large wholesale and retail drug business here. After a number of years he had the opportunity to buy the Canniff business and for thirty-six years he carried on a successful business in the store which he entered as an employee, when he came to Belleville.

Later he acquired the ownership of the block and when he disposed of it to the former Merchants Bank he moved to the west side of Front Street, near Campbell Street, where he continued in business for five years, when he sold the business to the late W. H. Lattimer and the business is now Lattimer's Drug Store. Since that time Mr. Templeton has lived retired.

During the seventy years Mr. Templeton has lived here he has seen many changes and he enjoys talking of the old days. For many years he was a prominent member of John Street Presbyterian Church and of late years he has been associated with Bridge Street United Church. He is enjoying remarkably good health for a man of his age and takes almost daily walks, accompanied by his old friend, Mr. William Guthrie, father of Mrs. G. S. Cronk. Mr. Guthrie is also advanced in age, being in his 88th year. He is in good health and although this is not his birthday, his many friends entertain good wishes for him along with his friend Mr. Templeton. A number of Mr. Templeton's friends will spend this afternoon with him at his apartment.

Boy of 14 Charged With Mother's Murder

Montreal, Dec. 9 — (CP)—George Webster, 14-year-old high school student from neighboring Westmount, today appeared for preliminary hearing on a charge of murder in connection with the baseball bat slaying of his mother, and was remanded until Dec. 15 for voluntary statement.

The youth was charged with murder after a coroner's jury held him criminally responsible for the death of Mrs. Andrew R. Webster, 39-year-old wife of a prominent Westmount resident, who was found in her bed with a fractured skull a month ago. Three other persons in the house were taken to hospital with head injuries.

Under Quebec law, only evidence against an accused is heard at preliminary hearing. A voluntary statement evidence on behalf of the accused may also be given after which the presiding judge decides whether the case should come up for trial.

Unaware Brother Was in England

Bancroft, Dec. 9. (Special.)—The following quotation is from a letter received by the family in Belleville of Mickey Doherty of the R.C.N.V.R. who recently spent a leave in London, England.

"Just a line to let you know that all is well and of course I must tell you of the strange incident that occurred to me last week whilst I was on leave. Well, to begin with, I was just standing in front of my hotel (in London) when three Air Force Officers were going by. One looked up and it was Dick Barrett, so we exchanged greetings, etc., then he told me that Clare's brother Nubby was at another hotel so I headed for it. He was just putting his gear away when I walked in and was he ever surprised. We tried to locate Cecil but without success. So we headed for Mass on Sunday at the Cathedral and who was standing in front of us but Cecil, so it was really quite an incident. Then we walked around all day until Cecil had to leave, and I left a few hours later".

Cecil and Nubby, who are mentioned in the letter are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. McAlpine of Bancroft. LAC. Cecil McAlpine, who has been in England since April was unaware of his brother's, Pilot Officer M. J. McAlpine, presence in England, until they met at the cathedral.

Bancroft —The Women's Auxiliary of St. Paul's United Church, Bancroft, held its annual bazaar and afternoon tea in the basement of the church on Tuesday afternoon, and was well patronized.

Mr. Thomas Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murphy and Mr. Leo Murphy left for Trenton on Tuesday, having received word earlier in the day that Mrs. Thomas Murphy was serious ill at the home of her son, Lawrence of Trenton.

The Department of Highways, Bancroft, was kept quite busy Monday and early Tuesday with its snowplough equipment following the five inch fall of snow at Bancroft and District on Monday. Snow fell throughout the day blanketing the countryside and making the motoring very difficult. Some of the hills on Highway 62 south of Bancroft were reported very slippery, and motorists and the Bancroft-Belleville bus had difficulty in getting over these.

Obituary

JAMES G. HYDE

(Lisbon, North Dakota.)

Word was received in the city on Wednesday of the death on Monday in Lisbon, North Dakota, of James G. Hyde, a former resident of this community and a native of Sidney Township. The late Mr. Hyde was born in Sidney Township, 85 years ago and went to the Western States, when he was a young man and has spent the last 65 years in that community. He farmed for a number of years and later entered the farm machinery business, which he successfully operated for a number of years, retiring some years ago. His wife, who survives was the former Georgia Finkle and was born in this district. His son is an officer in Australia with the U.S. Medical Corps. Ald. Charles L. Hyde of this city, is a nephew.

POLICE COURT

Five charges of speeding preferred under the War Measures Act brought stiff fines to an equal number of motorists before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court here today. Warren Arnott and Vincent Doran, Belleville, A. McKim of Kingston and John Bowan of Goderich all paid $17.50, including costs, while the case against Elwood S. Holder of Kingston resulted in an increased fine of $22.50, including costs. The above counts were entered by Traffic Officer H. Caldwell with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C. conducting the prosecution.

John Morgan, Kingston appeared on a charge of vagrancy and paid $10.00 and costs before being released. Morgan was found by police wandering in the vicinity of the Deseronto air station recently and claiming to have been attacked and struck over the head. Police could not substantiate the alleged attack and held Morgan until today when he was released after paying a fine.

A charge of vagrancy was dismissed against Jack Heffernan of Read, but he was fined $15.00 and costs when convicted of being found in possession of a loose gasoline coupon.

Allies Lose 5,023 Killed in Italy

London, Dec. 9 —(CP)— The British-American Allies have lost 5,023 men killed and 16,800 wounded in the fighting in Italy, latest casualty figures showed yesterday.

British casualties in Italy from the invasion on Sept. 3 to Nov. 23 were 3,212 killed, 9,709 wounded and 3,153 missing, the War Office announced. Separate Canadian casualties were not given.

War Secretary Henry Stimson announced last week in Washington that American units of the 5th Army had lost 1,811 killed, 7,091 wounded and 2,670 missing, since the beginning of operations on the Italian mainland.

British Publicity Chief Blamed For Great News Muddle at Cairo

By ROBERT GREENE

London, Dec. 9 (AP)—The weekly newspaper journal, World's Press News, yesterday published blistering, on-the-spot accounts of what it described as the "gross mishandling of the biggest news story of the war" by the Ministry of Information as an aftermath of the press arrangements at the Cairo and Teheran conferences.

The publication quoted a cable from Philip Jordan of the London News Chronicle saying "the greatest story since the crucifixion of Christ has ended in about as big a mess as did the building of the Tower of Babel."

Noel Monks of the London Daily Mail cabled that "Churchill, Roosevelt, Stalin and Chiang Kai-Shek may have settled the world's affairs between them at Mena and Teheran, but they also settled the hash of the world's press as an independent, objective, fact-finding organization upon whose workings alone democracy can judge the conduct of its elected leaders."

"Prejudiced official eyewitnesses who rely on their jobs and for promotion on the good-will of their masters," Monks' cable continued, "took the place of trained reporters at this series of the most important meetings in the history of mankind."

"Had to Endure" Insults.

Monks said a battery of trained British and American newspapermen assigned to cover the conferences met with an "unending chain of the most colossal blunders, muddles, frustrations and insults that any group of correspondents ever had to endure."

"We took," Monks added, "insults as a soldier takes his wounds in the course of battle. But other things so completely hamstrung us we lost our identities as reporters in our efforts to pin the Ministry of Information blunderers down to the job given them — God alone knows how or why — of telling the world about the talks affecting the lives of uncountable millions."

Monks especially accused Curtels F. M. N. Ryan, British Information Ministry press chief, as the "man who has done harm to American and British press relations." He declared:

"It was embarrassing and humiliating to the British correspondents to have to suffer the imposition of a man of Ryan's inexperience in press matters on our American colleagues.

"I say he was a damnably bad press chief, and as a result of M.O.I.'s (Ministry of Information) kiss of death in foisting such an inexperienced official on us for these epochal meetings they were sabotaged as surely as though the perfidious hand of Paul Goebbels had reached out from Berlin.

Never So "Utterly Snubbed."

"Never has the world's press been so completely and utterly snubbed; never have I been made to feel so ashamed of being a newspaperman as I was by the official sneers, innuendoes and petty as well as great restrictions imposed on me and my colleagues.

"It was as though we were in straightjackets, manacled, gagged and blindfolded with our feet bound. We were herded like cattle, regarded as a bunch of mentally deficient escapees, each and every one of us treated as though we were in the pay of the German Government."

Monks said efforts to clear up the situation by forming a press committee headed by C. L. Sulzberger of The New York Times as president proved of no avail.

"Each morning and night," he related, "two M.O.I. reporters and two (United States) Office of War Information reporters handed us on a platter the most abominable tripe about the goings on behind the Mena perimeter. You would have thought Churchill, Roosevelt and Chiang Kai-Shek had come to Mena for a grand spree instead of to decide the fate of the world.

"The world has been given canned accounts of the talks. If asked to swear on an oath the four-power conferences had been held, of the 50-odd correspondents here we only know what has been told us by Government reporters."

Bacon Exports To Be Maintained

Ottawa, Dec. 9—Agriculture Minister Gardiner and provincial ministers or their deputies made clear on Wednesday at the Dominion-Provincial agriculture conference that the British consumer will be able to enjoy his four-ounce weekly ration of bacon if Canadian endeavour can help.

At the closing session of the conference — as at others during the three-day session — bacon was the subject of brisk discussion as ministers forecast reductions in production, to the detriment of the British consumer, unless some action is taken to maintain the hog population.

The hog production objective for 1944 finally was placed by the conference at 7,000,000 head of inspected slaughterings, unchanged from last year.

Some delegates had suggested earlier that 1944 hog production might be down as much as 22 per cent. from this year.

Provincial spokesmen all promised support of efforts to send sufficient bacon to the United Kingdom to maintain the ration level, but referred to feed shortages, price requirements and other factors as affecting production.

More Beef Cattle

It was anticipated there would be no difficulty in attaining an increase of six per cent, in beef cattle production. No change was made in the total milk production established last year — 17,400,000,000 pounds—but in the light of conference information it was expected butter output would be down three per cent and cheese, down seven per cent.

"I have an opinion that in spite of all the difficulties the farmers have to face that they are going to do better in hog production than many people around this table believe," Mr. Gardiner said.

To see that Britain was supplied with food was a primary concern. If Canada had been unable to provide the bacon necessary, some other country would have been invited to do what it could. The United Kingdom has done Canada the honour of always asking first what Canada could do, and always had accepted what Canada had said she could do.

It was obvious Canada, with its 1943 crop possibly the worst in 50 years, could not produce as many hogs as in the past year. But the chances were 50 to one that the 1944 Ontario crop would be better.

"The information I have had since this conference opened is that we will have more feed on hand to supply Eastern Canada than I anticipated we would," Mr. Gardiner said.

If livestock production were not maintained, floor prices, instead of ceiling prices, for grain would have to be taken into account.

When the price of bacon sent to Britain was considered, it had to be remembered that a "very substantial" part of the cost was borne by Canada under mutual aid arrangements.

Field Marshal Smuts Has Left for Home

Cairo, Dec. 9 (AP)—Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, left by plane for home today. He conferred with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt in the course of their conferences with Turkish President Ismet Inonu.

Porpoises Protect Two Men on Raft

New Orleans, Dec. 9 —(AP)—Two members of the United States Navy's armed guard today credited two friendly, fighting porpoises with probably saving their lives while they were adrift for 44 days last July.

The men, Edgar A. Welhe and Lonnie Whitis, were members of the navy gun crew aboard a merchantman torpedoed in the Indian Ocean. They managed to get aboard a large life raft which was well provisioned, they said. One day a herd of six whales sighted the raft.

"They formed a line and came rushing at us," Welhe said. "They all sprayed water over us and the waves they raised rocked the raft so much we could hardly hold on." Two porpoises appeared and engaged the whales in fierce combat before driving them off.

SAYS CARTEL CONTROL IS DETRIMENTAL TO U. S. NATIONAL EFFORT

Washington, Dec. 9 (AP)—Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge today told a Senate subcommittee that production of synthetic hormones, believed to be of use in the treatment of wounded soldiers for shock, was controlled by cartels between German firms and their subsidiaries in the United States up to the outbreak of war between this country and Germany.

Testifying before the subcommittee on war mobilization, Berge said that "cartel control has been such as to be detrimental to our national interest."

TURKEY CLOSER

President Inonu's trip still is generally interpreted here as one of the final developments heading Turkey into full-scale war as a partner of the United Nations against Germany.

No Mention of Military Men

A Turkish communique issued on the conference made no mention of military personnel or military discussions at the meetings, but there is an understanding here that military men actually were present. (An official Cairo announcement said that two aides-de-camp, wearing civilian clothes, formed the only military part of Inonu's entourage.)

The Turkish communique said Inonu's participation in the Cairo talks was a "striking manifestation of the alliance which unites Great Britain and Turkey and the solid friendship between Turkey and the United States and Russia."

There was general belief here that Inonu had been invited to the conference to discuss war plans for this part of the world, but a small group was said to maintain that Inonu had declined to put Turkey on a full war footing on the grounds she was not fully prepared and would gain nothing from such a step.

Establish 'Crown Assets Allocation Com.'

Ottawa, Dec. 9—(CP)—Establishment of a "crown assets allocation committee" which, with the proposed "war assets corporation Ltd." will operate in the disposal of surplus war equipment and supplies, is provided for under an order-in-council made public today.

The proposal to create the corporation was announced by the Prime Minister Nov. 30.

The new committee will include representatives of the departments of external affairs, munitions and supply, defence, finance and public works, and the prices board. On it also will be a full-time paid member who will be chairman, and representatives of labor, agriculture and the householders of Canada who will be chosen by the governor-in-council.

The President of the War Assets Corp. will also be a member.

Munitions Minister Howe is authorized in the same order to proceed with incorporation of War Assets Corp. as a crown company. He may advance to it a maximum of $5,000,000 for working capital and other purposes.

BALKAN INVASION

have been supporting the Partisans by bombing specific targets.

Landing Not Difficult

An actual Allied landing on the Yugoslav coast would not be difficult for trained formations, and if the high command has decided on such an operation several divisions should be able to get established ashore without suffering heavy losses.

However, dissipation of their forces has always been opposed by the Allied commanders in the Mediterranean and unless the Russians break through from the east, or a British-American force attacks from the south, an Adriatic venture would be a major gamble. Much of such a campaign would involve slow mountain fighting, as in Italy, and there is the question whether it would be worth the effort.

But the Turkish situation and the threatening Balkan blow-up holds public attention here, and after the breathtaking developments of the Cairo and Teheran conferences anything might happen.

The strategy in Italy might even change rapidly from continual pressure on German divisions to gradual holding operations near the Rome line to allow concentration on another operation to exploit enemy difficulties in Southeast Europe.

Three Conferences

A few weeks ago the world was talking of a meeting of the Allied leaders including Premier Stalin of Russia which was foreseen. But the world has been more than surprised for not one only, not two only, but three great conferences have resulted, the North African Conference of Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt with the Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek of China and then the Teheran Conference of Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill. No sooner was that over than the world has heard of a third conference held in Cairo where President Ismet Inonu of Turkey met Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill.

This great series of parleys, so all-inclusive and so complete and thorough, cannot but have a shattering effect upon the morale of the German and Japanese leaders. These latter surely can read determination in the conferences dealing with the Germans and the Japanese and the identity of interest or "closest unity" existing between Britain, United States and Turkey as proclaimed in a report of the last parley at Cairo is believed likely to cause intense anxiety in the Balkans for Turkey is in one of the most important positions in the world from the point of strategy. The traditional relations of Turkish and Russian friendship were reaffirmed and the conversations in Cairo it was stated "have been most useful and fruitful for future relations between the four countries concerned." Late opinions are that the Turkish Government may soon issue a declaration, defining her position more clearly in the light of the last conference. The opinion said to have the most support is that Turkey would not actively enter the war in the near future unless Germany gives cause.

These three great gatherings at the east end of the Mediterranean and in Persia show how firmly rooted is the confidence of the United Nations in victory.

Their assurance and faith are reaffirmed in the overrun nations and the neutral nations. The satellite nations associated with the Axis find themselves in the seat of grave anxiety as the conferences are to be implemented in action against the two foes of civilization, Germany and Japan, and as the Russian advance continues and the Allied shove moves on up through Italy and the air dominance of the Allies demonstrates its ability to hit Germany her satellites and the Nazi-dominated territories. Germany and Japan too feel the repercussions of these in their telling effects upon morale.

This war has given rise to many meetings of the nations at war. Early in the conflict the Axis dictators used to meet and issue a brief communique of their plans for continued aggression. But the meetings of these two evil ones, Hitler and Mussolini, are done, time and destiny will have none of them. Mussolini has gone down in the ruins of Fascism and Hitler, most selfish and detested of men, is walking the slippery road that leads inevitably to destruction.

But on the other hand the great Allied parleys are mile-posts on the way to victory and peace and they lay before mankind the pattern and plan of victory.

These Allied conferences will grow into the structure or edifice of peace that will follow the war's end.

Larger Vote in Other Cities

Stratford and Windsor were numbered among the cities of Ontario which showed an increase in the number of voters who cast their ballots in the annual municipal elections on Monday. In Stratford the total mayoral vote was 4,746 as against 2,180 one year ago. Approximately 55 per cent of the possible vote was polled. The Beacon-Herald commenting on the results says:

"Under the handicap of inclement weather and depleted transportation facilities, the voters demonstrated a gratifying interest in going to the polls in much larger numbers than a year ago. And now that the battle of ballots is over, victors and vanquished alike will, we doubt not, join forces in developing a community worthy of its fighting defenders in the decisive war days now on the threshold and in the difficult period of rehabilitation that will follow Allied victory."

Windsor Star refers to the election results in Windsor as follows:

"Generally speaking the vote showed a fairly satisfying improvement over last year. Despite the absence of a mayoralty contest, bad weather throughout the day and a rather serious epidemic of illness, there was an increase of approximately 25 per cent in the number of ballots cast. True, only about 25 per cent of the voters exercised their franchise, which is not a sufficiently high proportion, but there are signs of betterment, and the campaign to obtain more representative government, well begun this year, should be continued, with every prospect of success in the future."

As nearly 900 more Belleville voters came to the polls on Monday this city, is in the trend with other cities showing a growing interest in this matter of public expression of opinion by means of the ballot.

Inclement weather, gasoline rationing and lack of interest have been given as factors for light voting in a number of Western Ontario centres.

War's All Yours for Half Second

(New York Times)

You would think that the share of the war which one man's 1943 tax paid for would be an infinitesimal, invisible fraction in America's total expenditure. Yet it is a decidedly perceptible contribution. Our war costs this year will be about 75 billions; this means America spends approximately $2200 every second to win the war. Thus a citizen with a taxable income of $5000 and the average number of dependents whose income tax is around $1000 pays enough to carry on the war for the space of half a second.

Over that short but appreciable fraction of eternity this one taxpayer pays for what goes on everywhere—here at home and in the Solomons, and in Italy, and in Britain, and in every other of the 40-odd countries where Americans stand on guard.

It is enough to make a man brace his shoulders with pride. He all alone manages to pay, over a definite period, General Eisenhower's salary, and General MacArthur's salary, and General Chennault's salary, and the pay of the men servicing airplanes in Iceland, and the family allowance for the wife of the first-class private stationed in Iran, and the wages of the man finishing up tanks at Chrysler's, and the pay of the pilot in the Flying Fortresses over Vienna.

To be told that $1000 will pay for the gasoline to carry a Flying Fortress from London to Berlin and back is, if anything, rather disappointing. You want 200 Fortresses over Berlin. But if a taxpayer alone is financing the whole war, land, sea and air, in five continents and seven seas, it will make him glow — even if his time doesn't last very long.

Common Cold

Story is that Columnist F.P.A. (Franklin Pierce Adams), when told that the Rockefeller Foundation had appropriated a huge sum for research on the cause and cure of the common cold, remarked: "Dat's dot eduff," relates Time.

On reading an optimistic London despatch about a new British cold cure recently, American doctors could only wonder whether the cure would be eduff or dot. The drug: patulin, a crystalline substance made, like penicillin, from mold.

In the cable summary from the latest Lancet, patulin sounded better than any cold drug yet discovered: the British Navy tried it last winter on a large scale, cured fifty-seven per cent of colds in forty-eight hours.

PLASMA

Man's contribution to his fellow man,
His gift of strength to one with failing breath!
Blood to sustain him when blood only can;
Mercy to shield him from encroaching death!

Plasma they call it! Powder in a sack!
But on the fields where wounded heroes lie
It holds death's overwhelming torrent back
And spares to life those war has left to die.

Time was the strong stood helpless by the ill,
Pleading to be allowed to share the pain:
"Lord, take our strength and use it as Thou will!"
Too soon for plasma, wish and plea were vain.

But now, the strong their gift of health may share.
No longer helpless are they standing by.
Plasma is hope where once was bleak despair!
Man's gift of life to men about to die.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 9 —(CP)— The veneer of tradition which coats so much of British life has cracked here and there in the war, but where it can persist and not compromise the frugal dictates of the times it still exists.

The abridged pomp of the opening of the ninth session of this prolonged parliament offers that lesson in variety.

Few were the splashes of color. The King wore the uniform of an admiral of the fleet. The Queen wore black velvet. There were no scarlet and ermine robes or coronets.

Two M.P.'s appeared in top hats, and their's was true adherence to the past. They were representatives of the City of London and it is a custom dating back many years for the city members not only to wear silk hats but to sit on the overcrowded treasury bench on the first day of the session.

An even older tradition was broken when for the first time in history the vaults and precincts of parliament were not searched by the Yeoman of the Guard before the arrival of Their Majesties. In their stead a guard of honor of the Home Guard went through the ritual of observing a precedent that came in when Guy Fawkes went out.

On still another point, tradition remained shattered. That was in the Royal mode of travel from Buckingham Palace. Since 1939 Their Majesties have made the journey in a single, closed car. In peace the trip was a pageant in itself, a picture of glittering Royal coach, six splendid horses and brilliant uniforms which told the history of England in form and heraldic design.

The Royal horses today are full-time workers on one or another of the Royal farms or gardens.

William Strang's appointment to the European Advisory Council was the climax of the career of this son of a Scottish farmer who migrated to Essex.

As an ex-village schoolboy who had done well, he made good headlines. As a foreign office success, he was lauded by those who don't like to think that all such men must have gone to Oxford, Cambridge, Harrow or Eton.

Before his new appointment, Sir William — he was knighted at the time of the appointment — was second senior of the six assistant under-secretaries of state.

Financially, the job meant a raise from $7,650 to $10,125 a year.

Sir William speaks German, French, Italian, Russian and Serbian.

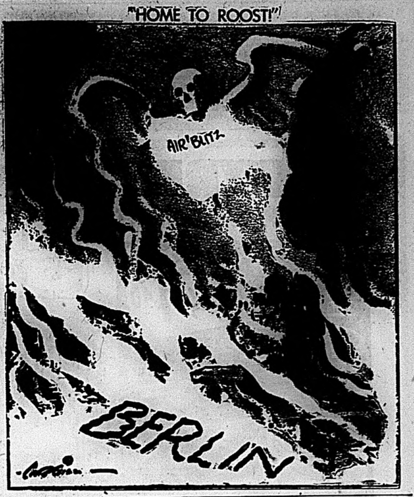
"HOME TO ROOST!"



Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Full justice should be done to the memory of Canada's pioneers. Their cheerfulness under adversity and courage in danger set an example for us who must also "fight the good fight."

"Be careful she's a witch." Sad to relate, this was said of many old ladies in the early 1900's although their only fault was that they were twisted and wrinkled with the weight of years. It goes to show that in those days, as now, it could be remarked with truth that "man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn" . . . All kinds of bad luck were blamed on the pitiable old women, who were, in consequence, neglected or persecuted by neighbours and kinsmen. One way of exercising the so-called devilish power of these ancients was to draw the figure of the supposed witch on a stump or board, and shoot at it with a bullet containing some silver. "Witches" were charged with putting spells and curses on guns and other articles — of changing men into horses and whipping them furiously until they dropped in their tracks—of killing cattle with hair balls. As the wildernesses of the Dominion were conquered by the axe and the emissaries of the churches travelled through the land, the superstitions about witches disappeared.

We put up scare-crows in the fields to frighten away the dusky crows that love to settle on ripening crops. The early settlers had more trouble with wild pigeons. These swooped down in clouds and laid waste grain lands and gardens. The only way to get rid of the pests was to kill them. So bands of the colonists went forth with guns, while the women and children tagged along to pick up the dead birds. At home the women skinned the pigeons and salted down the wings and plump breasts.

At first sign —of deer or moose, Canada's pioneers ran eagerly for their guns. The shy, wary animals were difficult to hunt, but long hours of stalking them were splendidly rewarded by a kill. Some colonists preferred the flesh of the moose to that of deer. The former meat resembles beef more than venison...The skins of the animals when properly dressed, made soft pliable leather. This went into moccasins such as the Indians wore, into thongs for snowshoes and into coverings for trunks...even into coats and dresses if there was an insufficiency of warm home-spun clothing for the family.

Time and again one reads about the Royal Engineers in histories of Canada. Busy as beavers, the Engineers built fort after fort and road after road. They helped erect the ramparts and fort of Quebec more than 100 years ago. The cost ran into millions of dollars. They assisted, too, in the construction of the Great Cariboo Highway in British Columbia.

Sir James Douglas was the dynamic personality who urged the building of this and other highways in British Columbia. He was called the "King of Roads"—sarcastically by his enemies, admiringly by his friends. Made governor of Vancouver Island in 1851, and of the mainland in 1858, Douglas was highly ambitious for his territory and handed out money lavishly to road builders.

WINS TWO PENNANTS

Cornwall, Ont., Dec. 9 —(CP)— The Army Basic Training Centre here was the only military unit in Canada to win two pennants awarded by the Chief of General Staff in the Fifth Victory Loan, it was announced yesterday when Brig. F. Logie Armstrong, Officer Commanding Military District No. 3 (Kingston, Ont.) presented the pennants to Lt.-Col. R. Larose, officer commanding the centre.

Objective for the centre was $20,000 and the amount subscribed $60,000 with 98 per cent of the personnel investing in the loan.

HAZEL KIRKE

"Hazel" as a feminine name is of comparatively recent origin.

There are no famous Hazels in religion, history or classical literature.

Most of the thousands of women bearing this beautiful and popular name are unaware of the fact that it was seldom used as a given name until the production of "Hazel Kirke," the most famous play by John Steele MacKaye, American playwright, actor and theatrical inventor.

This play was first tentatively entitled "Cast Adrift." MacKaye was working on the manuscript in the fall of 1876 when he and his family were the guests of Prof. Lewis B. Monroe at Dublin, New Hampshire. The playwright had some difficulty in finding a satisfactory name for his heroine.

One day while writing in a summer house his wife and children returned from the woods, their arms laden with hazel boughs and they stopped to give the writer some of the nuts. As he looked at the nuts and sprays he said to his wife: "Hazel! By Jove, Molly!—Why not? That's just the name for her — so fresh and new — Hazel: I don't believe it's ever been used for a girl before. But now you and the boys have christened her: So 'Hazel' she shall be, in my new play."

The plot of the play hinges on a miller and his daughter who in girlhood pledges herself to marry a man who saved her father's business, but who later fell in love with a titled youth whom her father had saved from drowning.

MacKaye at first named his heroine Hazel MacKenzie and produced the play under the title "An Iron Will." But it did not really succeed until its title and the name of the heroine were both changed to "Hazel Kirke."

Under that title the play was launched in 1880 and it became one of the most successful theatrical productions up to that time.

In August, 1880, when "Hazel Kirke" had reached its 250th performance, MacKaye christened his first daughter Hazel.

He was undoubtedly correct in his belief that the widespread use of Hazel as a feminine name was traceable to the popularity of "Hazel Kirke."

But "Hazel" as a feminine name had been previously used in fiction if not in real life.

In 1871, nine years before MacKaye's famous play was produced under its final title, Mrs. Adeline Dutton (Train) Whitney, an American novelist, published "Real Folks," in which one of the characters is named Hazel Ripwinkley. Mrs. Whitney may have been the inventor of "Hazel" as a feminine name.

Figures on County Livestock Presented to County Council

County livestock population figures were presented before members of Hastings county council during the Wednesday afternoon session by H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative, as he reviewed the work of his office for the year and gave a resume of season's farming conditions. Mr. Fair's address, together with a short talk on assessment problems by Mr. Harold Bateman, city comptroller, and reading of correspondence comprised the business of the afternoon.

Horse population in the county totalled 12,766 with a value of $1,088,778, according to Mr. Fair. Stallions totalled 29 with a predominance of Percherons being seen of which there were 18. First form stallions numbered two, second form five and third form stallions 22.

A slight advancement in the number of accredited cattle herds was seen in the county as compared with 1941. Thirty-seven herds, totalling 1,126 cattle in 1942 were fully accredited as compared with 25 herds in the previous year. Five Ayrshire herds, two Jersey and one each of Shorthorn and Guernsey were accredited.

25 New Sheep Flocks

Twenty-five new sheep flocks, representative of an increase of about 15 to 20 percent, had been established in the county as the result of the campaign for greater production, according to the speaker.

Losses from dogs had shown a decrease in 1942 as compared with the year previous. Total money paid out for sheep losses in the county during 1941 was shown to be approximately $6,000, while losses reported last year were $3,777. Tyendinaga suffered the most in this respect with $2,423 being paid out in 1941 as compared with $1,100 last year.

Fifty-four thousand hogs had been marketed through packing house channels during 1942, this number not taking into account the number slaughtered for home consumption by farmers. This was a reduction from the year previous but when final figures for 1943 were tabulated it was estimated there would be an increase of about 20 percent in hog production over last year.

Referring to poultry raising within the county Mr. Fair indicated a considerable increased interest was evident. The Kiwanis Poultry Project through which some 3,250 chicks are distributed among rural children each year was stated to be really worthwhile. Hatchery capacity in the county was 173,000 by 11 different hatcheries.

Brief mention was made of the farm labor problem, of the assistance district airmen had given in assisting to harvest hay and grain crops, and of the transfer of farmers from the West to assist in the East. Twenty-five western men had been located in Hastings, while approximately 80 Hastings farmers had assisted in harvesting operations in the West during the late autumn.

Two calf clubs were active in the county with one each of grain clubs and potato clubs. Girls' home garden brigade numbered three.

Short Courses Valuable

Great benefit had been received from the short courses in farm management and in farm mechanics held in the county early last spring, according to Mr. Fair. The farm management course was held in Foxboro with an enrolment of 40, while the mechanics course had been held at four different centres with an average enrolment of about 45 farmers. Plans were for a widening of the courses this winter and increasing number of places in which they would be given.

City Comptroller Harold Bateman addressed the councillors on behalf of the Association of Assessment Officers for Ontario inviting township reeves to purchase memberships for their assessors in the association. Aims of the organization were to formulate plans for the revision of the Assessment Act which, it was claimed, in many cases was needed.

Mr. Bateman stated the provincial organization was divided into districts with the area in which Hastings belonged including the county of Victoria, Haliburton, Durham and Northumberland and Peterboro. No action was taken on the matter although considerable discussion was heard. Thanks to Mr. Bateman was expressed by Warden Lumb.

Among the correspondence read were two resolutions which were concurred in one from Peel county asking that council members be granted special gasoline ration privileges and another from Carleton county asking that the price of cheese be increased from 20 cents to 23 cents per pound plus bonuses

Bulgar Parliament Holds Session

New York, Dec. 9 —(AP)— The Bulgarian parliament met in secret session last night to discuss "important problems in the field of domestic and foreign policy which have recently emerged," a Hungarian News Broadcast said today.

The broadcast, recorded by United States Government monitors, added that "nothing is yet known about the discussions and it is learned that nothing will be published."

An Istanbul dispatch to the Stockholm Newspaper Allehanda yesterday said there was great nervousness in Sofia as a result of the Allied war councils in Cairo and Teheran and that many persons there expected Bulgaria to break with Germany.

The dispatch added that Bulgarian ministers to Berlin, Moscow and Turkey are all home for conferences and that a Russian military mission is visiting the Bulgarian capital.

Press for Early Trial In Rape, Murder Case

Denver, Dec. 9 — (AP) — District Attorney Richard Simon said today he would press for an early trial of a 33-year-old Fort Logan mess sergeant charged with murder in the rape death of four-year-old Kathleen Ann Geist.

The soldier, Frank Martz of Sunbury, Pa., was quoted by Simon as saying in a signed statement yesterday:—

"Since I have had time to think over events of Monday night, I can now state positively that I remember taking the girl into my room and closing the door . . . I remember striking her, choking and beating her, and tearing off her clothes."

(The child's body was found stuffed beneath a sink in Martz' apartment. At first he said he remembered nothing.)

In another part of the statement, Martz was quoted as saying:—

" . . . I was scared to death. I undressed. Took all my clothes off. And I got into bed and pulled the covers over my head and I was scared. Then the police came."

House Defeats Vote of Censure

London, Dec. 9 (CP Cable)—A vote of censure on the government moved by Sir Richard Acland, leader of the Commonwealth party, was defeated in the House of Commons today on a vote of 246 to 10 after its sponsor asserted all industry should be nationalized by 1964.

The division was forced by his amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne which would express regret that the government did not realize common ownership must supplant private ownership if future wars and poverty were to be eliminated.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, Dec. 9 — (CP) — Here, in the words of Sgt. E. J. Sykes, an English pilot, is the story of a Halifax bomber that got back from a raid on Kassel.

Sykes' crew contained three Canadians, Sgt. A. B. Ovenden, bomb-aimer from Montreal, Sgt. A. C. Yule, flight engineer from Toronto who was wounded, and Sgt. T. F. Clemenhagen, rear-gunner from Brantford, Ont., who was killed.

Said Sykes:

"We had just taken our photographs when we were coned by searchlights. By evasive action we managed to break away but two minutes later we saw tracers. The Me-110 came in from the rear and below and raked the bomber from front to back with cannon shells. The rear gunner was so badly wounded he died later. The hydraulics in the rear turret were put out of commission and the tail was plastered with bullets.

"A second attack started when the mid-upper opened up on a Ju-88. Cannon shells tore through the starboard inner cowling, and another burst inside. Another cannon shell went through the starboard rudder to break the rudder cables and the hydraulic tanks in the fuselage were no good. There was no inter-com in the rear of the kite and we dropped from 19,000 to 8,000 feet before we were able to pull out.

"Another Ju-88 blew a hole in the bottom of the kite and a hole through the fuselage, also jamming the escape hatch with cannon shell. Ovenden and the mid-upper fought and extinguished fires in the aircraft.

"The fuselage lights were no good, also the navigator's instruments had been lost during the strong evasive action. We decided to ball out but the engines kept going and we continued.

"Then it was a question of getting down. The kite was so badly damaged I lost control coming in on approach and the starboard undercarriage folded up and the aircraft did a terrific ground loop, shot across the landing field and parked in a hedge.

"And to shake us really rigid, we discovered that a case of incendiaries was still in the wing that hit the ground on landing."

Don Hall's record of leading aircraftman to flight lieutenant in 11 months will take a lot of beating. The Sundridge, Ont., engineer leader is with the "Moose" squadron.

He enlisted in Sudbury, Ont., in June, 1940 as an aero-engine mechanic but remustered to flight engineer and was made a sergeant on completing his course. He's been going up quickly ever since.

Sgt. John (Sharpy) Keene of Orono, Ont., is getting a reputation around the flight rooms of the R.C.A.F.'s Bluenose squadron as a "three-engined pilot." Twice in a row he brought his Halifax home with one engine dead.

MAY INDUCT CROONER

Newark, N.J., Dec. 9 (AP)—Crooner Frank Sinatra was expected today at the Newark draft induction station for a final physical examination and decision on whether he's going into service.

There was no official announcement by Selective Service that his test has been pushed up today from Saturday, but he was reported to have left Boston by train last midnight to appear here today.

Jap Atrocities Told in Evidence By Missionary

Los Angeles, Dec. 9 — (AP)—Dr. Ralph Phillips, returned missionary told a state legislative committee yesterday that he saw Japanese take 50,000 Chinese men from a refugee camp he and his wife had helped to operate near Nanking, "herd them together and shoot them down."

Some, he said, were only slightly wounded and were burned alive when Japanese set fire to the mass of bodies.

"The Japanese also took many thousands of young girls between the ages of nine and 15 and turned them over to 58,000 Jap soldiers for a week," he testified.

"Those girls who still were alive at the close of that week were put to death in the most cruel and unspeakable manner."

He and his wife, who about 17 years ago founded "Phillips House," a missionary home in Hong Kong, returned to the United States in 1941.

3rd Sidney

3rd Sidney—Squadron Leader W. C. Langstaff and his wife returned to Toronto on Monday, having spending last week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Langsaff.

During their stay, many gatherings were held in their honor, the climax being on Saturday and Sunday when the other members of the family were home for the weekend. This re-union was touched with sorrow, when word was received that their son, and brother, Reynolds (Red) had been wounded in action overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Patience, (the former Marjory Langstaff) their daughters, Violet and Betty Anne, their son, Charles, and their aunt, Mrs. Canfield all of Gouverneur, N. Y., were weekend guests at the Langstaff home.

The many friends of Mr. Abel Grills will be pleased to learn that he has returned to his home, much improved in health.

Mrs. George Parry spent a day last week with Mr. and Mrs. Murney Jeffrey.

Mr. David Hubble returned to his home on Saturday after a ten day holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Selburn Westover.

Mrs. Andrew Langstaff left on Tuesday for Smith's Falls to attend the funeral of her brother, the late Wm. C. Cowan of the Veteran Guards, who died in a Military Hospital.

Mrs. Fred Westover spent the weekend with Miss Kathleen McPherson and Mrs. J. McPherson at their home in Belleville.

The pupils of Centenary and the Hogle Public Schools with their teachers, Miss Marion Pound and Miss Hazel Detlor, are preparing for their Christmas concerts.

Eldorado

Foxboro — Mr. Carl Spencer of Colborne spent the week end at his home here.

Miss Edythe Cook of South Monaghan spent Sunday with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Cooke.

Training Course For Practical Nurses To Be Held in Jan.

Realizing the shortage of practical nurses throughout the province, the Community Nursing Registries will continue its policy of preparing suitable persons for this work and will offer another training course which will be held under the direction of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario.

The course is not primarily a war measure, it is pointed out, but is designed to meet the need fof simple nursing care in the community. The program will correlate theory, practical work and nutrition to round out a very interesting demonstration for the preparation of a group of young women to provide a service for which there is a great need.

Following successful completion of the course the qualified practical nurse will identify herself with the Belleville Community Nursing Registry and will carry on her duties under the guidance of the Registered Nurse personnel in cnarge of the Registry.

Local women interested in taking the course are asked to contact Mrs. J. Campbell, nurses' registrar, at 77 Lingham Street, or telephone 1125. Inquiries should be made before December 15th as the number of applicants is limited due to class room accommodation. The course will be held in Hamilton starting January 4th.

Presentation To Bridal Couple

A number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hubble on November 29, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hubble, who were recently married. Rev. E. N. Cook acted as chairman for the evening's entertainment.

An address, signed on behalf of the Foxboro community, by Ronald Longwell, Harold Hollinger, Verna Sherry and Mr, and Mrs. Earl Way, was read. The bridal couple were then presented with two occasional chairs and an occasional table.

Both the bride and groom expressed their sincere thanks and appreciation, after which the evening was spent socially.

COMFORTS FOR SAILORS

London—(CP)—Britain's knotters have seen to it that sailors on minesweepers, patrol vessels, tugs and other small coastal craft aren't going cold. More than 3,000,000 knitted garments have been sent to the "little ships" since war started, said Sir Basil Brook, Treasurer to the Queen and Chairman of the Royal Navy Knitted Garments Depot.

Our First Rocking-Chair

It is not for its beauty we prize it,
For its surface is blistered and brown;
Of wood it is fashioned and builded
With cushions of feathers and down;
It stands in the wide kitchen corner,
Invitingly tempting to rest,
Although at one time it was worthy
Of a place in the room we called "best".

Our first rocking-chair! How we prized it!
And all in our wee house of dreams!
How we painted bright scenes of the future
Embellished with hope's shining gleams!
And life, it has been what we made it,
In spite of its burden and care;
Oh! the dreams of the heart made a halo
That shines round the old rocking-chair.

When weary of day's toilsome duties,
And of life and its fret and its care,
The evenings at home were a solace
With a rest in the old rocking-chair:
And 'round this old seat cluster memories
Of youth, when our spirits would roam,
But today the old chair is a symbol
Of the peace and contentment of home.

WEDDINGS

JOHNSON—BARR

Roslin.—St. Paul's Anglican Rectory was the scene of an interesting wedding on Tuesday, December seventh, at 11.30 a.m., when Doris Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Barr, of Mountain Grove, became the bride of Gordon Allan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson of Roslin.

The ceremony was performed by the Rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely floor length gown of skyline blue crepe. Her veil of matching blue net was caught to her hair with forget-me-nots and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. Arthur Cox was her sister's matron of honor and was attired in a shell pink dress and matching pink shoulder length veil caught to her hair with rose buds. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of rose-bud chrysanthemums and violets.

Mr. Wm. Johnson, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson of Roslin.

HAMILTON—COURNEGYA

The marriage of Miss Margaret (Peggy) Cournegya, to John H. (Johnny) Hamilton, was solemnized in a quiet ceremony, Saturday, December fourth, at St. Basil's Church, Toronto, by Rev. D. L. Forestell.

The bride, formerly a member of the Hotel Dieu Hospital staff, Kingston, is the daughter of Ernest Cournegya, Tweed, and the late Mrs. Cournegya. The bridegroom, who played hockey with St. Michael's College and Brighton, England, hockey teams, is the son of Mrs. Mary Hamilton, Bishop Street, Toronto, and the late Thomas Hamilton.

The bride was attired in a queen's blue ensemble, and wore her mother's wedding ring. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kennedy, the latter wearing an autumn-brown ensemble.

An informal reception for the immediate families took place in the evening at the home of the bride's aunt, Miss Annaline Cournegya, St. Joseph Street, who received in a tailored-beige boucle costume.

TEARNE—WHEELER

A very quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler, Simcoe Street, Napanee, December sixth, at four o'clock, when their youngest daughter, Sarah Ann (Sadie), became the bride of Trooper Don Tearne, only son of Mrs. Gould and the late Mr. Tearne, of Corbyville, Ont.

The bride was dressed in a floor-length gown of white chiffon, with veil to match, and carried a bouquet of roses and chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaid, Miss Norma Dupont, was dressed in pink taffeta, floor length, with veil to match and her corsage was roses and chrysanthemums.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Thomas Rodgers. The best man was LAC. Yallup of Camp Mohawk.

Rev. Rabbie of the Pentecostal Church, performed the ceremony.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket and chain; to the bridesmaid, a pendant and chain, and to the best man, a leather R.C.A.F. case.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Gould of Corbyville; Mrs. Robt. Rodgers, of Belleville, and Thomas Rodgers of Belleville.

The house was nicely decorated for the occasion with pink and white streamers and a large white bell hung in the centre. A number of friends and relatives gathered to witness the happy event.

The young couple left for points west by car, amid the best wishes of all.

LANE—ROYLE

The Rev. G. G. Wright officiated at the marriage ceremony of Phyllis Louise Royle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Royle, to Flight Sergeant Pilot Robert George Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Lane of East Sussex, England, on Thursday evening, December second in Christ Church. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Grace Calvert and Ronald Elmly sang "I Love You Truly".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride entered the church to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, dressed in her long white sheer chiffon wedding gown, with shoulder length veil and carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Irene Royle, her sister's bridesmaid, was wearing a frock of pink sheer chiffon with matching turban as a headdress, and carrying a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mr. Jack Royle, brother of the bride, was groomsman and the ushers were Mac Royle, brother of the bride and George Wallace.

For the wedding reception at the home of the bride's parents, following the ceremony, the bride's mother was attired in an ensemble of deep violet hue with corsage of pink carnations. The rooms were decorated with pink and white streamers, and baskets of 'mums in hues of pink and white. Pink and white streamers, which floated from the ceiling, were connected to the ends of the bride's table, the centre of which was the three-tiered wedding cake.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and western points, the bride selected a dress of robin's egg blue and navy accessories. On their return they will reside at 212 Coleman Street.

The groom's "D" Flight from Picton, R.A.F. station, attended the wedding in a body.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Toronto, Newburgh, Trenton and Picton.

Camera Girls Do Men's Job For R.C.A.F.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rivers, Man., Dec. 9 — (CP) — There are no helpless females in the Photographic Corps of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

With air cameras weighing 25 pounds, the girls can't afford to be sissies. They're doing a man's job and they love it.

The girls, who are called Photographic Assistants, took a three-month course in Rockliffe, Ont. The school they attended is the only one of its kind in Canada and one of the best equipped in the world.

There are eight girls in the photography section of the Central Navigation School here. They print, develop, and photograph—even do aerial photography occasionally. Each has an excellent general knowledge of photography but doesn't specialize in any one field.

Martha Sentes of Markinch, Sask., is one girl who is definitely going to make photography a career after the war. Mary Ball from Alida, Sask., is another.

Lona Harrison, who used to be a welder in Toronto, and Jean Hollingshead of Leilburg, Sask., a former hairdresser, said: "photography has a great future and we're sticking to it."

FO. J. A. L. Johnston of Toronto, their photographic officer, declared the girls are making exceptionally good progress.

"As yet they aren't as good technically as men, but they're better at detail work," he said.

The girls' work doesn't end with the photography section. They have invaded what, until recently, was strictly a man's domain—the weather bureau. Always of prime importance in the air force, the weather bureau is the hub of all operational activities.

There are six girls in the Meteorological Bureau. They plot raobs (upper air soundings), Piabals (upper winds), and maps. They also type out forecasts, which are issued to every station in No. 2 Training Command, and send flight plans on the teletype.

Marjorie Macdonnell of Hespero, Alta., has her B. A. from the University of Alberta and was a school teacher before joining the W. D.

Irene Menu from Pine Falls, Man., attended the University of Toronto, then did some clerking. She'd like to keep on with her work after the war. "It's the most interesting think I've ever done," she said.

Held in France For Three Years

London, Dec. 999 (CP)—Parisian creation 1943—blue slacks, a top garment made from a French silk slip, a French blouse and part of a tartan skirt, a Glengarry hat, made from the rest of the tartan skirt, and a roomy overcoat.

That's the Paris wardrobe 57-year-old Dorothy Rolfe brought back to England with her when repatriated recently.

Miss Rolfe had spent nearly three years in Vittel prison camp near Paris where clothes were catch as catch can. The grey-haired woman had only the few things she could snatch when she was arrested in December, 1940, to last during her imprisonment.

The first three months of her confinement she spent in a filthy military barracks where the women were afraid to undress. In April, 1941, she was moved to Vittel and quartered in a disused luxury hotel with occasional leave in Paris.

Miss Rolfe describes the French as cheery and optimistic, confident that the war wil soon be over.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.

Q. Is there any government form that I must fill out when I sell fuelwood?

A. No. Simply make out an ordinary receipt giving the names of both seller and buyer, the quantity, price and type of wood and the date of the transaction, and hand this to the purchaser. It would be well for you to keep a similar record of your sales should this information be required.

Q. How can I get rid of a tenant who is obnoxious?

A. If you are satisfied that good ground for an application to that end exists, you should apply at any office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board for the necessary form of application and file it with your Rentals Appraiser, who will notify both you and your tenant of the date of hearing of the application by the Court of Rentals Appeals. Consultation with a rentals representative of the Board is advised before any application of this nature is made.

Q. I still have some canning sugar coupons and do not think that I will need them. What should I do with them?

A. Destroy them if you do not require them.

Q. My butcher suggested I should hand over to him the meat coupons that I do not need. Is that legal?

A. Quite the contrary. The butcher has no right to make such a suggestion and you have no right to accept it.

Q. During a recent cold spell my landlord cut down the heat until conditions in this flat were scarcely bearable. Has he a right to do that?

A. The rentals regulations specify that, unless there is an agreement to that effect between landlord and tenant, a landlord cannot discontinue or lessen any heating supplied by him except by written permit of a Rentals Appraiser or unless this discontinuance or lessening is due to governmental order or fuel not being available.

Q. We live in rather an isolated part of the country where there are no cows and are dependent upon evaporated milk for our feeding. Is there any way in which it can be obtained?

A. Consult your Local Ration Board.

Q. I have a chance to sell my car. What am I entitled to charge for it?

A. Please send details of the car, its year, model, etc., to the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board which will furnish you with the desired information.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The Christmas meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the church, last Thursday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Trumpour was in charge of the election of officers and paid high tribute to the work of the W.M.S. The officers for 1944 are as follows:

President—Mrs. Armtrsong.
1st Vice President—Mrs. Mills.
Treasurer—Mrs. Empson.
Recording Sec.,—Mrs. Williams.
Corresponding Sec., —Mrs. Trumpour.
Press Sec.,—Mrs. Mills.
Christian Stewardship — Mrs. Loucks.
Community Friendship — Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Bird, Mrs. Holgate, Mrs. Armstrong.
Supply Sec.—Mrs. W. Brenton.
Associate Helpers—Mrs. H. Brenton.
Temperance and Christian Citizenship—Mrs. M. Benedict and Mrs. Bird.
Missionary Monthly—Mrs. H. Farnham.
Pianist—Mrs. Empson.
Finance Committee— Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Loucks, Mrs. Empson, Mrs. Roblin and Mrs. Pound.
Auditors—Mrs. Pound and Mrs. Williams.
Representative to Official Board —Mr. Armstrong.

The President took charge of the Christmas program and the worship service was very impressive and included Christmas music and hymns. It was followed by the 'candle-lighting service" with all the members taking part. The chapter of the Study Book "The Joy of Work Skillfully Done", was presented by Mrs. Trumpour and left everyone with the thought "Blessed is the privilege of achievement". Mrs. Armstrong showed by posters the better way of life for farmers and industrialists. Readings in this connection were given by Mrs. H. Brenton and Mrs. W. Brenton.

A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. R. Pound for her splendid work with the Mission Band during the past few years.

The President closed the meeting with prayer.

BABY'S CONSTIPATION SERIOUS IF NEGLECTED

BABY'S daily movements are something of which absolutely accurate track must be kept. When he misses something must be done at once. Constipation is serious for baby.

Mrs. John T. Reid of Hespeler, Ont., has this to say: "Having had seven children and having used Baby's Own Tablets for all seven, can say they are the best and gentlest regulator for children — safe and effective for the tiniest infant. I give them up to 10 years of age. During teething Baby's Own Tablets were a boon to me as they cleared up at once any digestive disturbance or fretfulness."

Equally effective for simple fever, diarrhoea, upset stomach, colic, simple croup and other minor ailments of babyhood.

Quick and sure in their action. Easy to take. Harmless, and safe. Do not contain opiates or stupefying drugs. Each package contains analyst's certificate. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if not satisfied.

Fashion Flashes

WELL SUITED to a busy day is the well made black woollen-frock with satin trim. A new beauty has a black satin collar with notched revers, and a black satin midriff with small black buttons so placed that the bodice and skirt seem to button on to the midriff in V effect.

For all but chilly mortals, or a very cold latitude, the woollen frock, made with a high-closing surplice bodice, is paired with a hip-length boxy topper of matching black wool lined with white broadtail. The topper has a small, notched broadtail collar.

"Never nicer" is the verdict on the current fur hats. A tiny black Persian lamb pillbox is decorated with black satin and fuchsia satin bows. A small Breton of pink felt has a high, mink back; White ermine bows trim a tiny black velvet calot.

Who cares about the cold, now that the shops are all showing such a splendid array of woolly shawls, scarves and fascinators? For wear over the shoulders or head is a lacy wool triangle in aqua blue sprinkled with tiny twinkling blue beads and edged with marabou.

Right now it looks as though spring will see soft, dressy fashions featured. Suits are softened, and so are accessories. A charming glove, a hand-sewn model in navy suede, is trimmed with appliqued circles of white, Irish crocheted lace. A black doeskin glove has a cuff of black Chantilly lace.

HAD FIVE WIVES

New York, Dec. 9—(AP)—Henry M. Roe, 95-year-old war worker from St. Louis, has his own post-war plan. Roe, who is among a group of war-workers honored at the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers, has had five wives. After the war is over, he said today, he is going to look for a sixth.

CANDY QUEUES FORM

Vancouver, Dec. 9 —(CP)— Now it's the candy queue that's replacing Vancouver's popular liquor lineup. Two-deep and at least half a block long, the new lineup forms at the candy stores. Candy shops have different hours of opening for the brief 15 or 30 minutes it takes to sell out their stocks for the day.

HE GOT OUT

Los Angeles, Dec. 9—(AP)—Mrs. John B. Hughes said she was stores. Candy shops have differboy jumped into her car, brandished a pistol and ordered her to drive on. "Lady, this gun is loaded," Mrs. Hughes said he told her. "I senger, "this isn't my car, I thought snapped. Abashed, he did.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

What is Necessary Travel For Sweethearts and Wives in Wartime?

Sounds like an old-time maiden aunt I know. But, please don't go to meet your husband or sweetheart at some far-off Army post, unless you have enough money in your pocket for emergencies. He may have been ordred away before you arrive.

A current magazine tells of a girl who went to meet her husband at a post in the deep South. She was going to have a baby, and she hoped to see her man before he sailed overseas. She spent three days room-hunting, three nights in a ladies' lounge of a hotel, four days in a lobby waiting for a phone call from her husband. She finally asked a soldier, sitting near her, to call for help. Fortunately, she and the baby both survived.

A woman who had been writing to this column inquiring whether she should sell some of her possessions, take her three children and visit her husband at a distant post, finally made her own decision. I had urged her not to go. Her husband had not written for some time, and the long trip with the three youngsters and not much money seemed inadvisable to me.

However, she sold her cows, (they had a small farm) and set out for the post from which he had last written. He was there all right but he'd lost interest in his family. The siren who had turned his head lived in a nearby town.

The wife, with insuficient money, had a terrific scene with her husband and left intending to sue for divorce, which was exactly what the temporarily love-cracked husband wanted at the moment. When she got home, she reconsidered her decision, but will have greater difficulty in making ends meet now that she sold her two cows.

Miss B. who had never been farther from home than fifty miles, in her entire life, left a rural town for an army post. Buses had to be changed several times and she got lost. When she arrived finally, after various mishaps, it was to discover that her soldier had already sailed and there was no chance for the little white dress she carried in her suit-case, and which she expected to wear at her wedding.

Dozens of such stories have come to this column, but many of the service wives feel as did Ruth: "Whither thou goest, I will go".

And all said and done, it's hard to blame them for wanting to see their men before they are sent overseas.

Styles for Normal Figure

Laraine Day has a beautiful trim figure.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH FITTED bodices nipped in waist lines, snuggish skirts and cute jackets the feminine outline is pretty much revealed. Fashions are designed for the normal figure. They are not overly friendly to the woman of large displacement, nor is the skinny little slimp particularly pleased with them.

There must be a good front, with lifted chest, if sartorial draperies are to be carried with splendor. Those young ladies who have paid no heed to posture, who have affected the debutante slouch should be getting active. They must be chesty for the new styles.

Exercises to Develop Bust

One way to get the full, normal figure is to swim for it. Another means is found in swinging Indian clubs. A third help is regular, daily, deep breathing exercises. All these are diversions really, can be enjoyed. And they are wonderful health and good looks aids. Go to it, willowy one.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Yule Messages From a Mourning Family.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My brother was killed in action overseas last month, and we are so heart-broken that we cannot bring ourselves to send any Christmas messages tod our friends this year. But what we thought we might do is to write notes of appreciation to any friends who may send us cards or notes at Christmas-time. Do you think we are selfish not to send Christmas-cards? Or do you agree that our idea of writing notes of thanks for cards or notes is enough for this year?

If you approve of our writing notes of thanks, will you please give us an idea about what to write? Please give us your advice. We need it very much, Mrs. Beeckman.

A Grateful Reader.

My heart goes out to you. And most humbly I offer you my deep sympathy, and my understanding of the burden of sorrow your hearts will be carrying this Christmas without your beloved brother. Please don't make the effort to send Christmas cards. . . your friends will not want you to add this wearying task these days.

Nor will your friends expect you to acknowledge their Christmas messages to you, cards or notes. But if you feel you want to, and if the strain on your feelings is not too great, your friends will be deeply touched by your thoughtfulness and inspired by your bravery.

Perhaps these words may suggest what you would like to say:

You dear Katherine:

And what a dear Katherine you are, to tell us you are holding us close in your hearts these days. Your words of goodness and friendship, so warm and understanding, brought us great comfort. Thank you. And bless you for your beautiful words in memory of our Bob.

Every good wish for your New Year . . .and our prayers that it will bring Victory and Peace.

Affectionately,

Whether To Give Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just started working, and have to live very economically. But I do want to do the right thing about the problem that is now confronting me. My boy-friend's brother is getting married next month, and I have been invited to the wedding. I have attended a shower given for this bride-to-be and brought her a shower gift. Now am I supposed to give her a wedding gift?

Maria,

I think that, under your circumstances, you shouldn't make an effort to give a wedding present. Think of your shower present as serving also as the wedding present. . . . I'm sure this bride-to-be will understand that you have been as generous as your circumstances will permit you to be, and will not really expect another present. This will be sufficient present also because as I judge from your letter, you do not know the bride-to-be especially well.

Her Favourite Adjective

The other day I heard a pretty girl exclaim, "Don't you admire Colonel So-and-So! I think he's wonderful—and too cute for words, don't you?"

I could visualize the dour look on the face of this stalwart and brilliant warrior if he had heard himself called "cute". You'd never think the sophisticated modern girl would still be using that old expression of the Gay Nineties.

But she is— because she can't find any other adjective that quite takes its place. "Cute" has been a girl's favorite adjective, ever since Cleopatra caught her first glimpee of the Sphinx and exclaimed "How cute"

Naturally, it gives a big, husky five-foot two wisp of gal. He knows hear himself called "cute" by a five-foottwo wisp of gal. He knows that she means to be flattering, but it sounds more like ribbing or an insult.

"Cute" is what a woman would rather be than president—or even than beautiful. To the kind of girl who still "cutes" things, everything she admires is "cute", from a toy peke to the Empire State Building or a Flying Fortress.

She will tell you that she met the cutest marines at the Canteen. Or that the stars were positively cute, last night! Or she may vary the monotony by remarking that the grandest salad she ever ate, was the one they served on that cute trip through the Rocky Mountains and the Royal Gorge. A broiled squab or a new baby may be simply grand or swell or gorgeous; but tough fighting-man in a new uniform would be "cute".

I thought that all the "cute" addicts were dead by this time; but there are plenty of them still with us—young ones especially. There are so many other pet adjectives, now—"swell" and "precious" and "thr-r-hilling" and "amusing" and 'delish" and "eye-filling" and "gorgeous" and "tops" and "grand" and "naive" —oh dozens—that you'd think they'd cover everything.

Once in a while you meet a girl, to whom everything is "swell", from the latest victory to her new beret, or lamb-chops for dinner. And the fashion writers have hung onto "amusing" with a strangle-hold for a long time, since there was anything in the world "amusing". Yet none of these newer terms apparently will ever quite take the place of "cute".

According to the dictionary, "cute" may mean cunning, crafty, sharp or astute. But when a girl uses it, it means a thousand other things: charming, delightful or attractive. Or handsome and irresistible! Or impressive, magnificent or picturesque—ah anything!

Cute is the great American diminutive— a term of affection, admiration, tenderness or sentiment. It means—well, what does a MAN mean when he calls a girl, built like the State of Liberty, "Cutey". He means exactly what girl means, when she calls a tall, lank soldier in a Scotch tam, "cute"!

"Cute" is always complimentary!

BEARS IMPROVE POSITION ATOP AMERICAN LOOP

Cleveland Barons, Leaders of West Division, in Second Place

BEARS BEAT BARONS

By the Canadian Press

Hershey Bears crushed Cleveland Barons 4-1 last night to strengthen their position atop the American Hockey League with 24 points. Indianapolis Capitals downed Providence Reds 6-2 on home ice in the night's other game.

The Barons—leaders of the Western Section—are in second place, three points behind Bears who have won 11 games in 15 starts this season. Bears' record includes a pair of draws and a pair of losses. Cleveland has won nine games and tied three in 16 starts.

Earl Bartholome, Cleveland's star centre, saved them from a shutout with a goal in the last period when Bears' goalie, Nick Damore, was flat on the ice away from his net.

Versatile Gaston Gauthier paced the Bears to victory with two goals —both in the second period—while George Pearson and Ross Knowles scored in the first period.

Red Kane scored two goals in the Indianapolis victory, other Cap counters being provided by Bernie Ruelle, Tony Buchovich, Vic Lynn and Roy Glover. Hec Pozzo and Johnny Gagnon got the Providence goals.

MEETS WATSON HERE

Ready for his big moment is "Big John" Katan, the Palermo Ukrainian-Canadian, whose challenge for the British Empire heavyweight wrestling title was quickly snapped up by Champion Billie Watson and the boys go to the mat tonight at the Hume Arena here. Last week a Katan-Watson bout ended in bedlam in Toronto and now these arch mat enemies tangle in Belleville in a championship bout.

Promoter Tunney has also lined up THE CZAR, hard-headed Russian, to meet "Hard-Boiled" Hannigan from south of the border in the semi-final with Mike Demitre and Pierre DeGlane prying off the lid in this all-star show.

Anniversary Note:

Yesterday was the second anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor...it also was the occasion for the first showing of the American League's world series film to local scribes, the presentation of the Lampert Trophy to the Navy football team, a meeting of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations, Inc., and one of the New York tennis writers ... today the boxing scribes gather to vote on the award of the Eddie Neil Trophy—probably to Fred Apostoli or Benny Leonard ...who was it said sports in the United States wouldn't survive a year of war?

Memorial Plaque Awarded To 4,019 Boxers of U.S. Army

By The Canadian Press

The Boxing Writers Association of New York announced its decision yesterday to award the Edward J. Neil Memorial Plaque for 1943 to the 4,019 boxers of the United States who have been or are wearing a uniform of the armed services, the annual presentation to take place at the organization's annual dinner Jan. 10. Acceptance will be made by "fighting boxers" representing ringmen in each branch of the services. In previous years the plaque, in memory of The Associated Press writer who was killed in 1938 during the Spanish Civil War, had been presented to an individual: Jack Dempsey, Billy Conn, Henry Armstrong, Joe Louis and Barney Ross.

Sports records show 18 boxers have been killed in action during the present war; seven others met accidental death after entering military service; nine are missing in action and approximately 40 have been wounded. About 500 of the 4,019 enlisted boxers are conducting physical training and recreational programs at home and overseas and aboard naval ships.

James C. McCullough, 50, former semi-pro baseball player and sportsman of Transcona, Man., died in Winnipeg yesterday. His birthplace was Kincardine, Ont., and had moved west 24 years ago.

Frank Dunlap of Ottawa, a student at St. Michael's College, Toronto, has been granted immediate reinstatement by the C.A.H.A. after playing two games with the Toronto Leafs in the N.H.L., it was announced last night by President Frank Sargent of the hockey body. He will turn out with St. Michael's junior O.H.A. team.

Pitcher Bucky Walters of the Cincinnati Reds underwent an appendectomy yesterday in a Philadelphia hospital and was reported progressing favorably. Walters had to forego the trip with the baseball party to Alaska because of the ailment.

President C. L. Laws yesterday announced the signing of Dolph Camilli of the New York Giants as manager of his Oakland club in the Pacific Coast League. Oakland gave the Giants an option on shortstop Bill Rigney, now in the Navy, as part of the deal.

Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O.H.A. announced today entries in the intermediate "A" and junior "B" series would close Wednesday, Dec. 15, club entries to be sent to his office, Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, before that date.

Toronto, Dec. 9— (CP) — Flt. Lt. Syd Halter, President of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, indignantly denied this column's comment that the Union died in 1937 when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association withdrew its support in a dispute over definition of an amateur. Syd states the A.A.U. was active until the war and lapsed into a "state of suspension" only because the great majority of its affiliated athletes have enlisted. "We'll be back after the war as active as ever," says Halter, a Winnipeg barrister in civilian life. The amateur union's great problem at the moment is to find a secretary to succeed John Leslie, whose death occurred last week in Edmonton. "Even though our major activities were suspended, John continued to carry on considerable correspondence right to the end," said Halter. "He was one of the most valuable sports executives in Canada with his great capacity for understanding and his wide knowledge of sports. We shall find it difficult to replace John Leslie."

Scoring Record:

Joe Sadler's seven goals here last Saturday as St. Michael's beat Toronto Young Rangers 12-1 in the junior O.H.A. may have been a modern scoring record for class 'A' hockey. Last year Church Russell of Winnipeg Rangers scored six goals as the club won the Manitoba junior title by beating St. Boniface 12-6. Sadler's splurge was not an all-time record, however. Frank McGee scored 16 goals for Ottawa Silver Seven in a Stanley Cup game in 1905, Joe Malone fired 10 for Quebec Bulldogs in 1913 and Dick Irvin, now coach of Montreal Canadiens, scored nine for Winnipeg Monarchs in an Allan Cup game against Toronto Rowing Association in 1914.

Round and About:

There's a rumor Red Dutton will be offered the National Hockey League's permanent presidency but that he will refuse...Charlie Sands, handed a terrific insult when given his outright release by New York Rangers, who could use almost any kind of hockey help, may take a job coaching in Los Angeles...Glen Harmon, Canadiens defenceman, has invented a knockdown card table for use on railway coaches. Now that teams travel in day coaches they have to supply their own table tops and Harmon's four-piece model can be carried in a travelling rack.

TEAMS BATTLE TO DRAW

Montreal, Dec. 9 — (CP)—Montreal Royals and Montreal Air Force fought to a 4-4 tie in a Quebec Senior Hockey League fixture here last night. As a result of the draw Air Force moved into a first-place tie with idle Quebec Aces while Royals remained in the cellar, a game behind Ottawa Commandos.

Jack Stewart paced Air Force attack with two goals and an assist while Harry Watson and Kenny Mosdell scored the other Air Force goals. Connolly, Smart, Campeau and Farmer were Royals' marksmen.

New York state derived revenue of $19,306,140 from horse racing during the past season, an increase of 84 per cent over the 1942 total, it was announced at Albany yesterday. The six per cent tax on pari-mutuel betting brought $18,511,987 during the 222 racing days, compared with $9,808,819 for 356 days of racing in the previous year.

VISITING TEAMS FAIL TO WIN IN 16 LEAGUE GAMES

Home Clubs Win 14 Games and Split Even on Other Two

STERNER TEST COMING

By The Canadian Press

In the National Hockey League 16 league games since Nov. 21 not a single team has managed to win on the other fellow's ice. Home clubs have won 14 of the contests and settled for a split of points in the other two.

In home games over that stretch, Boston Bruins have won four and tied one. Chicago Black Hawks, Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs took three and lost none and Detroit Red Wings won their lone engagement.

Even New York Rangers made the grade, scoring their only point of the season with a draw against Canadiens in their only appearance before home fans since Nov. 21.

Home teams face a stern test, however, in the only games scheduled this week. Toronto entertains the league-leading Montreal Canadiens Saturday while Rangers are at home to Boston Sunday. Rangers also play at Boston Saturday while two other Sunday contests send Canadiens to Detroit and Toronto to Chicago.

Sports Roundup

New York, Dec. 9 —(AP)— It's easy to blame almost anything on a war — it can't argue with you— and that may be why some old timers in sports profess to see some similiarity between recent rumors about gambling by professional football players and baseball's great scandal of 1919 . . . No proof has been brought up to support these rumors and there probably isn't any basis for them . . . Still there are certain similar conditions that might weaken the public's confidence in pro football . . . The foundations of the Black Sox affair were laid during the war years, when there was a free and easy attitude toward money and gambling and when many athletes felt they'd be too old to return to sports after the fighting ended. . . . Those same sentiments prevail today (take a look at the figures on race track gambling) and while rumors can be heard, it will take more than denials and offers of reward to convince all the public that they have no foundation.

Proof of the Pudding.

Baseball recently tossed out Bill Cox for what many people might think was a harmless practice of backing his own team to win . . . And by taking this step it strengthened its place in public esteem . . . From here it seems that Football Commissioner Elmer Layden would do well to follow the vigorous example of Judge Landis and conduct a thorough investigation of every rumor. . . . If he already has tracked them all down, it's up to Elmer to tell the public exactly what he has done and why he doesn't believe any of those yarns.

Launching An Idea.

When the New York Boxing Writers met yesterday to award the Eddie Neil Memorial Trophy it was suggested that an effort be made to have his name included among the sports celebrities and war correspondents for whom liberty ships have been named. . . . To those of us who knew Eddie and worked with him it seemed that nothing less than a battleship would do until a letter was read from Mrs. James J. Corbett in which she said that if the former heavyweight champion were alive nothing would please him more— not even winning the title from John L. Sullivan — than having one of these ships carry his name. . . . As Eddie Neil probably would have said: "Anything good enough for Jim Corbett is good enough for me."

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

At the close of a hot day, Adam was returning with his hoe on his shoulder from a hard day's labor to his cave. Young Cain was running ahead, boylike, throwing rocks at the birds. Suddenly they came upon a beautiful garden:

Cain—Oh, Father, look at the beautiful garden. I wish we could live there!

Adam (regretfully)—We did live in that garden until your mother ate us out of house and home.

(All dressed up.)

The newly-organized Belleville Juniors are to have brand new uniforms according to Secretary Wally Berry. "Toots" Holway was named as coach when the club executive met the other night, while President Tom Fleury stated Jack Doran had been named manager of the Belleville Junior O.H.A. club, while Bill Dennis will manage the Belleville Juveniles, a second team to be organized later to develop players for the junior squad. Incidentally the duties of coach of the Juvenile team was also left in the hands of Coach Holway for the time being at least.

According to information emanating from the local junior hockey headquarters the junior team's activities will be outlined and completed before the juvenile club is organized. This was necessary owing to the fact, that some of the boys failing to catch on with the local Juniors would relegate to the Juvenile squad for seasoning.

(Room for more.)

The suggestion of the sponsorship of juvenile hockey by the Junior Executive is a splendid one, but surely there's room for more than one juvenile team in Belleville.

Aubrey Coe, who is interested in the Belleville Sea Cadets and manager of the Coca Cola plant, came up with a splendid suggestion along these lines yesterday.

"I'm sure the Air Cadets and Sea Cadet officials in Belleville would welcome the opportunity to sponsor juvenile hockey teams in their respective units. This would give us three teams to start with and frankly I am certain there would be sufficient interest to make the proposition one of success no matter how you look at it. Primarily, however, it would provide recreation for the boys and also help to develop hockey talent for the future," commented Mr. Coe.

Promoter's meal ticket.)

Wrestling promoters have to possess their ring heroes, but more important are the mat villains. In this group you find John Katan, the Palermo assassin, who can handle himself in any battle, inside or outside the ring.

Few Canadian wrestling stars have worn better than the same Ukrainian-Canadian matman. Some have blossomed out, became sensations —and dropped into oblivion, but not the former Calgary coal miner who meets "Whipper Billie" Watson in an Empire title bout at the Hume Arena tonight.

Strangely enough Katan's position never varied much in the public's eye, as he is recognized as a formidable foe, but the patrons have kept him on the villain's side of the fence. Regardless John Katan is a suitable opponent for any wrestler in the business and this was well proven last August when he battled a full hour without a fall against Bill Longson for the world's championship.

(Gehrig leads again.)

Eight New York players — five Yankees and three Giants—have enjoyed the distinction of being named their league's most valuable performers, with Lou Gehrig, the Irron Horse of the Yankees, having been selected four times—more than any other player.

During the four years the Chalmers award was made—1911 to 1914 —Larry Doyle of the Giants was the lone New York representative, being named the National League's top performer in 1912.

After an interval, the American League took up the selections in its circuit in 1922, and the National followed in 1924, newspaper writers making up the committees. Babe Ruth of the Bronx Bombers was selected in 1923 and Lou Gehrig in 1927, with league rules stipulating that the winner in any one year could not be selected the following season.

Dropped by the leagues, the selections were resumed by The Sporting News in the American in 1929 and the National in 1930, with the following New York players having been chosen:

National League—Bill Terry, 1930; Carl Hubbell, 1933 and 1936.

American League — Lou Gehrig, 1931, 1934 and 1936; Joe DiMaggio, 1939 and 1941; Joe Gordon, 1942 and Spud Chandler, 1943.

What's Doing in Sport

Pittsburgh —(AP)— Ray Mangrum, golf pro, yesterday was divorced by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Gordon Mangrum, who claimed he had deserted her in October, 1941, when she refused to give him any more money from her father's estate. They were married in June, 1935.

Cleveland —(AP)— By purchasing a third-interest in the Cleveland Rams of the National pro grid league, Capt. Daniel F. Reeves of the U. S. Army Air Force became sole owner of the club, it was announced last night. Inactive this season, the club will resume scheduled play next year.

New York —(AP)— The Thoroughbred Racing Association announced at the opening of its annual meeting yesterday the turf had raised $4,200,000 for war relief so far this year. Harry A. Parr of the Maryland Jockey Club was named president.

Providence —(AP)— The disqualification against Jackie Wilson, former Pittsburgh featherweight champion, was withdrawn at a hearing yesterday of the State Boxing Commission when he produced X-ray photographs showing a fracture of the left arm. He had been charged with pulling his punches in Monday night's fight with Tony Costa of Woonsocket.

Ed (Strangler) Lewis, who held the world wrestling championship more times than you can count, recently appeared in the semi-final of a show topped by a bout between a "vitriolic brunette" and a "dizzy blond."

LESSON NO. 248

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Scatterbrain Susie always gets woozy any time jump bids are made. Always I wonder just what in thunder makes woozy Susie afraid. Because a jump bid promises enough tricks to make a game.

The jump may be (1) a takeout to a new suit (2) or a takeout to a previously bid suit (3) or an assist of partner's suit (4) or in no-trump (5) or in any round (6) or in either hand of the partnership.

Yes, indeed. It makes no difference when or in what or by whom. When a jump bid is made, it admits seeing tricks enough to make a game. Because of that, it is forcing until a game is reached.

Make like you are south in this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠K J 6
♥A 4
♦A K Q J 7 2
♣A 3
NORTH
♠Q 8 5
♥Q 7 3 2
♦6 5
♣K 7 5 4

The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D	1 NT
3 D	3 NT

When north responds with one no-trump, he denies having a biddable suit for a takeout. He also denies having adequate support for your diamonds. He merely promises three tricks.

When you jump to three diamonds, you insist the bidding must not stop at less than a game contract. To jump you must see 11 tricks. So, you now admit you have eight tricks.

When north then bids three no-trump, he does so only because you have forced him to bid. He does not admit any additional values. He bids only because you do not permit him to pass.

A jump bid is forcing only until a game contract is reached. And three no-trump is a game. So, the obligation to continue bidding ceases right there. Any further bidding is voluntary.

A player often jumps with the intention of going to game in a suit. But he may find it as safe to end at a game in no-trump.

You never know which way the cat will jump.

AT THE CAPITOL

"FRONTIER FURY"

Action Ace Charles Starrett rides rough-shod over ruthless outlaws in his newest Columbia western, "Frontier Fury", now opening at the Capitol Theatre. The exciting drama shows Starrett as a Government Agent fighting on the side of loyal Indians against renegade bandits intent upon murder!

"King of the Lumberjacks"

The added action thriller "King of The Lumberjacks" is your invitation to action, thrills, excitement, when they yell timber-r-r. Tempers flare quickly and so does violence in a land of danger-filled forests and dangerous men. John Payne of musical fame has the leading role with Gloria Dickson and Stanley Fields.

A three stooges comedy entitled "Matrophony" and the 14th chapter of the thrilling serial "G-Men vs the Black Dragon" round out a big entertaining action bill.

AT THE BELLE

George Formby

The king of comedy, George Formby and Florence Desmond are now on the Belle Theatre screen with 100 thrills and 1,000 laughs in the uproaring feature comedy "No Limit."

"Squadron Leader X" Thrilling

How an arrogant Nazi ace discloses moral weakness under great strain, and the manner in which he abandons the code of chivalry in his dealings with his ex-fiancee, create thrilling, suspense-laden entertainment in RKO Radio's timely new production "Squadron Leader X." Eric Portman, rapidly rising young star of numerous successes, and Ann Dvorak, remembered vividly from "Scarface," are teamed in the fascinating story.

Portman, as the flyer, finds himself in Britain with the identity of an R. A. F. pilot, when a Nazi scheme fails to achieve its purpose. Resident in London before the war, he frantically searches for old members of the pro-Nazi movement in Britain. His ex-fiancee, now staunchly pro-British and happily married to a doctor, is forced to co-operate with him in aiding his return to Reich.

When his activities arouse British Intelligence officers, Portman hastens his plans to leave the country, unaware that the Nazis, believing he may divulge their secrets, have ordered his instant death.

With the net of doom ruthlessly closing about him, Portman takes drastic and unusual steps to avoid capture. The way he almost succeeds makes for a breath-taking suspense in the exciting vivid climax.

"Aristo-Cat" is the title of a colorfun cartoon presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Wagons Roll at Night"

The Wagons Roll at Night — now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, is an exciting drama of reckless men and women who live in a city on wheels, with new adventures turning up at every bend of the road. Bogart plays the role of the tough and impregnable owner of the carnival. In his troupe are the worldly-wise fortune-teller Florina, played by Sylvia Sidney, and Matt, small town boy who joins the troupe and becomes the lion-tamer, played by Eddie Albert. Like most "hard" guys Bogart has a soft spot, which he guards carefully from the members of his troupe. It is his young convent-bred sister, played by Joan Leslie, for whom he maintains a comfortable country home, where she is looked after by an old couple. His careful plans for keeping her away from all contact with the carnival folks go awry when Sylvia Sydney drives Eddie up there to recuperate from a battle with the "cats". Before Bogart learns of his whereabouts, Eddie and Joan have fallen deeply in love. He endeavors to break up the romance, but when he sees how impossible that is, he tries another method for getting Eddie out of the way. The results are fatal — but for Bogart, not for Eddie.

Besides the cast's four headliners there is a featured cast which includes Sig Rumann, Cliff Clark, Charley Foy, Clara Blandick and Aldrich Bowker, as well as hundreds of extra players for the many big scenes. Fred Niblo, Jr., and Barry Trivers, wrote the screen play, from a story by Francis Wallace.

Follow the Fleet. The second attraction on the screen of the McCarthy Theatre. Music, romance, drama and thrills combine to make this one of the most entertaining pictures of the year. R.K.O. Radio's "Follow the Fleet" has a star-rating cast that includes Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Randolph Scott, Harriet Hilliard, Astrid Allwyn and scores of girls and go-get-'em gobs hitting the high spots afloat and ashore. Lyrics and music by that master of rythym, Irving Berlin, and the story is directed by Mark Sandrich.

Note Book Little Benny's

I was playing Army Intelligence Service with Puds Simkins and Sid Hunt, and we were suppose to be secret operators, disguized as civilians, and we were having a secret meeting around the letter box, and Puds Simkins said, Shh, careful men, on your guard.

Meaning Shorty Judge just coming up, saying, High, fellows, what's doing?

We're having a secret meeting, that's what, I said, and Shorty said, Okay, go ahead and have it, what do I care? Good night, I got plenty to do, I wouldn't stay here if you get down on your knees and gave me a written invitation, he said.

And he kept on going trying to look independent, and we started our secret meeting again, and pretty soon I said, Watch it, men, mum's a word.

Meaning, Glasses Magee, and Puds said, What's you want, Glasses? and Sid Hunt said, This is private.

Okay, okay, I guess I know when I'm not wanted, go sit on a tack, Glasses said. I was going some place else anyway, he said.

And he kept on going trying to look as if it was really the truth, and just then Sid's little brother Bert came up, saying, What's a matter, why didn't you want Glasses to stay, what's you whispering about?

None of your business, whatever it's about, so dont come butting in, Sid said, and Bert said, I'm going to stay right here, this is a free country, whose letter box is it? It belongs to everybody, that's whose, he said.

The result being we finely got tired of arguing with him and went in Puds's house to get rid of him.

Political Year Marked By Rise of New Groups

Old Line Parties Study Trend of Events and Prepare for Next Election

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 9. (CP)—Newer political parties claimed progress in Canada in 1943 but older groups which have elected federal governments in the past promised them a battle when the next election is called—perhaps this year.

Ottawa observers said the outstanding event of the political year was the C.C.F. showing in the Ontario provincial election in August, when it captured 34 of the 90 legislature seats, running second to the Progressive Conservatives with 38 and leaving the former Liberal office-holders with only 15.

The C.C.F. did well in House of Commons by-elections, winning two out of four—in the Saskatchewan constituency of Humboldt and in Selkirk, Man., both representing gains from the Liberals.

watched by the politically wise. The Bloc has confined its efforts to Quebec and in the Stanstead by-election, there succeeding in electing its candidate to give it a house membership of four.

Liberals Busy.

The older parties were not idle. The national council of the National Liberal Federation held a two-day convention in Ottawa last September and Prime Minister Mackenzie King and other cabinet members heard the views of Liberal supporters from coast to coast. The federation passed a series of resolutions suggesting social security, labor relations and other steps to the government. Mr. King said an early election was not planned, but noted certain developments which he said might bring it about sooner than was expected.

Elected in 1940, the King government need not go to the country until 1945.

John Bracken, Progressive Conservative national leader, spent an active year, travelling Canada extensively to obtain the opinions of Canadians before seeking a seat in the House, where the party has been led for a year by Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member for Peel, Ontario.

In October Mr. Bracken enunciated a detailed program for agriculture to be undertaken by a Progressive Conservative government if elected. His supporters took this to mean their leader has decided on the major policies he will suggest and probably is ready to take the party command in the House.

Four senators died during the year, and four new senators were appointed. Senator G. P. Graham and Senator Louis Cote, both of Ontario and Senator Jules Edouard Prevost and Senator P. E. Blondin, both of Quebec died.

Appointments were Senator J. P. McIntyre, Prince Edward Island; Senator G. P. Campbell, Ontario; Senator W. M. Robertson, Nova Scotia and Senator J. F. Johnston, Saskatchewan.

New Cabinet Ministers.

Works Minister Fournier, Fisheries Minister Bertrand and War Services Minister LaFleche took their places in the House as members of the Cabinet for the first time when the 1943 session opened.

In addition to Gen. LaFleche, two other new members were introduced—S. H. Knowles (C.C.F. Winnipeg North Centre) and Frederic Dorion (Ind. Charlevoix-Saguenay).

During the six-month sitting of parliament the war and war measures were of paramount importance in discussions. Some $5,500,000,000 was voted to be spent in 1943-44, all but about $563,000,000 for war purposes. The direct war appropriation was $3,890,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 was approved for "mutual aid".

Legislation approved widened the coverage of the unemployment insurance act, increased the basic maximum rate for old-age pensions, and increased the pay for women in the services.

Because of war conditions, parliament asked that the readjustment of House representation on the basis of the 1941 census be postponed, this request going to the United Kingdom parliament where it was approved. At the close of the year the Liberals had 170 house members, the Progressive Conservatives 39, the C.C.F. 11 and New Democracy 10.

Canada Big Cog in Huge Allied Aerial Machine

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—Canada's war effort in the air paid rich dividends to the United Nations in 1943.

The dream of the founders of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in 1939 of an air force of "overwhelming strength" became a reality as immense fleets of heavy bombers carried almost nightly loads of explosives to German industries, long-range aircraft hounded submarines in the Atlantic and air support proved a vital factor in offensives in the Mediterranean area, the South Pacific and the Aleutians.

The mass-production training organization of the R.C.A.F. in Canada produced many of the men. Canadian airmen played a major role in air operations on many fronts.

More than 30 per cent of R.A.F. personnel sent on bombing missions to Germany from the United Kingdom are Canadians. They are either members of the 36 Canadian squadrons operating there or of the R.A.F. squadrons which, in all, contain 11 Canadians to every one in an R.C.A.F. squadron.

Growing Strength.

Early this year the air training plan's schools turned out their 50,000th trained aircrewmen. Since then training has gone on but the R.C.A.F. won't tell how many more have been produced.

The strength of the R.C.A.F. is reported as more than 200,000. Just how many are overseas is a military secret, but the number grows each month. It took a special jump as the year-end approached when a number of home war establishment squadrons moved overseas intact.

Canada is committed to provide half the recruits taken into training schools in Canada with Britain, Australia and New Zealand providing the other half.

Last summer recruiting dropped to a level which R.C.A.F. authorities considered dangerous but the crisis passed and in November Air Minister Power was able to say the supply of aircrew was assured until we into 1944, and perhaps until the end of the war.

Women Take Over.

Making possibe the remustering of some 10,000 men from ground to air crew was the steady enrolment in the R.C.A.F. women's division, which took over an increasing number of ground jobs in a wide variety of trades.

Formation of the Canadian bomber group in Britain was one of the important organizational developments of 1943. It was followed by organization of Canadian fighter wings and establishment of all-Canadian fighter stations. Some Canadian bomber and fighter squadrons moved to North Africa before the invasion of Sicily and Italy.

The City of Windsor fighter squadron moved from Malta to a captured airdrome in Sicily, the first Canadian squadron to operate from a European base.

The R.C.A.F. Home war establishment assumed increased anti-submarine duties during the year, taking charge of air patrols in the western Atlantic.

AT THE BELLE — Eric Portman and Ann Dvorak play the leads in an unusual story of a Nazi pilot trapped in London, "Squadron Leader X", now on the Belle Theatre screen. The second feature is George Formby in his funniest comedy "No Limit."

AT THE CAPITOL — Gloria Dickson co-stars with John Payne in the action thriller "King of the Lumberjacks," now showing at the Capitol with the added Western "Frontier Fury," starring Charles Starrett.

THE "QUEENS" DIED

London (CP)—The mystery has been solved. It is known now that the "remarkable scarcity of wasps this summer" was due to the abnormally high temperature which caused the queens to awaken before their time and thus they died. "A similar discovery," remarks a London paper solemnly, "was made during a similar shortage of wasps in 1781."

SON DID ALL RIGHT

Salt Lake City, Dec. 9. (AP)—Detectives were a bit surprised when six-year-old Ronald Steel arrived with a ticket for jay-walking. It turned out to be a ticket issued to his mother, who had sent him in to see what they must do about it. Ronald not only found out: he came back with a 50-cent piece he'd wheedled from a detective.

CHURCHILL MAY REPORT

London, Dec. 9 — (CP) — Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, announced today that the House of Commons would be in session an extra day during the next series of sittings and that on the first day there would be a debate on the war situation and foreign affairs.

It was generally expected that Prime Minister Churchill would be present and make a report on the Cairo-Teheran conferences.

Mr. Attlee said the Christmas recess would follow the next series of sittings.

RAT COLONY REJOICES

Somewhere in the South Pacific —(Delayed) — (AP) — The rat colony on Guadalcanal had plenty of reason to rejoice today — 35-year-old Edwin E. Perley was back on the high seas.

In six months on the battle-torn island the boatswain's mate — a naval veteran of 16 years — accounted for well over 2,000 marauding rodents. He used only patience, marine field biscuit and makeshift steel and bucket traps.

ARMY ALLOWS CHANGE

Kingston, Dec. 9 — (CP) — C.W.-A.C. fashions are pretty well standardized, but the army does make small concessions to the feminine penchant for variety in dress. Among recent changes noted here is the switch to a brown and yellow scheme on the "Canada" sleeve badges instead of the original cleam lettering.

REDS CUT VITAL ZNAMENKA-NIKOLAEV RAILWAY

Tens of Thousands Nazis Threatened With Encirclement

Russians, However, Forced to Retire in Kiev Bulge Due to Weight of Tanks

BITTER FIGHTING

By HENRY CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Dec. 9—(AP)— Smashing Red Army gains which outflanked te strategic Dnieper bend rail centre of Znamenka and severed the important Znamenka-Nikolaev railroad threatened the encirclement today of tens of thousands of Germans concentrated on the west bank of the lower Dnieper River.

Russian tank forces spearheading infantry columns outflanked Znamenka by capturing the town of Sharovka, 15 miles to the south, after a swift 15-mile advance from Pantaevka, a Soviet communique annouhced. Soviet troops also cut a branch of the Znamenka-Nikolaev road running eastward to the Iron and Manganese centre of Krivoi Rog, which the Germans have been tenaciously holding for weeks against repeated Russian thrusts.

Today the Germans held but one rail escape route from Znamenka, a line running west to Kirovograd, and this was threatened by yesterday's capture of Elizavetgradka, 13 miles northeast of Znamenka and five miles north of the Kirivograd spur.

Against these Red Army successes, gained in the bitter cold of the Russian winter, troops of Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's first Ukrainian Army in the Kiev bulge north of Chernyakhov were falling back before a mighty German drive which frontline dispatches said was powered by upwards of 2,000 heavy tanks. It was the second Russian retreat in this sector in two days.

Vatutin has moved in mobile artillery over miles of hub-deep mud roads to meet the onslaught and front advices said his lines remain intact, although a "number of populated places" had been evacuated in favor of strong positions on a new defence line.

Britain May Adopt Sterner Attitude Toward Yugoslavs

Washington, Dec. 9 — (AP) — Possibility that Britain may adopt a sterner attitude toward King Peter's Yugoslav government in Cairo was seen in diplomatic quarters here today following the disclosure that Partisan leader Tito is now getting the bulk of British support in Yugoslavia.

Tito, whose real name is Josip Broz, heads the Yugoslav Partisans who recently formed their own provisional government opposed to that of King Peter. The King's government is recognized by Britain, the United States and Russia.

Dissension between Tito's force and the rival Chetnik troops of General Draja Mihailovich (King Peter's Minister of War) has been a sore spot to the Allies and becomes increasingly acute as the time for an expected Balkan invasion nears.

Minister of State Richard K. Law told Commons that it was the policy of Britain to prosecute the war against Germany in every way and "we are giving the Partisans more support than Mihailovich for the simple reason that resistance of the Partisan forces to the Germans is very much greater."

Informed sources here construe Law's statement as a warning to the Mihailovich faction to get on with the fighting.

Reign of Anarchy Sweeping France

London, Dec. 9 — (CP) — A reign of anarchy is sweeping France and the Vichy government is powerless to check it, the German-controlled Paris radio said today in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.

The Paris broadcast quoted the newspaper Aujoird'hui as saying that "people are being killed on every street corner. There is robbery and pillage all over the countryside."

Marcel Deat, a leading proponent of collaboration with the Germans, said in an article in the same paper, according to the broadcast:—

"Banditism is becoming daily more audacious. It is no longer a question of isolated terrorism committed under the pretext of patriotism.

"We are faced with a vast movement of destruction. Highwaymen and assassins are everywhere. The little man shouts for help, but the government is desperate and helpless.

"Forces are now being organized, however, which will stop this anarchy, and a brutal reaction in the near future is inevitable."

The Vichy radio, in a broadcast recorded by Reuters news agency, said that a widespread roundup of terrorists by police and other agencies is in full swing throughout France, notably at Pas de Calais, Lille and in the Paris-Versailles district.

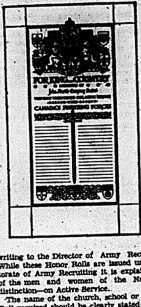
Malta and Britain United by Bombing

Valetta, Dec. 9 (CP)—The common experiences of the trials of war have welded Malta and Britain in an unbroken union born of mutual sufferings caused by bombing, said Miss Mabel Strickland, proprietor of the Times of Malta, when she returned home after a tour of the United Kingdom.

"Now that Britain controls the Mediterranean and peace reigns in Malta," she said, "we are looking forward to the island being a great air base in peace-time and to the time when the links forged in war will be maintained to bring peace and prosperity to both peoples."

FREE ISSUE OF HONOR ROLL PROVES POPULAR IN CANADA

Ottawa, December — The attractive Honor Roll, issued free of charge to churches, educational institutions, factories, offices, clubs fraternal societies and other organizations for the purpose of recording the names of the men and women who have volunteered for Active Service in the armed forces, is meeting with a wonderful reaction on the part of the public, Headquarters announced today.



The Honor Roll is artistically designed and it symbolizes in striking and authentic heraldic form the historic majesty of the British Empire.

The basic motif is the Canadian coat-of-arms with flanking shields showing the maple-leaf of Canada, the shamrock of Ireland, the thistle of Scotland, the rose of England and the fleur-de-lis of old France.

In the design on the base are the heraldic flags of the Navy, Army, and the Airforce. The coloring is rich and the whole is reproduced by a special process.

The Honor Rolls are in various sizes, namely for 12, 36, 102, 412 and 612, names, and it is pointed out that they may be obtained only by writing to the Director of Army Recruiting, Aylmer Building, Ottawa. While these Honor Rolls are issued under the supervision of the Directorate of Army Recruiting it is explained that they are for the names of the men and women of the Navy, Army and Airforce—without distinction—on Active Service.

The name of the church, school or business together with the size of Roll required should be clearly stated on the application.

Dominion Bank Deposits Show Good Increase

Toronto—The annual meeting of shareholders of The Dominion Bank was held at the head office of the Bank in the city of Toronto on Wednesday, December 8th, when the seventy-third annual statement covering operations for the twelve months ended 30th October last was presented.

Among outstanding features of the statement were the substantial growth in deposits, a marked increase in the Bank's investment portfolio, especially in Dominion and Provincial Government Securities, the maintenance of a strong liquid position and total assets at a high figure.

Total deposits amount to $197,718,577., an increase of $13,078,805. Non-interest bearing deposits at $81,441,001. show a slight decrease of $2,079,890., while interest bearing deposits at $99,406,237. have increased by $10,752,631. as compared with a year ago.

Strong Liquid Position

The Bank continues to maintain a strong liquid position. Total Cash Assets are shown at $41,273,870., or 20.28% of public liabilities. Immediately available assets at $151,750,364., an increase of $21,289,629. during the year, are 74.58% of public liabilities, compared with a percentage of 67.71 a year ago.

Having made provision for Dominion Government taxes of $439,019., the net profits are $914,249. for the twelve months.

After providing $560,000. for dividends, making a contribution of $105,000. to Officers' Pension Fund and writing $150,000. off Bank Premises Account, Profit and Loss Accounts stands at $965,750.

Bank Premises account stands at $4,976,171., $150,000. having been written off during the year.

Total Assets are $223,844,604., an increase of over $11,000,000. from a year ago.

Capital $7,000,000. and Reserve $7,000,000. remain unchanged.

New Book Gives Graphic Report of Tank Battle

"Desert Conquest" is Well-Written Account of Warfare in Africa

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadan Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 9.—(CP)—If you think back over the millions of words you have read about warfare since the autumn of 1939, it is doubtful if a single authentic account of a tank battle can be recalled.

While war correspondents have been able to fly in operational aircraft, land from the sea with assault troops, go on convoy duty with corvettes and into battle in battleships, there isn't enough room in a tank for passengers. So the stories usually have been second-hand affairs, gleaned from the observations of tankmen who really had been too busy fighting to observe the wide course of the battle accurately.

That is why Russell Hill's new book, Desert Conquest (Ryerson Press) is worth while if only for the excellent first person report of a tank battle reprinted from an Eighth Army newspaper at Alamein just before the last great push. The battle account was written by a commander of a troop of tanks which took part in the smashing of Rommel's last attempt to crack the Alamein line. It is an exciting, human story of a small hot battle written by one of those rare warriors who also have power of literary expression.

The rest of the book is a well-written, balanced account of the war in the desert from the disastrous early summer of 1942 to the victorious spring of 1943. It is a personal account, with occasional flights into broad strategy.

Straightforward Report.

Hill is a 24-year-old war correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune who served in Berlin before covering the Balkan campaigns and then the Middle East and North Africa.

Hill sticks pretty well to straightforward presentation of what he saw—Cairo swarming with officers of all nations, including R.C.A.F. and R.C.N. men, the difficulties of keeping up with a fast-moving desert army, how it feels to fly with a bomber on a harbor raid, and how the calm British Tommies put kettles on burning vehicles to "brew up" water for tea.

He has an oblique criticism of the United States method of presenting great numbers of campaign ribbons to men who never had seen action—something the veterans of the R.A.F., and R.C.A.F., with their dusty, solitary D.F.C.'s, and D.F.M.'s smile about often in London. In one of his few excursions into broad strategy, he presents the opinion that the tank is declining in importance because of the anti-tank gun. And after watching people who have suffered under German oppression he suggests they should "be allowed to take their revenge "while their anger is still hot", and before the broad outlines of the peace are planned.

Out of his entire war reporting experience, he picks two men as great—Air Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder and General Sir Bernard Montgomery. Tedder, he writes, will be remembered as a great man; Montgomery as a great general.

MUST CARE FOR DOGS

London (CP)—A kennel maid received an annuity of $900 to be reduced by $22.50 a year on the death of each of 20 dogs left in her care by the will of Mrs. Harriet Mosscockles. The dogs are pedigreed Japanese spaniels and took many prizes at shows. Terms of the will forbid the maid to "sell or part with any of them."

BRACKEN BARRED FROM NETWORK ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Can Use Air if Speech is Not of a Political Nature Says Official

STATEMENTS ISSUED

Ottawa, Dec. 9.—(CP)—A controversy upon the merits of the policy followed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's Board of Governors in dealing with broadcasts by leaders of the various political parties has arisen following the Corporation's decision not to carry over the air a speech by John Bracken, national leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, at Hamilton tomorrow.

In an exchange of correspondence with Ross M. Brown, director of Public Relations for the Party, Dr. Augustin Frigon, acting general manager of the CBC, said the Corporation would make its national network available to Mr. Bracken "on the understanding that the address is not of a political nature but will be in the form of a report of stewardship".

(The correspondence was made public yesterday by Dominion headquarters of the Progressive Conservative Party.)

In a letter to Dr. Frigon dated December 8, Mr. Brown said that, as had been indicated previously, Mr. Bracken would be speaking Friday of his plans for "Our Canada of the Future" as well as giving an account of his stewardship of the past year.

"In its proper connotation", Mr. Brown's letter continued, "anything which Mr. Bracken says in this connection either of the past or future, could be considered of a political nature. . . .but may I make plain to you that we consider Mr. Bracken's discussion 'of his plans 'political' in the widest interpretation of the word. It is not our purpose to leave you under any misunderstanding in this regard".

Complete Text Given.

In a subsequent letter to Dr. Frigon, Mr. Brown said that while he would forward a complete text of Mr. Bracken's address when it was available, he "regretted very much" that the "existing regulations of the Corporation leave themselves open to the interpretation which you feel compelled to place upon them.

". . . .Mr. Bracken has said things which need saying in this Canada of ours, and they will be said in spite of the CBC's prohibition against the network broadcast of his words. The day will come when the people will no longer tolerate these conditions and changes will be made".

The CBC then said in a statement that its decision not to broadcast Mr. Bracken's forthcoming speech was "not a case of censorship but of acceptance of broadcast material in compliance with the stated policy of the CBC".

Mr. Brown, in a statement issued on behalf of the Progressive Conservative Party last night, said "it would require the politics of a governor of the CBC to straddle the conditions thus imposed on Mr. Bracken or any other political leader who was not subservient to the Liberal machine", and added, ". . .if that is not official licensing of Mr. Bracken's tongue then the standard dictionaries will require re-editing".

Fourth of Total Area of German Cities Destroyed

London, Dec. 9 —(CP)— One-fourth of the total area of German cities which have been pounded by Allied bombs has been reduced to sheer devastation, says Air Vice-Marshal R. H. M. S. Saundby, Deputy Chief of the R. A. F. Bomber Command.

Saying that millions of buildings have been smashed and that modern life no longer is possible in Hamburg, Duesseldorf, Cologne and other great productions centres, Saundby told a gathering at the Royal United Service Institution yesterday that few of German's cities, except those in the extreme east and southeast, have not been attacked.

He declared that of the 17 major northwest German cities blasted, nine were so severely shattered tha they won were liabilities, not assets, to the Nazis.

Saundby said that since the inception of the path-finder bombing method, such industrial towns as Barmen, Wuppertal, Elberfeld, Krefeld and others had been virtually destroyed, with their plants, gas works—everything — in single, concentrated attacks.

Describing the great scope of the recent attacks on Germany, Saundby said they had reached the terrific rate of 120 tons per square mile per hour—80 times the intensity of the heaviest Nazi raid on London.

STICKS TO POST

London (CP)—Mrs. V. Laughton Mathews, director of the W.R.N.S., is the only women's service director to retain such a post since the beginning of the war. Her 17-year-old daughter, Elvira, is one of her newest recruits.

The General Manager,
The Dominion Bank,
Toronto, Ontario.

We report that we have examined the above condensed Balance Sheet as at October 30, 1943, and compared it with the books at Head Office and with the certified returns from the Branches. We have examined the cash, and the securities representing the Bank's investments, held at Head Office and certain of the larger Branches as at October 30, 1943, and in addition we examined the cash and the securities held at certain of the important Branches during the year. We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and in our opinion the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

In our opinion the Balance Sheet discloses the true condition of the Bank and is as shown by the books of the Bank.

Attention, Citizens

Since the beginning of this World War II hundreds of men and women, from the City of Belleville, have joined their comrades from other Canadian cities, towns and villages in the greatest struggle for Freedom mankind has ever known. They have gone from their peaceful homes to the fields of battle, to the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans in Canada's fighting ships, they have taken wings and have soared into the skies to protect those peaceful homes from marauders, who would destroy them.

Some of these men and women have perished in this titanic crusade against Evil, giving their lives; others have been wounded, shattered by the enemy's weapons; and others have been listed as "Missing While on Active Service," and still others have fallen into the hands of the enemy as prisoners of war.

To these men . . . and women, a great debt is owed by those of us whom they are protecting, a debt not easily cancelled, a debt which may never be adequately repaid. But, we can honour them.

It is proposed that each name of Belleville's many sons and daughters who have put on the uniform of their country will be enscribed permanently on a Roll of Honor where it will endure for future generations to read and pay tribute to their gallantry. No apology can be too strongly worded for the delay in performing this duty, but neither can the delay be extended. Each citizen of Belleville who has a son or daughter, or several sons and daughters, relative or friend in any of the three armed services or the Merchant Marine, overseas or serving in Canada, is requested by the City of Belleville to furnish the names for incorporation into the Roll of Honor. It is important that not one goes unrecognized and no matter how much duplication may result, kindly send in this needed information.

The form included below, filled in and mailed or deposited at the City Hall, the Hydro Office, or the office of The Ontario Intelligencer, will speed up the compilation of the Honor Roll and make this tribute to our boys and girls possible.

Honor Graduation Diplomas went to:—Helen Bailey, Mabel Chapman, Milford Gordanier, Clarke Pidgeon, Gordon Reid, Morton Reid, Ralph Vandervoort, Margaret Vandewater.

Following the presentation of diplomas, Miss Katharine Wright gave a piano solo.

Plays Are Presented.

A play entitled "The Dear Departed" with the one act being a scene in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Slater, of a small town in England, on a Saturday afternoon, was well played and of a very humorous nature. Mary Chambers took the part of Mrs. Slater with a good deal of dignity. Her daughter, Victoria, was acted by Marcella Stapley and Mr. Slater was played by Royden Davis. Mrs. Jordan was taken by Iris Holland and her husband, Ben Jordan, was Bert Bastedo, with grandfather, Abel Merryweather, played by Don McIntosh.

Robert Elliott favored with a piano solo and Miss Margaret Gray gave a vocal solo, accompanied by Miss K. Wright.

The second one act play "The Reward of Virtue" taking place in Captain Williams' Apartment, New York City, at 11 p.m., under the tutoring of Gerald Clute, was very dramatic. Sato, the Jap servant, was well taken by Robert Gay; Emma Brooks, (wife of Capt. Williams' partner) played by Marion Rose also Jimmy Smith (life long friends of Mrs. Brooks), acted by Bob Jackman, were both exceptionally good. Captain Williams (retired sea captain and now copartner in the shipping business with Joe Brooks) played by Gerald Clute, kept everyone in suspense and finally admiration. Those who are responsible for such a splendid entertainment, are indeed to be complimented.

French Canadian Air Ace Scores 2 More Messerschmitts

With the R.C.A.F., In Italy, Dec. 9.—(CP Cable.)—A French Canadian Air Ace, Sqdn. Ldr. Albert Houle, D.F.C., of Massey, Ont., has downed two Messerschmitts near Sangro River, bringing his score to seven.

Houle, newly-appointed commander of the City of Windsor squadron, was patrolling with two other Spitfires when he sighted seven Messerschmitts preparing to strafe British troops.

Houle—a veteran of the battle of North Africa opened fire on one Messerschmitt which dove towards earth and exploded and then fired at another enemy plane. A few seconds later, a second German went down.

Back at the airdrome, an armament mechanic found that Houle had used short bursts of only 15 shells to down each of his victims. This economy in the use of ammunition is considered outstanding precision firing.

Bradford, England, Dec. 9—(CP) —The Bishop of Bradford, Rt. Rev. Alfred Blunt, has suffered a nervous breakdown "and gone away for a complete rest," it was announced today at a Diocesan conference. The Bishop brought the romance between King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson into the open with a critical sermon Dec. 1, 1936.

No Community Christmas Tree At White House

Washington, Dec. 9. (AP) — There'll be no community Christmas tree at the White House this Yuletide.

For many years the President's appearance at outdoor ceremonies on the White House grounds or in a nearby park has been a part of the Capital's celebration of Christmas

The custom is being broken, the White House announced today, on recommendation of J. Russel Young, a commissioner of the District of Columbia. The announcement said President Roosevelt's public participation in the observance of Christmas probably would consist of his usual five-minute Christmas eve radio broadcast.

Young recommended omission of the customary outdoor observance in order to conserve transportation facilities

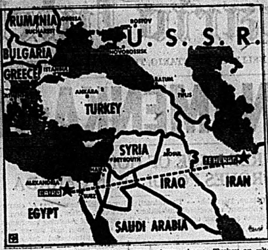
CAIRO CONFERENCE OVER; TURK ARMY HAS SEALED ORDERS

General Ismet Inonu, President of Turkey, who has just completed a three-day conference in Cairo with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.



The Central Press Canadian map above shows Turkey on whom the eyes of the world are turned. At a three-day conference between Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey, just completed, it was announced that "the closest unity" existed among the three nations. Whether this means that Turkey will enter the war on the side of the Allies, or give them air bases from which to attack the Axis in the Balkans is not yet known. The dotted line on the map shows how Churchill and Roosevelt shuttled back and forth between Cairo and Teheran, for the diplomatic conferences which have been going on for some time.

Dispatches from the Balkans say that Franz von Papen, Nazi ambassador to Turkey, has been conferring with Premier Sukru Saracoglu of Turkey, pictured above, and that the Nazi colony at Ankara is extremely nervous.

Crooner Sinatra In 4-F Classification

Newark, N.J., Dec. 9 —(AP)— Women and girls can continue to swoon happily, for the United States Army today declared Frankie (the voice) Sinatra 4-F physically, unfit for military service.

Expressing disappointment, the crooner himself announced the outcome of his Selective Service preinduction examination today at the Newark induction station.

"I've got a hole in my left ear drum," said Sinatra, whose singing is the current rage of the feminine sex.

The crooner commented that he had hoped to enter the marine corps.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS IN ATLANTIC CITY

This is the aftermath of the second largest fire to sweep Atlantic City. Sixteen buildings were destroyed on the boardwalk and one fireman, Harry Yard, 60, died while fighting the blaze. Seven other firemen and several other persons were overcome by smoke. Officials estimate the damage at $500,000, with 100 persons left homeless.

FIRST AID

This Australian soldier, a casualty in the fighting against the Japanese in the South Pacific, had been wounded just 10 minutes before this picture was taken. Back behind the Aussie lines he has been bandaged and given a mug of tea, before being hurried off to hospital.

GAY TWOSOME AT TEHERAN CONFERENCE

Both President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin seemed to be in high good humor when they posed for photographers at the close of the historic Teheran conference at Teheran, Iran, as this picture tends to prove.

PREMIER STALIN KISSES THE SWORD OF STALINGRAD

War Today: Germans Face Two Alternatives

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

When you put the microscope on the unqualified Allied decisions of Cairo and Teheran to smash Japan and Germany, it becomes apparent that the United Nations have been manoeuvred into a highly advantageous position both as regards the conduct of the war and the enforcement of the peace.

The way things stand our enemies have a choice of these alternatives:

1. Fight to a bloody finish. 2. Unconditional surrender, which means holding their noses and swallowing any medicine we hand 'em.

Under either alternative we shall have avoided the Allied mistake of 1918, when we agreed to an armistice and as a result got a half-baked peace which was bound to result in another war. I dare say that right now the Allies could get a similar bid for peace from the German people by angling with appeasement bait, but the edicts of Cairo and Teheran seem to mean that we don't want bids thus purchased.

We could have had a real peace after the last war by coupling Wilson's 14 points with an unconditional surrender which would have sent Allied troops of occupation marching through Unter Den Linden. We now have the Atlantic Charter and the four freedoms as assurance of justice for all — but this time the Allies are going to see that their just peace isn't sowed on stony ground.

This program of carrying the war through to a finish may mean fighting somewhat longer. By ensuring lasting peace, however, it will be immeasurably cheaper in lives, material resources and disorganization of society.

While it may seem better not to hand the German people engraved invitations to sue for peace, there would seem to be no reason why we shouldn't encourage Hitler's satellites to abandon him.

Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary all have been trying to escape Hitler's clutches for a long time. These little countries are terrified that they may get caught in an Allied-Turkish drive up through the peninsula. There's nothing to be lost in encouraging them to quit, thereby pulling the props from under the Fuehrer in southeastern Europe.

Schoolboy is Bitten By Coral Snake

Red Bank, N.J., Dec. 9 (AP)— Thirteen-year-old Fred Wege was bitten today by one of two venomous coral snakes which school authorities said he had received from Texas and had brought to the high school to show his biology class.

The boy was taken to hospital, where officials started checking throughout the area for anti-venom.

The nearest suitable solution located by the hospital was cobra serum at the Philadelphia Zoo, roughly 75 miles away, and state police arranged an escort to speed a supply of it here.

THIRD 'FLU' DEATH AT WINDSOR THIS WEEK

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 9 —(CP)— While another "flu" death was reported today, the third of the week, the disease appears to be on the wane in Windsor, Dr. John Howie, medical officer of health, said today.

Mrs. Annie Mulvaney, 62, died last night in hospital of influenza-pneumonia.

It was the 23rd death in Windsor this year from influenza although in most cases there has been some other factor. In 10 cases pneumonia was the other disease.

3rd of Sidney

Aikens W.M.S. Elects Officers

3rd Sidney.—The Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society held their December meeting at the home of Mrs. Stanley Spafford on Thursday afternoon, with twenty members in attendance.

The President, Mrs. Fred Westover, was in charge.

Christmas carols and hymns were sung throughout the Worship Service and prayer was offered by Rev. L. W. Scott.

A letter of appreciation was read by the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. S. Westover, from Mrs. Lee Grills for sympathy extended during her bereavement. Mrs. Wilmot Bailey voiced her thanks to the Society for the cards of sympathy sent to her at the time of her aunt's death.

Reports were given for the year's work by the various secretaries. The Treasurer, Mrs. C. McMullen, reported the thank-offering at the November meeting amounted to nearly $25.

Special donations from Mrs. Wm. Bush and from the Honorary President, Mrs. A. H. Finkle, were gratefully received.

Mrs. Gerald Brickman, as Missionary Monthly secretary, reported four new members taking the magazine, making a total of 27 subscribers.

Mrs. Fred Moon, the Christian Stewardship secretary, closed her report with a reading, "Christmas Gifts".

Mrs. Murney Jeffrey reported the sick calls to the hospitals and in the homes and asked the members to report to her any calls made.

By the sale of Christmas cards, $3.60 was added to the Treasury.

The Corresponding Secretary was asked to send Christmas Greetings to Miss Elsie Hunt, Reg.N., at Battle River Hospital, Grimshaw, Sask.

A white gift service was planned to be held Dec. 19th., at the regular Christmas Service at the Church.

CANADIANS KIND TO PRISONERS

Canadian Pte. G. R. Lockhart, of Sussex, N.B., treats a prisoner of war in Guardiaregia with kindliness, gives him a Canadian cigarette.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo.)

The offering was taken by little Miss Marilyn Brickman, and was dedicated by the President.

Mrs. S. Westover, convener of the Nominating Committee, then presented the slate of officers for 1943 and 1944.

A vote of thanks was extended by the President-elect to the retiring president for faithful and efficient leadership for the past four years, and the new officers were officially installed by the Pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott.

A short program followed with Christmas music by Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton and readings by Mrs. E. Hubble, Mrs. S. Westover, Mrs. Fred Moon and Mrs. O. Pearson.

A beautiful candle-lighting ceremony with Mrs. Sam Marshall leading and the members all taking part, closed the meeting.

BONARLAW

Springbrook Club Boosts Its Fund By 'Fun Night'

Presentation of Watches for Servicemen Made at Function

Bonarlaw — In a well rounded program which sparkled with fun, entertainment, and good humor, the Springbrook War Service Club gave another boost to its war service work before a large audience at the Orange Hall, Friday night. The "Fun Night" climaxed a quickly organized canvass of the district, and this together with the door receipts, and the proceeds of a raisin guessing contest brought over $250 into the coffers of the Club. This is in addition to the funds, totalling over $950 which were raised and expended in the past three years. By unanimous vote the Club executive, including Mrs. H. Mumby, president, Geo. Thompson, secretary, and Mrs. Geo. Williams, treasurer, were re-elected for another year and appreciation for their splendid leadership was expressed by Reeve W. R. Tanner, of Rawdon township.

Much credit for the success of the evening's performance must go to Lorne Johnston, the popular chairman, who kept the show rolling along. In an amusing presentation staged by Reeve Tanner and J. Baker he was made the recipient of a huge coffee cup and saucer. All performers received hearty applause from the audience. Highlights of the evening included the guitar and accordian duets of Gordon Bateman and Mel Gibson, the songs of Joe Jackson, veteran local entertainer, and the proficiency of Councillor Wilfred Spencer in gobbling up a plate of whipped cream in a novel contest.

An interesting feature was a debate arranged by Grenville Meiklejohn on the subject: "Reserved that a man can do a woman's work better than a woman can do a man's work." The once supposedly weaker sex won out when the verdict was given by the judges to the negative side, represented by Mrs. Clayton Thompson and Mrs. J. R. Holden, who debated against George Williams and Percy Ray.

A presentation of handsome wrist watches was made by the Service Club to two servicemen, Jack Haggerty and Borden Cassidy, while Nathan Bronson received a wrist watch and pen and pencil set on behalf of his sons, Berle Bronson, now in naval training in Quebec, and Malvern, with the Canadian army in England. A wrist watch is also to be forwarded to Pte. Wesley Cooper.

The door prize was awarded to Mrs. Orrie Barton, of Springbrook, who held the lucky ticket.

Other items on the program, were as follows: Chorus, Pupils of Springbrook School; solo, Percy Ray; tie tying contest, won by Harper Bateman and Miss Doris Thompson; solo, Rev. J. R. Holden; duet, Mrs. Lorne Johnston and Jack Baker; quiz contest supervised by Lorne Johnston; duet, Miss Vera Ketcheson and Miss Marjorie Prest; solo, Jack Baker; quartet, Mrs. Geo. Williams, Mrs. Lorne Johnston, Jack Baker and Rev. Holden; cross-cut sawing contest for ladies, a tie between Mrs. Wellman and Mrs. Barton, Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Clayton Burkitt; duet, Marjorie and Lillian Haggerty; musical novelty, Mrs. Johnston; lemon eating contest, won by Ed. Bateman; blindfold pie eating contest, won by James Johnston and Mrs. R. McKeown; auction sale, staged by Charlie Wellman. Prizes were donated by local merchants and district wholesale houses.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS WATCH FOR HUNS

Canadian anti-tank gunners are shown in Italy on the alert for word and sight of German armored vehicles. Infantry were about to advance along the road on the right toward German positions on the first hill in the background. Germans were also in position among the cluster of Italian farm homes at the bottom of the hill. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photo.)

Canadian Army Engineers Leave Marks in England

By FRANK FALHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 9—(CP)—Canadian army engineers have left permanent marks on the English countryside through their wartime activities, Brig. James L. Melville, former engineer commander who now is chairman of the Canadian Pension Commission, said today.

The marks include arterial highways, by-pass roads and airfields. The Canadian sappers also made important contributions to exploitation of Britain's mineral resources by operations in the tin mines of Cornwall and exploration for minerals and ores in many parts of the island.

The speed with which one special job was carried out by a Canadian road construction company amazed the British contractor and government department concerned. A large excavation more than 60 feet deep had to be made in a subsoil of sandstone and blue clay. It looked like many months for the contractor's pick-and-shovel gang.

Canadian tractors, bulldozers, scrapers and pneumatic drills were moved on to the job, three eight-hour shifts were started and in two weeks the excavation was complete.

Strides have been made in the technique of demolishing obstacles of all kinds. Tunnelling companies of the Canadian engineers have demonstrated their skill and under Lt.-Col. C. A. Campbell, former Ontario Minister of Public Works, have gained an enviable reputation, Brig. Melville said. Their work in Gibraltar, the Cornish mines, in Scotland on water power development, and in search of new minerals have been a great contribution to prosecution of the war."

Campaign Costing Germans Heavily

London, Dec. 9 (AP)—Yugoslav Partisans fought stubbornly to check Marshal Erwin Rommel's new offensive in Bosnia today as the Germans threw fresh troops in to their drive to crush the Partisan armies, according to a broadcast bulletin from Gen. Broz' (Tito's) headquarters.

The communique said the campaign is costing the Germans heavily in men and reported that the Yugoslavs have launched an offensive of their own in the Idia sector in Slovenia, 23 miles from Ljubljana and the site of Europe's second-largest mercury mines.

Yugoslav Partisans smashed German railroad ines in this area, the bulletin said, adding that traffic is at a standstill between Ljubljana and Trieste and throughout the adjacent coastal sectors.

Destruction of a bridge on the Ljubljana-Trieste line and the taking of prisoners and quantities of war —material were reported.

The Berlin radio asserted in a broadcast that the German offensive had routed some Partisan columns in Montenegro, killing 200 Yugoslavs and taking 2,000 prisoners.

Weather in Italy Working for Boche

Toronto, Dec. 9 —(CP)— The weather in Italy is working "hand-in-hand with the Boche," Matthew Halton, CBC war correspondent said today in a cable from 8th Army Headquarters in Italy.

Lt.-Gen. Bernarl L. Montgomery has enough fire-power to obliterate the enemy from his positions just beyond the Moro river — if only the weather would allow him to mount the attack, Halton wrote. Many vehicles are bogged down if they leave the roads and rivers are flooded.

A company of infantry fought like demons against great odds in a day-long battle Tuesday, he said. They took 59 German prisoners and killed or wounded 70. When surrounded by enemy tanks and infantry in a counter-attack, they fought their way out with incredibly small losses.

Ralston Concludes Visit to Troops

With the Canadians in Italy, Nov. 26.—(Delayed.) (CP Cable.)—Canada's Defence Minister, Col. J. L. Ralston, was within range of enemy artillery today as he concluded his visit to the Canadians in Italy by driving miles through the mountains to the forward area where the troops have been patrolling in rain, mud and cold weather.

Only an hour or two before his arrival, German guns carried out ranging shots in the area and one shell dropped on a neighboring ridge.

Ralston extended his visit to the Canadian fighting area by a day to make this forward trip after his original request for a look at the men on the frontline had been turned down by the Canadian commander on the ground that it might distract the troops from their work.

Duchess of Kent Ill With Influenza

London, Dec. 9 (CP) — The Duchess of Kent is ill with influenza, a wave of which has been spreading through Britain in recent weeks, it was disclosed today. A bulletin said the ilness is "taking a normal course."

Meanwhile the King, who became i earlier in the week, was reported making good progress.

FORTRESSES IMPROVED

London, Dec. 9 (CP)—Flying Fortresses have been improved by addition of a "chin turret" and increased bomb-carrying capacity while two new power turrets have been added to Liberator bombers, United States air headquarters announced today.

The improvements to the two four-engine bomber types increase both offensive and defensive strength for missions against enemy Europe, the announcement said.

JAPANESE LOSE

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Dec. 9 —(AP)— One of the most sustained air bombardments of the Southwest Pacific war is levelling Japanese shore defences on New Britain Island in the very area where it is open to invasion by Allied troops on New Guinea.

Since the last week of November more than 1,300 tons of explosives have ripped at gun positions and supply dumps even as Australians enlarged the potential jumping off place on New Guinea in hard fighting on the Huon Peninsula.

The bombardments were opened against Gasmata, an air base and plantation area on the south-central coast which was hit with more than 400 tons in six raids. It also was shelled by destroyers.

Then the bombers switched to the Cape Gloucester area on New Britain's western top and 195 tons of bombs were dumped there.

In all these raids, the only opposition mentioned has been anti-aircraft fire.

The bomber section is on the opposite end of the 300-mile-long island from Rabaul, once Japan's biggest air and shipping fortress short of Truk in the area.

In the Huon Peninsula campaign, the latest reports told of Aussies extending their hold along the coast north of Finschhafen while in the inland jungles other ground forces appeared on the verge of capturing the trail juncture village of Wareo.

In the Northern Solomons, as United States ground forces on Bougainville extended their beachhead at Empress Augusta Bay, the American Air Force kept nearby enemy bases inoperative with raids on both north and southern ends of the island and on the east-central coast at Kieta.

NOT HER CAR

Los Angeles, Dec. 9. (AP)—Mrs. Louis Schor, expectant mother, sprained her ankle. A bystander, Mrs. Laura Swartz, offered to drive her to a doctor's, and she was lifted into the car. En route, the driver said, "your car has good brakes". "Heavens", cried the passenger, "this isn't my car .I thought it was yours".

WOULDN'T CROSS STREET FOR $100

You know those people—maybe you are one yourself—who come home after work so tired out they can't be lured out of their easy chairs—who wouldn't even go across the street for $100 to see the greatest show on earth. It's not over-work that always makes a man or woman feel this way—although they often fool themselves that it is. A tired, listless condition like this is oftentimes the result of low blood count due to simple anemia. A low blood count oft times may mean you haven't enough red blood corpuscles. Try Dr. Williams Pink Pills. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles when they have been weakened by simple anemia. Besides, Dr. Williams Pink Pills are fortified with Vitamin B_1, an important aid in promoting appetite and keeping nerves and intestinal system normal when you feel jittery and "off" because of a deficiency of this vital element. Don't wait. Be sure—try Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

"Oh", said Ann, momentarily at a loss. "It's you".

"May I see your sister Dorothy?"

"Dorothy isn't well. I don't think she'll see you".

"Please. It's very important".

"After her last interview with you, I gathered that there was nothing more to be said", Ann rejoined cuttingly.

"I know. I must have hurt her dreadfully".

"She came home crying. She didn't deserve to be treated like that. She's never hurt a soul in her life. If you're going to make her cry again—"

"I assure you, I've nothing unkind to say to her. Won't you at least tell her I'm here?"

"Well—" Ann hesitated. Weakening at sight of the woman's obvious distress, she said: "Come in. I'll find out if she'll see you. Will you wait in the dining-room, please?"

Mrs. Fleming went into the dining-room and agitatedly paced the floor. Her autocratic face was softened by an expression of great anxiety and her gloved hands were clasping and unclasping spasmodically. She turned eagerly when Dorothy entered the room.

"Where is he?" she cried. "Where is he? Oh, you must tell me".

"Where is he?" Dorothy repeated. "What on earth do you mean?"

"Where is Edward? Where is my son?"

"Ted?" Dorothy stared. "You told me he had gone to Washington".

"Then you don't know where he is? I had counted on you knowing. He didn't go to Washington. He's disappeared! Oh, what am I to do?"

Dorothy's pale face became even paler.

"Disappeared? Sit down and tell me about it".

"There's very little to tell. We haven't been able to find out anything, except that he's missing. He left on Sunday. He was to be in Washington that evening. At the inquest on Monday, as you know, the coroner insisted that he be summoned to return. Directly after the inquest, my husband telephoned Washington with the intention of telling Edward to come back at once. But he wasn't there. My husband has been in constant communication with Washington ever since, but there is no word of Edward".

"But where can he have gone?"

"That is what I would give anything to know." Mrs. Fleming looked sharply at Dorothy. "He hasn't written you?"

"Not a line."

"I can't understand it. Why should he disappear? Why?" Mrs. Fleming wrung her hands. "Last night my husband was forced to inform the police that Edward could not be found and it was plain from the manner in which they received the news that they suspect—suspect—"

"What nonsense!" cried Dorothy. "What on earth could they suspect? Ted hasn't done anything".

"Mr. Fleming thinks they may—Oh, it's so difficult to explain! On the afternoon of the murder you told Edward, didn't you, that there had been a scene at lunch and that your aunt had decided to cut your father out of her will?"

"I told him that, yes, but I don't see—"

"Oh, it's perfectly heinous of those wretched police, but Mr. Fleming fears they may think—they may think that Edward, knowing that his father and I would not welcome his marriage with a penniless girl, may have k-killed your aunt to prevent her making the new will".

"But that's absurd! It's ridiculous! I never heard anything so utterly stupid!"

"I know it is, perfectly absurd. But the police aren't reasonable beings. They suspect the most preposterous things of the most impossible people. Edward was seen in your garden at about the time the murder must have been committed. He had your scarf in his hand. I am told his fingerprints have been found on a window-frame in your living-room".

"Well, why not? Ted always came and went freely like one of ourselves. And I've no doubt Miss Whipple imagined the scarf. You know what she is".

"Mr. Fleming has explained all that to the police, but of course by disappearing, Edward has given genuine grounds for suspicion".

"Then he must be found and brought back without delay".

"That's easy to say. But where is he?"

Dorothy shook her head hopelessly. "I haven't the faintest idea".

"This is awful! The papers are sure to find out about it and our name will be splashed all over the front page".

"Your name!" said Dorothy, with a sudden burst of anger. "Your name! Is that all you can think of at a time like this? Isn't Ted of more importance than a few headlines?"

"Nothing is so important to me as my son".

"I'm sorry", said Dorothy. "My nerves are on edge".

"He will write to you".

"Do you think so?"

"I feel sure of it. He is deeply in love with you, my dear".

"Calf love", said Dorothy bitterly.

Mrs. Fleming shook her head.

"Don't quote my own words at me. I have been hard. I know, but I felt I had to be. This changes everything. He will write to you, I know he will. When he does, promise you'll tell me where he is?"

Dorothy frowned. "Supposing he asks me not to tell anyone?"

"But I am his mother. Surely—"

"Yes, I know, but—I'll promise you this: if he does write, I'll do my best to bring him back. If he asks me not to tell where he is, I shan't tell; but I'll try to persuade him to get in touch with you".

"I'm afraid", whimpered Mrs. Fleming. "Oh, Dorothy, I'm so afraid!"

Dorothy put her arms about the older woman and held tightly.

Later that afternoon, little Peter came in and announced that a press photographer had offered him a quarter to pose for a photograph.

"But you didn't, Peter?" said his mother quickly.

The boy opened a grubby fist and displayed a bright new coin.

"Oh, Peter how could you!" cried Ann.

Peter grinned. "I couldn't turn down a whole quarter, could I? But it's all right. They won't print the picture. I spoiled it. When he was taking it, I stuck out my tongue!"

The following morning, Peter's photograph with his protruding tongue appeared in newspapers all over the country!

There were over four thousand sightseers at Octavia Osborne's funeral. Milling for a view of the coffin and the plot which was to be the murdered woman's final resting-place, they trampled over graves, trod down the flowers that were on them, and upset several headstones.

They were incensed by the non-appearance of Miss Osborne's near relatives. By absenting himself from his sister's funeral, they agreed, Stephen Osborne had betrayed a sad lack of proper feelings. . . . .

Although Inspector Burrows made an excellent breakfast in record time the following Wednesday morning, his attention did not stray for an instant from the newspaper which was propped against the sugar bowl near his right elbow. The column on which his eyes were riveted was headed:

POLICE SEEK MISSING WITNESS

Where Is Edward Fleming?

There was a photograph of the missing young man in the centre of the page. Mrs. Burrows leaned over her husband's shoulder and inspected it approvingly.

"Looks like a movie star".

"You'll find plenty such faces in the rogue's gallery", observed the Inspector with his heaviest sarcasm.

"He won't be missing long with his picture in all the papers. Someone's sure to spot him", offered Mrs. Burrows.

"Bet you he's seen in a hundred different places, hundreds of miles apart, before the day's out. Our job would be a sight easier if folks had less imagination".

"Why d'you suppose he's disappeared?"

"Use your head, girl", mumbled her husband, through a mouthful of wheat-cake and sausage. "Why do people mixed up in such a case usually disappear?"

"Oh, but that nice young fellow couldn't have done it. More likely he knows something — something that concerns someone he loves—and he's run away rather than be forced to tell it".

"Now, that's not a half-bad idea—coming from you" said the Inspector grudgingly.

"Oh, I don't use my head for a hatrack, like some people I could mention", purred his spouse good-naturedly.

When the Inspector arrived at police headquarters he found Sergeant Feathers poring over a sheet of violet-tinted notepaper.

"Any word of young Fleming?" Burrows asked.

"Not yet".

The Inspector stood by the window deep in apparent thought.

"Shouldn't be surprised, you know", he said, with a sapient air, "If he ran away because he knows something he doesn't want to tell; something that might incriminate one of the family—maybe that girl he's supposed to be in love with".

"I can't see that girl as a killer; otherwise the idea seems sound".

"Oh, I don't use my head for a hatrack like some people I could mention", said Inspector Burrows casually. "Anything new this morning?"

"Only an anonymous letter from Miss Whipple".

The Inspector stared.

"What do you mean, an anonymous letter from Miss Whipple? If it's anonymous how do you know who it's from?"

"First time I saw the lady I sized her up as the anonymous letter writing type, so I took the precaution of obtaining a sample of her pen work. It's identical with the handwriting of the note that came this morning".

"If you get much sharper, my lad, you'll be cutting yourself. Let's see the letter".

Inspector Burrows frowned as he read it:

To the police:—

Simon Osborne, Stephen Osborne's cousin, is supposed to have left Lakelawn before noon on the day Miss Osborne arrived. But he did not leave by train or bus. Did he leave at all? He is a questionable character and was on bad terms with the dead woman. He is known to have sponged on his cousin for years. Did he kill Miss Osborne, hoping that his cousin would inherit her money and that he would be able to sponge on him all the more?

One Who Knows.

Scratching his head over the letter, Inspector Burrows went to consult Sheriff Black. In a short while he returned.

"The Sheriff says when you've finished those odd jobs I gave you, you'd better go over to Lakelawn and check up on this. Find out whether Simon Osborne left the village by train or bus on the day of the crime. If he didn't, go on to New York and look him up. And watch your step, my lad. From all accounts this Simon Osborne is a crafty old bird. Don't let him put anything over on you".

It was almost noon before Sergeant Feathers was able to leave for Lakelawn. At the village station he interviewed the baggage man.

"Know Simon Osborne? I should say I do. Wish I had a buck for every drink I've had with him in Ryan's Bar".

"Do you remember him taking a train from here on the tenth?"

"No, I don't—and why? 'Cause he didn't that's why. You're not the first that's asked me that. A certain nosey ol' dame was asking me the same question only the other day. Don't tell me you cops are after ol' Si?"

Sergeant Feathers ignored the question.

"You're absolutely sure he didn't leave here by train?"

"Sure I'm sure. Ain't I said so?"

"Well, don't forget it, because you may be called up to swear to it in court".

The Sergeant walked to the bus stop at the corner. There was no bus in sight and the drug-store clerk told him that none was due for half an hour. While Feathers waited, he saw Miss Whipple coming out of a house. The detective hurried after her and raised his hat.

"Good morning, Miss Whipple. We got your letter all right".

The spinster looked daggers at him, but did not deny having written the anonymous note.

"What makes you so sure that Simon Osborne did not leave the village by bus?"

"I asked all the conductors, that is waht!" she snapped.

"Then you've saved me a lot of trouble. Thanks very much. Good morning".

Walking toward her house, Miss Whipple ran into Ann Osborne who was coming the other way. The spinster stopped and smiled graciously.

"I've just met Sergeant Feathers, my dear, and what do you think? He asked me some questions about your Uncle Simon. Now I wonder why the police are interested in him?"

Ann scornfully eyed her, and walked on. But hse was startled by the spinsters news. The police and Uncle Simon! Surely. . . .

Word flew chillingly through her brain; words Uncle Simon had uttered on the morning of the murder: "If I were your father I'd find some way to get rid of Octavia. I've a good mind to do it anyway. It would solve a lot of problems; Your father would inherit her money and I'd be able to touch him regularly for the rest of my life. . ."

At half-past five that evening, Sergeant Feathers ascended the muddy front steps of the house in Greenwich Village, New York City, where lived Simon Osborne. He knocked portentously on the scarred front door. There was no answer. He pressed the bell and rapped again, loudly, imperatively, the summons of one who would not be denied. Still there was no answer. He had an uncomfortable feeling that he was being watched.

Turning suddenly, the plain-clothes man had a brief glimpse of a pair if beady eyes and the tip of a red nose through a gap in the dingy curtains of a first floor room, just before the curtains were hastily drawn together. Leaning over, he rapped sharply on the window pane. After a long pause, he heard the shuffle of slovenly feet on uncarpeted floorboards, the front door opened slightly and a head showed itself.

"Syntona Was A Blessing To Me," Says Grateful Lady

Relieved Disorders of Stomach, Kidneys and Constipation After Two Years' Suffering. "Used to Get So Dizzy I'd Fall on the Street," She Says.

MRS. HODGINS

Ever-increasing numbers of men and women tell of the good results they have obtained by taking Syntona, the famous compound of Herbs and Roots.

Mrs. Laura Hodgins, 1352 King Street, London, recently told of her fine experience with Syntona as follows:

"For about two years I was in a badly rundown condition and suffered terribly with my stomach and kidneys. Everything I ate would sour, form into gas that bloated me and caused shortness of breath. I'd get a miserable distressed feeling in my stomach that nothing would relieve. Shortly after meals I would belch up hot, sour-tasting liquid. I was troubled with constipation and disordered kidneys that disturbed my sleep three or four times each night. Through this loss of sleep I became extremely nervous, felt tired out in the mornings and I seemed to have lost all my former strength and energy. I used to get such dizzy spells that I'd fall on the street and have to be taken home in a taxi.

"One day I was told about Syntona, and this medicine has been a godsend to me. I definitely felt better after taking the first bottle and so I kept on using it, until now, after six weeks, I'm like a different person. I can eat heartily and have no trouble with my stomach. My kidneys do not disturb me at night and my sleep is sound and restful. All the tormenting aches and pains I had have gone away and I haven't had one dizzy spell since I started taking Syntona.

"I have regained my lost strength, picked up my former weight and I feel so good again that I voluntarily give this statement in the hope that others who suffer will read about it and be helped, too."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

CIVILIAN CIGARETTE RATION CUT IN GERMANY TO 3 A DAY

New York, Dec. 9 — (AP) — The Berlin radio said today that German cigarette production is as great as ever but the cigarette ration for civilians has had to be cut to three a day.

"The reason for the reduced ration," said the broadcast, reported to the Office of War Information, "is that 50 per cent of all production goes to the fighting services because smoking soars under mental strain."

Canadian Army Loss 238 Dead, 45 Missing In Italy Invasion

Ottawa, Dec. 9—(CP)— The Canadian army has lost only 238 dead and 45 missing in the invasion of Italy, now more than 2½ months old, Defence Headquarters announced today.

Wounded among the Canadian army personnel in Italy in the same period were 811.

On the basis of reports to headquarters up to Nov. 23, casualties in Italy in the three categories were less than half the number suffered in the shorter Sicily campaign. Here is the comparison.

	Sicily	Italy	Total
Killed, and other deaths	475	238	713
Wounded	1,814	811	2,625
Total reported casualties	2,439	1,094	3,533

Only one Canadian division has been in action in the Italian theatre and it has only seven per cent of total British dead, which were reported yesterday from London at 3,212.

The last week or so not included in the figures announced here today—appears to have seen considerably tougher action, although the weather may be holding down the attack.

British forces in Italy include not only the 8th Army of which the Canadians form part, but also most of the 5th Army.

These Canadian casualties for the Italy campaign were included in a total of British casualties reported from London Wed. The figure gave British losses from Sept. 3, date of invasion of the mainland, as: dead 3,312; wounded 9,709; missing 3,153.

Lumping British and available American figures together, the London dispatch placed total British-American casualties for operations in Italy at 5,023 killed and 16,800 wounded, with no indication as to whether the 238 Canadians killed and 811 wounded on the mainland were included.

Needs of People Must Have Precedence Says Anglican Council

Toronto, Dec. 9.- (CP)—The Council for Social Service of the Anglican Church announced today it had issued a statement to all Church of England ministers in Canada that "the needs of all people in our own country and among the less-privileged peoples of the earth must take precedence over the organization of production solely for profit".

The statement said further that "both freedom and fellowship in a controlled economy may be secured to all".

Apology is Made By Spanish Government

London, Dec. 9 — (CP)— The British Government has received an apology from the Spanish Government for insult to the British vice consul and members of his family at the hands of uniformed Spanish Falangists at Zaragoza on Nov. 19, it was learned today.

Gen. Francisco Gomez Jordana, Spanish foreign minister, has conveyed his Government's apology to Sir Samuel Hoare, British ambassador, with assurances the guilty Falangists would be punished.

County Buildings Heated With Coal Members Told

Reports Received and Adopted by County Council at Thursday's Session

CONCUR IN MOTIONS

Reading of reports by various of the county committee chairmen proved to be the high point of interest at the Thursday morning session of county council. The reports with one exception were passed without comment by the council members. After opening the session, Warden Dr. S. S. Lumb turned the duties of his chair over to Ex-Warden J. L. Churcher.

In giving the report of the Finance and Public Property Committee, Chairman John A. Bell, told the council members that county buildings this year were being heated by coal instead of wood. Procuring of wood has proven practically impossible, it was stated, although one car has been purchased from Bancroft. In view of the circumstances it was felt that burning coal would not prove more expensive.

Although financial figures for the various departments were presented by the chairman, it was pointed out that as the year was not completed very little could be gained by comparison. Only ordinary repairs to county buildings had been carried out through the year, but a program of redecoration begun some months ago was now claimed to be completed. This work had been done by jail inmates thereby saving the county considerable money.

Should be Advertised

William C. West of Stirling, publicity committee chairman, indicated this committee had been more or less dormant because of wartime conditions. He claimed, however, that the committee should be kept alive with men selected being chosen for their knowledge of the county.

"We have a great many natural resources in Hastings that should be advertised," stated Mr. West. "Game and fish are plentiful and as a tourist resort the county has unlimited possibilities."

He referred to the county branch of the Federation of Agriculture as doing splendid work as an organization working for post-war rehabilitation. Their efforts tied in splendidly toward making agriculture attractive to members of the armed forces who will return from overseas, he said.

One other report read was that of the Administration of Justice Committee, its county representative, Mr. Dave Mawson, indicating expenditures to date and suggesting changes, that might assist in reducing costs of justice administration in Hastings.

Reeve Fred J. Wilson spoke briefly to the council prior to his introducing a by-law for the county to assume maintenance cost of the Sidney township bridge leading to Anderson's Island. In support of his claim that the bridge should be taken over by the county, Mr. Wilson stated that not to his knowledge was there any bridge of its size between Belleville and Cornwall maintained by a township. The bridge in question measured approximately 325 feet in length, he stated.

No Action Taken

No action was taken on a Wellington county request seeking concurrence in a resolution asking the Department of Highways to pay road subsidy grants quarterly in order that municipalities might be relieved of heavy interest costs. Discussion revealed, that the resolution placed too great an additional burden upon the department and that the present system was quite satisfactory. Neither was action taken regarding a resolution from Simcoe county asking that the province take steps to have the Bowmanville School for Boys and the Galt school for girls restored. An increase in juvenile delinquency was claimed the reason for passing of the resolution in Simcoe.

Council concurred in a resolution from Durham and Northumberland county asking that provincial grants to schools be increased because of the increased cost of education.

JAPAN REPORTS RAID

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—Domei News Agency in a Tokyo broadcast said a formation of American P-51 Mustang fighting planes attacked Hanoi and Haiphong in Indo-China this morning. The broadcast was reported by the United States office of War Information.

Seed Is Exported Under a Ceiling

Recent statements have given the impression in some quarters that, except for the domestic retail price there is no ceiling on clover seeds. Seed dealers point out that this is entirely incorrect, according to a news story in the Globe and Mail. There is an official ceiling on domestic graded seed sold to the consumer and there is also an export ceiling price. All the main clover seeds, including red and alsike, were placed under rigid control last fall, and maximum export prices for the various grades were established.

There is no ceiling price on seed sold by farmers to dealers, as has been frequently stated in recent weeks, but once this seed is turned over to the dealer it is immediately subject to control. Prices to be paid exporters by the Government have been fixed at $14.40 per bushel for Alsike, and $16.20 per bushel for Red Clover, for top quality seed delivered at Halifax. These prices, seedsmen point out, are for the very highest grades, lower qualities being fixed in proportion. These prices must cover all costs of assembling, cleaning, transportation, bagging labeling, and other expenses.

In former years the export of clover seed provided a substantial portion of the revenue of the Canadian seed trade, but that revenue, outside a small nominal handling charge established by the authorities, has completely disappeared so far as the exporter is concerned. The export prices as established by the Federal authorities are all that the seed trade will be paid. All profits obtained by the Government export agency above these prices will go to the farmer through the system of participation certificates established last fall. On all primary cleaned seed sold to an authorized dealer participation certificates are given the grower and any profits made by the Export Board will be divided among the growers.

Ceiling Prices For Live Turkeys, Ducks, Geese Set

Ottawa, Dec. 9 —(CP)— The Prices Board, in an order effective today, has brought under ceiling prices live turkeys, geese and ducks —now approaching the peak of their marketing season—it was announced last night. Maximum prices had previously been fixed for live chickens and other fowl.

The order sets out maximum wholesale prices per pound at which producers or wholesalers may sell live birds in the packing period in December.

For Turkeys this is 31 cents in Ontario. For old Tom turkeys the ceiling is four cents a pound lower.

For live geese the ceiling is 21 cents in Ontario. Maximum price for live ducks is two cents a pound higher than for live geese.

Now Reports Ciano To be Tried With Others

Stockholm, Dec. 9 —(AP)— The Rome correspondent of Goeteborg's Handelsoches Oefarstidning reported today that Count Galeazzo Ciano, former Italian foreign minister, will be tried soon with five or six other former members of the Fascist Grand Council which ousted Mussolini.

The court session will be secret, the dispatch said, and the location of the trial was undisclosed. (This indicated there was no basis for rumors heard several days ago along the Swiss-Italian frontier to the effect that Ciano already had been tried and executed by a firing squad. The Berlin radio has denied these rumors).

Will Receive Pay Prior to Leave

Ottawa, Dec. 9 —(CP)— With nearly all members of the armed forces going on leave at Christmas or New Years, all but the few remaining on duty over both holidays will receive their end-of-December pay in advance, it was stated at National Defence Headquarters here, today.

The mid-month payment, on or about the 15th of the month will be made as usual to all other ranks. Those who proceed on Christmas or New Year's leave will, prior to departure, receive pay for the balance of the month.

Lt.-Col. Hugh Osler Dies at Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Dec. 9 (CP)—Lt.-Col. Hugh F. Osler, 62, pioneer Western financier, soldier and sportsman, died yesterday in his home here. He came to Winnipeg from Toronto in 1903.

Mr. Osler was president of Osler, Hammond and Nanton, Limited and a director of many financial and industrial firms.

35 Roomers Escape Rooming House Fire, 3 of Them Injured

Toronto, Dec. 9 —(CP)— Three persons were injured here early today escaping from a three-storey rooming house on Jarvis Street in central Toronto where 35 roomers were trapped in their bedrooms by flames that enveloped the corridors and stairways.

The roomers escaped by jumping from windows, climbing down escape lines made by knotting bed clothes together, and by groping through dense smoke to a rear fire exit.

A small dog is credited with awakening the house, barking furiously as smoke and flame filled the hallways.

Dressedweight: Barrie, London and Stratford $17 delivered, Hamilton $17.10 delivered, Hull $16.95 delivered, Peterborough $16.40 plus transportation.

Strike Cuts Off Gas For Heating, Cooking For 60,000 Persons

Columbus, O., Dec. 9 (AP)—Lt. Gov. M. Herbert of Ohio, acting at the request of northeastern Ohio officials, today ordered State Guard officials to Painesville where a strike has cut off gas for heating and cooking to an estimated 60,000 persons.

Herbert, acting in the absence of Gov. John W. Bricker, said requests came from officials of Ashtabula and Lake counties, both left with virtually no gas after negotiations broke down in a strike of 2,000 men which halted all operations of the Diamond Alkali Co., and its subsidiary, the Standard Chromate Co. at Fairport harbor.

Herbert emphasized there was no trouble thus far, but he was interested only in getting operations at the plant resumed.

CANADIANS FORCE CROSSING OF MORO RIVER RUSSIANS CAPTURE IMPORTANT RAILWAY HUB

Fall of Znamenka Helps Reds' Drive On Kirovograd

Capture Cuts Last Of Four Rail Lines Centring in That Sector

KIEV LINE HOLDS

By EDWARD D. BALL
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 10—(AP)—The Red Army has captured Znamenka, hub of a system of railroads linking the Dnieper River bend with the area south of Kiev, Premier Marshal Stalin announced today in a special order of the day.

The Soviet column that smashed into the town was one of several driving through crumbling Nazi defences in the Dnieper bend.

The capture of the heavily-fortified German bastion cut the last of four rail lines centring in that town and brought the weight of the Russian Dnieper bend offensive directly against Kirovograd, the next stronghold in the path of Red Army forces threatening to outflank Krivoi Rog.

Stalin's order of the day said Znamenka fell after three days of fierce fighting and termed the town a "powerful strong point in the German defences in the Kirovograd direction."

Red Army units south of Kremenchug threatened to capture the junction of Dolinovka, the fall of which would outflank Krivoi Rog from the west. The Germans were offering considerable resistance.

Near Dolinovka.

The strong Russian drive down the Znamenka-Nikolaev railroad swept beyond Mederovo and moved within 25 miles of Dolinovka.

The loss of Dolinovka would just about close out the Krivoi Rog salient, for the Germans would then have to rely on one strained railroad and snow-blocked highways for supplies.

The Nazis have lost their communications between this group in the Dnieper Bend and those fighting in the Cherkasy sector and others battering the Russian lines west of Kiev.

Heavy snows and blizzards were sweeping many sectors of the long Russian front, holding up operations in vast areas. This is the beginning of the real Russian winter, which is late this year.

Nazi Position Perilous.

Loss of Znamenka to Soviet forces striking across the snowy Ukraine left the whole of the German position west of the Lower Dnieper in peril.

The town, some 60 miles northwest of the iron ore city of Krivoi Rog, fell yesterday, Stalin's announcement said.

With the new victory the Russians control railroads running northwest to Smyela and Fastov, south to Nikolaev and east to Dnepropetrovsk.

Tank and infantry forces which had closed in from three sides were aided in the final assault by airborne troops.

The rolling thunder of Moscow's guns saluting the stronghold's capture was heard over the Moscow radio here at 4 p.m. (11 a.m. E.D.T.) a point but 15 miles east of Kirivograd, the Nazi stronghold between Cherkasy and Nikopol, the dispatch said.

Field Marshal Fritz Von Mannstein's combined tank, infantry and air assault against Russian positions northeast of Chernyakhov in the Kiev bulge was checked yesterday as the Red Army carved out new gains to threaten the key enemy bases of Kirivograd and Krivoi Rog in the Dnieper Bend sector, a Russian communique announced today.

Cost Germans Heavily

The Russians declared the German counter-attack west of Kiev cost the Germans 350 tanks and 5,000 troops in three days. The German communique asserted that the Nazis "gained further ground in spite of stiff enemy resistance."

The German war bulletin said the battle in the Dnieper Bend was being fought in a heavy snowstorm and that the Russians were throwing as many as six divisions and a tank brigade at single narrow sectors.

The Germans said they stormed an important height in the Crimea near Kerch and were increasing pressure on the Russian beachhead northeast of the port city.

Brilliant defensive tactics by Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's first Ukrainian army thwarted Von Mannstein's attempt to crack the Soviet lines west of Kiev, Moscow said, and the Germans recoiled before pointblank Soviet artillery fire.

Vatutin Falls Back

The successful Soviet stand was disclosed after Vatutin had fallen back for the past two days to new defence lines. The persistent German attacks have failed to tie up any considerable Russian forces or divert the Red Army high command from launching offensives elsewhere.

Reports from the Russian front said the Germans were rushing tank and infantry reserves to the Ukraine from Germany, the Netherlands, Poland and even Italy in a supreme effort to relieve pressure on the Axis lines in White Russia and the Dnieper Bend.

Capture 15 Towns

Less than 200 miles to the southeast inside the Dnieper river loop, Soviet columns from Gen. Rodion Malinovsky's army captured 15 towns in a continuation of their advance on Kirivograd. Among these was the rail station of Mederovo, less than 18 miles from Kirivograd on the already severed Znamekna-Nikolaev railway.

Mederovo —is 10 miles south of the German-held rail junction town of Znamenka, now reported almost completely encircled by Red army troops.

Pushing southward in the direction of Krivoi Rog, other Russian units stormed into the town of Spassovo to threaten that important mining centre and the thousands of Germans deployed west of the Dnieper in that area.

RUSSIA, CHINA BRAZIL LEGATIONS NOW EMBASSIES

No Changes Will Be Made in Personnel Of Canadian Missions In Three Countries

ALL AMBASSADORS

Ottawa, Dec. 10. (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced today completion of arrangements to elevate the Canadian legations in the Soviet Union, China and Brazil to rank of embassy. The legations of these countries in Ottawa will assume the same status.

No changes will be made in personnel of the Canadian Missions in the three countries, said Mr. King's statement.

L. D. Wilgress, present minister, becomes ambassador in Moscow; Maj.-Gen. Victor W. Odlum, present minister, becomes ambassador in Chungking; and Jean Desy, present minister, becomes ambassador in Rio de Janeiro.

"The change in rank will have effect with respect to each mission upon the presentation of the letter of credence of the ambassador", said the Prime Minister.

Changteh Battle Costs Japanese 40,000 Casualties

Chungking, Dec. 10 — (AP)—The 40-day battle for China's rice area, climaxed yesterday by the Chinese recapture of the key city of Changteh, cost the Japanese 40,000 casualties, Maj.-Gen. C. C. Tseng, Chinese Army spokesman declared today.

Tseng said the Japanese had lost 15,800 killed and 25,000 wounded in the battle in which all but 300 men of the Chinese 57th Division were reported casualties.

Bitter fighting still raging northwest of Changteh between sizeable Chinese and Japanese forces will have a decisive effect on the campaign in Central China, Tseng said.

American air headquarters meanwhile disclosed that American airmen had strongly supported Chinese forces in their successful drive to recapture Changteh.

Bomber Attack on Germany Is in Final Pre-Invasion Stage Says U. S. Air Officer

Washington, Dec. 10 — (AP)—The first official indication that the R.A.F.-U.S.A.A.F. air offensive against Germany has passed the preliminary phases and entered on the final knockout stage preparatory to a land invasion was made public today.

Col. Ray W. Clifton of the United States Army Air Forces and instructor at the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, discussed the classic "four phases" of strategic bombing in a survey written for the school's monthly military review.

"The bombing of German-occupied Europe can be considered in the third phase now," he said, the fourth phase being that in which "the air will paralyze the production and movement of enemy war supplies and support the ground forces making a landing."

At the time he wrote (just prior to the massive November air raids on Berlin) Clifton said the air offensive already had reduced Germany's manufacturing capacity by at least 35 per cent, diminished the power of the luftwaffe and forced it into a weakening defence, and had seriously damaged German civilian morale.

Germany on Defensive

"Germany's production facilities have been so hurt by our bombing that she is able to produce about 1,500 planes a month, of which quite a large percentage are fighters," he said. "The reason for the large percentage of fighters is the fact that the German air force has gone from the offensive to the defensive."

To counter the air offensive, he said, the Germans have had to concentrate the bulk of their fighter forces in Western Europe, and this —plus the destruction of industrial facilities — has contributed to Russia and Allied Mediterranean successes.

"The number of German fighters has increased in the west from 700 in January to over 1,570 in October," Clifton reports.

Report on Damages

Clifton supplied these reports on the damage inflicted on some of the major targets of the R.A.F. and the U. S. 8th Air Force:—

Essen—Three-fourths of the town destroyed, with at least two-thirds of the 200 buildings of the Krupp works seriously damaged.

Lorient—Town almost entirely destroyed by April 15, but submarine base protected by its heavy concrete construction. However, submarine base estimated to be working at about 20 per cent efficiency because of lack of utilities.

Dusseldorf—75 per cent of the city destroyed, 80 per cent of the people homeless, 25,000 killed, and munitions factories damaged.

Emden—60 per cent of the town and the dock areas destroyed.

Bremen—Focke-Wulf fighter factory badly damaged, a fifth of the town destroyed.

Lubeck—40 per cent destroyed, many factories destroyed or heavily damaged.

Rostock—More than 70 per cent destroyed.

Kiel—A single raid on May 14 damaged or destroyed almost every building in the Germania yards, which build submarines and destroyers.

Hamburg—All buildings ruined on more than three-fourths of the built-up areas, four main shipyards damaged, 15-20,000 people killed and 350,000 homeless.

Oberhausen—Railway shops more than half destroyed.

Cologne—60 per cent devastated, nine factories destroyed, six others almost destroyed, railway property heavily damaged.

Vegesack—Submarine yard badly damaged.

Marienburg—Focke-Wulf factory destroyed in Oct. 9 attack, accounting probably for half of the Focke-Wulf fighters assembly capacity in Germany.

300 NAZI SUBS SUNK IN ATLANTIC IN EIGHT MONTHS

Ship Losses Are Lowest in 3½ Years Says Churchill, Roosevelt

FLEET CRIPPLED

London, Dec. 10—(AP)—U-boat-hunting Allied ships and planes probably destroyed upward of 300 undersea raiders in the Atlantic from March to November, seriously crippling the submarine fleet which has been one of Hitler's main hopes for checkmating an invasion of Europe.

An announcement Thursday by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt said that once again, in November, the number of U-boats sunk exceeded the number of their victims, even though increased caution by the Nazis presented the Allied sub-killers with fewer targets. The statement said Allied merchant ship losses in November were the lowest of any month since May, 1940.

The exact number of German submarines known sunk during November was not announced, but it was disclosed officially at the end of October that 150 German U-boats had been smashed in the six months beginning in May, when the tide began shifting strongly toward the powerful team of United States and Britain.

In the peak period of May and June, and again in August and September, U-boats were sunk at the rate of one a day, and even if this rate of destruction were cut in half it would mean that 15 more submersibles were sunk in November. Drawing from this to estimate the Germans' U-boat losses for April and March, the total would come to about 200 sunk since March, when, incidentally, the U-boat fleet was at its top strength of 600-plus.

Official Reports Cautious

Although the Nazi submarines were more successful before that time, a good number were destroyed as they roamed the North and South Atlantic, attacking single ships as well as convoys.

ISLAND OF NAURU WEST OF GILBERTS HEAVILY POUNDED

Bombed by Carrier Planes and Shelled by Guns of Warships

PRODUCES PHOSPHATE

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 10 — (CP) — Aggressive United States aircraft carrier task forces have demonstrated an ability to strike quickly in widely-separated areas by pounding Nauru only four days after blasting the Marshalls.

Nauru, phosphate producing island 500 miles west of the newly-won Gilberts, not only was bombed by carrier planes but also was shelled by guns of warships on Wednesday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported last night.

Last Saturday, more than 700 miles to the northeast of Nauru, a big task force, including several carriers, sent out planes which levelled defences at Kwajalein and Wotje in the heart of the Marshalls, sank two enemy cruisers, an oil tanker and three cargo ships and downed 72 planes.

Between Nov. 18 and 24, many of these same carriers sent planes out on repeated raids, first to soften up, then to support the ground forces which successfully invaded the Gilberts on Nov. 20.

Now naval authorities have disclosed that the fighters in one of the carriers in the Marshalls raid Saturday were the same group which on Nov. 11 near Rabaul, New Britain, shot down 67 out of 17 Japanese planes in successfully protecting a big flat top.

As was the case immediately after announcement of the Saturday attack on the Marshalls, there were only brief details on the Nauru assault supplied in the first communique. "Strong forces on the Pacific fleet" delivered it.

In all these operations, the Navy has reported the loss of one escort carrier, the Liscome Bay, in the Gilberts.

Canadians Lead 8th Army Advance Infantry in New Thrust With Tanks

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Dec. 10 — (CP Cable)—Canadians now are leading the 8th Army advance up the Adriatic coast on the right flank of the Italian front.

The attack north of the Moro River on a wide front of eight miles, announced today by Allied headquarters at Algiers, appears to be one of the major Canadian efforts of the campaign so far.

Canadian infantry are in the forefront of this new thrust with tanks from a Canadian armored formation supporting them.

Heaviest fighting has been along the coast road leading from San Vito through San Leonardo to Ortona and on to Pescara which port is possibly the ultimate Canadian objective.

There were fierce tank battles especially near San Leonardo which is about a quarter of a mile north of the Moro and two miles from the mouth of the river.

The Germans hauled tanks of the 26th Panzer division from the 5th Army front in Western Italy, thru mud and mountains to try to block this new threat by the 8th Army.

While the Allied communique did not announce capture of San Leonardo, it is probable this battered village has fallen to the Canadians who have pushed along the main road to Ortona where fighting now is reported in the outskirts of that coast town 12 miles south of Pescara.

This is the first time Canadians have fought in actions north of the Sangro River. Previously they have been operating in the Apennines, in the headwaters of the Sangro on the 8th Army's left flank.

Secret Switch Carried Out

A secret switch across the front to the coastal sector was skilfully carried out by the Canadians and they joined in the Moro River crossing operation Wednesday afternoon. Fighting has been going on ever since in foggy weather.

The German 90th Panzer Grenadier Division which replaced the weakened German 65th Infantry Division in that sector is likely the principal Canadian opposition in addition to tanks of the 26th Panzers.

The enemy had an elaborate defence system in the hills north of the Moro and the attack must have been difficult. Strong air support and heavy Canadian-British artillery concentrations were necessary to enable the infantry to break into the German positions.

Considering the extremely broad front of eight miles it is likely an entire Canadian infantry division is in action and probably a brigade of tanks supporting it.

F.D.R. PRESENTS SCROLL TO MALTA DURING VISIT

Praises Maltese For Their Valiant Part During the Dark Days Of Siege

GREETED BY GORT

Valetta, Malta, Dec. 10 — (AP)—Travelling by plane, President Roosevelt visited this bomb-marked British Mediterranean base on Wednesday, presented its people an illuminated scroll on behalf of the American people, and declared the United States would stand staunchly with the British Empire and other Allies after the war to make "it a victory worthwhile."

En route from the series of epic conferences in which he and Prime Minister Churchill engaged in the Middle East, the President arrived in a huge four-engine troop transport with an escort of 20 fighters. His visit followed one by Prime Minister Churchill who called at Malta en route to the Cairo conference.

To be Cast in Bronze

The scroll, which eventually will be cast in bronze and placed in Valetta's main square, saluted Malta and its defenders for "valorous service far above and beyond the call of duty" during the dark period while Axis aircraft kept the island under a virtual constant alert

In June of this year the King also visited the gallant little island, cruising well within range of Italian-based German bombers to carry out his tour.

The President's plane touched on the world's most bombed airdrome at 9:50 a. m., Wednesday.

Mr. Roosevelt was accompanied by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's Chief-of-Staff; Harry Hopkins, Lt.-Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, Commander of the Northwest African Air Forces; Rear Admiral Ross T McIntyre, the President's personal physician; Maj. John Boettiger, and Maj.-Gen. Walter B. Smith, Eisenhower's Chief-of-Staff.

War of Revenge Propaganda Helps To Keep Up Morale of Nazi Soldiers

By DON WHITEHEAD
(AP War Correspondent)

With the Allied 5th Army Near Magnano, Italy, Dec. 10 —(AP)—German front line soldiers are pinning their hopes of a victory for the Fatherland on a great offensive next spring, which they call "vergeltungschlacht" — a war of revenge.

They are told — and they believe —that Germany is husbanding its forces for one great and final desperate attack.

Prisoners volunteered this story today while being questioned by United States army officers.

Every shortage is explained to the German troops in terms of saving material for the war of revenge.

It seemed incredible to me that the Germans could believe those things. But they do.

Out of 169 prisoners questioned, however, only 15 said they still thought Germany could win the war.

Most of the Germans felt as did one prisoner. He came from Hamburg and was brought to this front on Nov. 17. He said that unless the "vergeltungschlacht" wins for Germany "the Fatherland is lost."

On a visit home a few days ago, he said, he found Hamburg a shambles. Almost all of the city was levelled except for some homes in the suburbs.

Another German said "Germany can last another two years. Germany is one great armament factory and even after those severe air blows the country is only groggy, and will not be beaten in a few months. We have become fatalists. We have lost our homes and our property and have nothing more to lose. So why should we worry about this little bit of life?"

This young officer explained the German people were so regimented and controlled by the Gestapo there was little chance for a sudden crack in the home front. He said rationing was well handled in Germany so that everyone got at least the minimum on which it was possible to live, which he said was not true in the First Great war.

The prisoners solemnly declared the world would be astounded by the fury of the Germans' war of revenge and quoted their leaders as saying that German factories are busy producing "a new type of six-engined bomber" which carries a tremendous bomb load.

When German troops complained about the absence of their own air force, their officers brought them diagrams of what they said was a new twin-engined noiseless bomber.

"But we never see it", the soldiers said.

"Yes, but at night our bombers are over us even though we don't hear them", the officers explained.

Bridgehead Firmly Established After Fierce Fighting

Assault Is Made On 8-Mile Front After Heavy Air, Artillery Attack

FOE FIRES 4 VILLAGES

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press War Correspondent

Algiers, Dec. 10 — (AP) — Canadian troops of the 8th Army have smashed forward on an eight-mile front after forcing a new crossing of the Moro River near Italy's Adriatic shore, the Allied communique announced today.

The Canadians, who were engaged in heavy fighting, were strongly supported by armored units and aircraft, the communique said.

"There was fierce fighting in the vicinity of San Leonardo is two miles from the Adriatic coast.

The Canadians, who were not identified by units, were said to be firmly established in their bridgehead, the second such foothold that 8th Army troops have gained across the stream.

(The Berlin radio said yesterday that the Canadian 1st Division has taken over from the British 78th Division which earlier made the first crossing of the Sangro River.

5th Army Captures Ridge

Meanwhile at the Tyrrhenian end of the front Americans of the 5th. Army have captured another ridge, Mt. Sammucio, in the upper sector of the Garigliano line. Americans and Germans fought hand-to-hand in mists hugging the top of the 3,000-feet high mountain.

The Canadian attack along the Moro sector began at 4 p. m. Wednesday after a heavy air and artillery bombardment and was reported making good progress with armored support.

The Canadians were leading the 8th Army in what appeared to be the major Canadian effort of the campaign.

The fighting raged through Wednesday night and all day yesterday as Canadian infantry and tanks ran into elaborate enemy defences and methodically wiped out strong points against stiff resistance.

One result of the drive was evidenced when frontline observers saw four villages just behind the German lines go up in flames.

These were Torricella, 21 miles inland and seven miles south of Casoli, and Pescocostanzo, Rivisondoli and Roccarasco, all in the same general area about 37 miles inland and north of Isernia.

Put to Torch.

These towns were in an area being flanked by the Canadian thrust nearest the Adriatic coast. Apparently the Germans, having abandoned hope of holding them, were following their customary practice of putting them to the torch.

The smoke could be seen from points many miles behind the Allied lines.

(The Algiers radio said the second bridgehead across the Moro was in the vicinity of Orsogna, about 10 miles inland, and previous radio reports indicated the 8th Army was within about eight miles of Pescara, the eastern end of the trans-peninsula highway to Rome. The German High Command admitted the Allied had captured a series of ridges on both sides of the Via Casilina in the Mignano sector of the 5th Army front and that the German front had been withdrawn a few kilometres.)

In a nine-day battle the British and American allies of the 5th Army have driven the Germans from the entire mountain mass of Camino and Maggiore in the Mignano vicinity, thereby ripping a giant hole in the enemy line blocking the road to Rome, 78 airline miles distant.

Falling in the Allied sweep was the last German-held village in the Mignano vicinity, Rocca d'Evandro on the northwest slope of Mt. Camino.

Close Action.

In as fierce an action as ever was fought by American troops, the veterans of Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark crept up Mt. Samucro and fell upon the Germans in the clouds.

Wiping out opposition with rifles, pistols, knives and grenades, the Americans installed themselves in the strategic high position overlooking the fortified villages of San Vittore and San Pietro.

These villages are six and seven miles, respectively, southeast of Cassino, and the way was opened for a smash toward that strategic gateway to Rome, now that the German hold on Mignano has been broken.

The Allies now firmly occupy the entire eastern and southern bank of the Garigliano river from Rocca d'Evandro to its mouth, a distance of 14 airline miles.

In their sweep forward the 5th Army captured important equipment which the Germans had been unable to carry away, including two 88-millimetre guns, five 75-millimetre guns, machine-guns, trucks and many unused mines, all in good condition.

The first phase of Gen. Clark's new offensive, in which supplies were carried to almost inaccessible mountain tops by mules and planes, thus was ended.

SOLDIERS SAVE EQUIPMENT

Halifax, Dec. 10 — (CP) — Soldiers escaping from a flaming army barracks here following discovery of fire early today were able to save their equipment from their sleeping quarters although the barracks was almost destroyed. The fire was brought under control after the city fire department and a fire boat had fought the flames for two hours.

NO SICK CHILDREN MAY ATTEND CLINIC

This clinic is for well children only, aged 6 months to 6 years. No sick children may come. Due to an error in yesterday's paper it was stated that children suffering from whooping cough might attend; this is quite contrary to Dr. Cronk's intention. The clinic is for the prevention of whooping cough, and not for treatment. Three doses of preventive vaccine are given. The clinic will be held in Ann Street School, December 14th., at 3.30 p.m.

FRACTURES LEG IN 18-FOOT FALL

Slipping on top of an icy box while banding freight cars in the Belleville Canadian National Railways yards on Wednesday, Raymond Geen of Frankford sustained a broken leg, when he was forced to jump from atop a pile of boxes where he was working. The top of the large crate boxes was covered with ice and when the lad slipped he tried to jump clear and avoid serious injury, but when he landed on the frozen ground some 18 feet below the force of the impact resulted in one fractured leg and serious strain and bruises to the other. Geen is employed as a bander, securing large crates to flat cars before transit.

CAR LEAVES ROAD AND BREAKS POLE

When the automobile he was driving went out of control of Highway No. 2 four miles west of Belleville early Thursday evening, a motor car driven by Peter Badgley, Carrying Place, left the highway and crashed into a telephone pole snapping it off at the base. Badgley was proceeding in an easterly direction when the car went out of control. After breaking off the pole the vehicle came to a full stop and damages estimated at over one hundred dollars resulted. Traffic Officer W. G. Milton investigated the accident and Badgley was detained pending further investigations.

HUNTING HOUND IN DOG POUND

Found wandering at large in the premises of the No. 5 R. C. A. F. Initial Training School here, a brown and white colored hound was today given into the custody of the city dog pounds. Thos. Thorne, pound custodian, stated that the hound was well marked and doubtless a good hunting animal.

LEFT WRIST WATCH IN PUBLIC WASHROOM

Leaving his wrist watch in the public washroom adjacent to his dormitory room at the Y.M.C.A. early today, AC2. Clifford Wilson of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. base, returned later to find the timepiece gone. He reported the theft to "Y" officials and police authorities, but as there is a large floating population about the Association during war time, little chance of recovering the watch was held out.

Admits Identity After Questioning By City Police

Stoutly denying his identity as one Gordon A. Spencer, who is wanted by police at Picton and Peterborough as well as being an alleged army deserter, Spencer led local police authorities a merry battle of wits yesterday until finally he confessed he was Spencer after several hours of examination by Chief Probert and Deputy Chief Harman.

Spencer was apprehended in possession of a bottle of wine early Thursday morning and was found to be in possession of a National Registration card bearing the name of Harold Cole. City police suspected him of being Spencer, but it was not until they discovered he had dyed his hair that they became suspicious. Further enquiries regarding a food ration book, issued under the name of Cole, finally gained police their point and he confessed.

Today Spencer was given into the custody of Picton police, where he is wanted on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. Peterborough authorities hold a theft count against him and the Army has had him listed as a deserter since last spring. Belleville police added to the toll by charging him with carrying a false registration card.

Eugene Rosebush Given Four Months Suspended Term

Eugene H. Rosebush of this city, was given a four months' suspended sentence upon the payment of the costs of the proceedings, when he was convicted on a charge of dangerous driving, when arranged before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here Thursday afternoon. The charge arose out of a fatal motor accident that occurred east of Belleville on the night of October 29, last, during which time Grant Walker, of Belleville, was hit and killed by a car driven by Rosebush.

Besides the suspended sentence the accused young man's driver's licence was suspended for a period of four months and he was ordered to pay $81.80 costs in the matter.

The court held that Rosebush's decree of negligence was not superior in the case and that the deceased man had contributed somewhat to the fatality. The late Mr. Walker was standing on the travelled portion of the highway alongside of a tractor-trailer, that had broken down, when the collision resulted in his death. Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson conducted the prosecution, while R. D. Arnott K.C., appeared for Rosebush.

Former Air Cadet Tops Course at I.T.S.

LAC. Gerald E. Petzold, Denbigh, Ontario, who graduated this week from No. 5 I.T.S. as a Navigator, was presented by Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, Commanding Officer of that School, with the "Outstanding Airman" award. Th's award is in the form of an engraved bracelet and is made to the airman obtaining the highest marks in ground school subjects and for his qualities in leadership and deportment.

Prior to enlisting in the R.C.A.F. in August of this year, Petzold, who has just reached the age of eighteen, was a member of the No. 58 Squadron Air Cadets . of Kingston, where he held the rank of sergeant.

In making the presentation, Wing Commander Snetsinger stated that the R.C.A.F., and in particular Initial Training Schools were now reaping the benefit of the many months of instruction which Air Cadet officers through Canada have given in order to prepare these young men for aircrew duties, and that he looked forward to the day when the ever-increasing number of Air Cadets to enter the service will make their weight felt on combat

YOUNG PRISONER LEFT IN JAIL—FIRE STATION

Plainville, Kas., Dec. 10—(AP)—The city marshal left a youthful prisoner in the combination jail-fire station—and wheeee! Its siren going full blast, away went Plainville's fire truck. They found it later, thoroughly wrecked in a ditch east of town. The youth is held in jail at Stockton, Kas., this time, the marshal said, and Plainville is getting along with a borrowed fire truck.

FURNITURE SECURED FOR RECRUITING OFFICE

The Editorial Room of The Ontario Intelligencer was requested at ten o'clock to assist in the furnishing of the newly opened C.W.A.C. Recruiting Office which will be located on Bridge Street east in the former site of Black's Meat Market. This will be the first permanent recruiting office to be opened in Belleville and two C.W.A.C. Corporals, Pilkington and Knopp have been detailed to take charge of recruiting in the city. Apparently no arrangements were made for furnishing the office and the two girls were worried about obtaining sufficient chairs and tables to carry on with their duties. The Armouries personnel were unable to help in the matter and referred them to the newspaper, where contacts were made with the City Hall and eight chairs, two desks and a table for recruiting pamphlets and literature were obtained before twelve o'cock. The recruiting office will be in full swing by three o'clock.

Obituary

THOMAS WALKER
(Hoard's)

Hoard's Station, Dec. 10 — (Special)— Friends of Thomas Walker deeply regret his passing on Saturday evening, Dec. 4th. He was in his 87th year and was born on the 4th concession of Rawdon, the son of the late James Walker and his wife, Amelia Duket. He married Sophia Elizabeth Donald, who predeceased him in 1903, leaving one son, Roy, who now lives on the old homestead. In 1910 he married Minnie Smith.

For about twenty-eight years, the deceased lived at Hoard's, where he was station agent and post master. He was a faithful member of the Burnbrae Presbyterian Church.

Surviving him are his widow, one son, Roy; one daughter, Mrs. Preston Hall (Helen) Oshawa; two grandchildren and one great grandchild. His only sister, Mrs. Annie Horst, predeceased him in 1928.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 7th., from his home to Burnbrae Presbyterian Church, where service was conducted by Rev. McKay.

Interment was in Burnbrae Cemetery.

The pall bearers were Messrs. John Shaw, W. J. Snarr, Ross Anderson, Carman Gunning, Alex Calberry and Donald Sharpe.

HORSE TROTS AHEAD OF TRAIN, DELAYS PASSENGERS' ARRIVAL

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 10—(AP)— Great northern's No. 6 was a bit late into Spokane. The trouble, said the engineer, was a horse with a one-track mind. The animal trotted onto the track three miles out of town, and cantered leisurely along in front. The engineer fumed, slowed and even stopped, several times. The horse even negotiated a 1,474-foot bridge, 160 feet above the water, before he finally quit the rails.

F.D.R. PRESENTS

(The London Daily Herald yesterday reported "strong feeling" in London that President Roosevelt might visit there "before the American troops leave these shores" and participate in a final round-up of plans for the invasion of Europe from the west.

Guard of Honor.

A guard of honor, including an R.A.F. unit, 50 British marines, 50 Royal Navy men, and 100 United States and Maltese troops, lined up on the airfield with a Royal Artillery band to welcome Mr. Roosevelt, first President of the United States ever to visit the island.

First to greet the President was Field Marshal Lord Gort, Commander-in-Chief of Malta.

With Lord Gort, the President stepped into a jeep.

As the jeep came to a stop in front of the guard of honor, the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner." The President took the salute and the Stars and Stripes broke out on the mast behind the guard.

Address of Tribute.

Addressing himself to Field Marshal Gort, the troops and the people of Malta, President Roosevelt said:—

"Nearly a year ago the Prime Minister and I were at Casablanca shortly after the landings by British and American troops in North Africa and at that time I told the Prime Minister that some day we would once more control the whole of the Mediterranean and that then I would go to Malta.

"For many months I have wanted on behalf of the American people to pay some little tribute to this island and to all the people, both civil and military, who during three years have contributed so much to democracy, not just here but all over the civilized world.

"So at last I have been able to come. At last I have been able to see something of this historic land and I wish I could stay, but I have many things to do.

"I may tell you, though, that during these past three weeks the Prime Minister and I feel we, too, have struck strong blows for the future of the human race and so in this simple way I am taking the opportunity to do what all the American people would join me in doing."

Reads Message

After this talk the President read the following from the scroll in a handsome wooden case which he said was "a citation from the President of the United States speaking on behalf of all the American people":—

"In the name of the people of the United States of America I salute the Island of Malta and its people and its defenders who in the cause of freedom and justice and decency throughout the world have rendered valorous service far above and beyond the call of duty.

"Under repeated fire from the skies, Malta stood alone and unafraid in the centre of the sea, one tiny bright flame in the darkness, a beacon of hope in the clearer days which have come.

"Malta's bright story of human fortitude and courage will be read by posterity with wonder and gratitude through all the ages.

"What was done in this island maintains all the highest traditions of gallant men and women who from the beginning of time have lived and died to preserve civilization for all mankind.

"Signed Franklin D. Roosevelt.
"President, Dec. 7, 1943."

Shoulder to Shoulder

The President dated the scroll Dec. 7, the day before his visit, because it was the second anniversary of the United States entry into the war.

"The United States will proceed until the war is won," Mr. Roosevelt told his listeners. "But more than that we will stand shoulder to shoulder with the British Empire and our other Allies in making it a victory worthwhile."

Replying, Lord Gort said the people of Malta were "very sensible of the greatness of this occasion" and that it was a day they would never forget.

The whereabouts of the President had not been disclosed since he and the Prime Minister conferred in Cairo Dec. 2 with President Ismet Inonu of Turkey.

County Spends $73,160 on Roads Up to End of Nov.

Of an estimated expenditure of $80,000 which was to go toward roads in the county of Hastings during 1943, a total of $73,160 had been expended by November 30th, Thursday by Mr. William Nickle, it was stated at county council on committee as he gave his report to chairman of the roads and bridges council members.

War conditions had affected operations considerably it was stated by Mr. Nickle. Wages of laborers had been increased during the early year to 45 cents per hour while rates for teams, trucks, graders operators and other key men had also been revised upwards. Even with increased rates, however, it had been impossible to secure much help which was needed to carry out the season's road schedule.

No Change in Mileage

No change had been made on the county road mileage during the year, although there had been a slight change in the roads coming under the Suburban Commission. This was one the road coming into Belleville on the second concession of Thurlow which had been changed from the north to the south side of the C. N. R. yards. The road deleted and the one assumed were both one mile in length, therefore no change was made in total mileage.

Three county graders had been used up until June when it was found possible to take care of maintenance blading with the use of two graders. The purchase of a dump truck was recommended in the report.

Labor Problem Acute

A complete report of crusher operation was contained in the report. Labor problems had been particularly acute in this respect and after a late start crushers were forced to discontinue operations to permit farmers starting hay crop. Crushing costs in the Ketcheson pit in Thurlow township to the first of November averaged $1.27 per cubic yard spread on the road. Average hauling costs were 36.8 cents per yard.

A total of 2,207 yards had been crushed on Long's quarry at an average cost of $1.72 spread on the road. Average hauling cost here was 27 cents per yard. Output of the two crushers for the year was 5,300 yards, while to augment this several hundred yards of crushed rock had been purchased from the townships. Total crushed materials placed on county roads during the year was 6,658 yards.

82 Miles Dust Treated

No oil or asphalt dust layer had been available this year but slightly over 253 tons of calcium had been used to treat 82 miles of road at a cost of $122 per mile. A new air compressor had been purchased to replace an obsolete model.

No repainting of steel bridges had been carried out, but plank trackways had been built over the Stoco and Cannifton bridges. Broken stringers in Boldrick's and Glen Miller bridges had been replaced. A total of 9.4 miles of road had been surface treated, with 20,376 gallons of tar being used at a cost of $3,218, together with 946 tons of pea gravel. Total cost of surface treating including materials and labor was $6,841.

Purchase 15,000 Ft. Snow Fence

In connection with snow removal plans a total of 15,000 feet of snow fence and necesary metal posts had been purchased bringing the county fence mileage to 20. The two graders will be available for snowplowing, between them able to take care of 100 to 110 miles. Tender prices for privately owned trucks to plow county roads this year had shown an increase.

Colombia Willing To Co-operate With United States

Bogota, Colombia, Dec. 10. (AP) The Colombian government, which recently declared a state of belligerency against Germany, announced last night its armed forces would co-operate fully with the United States in a joint defence program involving the establishment of sea and air bases on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

The announcement followed a three-hour meeting between Acting President Dario Echandia and Lt.-Gen. George H. Brett, chief of the U.S. Defence Command in the Caribbean.

Colombia's geographical position is strategically important in the western hemisphere defence scheme, situated as it is immediately south of the Panama Canal with a two-ocean coastline running across the top of South America.
